PATRICK MCCARDELL,

Plaintiff–Appellant,

v.

REGENT PRIVATE CAPITAL, L.L.C.,

Defendant–Appellee.

---

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana
USDC No. 2:12-CV-1136

---

Before HIGGINBOTHAM, OWEN, and SOUTHWICK, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM:*

Plaintiff–Appellant Patrick McCardell and Defendant–Appellee Regent Private Capital, L.L.C. (Regent), signed a guaranty related to the sale of an airship (a “blimp”) owned by McCardell; the guaranty contained an arbitration clause that provided that the parties “will submit any disputes regarding this contract” to arbitration. The purchaser of the airship later defaulted, and McCardell sued Regent in Louisiana state court seeking a declaration that the guaranty had not terminated when the airship was returned to McCardell by the purchaser. Regent removed the case to federal court and filed a motion to dismiss. Rather than dismissing McCardell’s claim, the district court stayed the case pending arbitration. Although the court administratively closed the case “for statistical purposes,” its stay order explicitly retained jurisdiction and provided that “if circumstances change,” the case could “proceed to final disposition.”

Before turning to the merits of an appeal, “[t]his court must examine the basis of its jurisdiction, on its own motion, if necessary.”<sup>1</sup> The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), under which the guaranty falls,<sup>2</sup> provides that “an interlocutory order granting a stay pending arbitration is not an appealable order.”<sup>3</sup> The stay order here falls squarely within this rule. Though the district court administratively closed the case, this court has on at least three occasions held that such an order is not a final decision under the FAA and, in fact, precludes appellate review.<sup>4</sup> We therefore do not have jurisdiction over McCardell’s appeal.
