MEMORANDUM*

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California
Thelton E. Henderson, Senior District Judge, Presiding

Argued and Submitted February 10, 2016

* This disposition is not appropriate for publication and is not precedent except as provided by 9th Cir. R. 36-3.

Before: TASHIMA and W. FLETCHER, Circuit Judges and GETTLEMAN, Senior District Judge.

Plaintiff Crown Chevrolet appeals the district court's dismissal of its complaint as barred by the statute of limitations. We affirm.

A Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO") claim is subject to a four year-statute of limitations that begins to run when "a plaintiff knows or should know of the injury that underlies his cause of action." Pincay v. Andrews, 238 F.3d 1106, 1108-09 (9th Cir. 2001); see also Rotella v. Wood, 528 U.S. 549, 553-55 (2000). For Crown's February 2013 complaint to be timely, the injury underlying its cause of action must have occurred on or after February 2009. The district court correctly found that Crown experienced two injuries before February 2009 — the Fall 2008 sales of Crown's two dealerships, and Dosanjh's November 2008 default on his obligations under the side agreements. These were the injuries underlying Crown's RICO claim, and Crown knew about them. Crown knew that it had sold its dealerships and that Dosanjh had breached the side agreements. Crown's claims began to accrue in late 2008, and its February 2013 complaint was therefore untimely.

It does not matter that Crown did not know that "it was being forced to sell . . . because of wrongful financial pressure." The Supreme Court has rejected the argument that the RICO statute of limitations begins to run only when a claimant discovers both an injury and the racketeering activity. Rotella, 528 U.S. at 554-55; see also Grimmatt v. Brown, 75 F.3d 506, 510 (9th Cir. 1996) (“The plaintiff need not discover that the injury is part of a ‘pattern of racketeering’ for the period to begin to run.”).

Crown concedes that the statute of limitations for its Unfair Competition Law (“UCL”) claim is tied to the limitations period for its RICO claim. Because Crown’s RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, the district court did not err in dismissing the UCL claim as well. See Aryeh v. Canon Bus. Sols., Inc., 292 P.3d 871, 878 (Cal. 2013).
