years of supervised release. On appeal, her counsel has moved to withdraw, and in a brief filed under Anders v. California, 386 U.S. 738 (1967), counsel raises as issues (1) whether the sentence is excessive and unfair, and (2) whether Vaca-Gomez's proffer interviews with the government should have resulted in a motion for a downward departure based on substantial assistance. In his motion to withdraw, counsel states that Vaca-Gomez believes that counsel rendered ineffective assistance.

To the extent Vaca-Gomez raises a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, we decline to consider it in this direct criminal appeal. See United States v. McAdory, 501 F.3d 868, 872-73 (8th Cir. 2007). We also reject the argument that the district court's sentence was excessive and unfair, see United States v. Feemster, 572 F.3d 455, 461 (8th Cir. 2009) (en banc), and we find no basis in the record to conclude that the lack of a substantial-assistance departure motion in this case is a basis to challenge the sentence imposed, see United States v. Wolf, 270 F.3d 1188, 1190 (8th Cir. 2001).

Last, having independently reviewed the record under Penon v. Ohio, 488 U.S. 75, 80 (1988), we find no nonfrivolous issues. Accordingly, we affirm, and we grant counsel's motion to withdraw.
