20 Appeal from a judgment of the United States District Court

37 WINTER, Circuit Judge:
38

39 The Adelpia Recovery Trust, an entity created to represent 40 the non-whole creditors of a debtor corporation that is party to 41 a bankruptcy proceeding described below, appeals from Judge
42 McKenna's grant of summary judgment dismissing its fraudulent 43 conveyance claim against Goldman, Sachs & Co. In such a

1 fraudulent conveyance claim, the Trust may recover only property 2 owned by the parent-company debtor. The various schedules and 3 Chapter 11 plan, which were consummated with the agreement of 4 appellant and its predecessors in interest in the bankruptcy
5 proceeding, all treated the property transferred as owned by a 6 separate subsidiary. We, therefore, affirm on grounds of 7 judicial estoppel.

8 BACKGROUND

9 Adelphia Communications Corp. ("ACC") was the parent company 10 of some 200 holding and operating subsidiaries (collectively, 11 "Adelphia"). At its peak, Adelphia formed the fifth-largest 12 cable company in the United States. ACC, at all relevant times a 13 publicly traded company, was founded by John Rigas in 1986, and 14 members of the Rigas family held several top positions at ACC.
15 After ACC disclosed that it had several billion dollars in 16 fraudulently concealed, off-balance-sheet debt, Rigas family 17 members were forced to resign from their positions and faced 18 various civil and criminal actions. See, e.g., United States v.
19 Rigas, 490 F.3d 208 (2d Cir. 2007).

20 On June 25, 2002, ACC and its subsidiaries entered 21 bankruptcy under Chapter 11. Pursuant to an ensuing plan of 22 reorganization, substantially all assets of ACC and its 23 subsidiaries were liquidated, and all secured creditors of ACC
24 and its subsidiaries were paid in full. In addition, all 25 unsecured debt of the subsidiaries was also paid in full with 26 interest, and a portion of ACC's unsecured debt was paid. Those

1 creditors of ACC who were not paid in full received an interest
2 in any remaining assets that appellant can recover.

3 In July 2003, appellant's predecessor in interest filed suit 4 against over 400 lenders, investment banks, and other financial 5 institutions, seeking damages for their alleged participation in 6 the Rigas family fraud. This action included the present action
7 against Goldman, Sachs & Co. ("Goldman").<sup>1</sup>

8 Appellant's action against Goldman alleges a fraudulent
9 conveyance under 11 U.S.C. §§ 548(a)(1)(A) and 550(a). It arose
10 out of a 1999 multi-million margin loan that Goldman had extended 11 to Highland Holdings II LLP ("Highland"), an entity owned by the 12 Rigas family (a Rigas family entity, or "RFE") unconnected to 13 Adelphia. The loan, which was secured by ACC stock owned by 14 Highland, was allegedly used by the Rigases to purchase 15 additional ACC stock and thereby to maintain their control over 16 Adelphia. As ACC's stock price decreased following the 17 disclosure of the fraudulent concealment of debt in 2002, Goldman 18 issued several margin calls to Highland. The complaint alleged 19 that the Rigases caused ACC to make cash payments of $63 million 20 to cover these margin calls.

<sup>1</sup> On June 17, 2008, the claims asserted on behalf of ACC subsidiary debtors, who had already been paid in full, were dismissed for lack of standing. Adelphia Recovery Trust v. Bank of Am., N.A., 390 B.R. 80, 97 (S.D.N.Y. 2008). The remaining claims were ultimately settled or dismissed against all defendants other than Goldman, Sachs & Co. Although Goldman had also moved for dismissal of the claim against it, the district court allowed the claim to continue to summary judgment to determine whether the source of the payments to Goldman was ACC or a subsidiary.

1 Appellant's allegations against Goldman were amended several 2 times at the suggestion of the district court. The court was 3 concerned that "[t]he Amended Complaint does not identify which 4 fraudulent conveyances came from ACC and which came from the 5 [subsidiaries]. This omission is significant because [appellant]
6 lacks standing to pursue claims to recover for fraudulent
7 conveyance on behalf of the [subsidiaries]." Adelphia Recovery 8 Trust v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. 05-civ-9050, 2009 WL 1676077, at 9 *2 (S.D.N.Y. June 16, 2009). The district court, therefore, 10 directed appellant to "submit a revised version of paragraph 1359 11 of the Amended Complaint. The revised paragraph should identify 12 which payments to [Goldman] came from ACC." Id.

13 Pursuant to this order, appellant submitted a revised 14 version of the complaint that alleged, in relevant part:

15 [T]he Rigases caused ACC to commingle funds
16 in the concentration account that it
17 controlled, in the name of [a subsidiary]
18 Adelphia Cablevision LLC, from such sources 19 as customer receipts, liquidation of 20 overnight investment accounts, and transfers 21 from various subsidiary entities . . . in 22 order to satisfy these margin calls. On each 23 date identified in the following charts, the 24 Rigases caused ACC to direct that the funds
25 it had gathered in the concentration account
26 be distributed by Adelphia Cablevision LLC
27 directly to the Margin Lenders or to the RFE
28 for immediate payment over to the Margin
29 Lenders.

30
31 Rev. Second Am. Compl. ¶ 1359.

32 It appears from this allegation and the record that the 33 pertinent payments were made either: (i) directly to Goldman

1 from a particular account (the "Concentration Account"), which 2 contained most of the funds in the cash management system through 3 which the collective cash of ACC and its subsidiaries was 4 managed; or (ii) indirectly from the Concentration Account
5 through an RFE and then to Goldman. Appellant seeks in this 6 action to recover $63 million.

7 In the district court, and here, appellant faced the problem 8 that the payments to Goldman were made in the name of the 9 subsidiary, Adelpia Cablevision LLC, that held the Concentration 10 Account and that has paid all its scheduled creditors, which did 11 not include ACC, in full. Accordingly, appellant lacked standing 12 to sue the subsidiary. It therefore argued, based on the amended 13 allegation quoted above, that ACC was the real owner of, and 14 payor from, the Concentration Account. Adelpia Recovery Trust
15 v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. 05-cv-9050, 2011 WL 1419617 at *2 16 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 7, 2011). The district court disagreed and 17 granted Goldman's motion for summary judgment. Id. The court 18 stated, "it is admitted by [appellant's] own revised pleading 19 that the margin loan payments were not made by ACC but by 20 Adelpia Cablevision LLC, an ACC subsidiary on whose behalf 21 [appellant] does not have standing to sue." Id.

22 This appeal followed.

23 DISCUSSION

24 We review de novo whether Goldman was entitled to summary
25 judgment as a matter of law. See, e.g., Miller v. Wolpoff &

1 Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292, 300 (2d Cir. 2003); Mario v. P&C
2 Food Mkts., Inc., 313 F.3d 758, 763 (2d Cir. 2002).

3 The sole issue is whether the amended complaint states a 4 valid claim of a fraudulent conveyance under 11 U.S.C.
5 §§ 548(a)(1)(A) and 550(a). Section 548(a)(1)(A) provides, in 6 relevant part:

7 The trustee may avoid any transfer . . . of 8 an interest of the debtor in property . . .
9 that was made or incurred on or within 2 10 years before the date of the filing of the 11 [bankruptcy] petition, if the debtor
12 voluntarily or involuntarily . . . made such 13 transfer . . . with actual intent to hinder, 14 delay, or defraud any entity to which the 15 debtor was or became, on or after the date
16 that such transfer was made[,] . . .
17 indebted.

18
19 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A). The avoidance power thus applies only 20 to "transfers of property of the debtor," Begier v. IRS, 496 U.S.
21 53, 58 (1990), which includes "all legal or equitable interests 22 of the debtor in property as of the commencement of the case," 11
23 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1). Whether the margin loan payments to Goldman 24 were transfers of the property of ACC, or should be deemed to be 25 so, is the issue on appeal.

26 Appellant argues that we should follow decisions of the 27 Fifth and Tenth Circuits, Matter of Southmark Corp., 49 F.3d 1111
28 (5th Cir. 1995) and In re Amdura Corp., 75 F.3d 1447 (10th Cir.
29 1996), to determine whether ACC was the true owner of the 30 commingled Concentration Account. Together, these cases are said 31 to support a principle of attributing ownership of funds
32 aggregated in a communal account to a parent when the parent

1 exercises complete dominion over the funds, and has all legally
2 cognizable indicia of ownership. In Southmark, the court
3 determined that because Southmark owned and controlled the cash 4 management account, the subsidiary's settlement payment from that 5 account to its former president and director could be avoided by 6 Southmark because the funds were part of, and under complete
7 control by, Southmark's estate. 49 F.3d at 1117. And in Amdura, 8 the court held that funds in a commingled cash management account 9 belonged to the parent Amdura, even though subsidiaries had 10 contributed to the account, because Amdura was listed as the 11 owner and "possessed all other legally cognizable indicia of 12 ownership." 75 F.3d at 1451.

13         However, neither decision was rendered in a legal context 14 similar to the one before us or involved application of the 15 judicial estoppel doctrine. Throughout the reorganization 16 proceedings here, the Concentration Account was listed as an 17 asset only of two successive ACC subsidiaries, not the property 18 of ACC. The theory that the Concentration Account was actually 19 the property of ACC appeared for the first time late in the 20 present litigation, as described above, and well after 21 consummation of the plan of reorganization.

22         Appellant's (or its predecessors' in interest) position in 23 the bankruptcy proceedings regarding ownership of the account is

1 inconsistent with the claim it makes on appeal.<sup>2</sup> Given the 2 importance to bankruptcy proceedings of determining with finality 3 a debtor's ownership of particular assets, we hold that 4 appellants are estopped from pursuing a claim that would 5 reattribute asset ownership based on a determination of asset
6 ownership among the various entities agreed to by the pertinent 7 parties, after a plan of reorganization has been confirmed and 8 substantially consummated.

9 a) Principles of Judicial Estoppel

10 In New Hampshire v. Maine, the Supreme Court made clear that 11 the exact criteria for invoking judicial estoppel will vary based 12 on "specific factual contexts," and that "courts have uniformly 13 recognized that its purpose is to protect the integrity of the 14 judicial process by prohibiting parties from deliberately 15 changing positions according to the exigencies of the moment."
16 532 U.S. 742, 749-51 (2001) (internal citations and quotation 17 marks omitted). New Hampshire explains that,

18 Courts have observed that the circumstances
19 under which judicial estoppel may 20 appropriately be invoked are probably not

<sup>2</sup> Attribution of the Concentration Account to ACC required an explicit claim of ownership by ACC in the bankruptcy proceeding. First, bank statements listed the account holder's Taxpayer ID Number as that corresponding to the ACC subsidiary National Cable Acquisition Associates. Second, within Adelphia the Concentration Account was referred to as the Adelphia Cablevision (an ACC subsidiary) account, and Adelphia Cablevision was the entity that made and received payments involved with the Account. Finally, any of ACC, its subsidiaries, or RFEs could direct that money be paid from the Account on their behalf by wire or check regardless of how much they had contributed to the account, and if at any time the payments on behalf of these entities exceeded the entity's contribution to the Account, an intercompany payable to Adelphia Cablevision by those entities was created.

1 reducible to any general formulation of 2 principle. Nevertheless, several factors 3 typically inform the decision whether to 4 apply the doctrine in a particular case:
5 First, a party's later position must be 6 clearly inconsistent with its earlier 7 position. Second, courts regularly inquire
8 whether the party has succeeded in persuading
9 a court to accept that party's earlier 10 position, so that judicial acceptance of an 11 inconsistent position in a later proceeding 12 would create the perception that either the 13 first or the second court was misled. . . . A 14 third consideration is whether the party
15 seeking to assert an inconsistent position 16 would derive an unfair advantage or impose an 17 unfair detriment on the opposing party if not 18 estopped. In enumerating these factors, we do 19 not establish inflexible prerequisites or an 20 exhaustive formula for determining the 21 applicability of judicial estoppel.
22

23 Id. at 750-51. (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

24 Although we have recognized that "[t]ypically" the application of 25 judicial estoppel requires showing unfair advantage against the 26 party seeking estoppel, DeRosa v. Nat'l Envelope Corp., 595 F.3d 27 99, 103 (2d Cir. 2010) (requiring a party to show a clearly 28 inconsistent position, adoption of that position by a court in an 29 earlier proceeding, and unfair advantage against the party 30 seeking estoppel in the ADA context), we have not required this 31 element in all circumstances. See Maharaj v. BankAmerica Corp., 32 128 F.3d 94, 98 (2d Cir. 1997) (not requiring the element of 33 unfair advantage); Mitchell v. Washingtonville Cent. Sch. Dist., 34 190 F.3d 1, 6 (2d Cir. 1999) (same). This is consistent with New 35 Hampshire's admonishment that the application of the judicial 36 estoppel doctrine depends heavily on the "specific factual 37 context[]" before the court. 531 U.S. at 751. We do note,

1     though, that every case emphasizes that “[b]ecause the doctrine 2     is primarily concerned with protecting the judicial process, 3     relief is granted only when the risk of inconsistent results with 4     its impact on judicial integrity is certain.” Republic of Ecuador 5     v. Chevron Corp., 638 F.3d 384, 397 (2d Cir. 2011) (internal 6     quotation marks omitted).

7             Our holding in this regard is shaped by the context of a 8     complicated bankruptcy proceeding involving 250 related, 9     insolvent entities, and the risk to judicial integrity if we were 10    to allow a party, after the consummation of a bankruptcy, to take 11    a position that unravels key decisions in the proceedings. We 12    first turn to a description of the legal mechanics of such a 13    proceeding.

14    b) The Bankruptcy Context

15             Following a filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization, 16    the debtor must file “a list of creditors[,], a schedule of assets 17    and liabilities[,], a schedule of current income and current 18    expenditures[, and] a statement of the debtor’s financial 19    affairs.” 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(1). The debtor is given a 120-day 20    exclusive period in which to submit a plan of reorganization, 11 21    U.S.C. § 1121(b), and a disclosure statement containing “adequate 22    information” to allow interested parties to evaluate that plan.
23    11. U.S.C. § 1125(a)-(b). This plan includes items like complete
24    asset schedules. See Sure-Snap Corp. v. State St. Bank & Trust 25    Co., 948 F.2d 869, 873 (2d Cir. 1991); see also Chartschlaa v.
26    Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 538 F.3d 116, 122 (2d Cir. 2008) (The 1 bankruptcy estate includes "all legal or equitable interests of 2 the debtor in property as of the commencement of the case" and 3 "[i]t would be hard to imagine language that would be more 4 encompassing than this broad definition." (internal citations and 5 quotation marks omitted)).

6 The debtor is given 180 days, extendable up to 20 months by 7 the court, from filing for Chapter 11 relief in which to obtain 8 the approval of "each class of claims or interests that is 9 impaired under the plan." 11 U.S.C. § 1121(c)-(d). If the debtor 10 fails to file a plan or the debtor's exclusive filing period 11 expires without acceptance of a proposed plan by the parties in 12 interest, any party in interest can file a competing plan and 13 seek approval by the parties in interest. 11 U.S.C. § 1121(c).
14 Both the debtor's plan and any competing plan must meet various 15 mandatory provisions and may meet various discretionary 16 provisions. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1122, 1123(a), (b). Foremost among the 17 mandatory requirements is that the plan designate classes of 18 claims and classes of interests and specify how these classes
19 will be treated under the plan. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1122, 1123(a).

20 Once a conforming plan has been proposed, parties in 21 interest can vote to approve it. Following approval by at least 22 one class of impaired non-insider claims -- claims that will not 23 be paid completely or will have some other right altered under 24 the plan -- the court can confirm the plan and bind all creditors 25 if the plan is feasible, was proposed in good faith, and is in 26 compliance with the Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(10),

1 (b); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3020(b)(2). Once the plan is confirmed, 2 the debtor is discharged from any prepetition debts, subject to 3 specific exceptions not relevant here, as long as the confirmed 4 bankruptcy plan is followed. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1141(d)(1), 523.

5 c) Application of Judicial Estoppel

6 As the recitation of bankruptcy procedures and time frames
7 makes clear, debtors and creditors have ample periods of time
8 within which to finalize asset ownership schedules and fashion a 9 plan dependent upon those schedules.

10 In the present case, ACC filed for bankruptcy on June 25, 11 2002; the ultimately-confirmed plan was proposed on October 16, 12 2006; and the plan was confirmed on January 5, 2007, leaving over 13 four and a half years to sort out whether ACC or a subsidiary 14 owned the Concentration Account assets. At no time during these 15 proceedings did ACC or any party attribute ownership of the 16 Concentration Account assets to ACC. At the time of bankruptcy
17 filing and again in February 2004, the ACC subsidiary ACC 18 Operations, Inc. identified the Concentration Account as its 19 property; ACC did not. Amendments to the schedules of 20 liabilities in January and May 2005 listed the ACC subsidiary 21 Adelphia Cablevision as the owner of the Account in concluding 22 that "intercompany transfers between a Debtor on the one hand, 23 and Adelphia Cablevision [as owner of the Concentration Account]
24 on the other hand, have been netted in the Intercompany Schedule, 25 creating either a net payable or receivable intercompany balance 26 between each such Debtor and Adelphia Cablevision." ACC never

1 claimed the Account as one of its assets until such a claim of 2 ownership was asserted in the present proceeding in 2009. Nor 3 did any other party assert such a claim or seek a substantive 4 consolidation of ACC and Adelphia Cablevision's bankruptcies, as 5 permitted in bankruptcy proceedings to remedy circumstances where 6 formally separate entities commingle and subject their collective 7 assets to single control. See In re Augie/Restivo Baking Co., 8 860 F.2d 515, 518-19 (2d Cir. 1988).

9 Further, the bankruptcy plan undeniably was substantially
10 consummated as early as 2007. In re Adelphia Comm'cns Corp., 367 11 B.R. 84, 94 (S.D.N.Y. 2007). Substantial consummation, as 12 defined in 11 U.S.C. § 1101(2), requires the "transfer of all or 13 substantially all of the property" in the plan, "assumption by 14 the debtor . . . of all or substantially all of the property 15 dealt with by the plan," and "commencement of distribution under 16 the plan." Over $6 billion in cash, $117 million in tradeable
17 Time Warner shares, and $9.5 billion in tradeable Adelphia 18 Contingent Value Vehicle shares (shares set up as an interest in 19 Adelphia recoveries against third party lenders and accountants) 20 were distributed to claimholders as of early March 2007, just 21 after confirmation of the plan. Since then, substantially all 22 Adelphia's assets have been liquidated, returning approximately 23 $18 billion to claimholders.

24 In the bankruptcy context, whether a party's position with 25 regard to the ownership of assets is inconsistent with its later 26 claims is largely informed by the bankruptcy court's treatment of

1 those claims. See Galin v. United States, No. 08-cv-2508, 2008
2 WL 5378387, at *10 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 2008) ("adoption" in 3 judicial estoppel "is usually fulfilled . . . when the bankruptcy 4 court confirms a plan pursuant to which creditors release their 5 claims against the debtor" (quoting Negron v. Weiss, No. 06-cv-
6 1288, 2006 WL 2792769, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 27, 2006))).
7 Determination of the ownership of assets is at the core of the 8 bankruptcy process, and particularly the creation of a bankruptcy 9 reorganization plan, which involves "a schedule of all [the 10 debtors'] liquid assets and liabilities," and thereafter 11 operates, with full preclusive effect, to "bind its debtors and 12 creditors as to all the plan's provisions, and all related, 13 property or non-property based claims which could have been 14 litigated in the same cause of action." Sure-Snap Corp., 948 15 F.2d at 873 (citing 11 U.S.C. §§ 521(a)(1), 1141(a)).

16 It is therefore crucial, both for the sake of finality and 17 the needs of debtors and creditors, that claims to ownership of 18 various assets be determined in the bankruptcy proceedings.
19 Particularly when, as here, the assets in question were claimed 20 by other parties during the bankruptcy proceeding without 21 objection, a debtor's subsequent claim to those assets in a 22 different proceeding must be seen as inconsistent with its prior 23 silence.<sup>3</sup> Cf. Chartschlaa, 538 F.3d at 123 ("The Bankruptcy Code <sup>3</sup> A party may be bound by the position taken by its predecessors in interest in prior proceedings. See, e.g., Secured Equities Invs., Inc. v. McFarland, 753 N.Y.S.2d 264, 264 (4th Dep't 2002)).

1 is premised on full and complete disclosure of the debtor's
2 finances."). Any other holding would encourage sharp practices, 3 involving strategic denials or affirmations of asset ownership 4 timed to the legal exigencies of the moment, precisely what the 5 doctrine is intended to prevent.

6 The bankruptcy court's treatment of the asset schedules in 7 the present matter underlies their importance and the need for 8 finality. In order for the reorganization to proceed, the 9 Adelpia entities underwent a massive restatement of their 10 accounting records, which sought to provide separate, audited 11 financials for each insolvent entity. In re Adelpia, 368 B.R. at 12 150-51. The allocation of assets to the various entities was of 13 central importance to this process. One of the foremost 14 difficulties the bankruptcy court encountered was the issue of 15 intercompany transfers between the various entities controlled by 16 the Rigas family. See id. at 152. The resolution of this problem 17 depended on the parties' adoption of the so-called "Bank of 18 Adelpia Paradigm,"<sup>4</sup> which tracked intercompany transfers through 19 a single RFE subsidiary that controlled the main account: 20 Adelpia Cablevision. Id. at 151-53. Adelpia Cablevision was 21 listed as the owner of the Concentration Account in both the <sup>4</sup> "[I]ntercompany transactions (e.g., cash receipts, disbursements, acquisition accounting and cost allocations) were deemed to have been made by or to a single entity, Adelpia Cablevision, LLC (the 'Bank of Adelpia'). This methodology, often referred to as the 'Bank of Adelpia Paradigm,' aggregated intercompany transaction balances consistent with the actual flow of funds within the Debtor's cash management system." In re Adelpia, 368 B.R. at 151.

1 January and May amendments to the debtors' schedules of assets
2 and liabilities, and neither ACC nor appellant's predecessors in 3 interest contested that determination.

4 The asset schedules thus played a key role in both the 5 bankruptcy court's supervision of the process and in the parties' 6 understanding of the plan. As the district court noted in its 7 discussion of substantive consolidation, such relief was "highly 8 unlikely" because "the Debtors have issued restated financial 9 statements and filed the May 2005 Schedules, thus evidencing an 10 ability to generally determine the assets and liabilities of each 11 Debtor." Id. at 219 (discussing In re Augie/Restivo, 860 F.2d at 12 519) (internal quotation marks omitted). The Bank of Adelphia 13 paradigm, which included Adelphia Cablevision's ownership of the 14 account in the asset schedules, was the cornerstone of the 15 bankruptcy plan, and without it the entire process would have 16 been at risk of unraveling. We, therefore, decline to issue a 17 ruling inconsistent with the factual underpinnings of this duly 18 confirmed and substantially consummated bankruptcy plan.

19 A different ruling would threaten the integrity of the 20 bankruptcy process by encouraging parties to alter their 21 positions as to ownership of assets as they deem their litigation 22 needs to change, leaving courts to unravel previously closed 23 proceedings. Doing so would allow parties an opportunity to 24 "play[] fast and loose" with the requirements of the bankruptcy 25 process and inject an unacceptable level of uncertainty into its 26 results -- exactly the result that the doctrine of judicial

1 estoppel is intended to avoid. Wight v. BankAmerica Corp., 219
2 F.3d 79, 89 (2d Cir. 2000); accord In re Adelpia Recovery Trust, 3 634 F.3d at 696 (integrity of judicial process threatened by 4 parties taking a short term position that risks being 5 inconsistent with its future position, not only by “knowingly 6 [lying]”).

7 In relying upon the prospective harm to the integrity of 8 bankruptcy proceedings that would result from a different ruling, 9 we do not exclude the possibility of specific harm, or unfair
10 disadvantage to, Goldman beyond the possible loss of $63 million.
11 We simply decline to require Goldman and the courts having to 12 unravel all previous proceedings to determine what would have 13 happened had appellant or its predecessors in interest claimed 14 ownership of the Concentration Account in a timely fashion.

15 We also do not exclude the possibility that, in an unusual 16 case, the allocation of specific assets may be largely irrelevant 17 to the bankruptcy court’s actions. However, given the centrality 18 of asset allocation to the integrity of the bankruptcy process, 19 see Chartschlaa, 538 F.3d at 122, particularly where multiple 20 related entities are involved, a creditor who fails to lay claim 21 to an asset in the bankruptcy court only to do so in subsequent 22 litigation must, to prevail, bear the heavy burden of showing a 23 de minimis effect on the bankruptcy proceeding.

24 CONCLUSION

25 The requirements of judicial estoppel are, therefore, met.
26 The asset schedules showing that the Concentration Account was

1 held by a subsidiary of ACC were approved by appellant's
2 predecessors in interest. The bankruptcy court adopted the asset
3 schedules and approved a plan of reorganization that treated ACC 4 separately from its subsidiaries based on those schedules.
5 Revisiting the accuracy of those schedules to permit the present 6 action to proceed would clearly threaten the integrity of 7 bankruptcy proceedings. We, therefore, hold that appellant's 8 complaint is barred by the doctrine of judicial estoppel. The 9 judgment of the district court is affirmed.
