11 CHRISTOPHER YVON,
12 Plaintiff,
13 v.
14 CITY OF OCEANSIDE, a California
15 Municipal Corporation, 16 Defendant.

Case No.: 16-CV-1640-AJB-WVG

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

(Doc. No. 3)

17 18 Presently before the Court is Plaintiff Christopher Yvon's ("Yvon") motion for 19 preliminary injunction.¹ (Doc. No. 3.) Defendant City of Oceanside ("City") opposes the 20 motion. (Doc. Nos. 5, 10.) Having reviewed the parties' arguments and controlling 21 authority, and pursuant to Local Civil Rule 7.1.d.1, the Court finds the matter suitable for 22 decision on the papers, without oral argument. The Court GRANTS Yvon's motion.

23 BACKGROUND

24 Yvon is an individual seeking the City's approval to operate a tattoo studio at 609 25

26 ¹ Yvon filed his motion as an ex parte application for temporary restraining order ("TRO") 27 and for an order to show cause regarding preliminary injunction. (See Doc. No. 3.) On July 28 8, 2016, the Court denied the application to the extent Yvon sought a TRO, but otherwise construed it as a motion for preliminary injunction. (Doc. No. 9.)

1 Vista Way in Oceanside, California. (Doc. No. 1 ¶¶ 1, 9.) The location where Yvon seeks 2 to open his studio is governed by the substantive provisions of the 1986 Zoning Ordinance
3 and the administrative provisions of the 1992 Zoning Ordinance. (Doc. No. 5-3 ¶ 14.)
4 Section 1500 of the 1986 Ordinance (“CUP regulation”) requires persons seeking a 5 business license to operate a tattoo business in Oceanside to obtain a conditional use permit 6 (“CUP”). (Id. ¶ 10.) Yvon alleges that this regulation grants City officials unbridled 7 discretion in determining whether to grant or deny a permit. (Id. ¶ 11.) Yvon further alleges 8 the City does not require a CUP decision to issue within a specified brief period of time.
9 (Id. ¶ 12.) For these reasons, Yvon alleges the CUP regulation constitutes an 10 unconstitutional prior restraint. (Doc. No. 3-1 at 9–13.)

11 Because tattooing is classified as a “regulated use” by section 1500.21 of the 1986 12 Ordinance, criteria in addition to the CUP regulation are imposed. (Doc. No. 1 ¶ 12.) 13 Specifically, section 1500.23 imposes a location restriction on regulated uses, requiring 14 such businesses to be at least 200 feet from residential properties and 1000 feet from any 15 other regulated uses (“buffer zone regulation”). (Id. ¶ 13.) Yvon alleges this regulation is 16 an impermissible time, place, and manner restriction. (Doc. No. 3-1 at 13–15.)

17 Yvon alleges that his counsel contacted the City on November 24, 2015, requesting 18 that he be allowed to open a tattoo shop without first applying for a CUP.² (Doc. No. 1 ¶ 19 14.) John Mullen, an attorney for the City, called Yvon’s counsel informing him that while 20 the City would not require Yvon to obtain a police permit, he would be required to obtain 21 a CUP. (Id.) In mid-June 2016, the City’s planning division issued a staff report 22 recommending that Yvon’s CUP be denied. (Id. ¶ 15.)

23 Yvon alleges that the reasons given in support of the recommendation do not meet 24 First Amendment requirements. (Id.) Because of the City ordinances, Yvon alleges he has 25 _____

26 ² The City provided the Court with a copy of this letter. (Doc. No. 10-4 at 4–8.) Contrary 27 to Yvon’s allegation, his counsel did not seek a waiver of the CUP regulation, but rather 28 sought a waiver of the police permit regulation and the cap on tattooing establishments in the City. (Id.)

1 suffered the loss of his right to free speech as well as income he cannot earn due to his 2 current inability to operate a tattoo business in the City.³ (Id. ¶ 16.) Yvon thus instituted 3 this action by filing the operative complaint, bringing claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for 4 deprivation of his rights guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United 5 States Constitution, as well as deprivation of his right to free speech guaranteed by Article 6 1, Section 2 of the California state constitution. (Id. ¶¶ 17–23.)

7 Yvon filed the instant ex parte application on June 29, 2016. (Doc. No. 3.) The Court 8 permitted the City an opportunity to oppose the application, which it did on July 5, 2016.
9 (Doc. No. 5.) On July 6, 2016, Yvon filed a reply. (Doc. No. 6.) The Court denied Yvon’s 10 ex parte application to the extent he sought a TRO, but otherwise construed the application 11 as a motion for preliminary injunction. (Doc. No. 9 at 3–4.) The Court permitted both sides 12 an additional opportunity to further brief the propriety of this injunctive relief, which they 13 did. (Doc. Nos. 10, 11.)

14 LEGAL STANDARD

15 A preliminary injunction is an “extraordinary remedy” and is “never awarded as of 16 right.” Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 24 (2008) (citing Munaf v.
17 Geren, 553 U.S. 674, 689–90 (2008)). To obtain this relief, the moving party bears the 18 burden of demonstrating four factors: (1) “he is likely to succeed on the merits”; (2) “he is 19 likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief”; (3) “the balance of 20 equities tips in his favor”; and (4) “an injunction is in the public interest.” Id. at 20 (citations 21 omitted).

22 Although a plaintiff must satisfy all four of the Winter requirements, the Ninth 23 Circuit employs a sliding scale whereby “the elements of the preliminary injunction test 24 are balanced, so that a stronger showing of one element may offset a weaker showing of 25 another.” Alliance for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1131 (9th Cir. 2011).

27 28 ³ Yvon states this loss of income is due to his inability to practice tattooing in the City of Long Beach. (Doc. No. 1 ¶ 16.) The Court assumes he intended to say “City of Oceanside.”

1 Accordingly, if the moving party can demonstrate the requisite likelihood of irreparable 2 harm and show that an injunction is in the public interest, a TRO may issue so long as there 3 are serious questions going to the merits and the balance of hardships tips sharply in the 4 moving party's favor. Id.

5 DISCUSSION

6 I. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

7 The Ninth Circuit recently made clear that all aspects of tattooing are purely 8 expressive activity entitled to the full protection of the First Amendment: “The tattoo itself, 9 the process of tattooing, and even the business of tattooing are not expressive conduct but 10 purely expressive activity fully protected by the First Amendment.” Anderson v. City of 11 Hermosa Beach, 621 F.3d 1051, 1060 (9th Cir. 2010) (emphasis in original). However, 12 activity protected by the First Amendment may still be subjected to constitutional time, 13 place, and manner restrictions. See City of Renton v. Playtime Theatres, Inc., 475 U.S. 41, 14 49–50 (1986); see also 3570 E. Foothill Blvd., Inc. v. City of Pasadena, 912 F. Supp. 1268, 15 1273 (C.D. Cal. 1996) (“despite the fact that adult entertainment is protected by the First 16 Amendment, local governments do have the right to impose time, place, and manner 17 restrictions”).

18 Yvon challenges two provisions of the 1986 Ordinance and seeks an injunction 19 preventing the City from enforcing them: (1) the buffer zone regulation, which requires all 20 regulated uses, including some constitutionally protected activities like tattooing, to be at 21 least 200 feet from any residential property and 1000 feet from any other regulated use; 22 and (2) the CUP regulation, which requires an applicant to show, inter alia, that the 23 proposed use “will not . . . be detrimental to the health, safety, peace or general welfare of 24 persons residing or working in the vicinity.” (Doc. No. 5-12 at 3.)

25 A. Yvon's Standing to Facially Challenge the Ordinances

26 As an initial matter, Yvon argues he has standing to facially challenge the 27 ordinances, notwithstanding his pending application. (Doc. No. 3-1 at 8–9.) Though the 28 City does not dispute this contention, the Court is “under an independent obligation to 1 examine [its] own jurisdiction, and standing ‘is perhaps the most important of [the 2 jurisdictional] doctrines.’ FW/PBS, Inc. v. City of Dallas, 493 U.S. 215, 231 (1990)

3 (quoting Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737, 750 (1984)).

4 Having reviewed Yvon’s position and controlling legal authority, the Court agrees 5 that Yvon has standing to facially challenge the ordinances. See City of Lakewood v. Plain 6 Dealer Pub. Co., 486 U.S. 750, 755–56 (1988) (“our cases have long held that when a 7 licensing statute allegedly vests unbridled discretion in a government official over whether 8 to permit or deny expressive activity, one who is subject to the law may challenge it facially 9 without the necessity of first applying for, and being denied, a license” (citing Freedman 10 v. Maryland, 380 U.S. 51, 56 (1965))); Forsyth Cnty., Ga., v. Nationalist Movement, 505 11 U.S. 123, 129 (1992) (“It is well established that in the area of freedom of expression an 12 overbroad regulation may be subject to facial review and invalidation[.]”); Dease v. City 13 of Anaheim, 826 F. Supp. 336, 340 (C.D. Cal. 1993) (“Plaintiff has standing to challenge 14 the ordinance, regardless of whether she has applied for or would qualify for the CUP”).⁴

15 B. Buffer Zone Regulation

16 “The power of local governments to zone and control land use is undoubtedly broad

19 ⁴ The City argues that because Yvon brings a facial challenge to the buffer zone and CUP 20 regulations contained in the 1986 Ordinance, he must show that the regulations are 21 “unconstitutional in every conceivable application[.]” (Doc. No. 10 at 8–9 (quoting Lone 22 Star Sec. & Video, Inc., 2016 WL 3632375, at *3 (9th Cir. 2016).) The City argues Yvon 23 cannot make this showing because the 1986 Ordinance is not unconstitutional in every 24 possible application. (Id. at 9.) The Court’s response is simple: It is. As explained infra, 25 Yvon has carried his burden in showing a likelihood of success on whether the buffer zone 26 regulation is an impermissible time, place, and manner restriction because the City has 27 failed to proffer pre-enactment evidence tying the alleged secondary effects of tattooing 28 businesses with its substantial government interest in implementing the 1986 Ordinance.
See infra Discussion Section I.B. Similarly, Yvon has carried his burden in showing a likelihood of success on whether the CUP regulation is an unconstitutional prior restraint for vesting unbridled discretion in City officials. See infra Discussion Section I.C.
Enforcing each of these regulations based on these findings renders them unconstitutional in every application.

1 and its proper exercise is an essential aspect of achieving a satisfactory quality of life in 2 both urban and rural communities. But the zoning power is not infinite and 3 unchallengeable; it ‘must be exercised within constitutional limits.’” Schad v. Borough of 4 Mount Ephraim, 452 U.S. 61, 68 (1981) (quoting Moore v. E. Cleveland, 431 U.S. 494, 5 514 (1977) (Stevens, J. concurring)). The Supreme Court’s decision in City of Renton v.
6 Playtime Theatres, Inc., 475 U.S. 41 (1986), sets forth the three-part analytical framework 7 courts must apply when assessing whether a challenged zoning ordinance constitutes a 8 constitutional time, place, and manner restriction on speech. First, is the ordinance a total 9 ban on speech? Id. at 46. Second, if the restriction is not a total ban, is the ordinance content 10 neutral or content based? Id. at 46–47. Finally, if the restriction is content neutral, is the 11 ordinance designed to serve a substantial government interest that is narrowly tailored, and 12 do reasonable alternative avenues of communication remain available? Id. at 47; Members 13 of City Council of City of L.A. v. Taxpayers for Vincent, 466 U.S. 789, 808 (1984).

14 Here, the buffer zone regulation is clearly not a total ban on speech in light of the 15 three tattoo shops that operate in the City.⁵ (Doc. No. 5-3 ¶ 16.)⁶ Thus, “it [is] properly 16 analyzed as a time, place and manner regulation.” Ctr. for Fair Pub. Policy v. Maricopa 17 Cnty., Ariz., 336 F.3d 1153, 1159 (9th Cir. 2003) (citing Renton, 475 U.S. at 46). The 18 regulation is likewise clearly content neutral because it applies to all regulated uses 19 generally and tattoo businesses specifically, without regard to the type of tattoos that are 20 created. See Anderson, 621 F.3d at 1059 n.4 (“Anderson does not contend that the City’s 21 regulation is a content-based restriction on speech. And with good reason, as the City bans 22

23 ⁵ While it is unclear where within the City these tattoo shops are located and thus whether 24 the 1986 Ordinance controlled in those cases, each of the City’s ordinances contains a 25 buffer zone regulation with the 1986 Ordinance being the most lenient. (Compare Doc. No.
26 No. 5-13 at 4 (200-foot buffer zone between regulated uses and residential zones) with Doc.
27 No. 5-13 at 21 (500-foot buffer zone between, inter alia, tattooing establishment and 28 residential district).)

⁶ The relevant paragraph is mislabeled as a second paragraph 14, which can be located on pages 5 and 6 of the Ramsey declaration.

1 all tattoo parlors, not just those that convey a particular kind of message or subject 2 matter.”). Accordingly, the buffer zone regulation, as a content-neutral time, place, and 3 manner restriction, is “acceptable so long as [it is] designed to serve a substantial 4 government interest and do[es] not unreasonably limit alternative avenues of 5 communication.” Renton, 475 U.S. at 47.

6 Yvon does not argue that the buffer zone ordinances unreasonably limit alternative 7 avenues of communication. Nor can he, given the City’s evidence that there are as many 8 as 879 prospective locations in which he could operate his tattoo shop in compliance with 9 the regulation. (Doc. No. 10 at 2, 8.) Rather, Yvon focuses his argument exclusively on 10 what he contends is the City’s lack of a substantial government interest supported by pre-11 1986 evidence specifically tying tattooing businesses to harmful secondary effects. (Doc.
12 No. 6 at 6–10; Doc. No. 11 at 3.)

13 The buffer zone regulation is codified in Article 15.2 of the City’s 1986 Ordinance.
14 Section 1500.21 lists those businesses that are subject to the buffer zone regulation 15 (“regulated uses”), including tattoo shops. (Doc. No. 5-13 at 2.) Section 1500.23, the 16 specific regulation at issue, renders it “unlawful for any regulated use to be located: (a) 17 closer than 1,000 feet to any other regulated use; or (b) to be closer than 200 feet to any 18 residential home.”⁷ (Id. at 4.)

19 The City contends its interest in enforcing the buffer zone regulation is due to the 20 harmful secondary effects associated with the enumerated regulated uses.⁸ (See Doc. No.
21

22 ⁷ The City requests the Court take judicial notice of provisions of the 1986 and 1992
23 Ordinances, as well as documents that were before the City when it adopted the 1992 24 Ordinances. (Doc. Nos. 5-4, 10-3.) Yvon does not oppose the City’s requests. The Court 25 GRANTS these requests because “[m]unicipal ordinances are proper subjects for judicial 26 notice” under Rule 201 of the Federal Rules of Evidence. Tollis, Inc. v. Cnty. of San Diego, 27 505 F.3d 935, 938 n.1 (9th Cir. 2007).

28 ⁸ Specifically, the City points to the statement of purpose contained in its 1992 Ordinance as the statement of its interest and the evidence necessary to support it. (Doc. No. 5 at 17.)
However, that statement is, in pertinent respects, identical to that contained in 1986 Ordinance, though the 1992 Ordinance is indisputably more expansive. (Compare Doc.

1 5 at 17; Doc. No. 5-13 at 1.) Specifically, section 1500.20 states,

2 [I]t is recognized that there are some uses which, because of certain factors 3 such as nature of operation, type of clientele, and hours-of-operation, create 4 conditions harmful to the public health, welfare, and safety when such uses 5 are allowed to become numerous or concentrated within a limited 6 geographical area, or when such uses exist near residential neighborhoods.
7 Special regulations separating such uses from each other and from nearby 8 residential areas are therefore necessary to protect the community from 9 consequent blight, depreciated property values, law enforcement problems, 10 and interference with residential neighborhoods.

11 (Doc. No. 5-13 at 1.) This interest is certainly a substantial governmental interest in light 12 of the many binding judicial opinions finding similarly stated interests to be so. See, e.g., 13 Members of City Council of L.A., 466 U.S. at 807–08 (city’s interest to combat “visual 14 clutter and blight” was substantial); Young v. Am. Mini Theatres, Inc., 427 U.S. 50, 71 15 (1976) (“the city’s interest in attempting to preserve the quality of urban life is one that 16 must be accorded high respect”); Ctr. for Fair Pub. Policy, 336 F.3d at 1166 (“It is beyond 17 peradventure at this point in the development of the doctrine that a state’s interest in 18 curbing the secondary effects associated with adult entertainment establishments is 19 substantial.”). In light of this authority, Yvon levels his attacks at whether the City’s 20 proffered evidence “demonstrate[s] a connection between [tattooing businesses] . . . and 21 the secondary effects that motivated the adoption of the ordinance.” City of Los Angeles v.
22 Alameda Books, Inc., 535 U.S. 425, 441 (2002) (O’Connor, J., plurality).⁹ (See Doc. No. 6 23 at 6–10.)

24 A municipality that seeks to combat the secondary effects of protected speech carries 25 the initial burden of coming forth with “any evidence that is ‘reasonably believed to be 26 No. 5-13 at 1 with Doc. No. 5-13 at 11.) As the 1986 Ordinance is the permitting scheme 27 that currently controls in the relevant zone, the Court cites to its statement of purpose.

28 ⁹ While the Ninth Circuit has recognized Justice Kennedy’s opinion as the controlling opinion in Alameda Books, it also acknowledged that the differences between the two opinions are “quite subtle.” Ctr. for Fair Pub. Policy, 336 F.3d at 1161, 1163 (quoting Ben’s Bar, Inc. v. Vill. of Somerset, 316 F.3d 702, 721 (7th Cir. 2003)).

1 relevant’ for demonstrating a connection between speech and a substantial, independent 2 government interest.” Alameda Books, 535 U.S. at 438 (O’Connor, J., plurality) (quoting 3 Renton, 475 U.S. at 51–52). This burden is not a “high bar.” Id. Rather, the “evidence must 4 fairly support the municipality’s rationale for its ordinance.” Id. If the municipality meets 5 this bar, the burden then shifts to the plaintiff to cast direct doubt on the municipality’s 6 rationale, “either by demonstrating that the municipality’s evidence does not support its 7 rationale or by furnishing evidence that disputes the municipality’s factual findings[.]” Id.
8 at 438–39. If the plaintiff fails to cast this doubt, then the municipality has carried its burden 9 under Renton. Id. If, however, the plaintiff succeeds in casting doubt, “the burden then 10 shifts back to the municipality to supplement the record with evidence renewing support 11 for a theory that justifies the ordinance.” Id. at 439. It is only when the burden shifts back 12 to the municipality that it may rely on post-enactment evidence. Ctr. for Fair Pub. Policy, 13 336 F.3d at 1166 n.3 (citing Alameda Books, 535 U.S. at 441).

14 Here, the City contends it has met its burden by presenting findings made in support 15 of the 1992 Ordinance. (Doc. No. 5 at 17; Doc. No. 10 at 5–7.) However, the Court finds 16 this evidence fails to satisfy the City’s initial burden of proving a connection between 17 tattooing businesses and its stated governmental interest. The issues with the City’s 18 evidence are twofold. First, the City relies wholly upon post-enactment evidence. The 19 Ninth Circuit recently clarified the role post-enactment evidence plays in the analysis:

20 The parties argue at great length over whether or not we may consider the 21 contents of the studies that document the secondary effects associated with 22 sexually-oriented businesses, and that were placed in the district court record 23 during the course of these proceedings. While the Arizona legislature was 24 briefed on these studies, the actual studies themselves were not before the 25 legislature prior to § 13-1422’s enactment, and it is therefore so-called post-26 enactment evidence. However, in Alameda Books the Supreme Court 27 specifically contemplated that the state could indeed rely on post-enactment 28 evidence in support of its position, but only if the plaintiffs succeed in casting doubt on the state’s rationale. See Alameda Books, 535 U.S. at 441 (if “the burden shifts back” to the state, then state can “supplement the record with evidence renewing support for a theory that justifies the ordinance” (emphasis added))[.]

1 Ctr. for Fair. Pub. Policy, 336 F.3d at 1166 n.3. Because the City can rely on post-2 enactment evidence to support its position only after the burden has shifted back to it, the 3 City is necessarily required to rely on pre-enactment evidence to carry its initial burden.
4 See Buehrle v. City of Key West, 813 F.3d 973, 979 (11th Cir. 2015) (stating city “must 5 demonstrate that it had a reasonable basis for believing its regulation would further [its] 6 legitimate interests” and ““must rely on at least some pre-enactment evidence’ that the 7 regulation would serve its asserted interests” (quoting Peek-A-Boo Lounge of Bradenton, 8 Inc. v. Manatee Cnty., 337 F.3d 1251, 1268 (11th Cir. 2003))).

9 Second, the evidence the City has proffered says nothing that ties tattooing itself to 10 the secondary effects that the City seeks to avoid. The findings contained in the 1992 11 Ordinance either refer to “adult businesses” generally or “sexually oriented businesses” 12 specifically. (Doc. No. 5-13 at 11–13.) The closest that the 1992 Ordinance comes to 13 commenting on tattooing businesses is by stating, rather generally, that “the location and 14 concentration of certain businesses other than adult businesses also create conditions 15 harmful to the public health, welfare, and safety, due to the nature of their operations, types 16 of clientele, and hours of operation.” (Id. at 13.)

17 The accompanying Staff Report does no better. It mentions tattooing specifically 18 only to clarify that the proposed amendments include adding a definition for “tattooing 19 establishments” because it was “omitted from the prior ordinance[.]” (Doc. No. 10-7 at 2.) 20 Otherwise, the Staff Report largely focuses on the secondary effects of sexually-oriented 21 businesses, as supported by “the report on the Attorney General’s working group on the 22 regulation of sexually oriented businesses[.]”¹⁰ (Doc. No. 10-9 at 3.) It is true that the Staff 23

25 ¹⁰ The Staff Report also relied upon land use study results from six cities. (Doc. No. 10-9 26 at 3.) The Staff Report does not inform whether these studies explicitly noted secondary 27 effects that arise from tattooing businesses or if they more specifically addressed sexually-28 oriented business; rather, the Staff Report merely states that “the studies document the secondary adverse [e]ffects of adult-oriented businesses” (Id.) The City did not provide the Court with a copy of these studies.

1 Report advised that the buffer zone for all regulated uses other than adult book stores, adult 2 entertainment businesses, adult motion picture theaters, adult theaters, and peep show 3 establishments be increased from 200 feet to 500 feet from any residential district. (Doc.
4 No. 10-8 at 16.) While the Court acknowledges that this recommendation applied to “all 5 the other regulated uses that are listed in Article 36,” the Staff Report failed to mention 6 tattooing establishments, though it listed a host of other regulated uses. (Doc. No. 10-8 at 7 16 (noting the recommendation to increase the buffer zone applied to “bars and cocktail 8 lounges, bath houses, dance establishments, escort services, figure studios, liquor stores, 9 massage establishments, peep-show establishments and pool rooms”).)

10 The Court is cognizant that the burden the City bears is not a high bar. While an 11 attack on the buffer zone regulation contained in the 1992 Ordinance as it applies to 12 sexually-oriented businesses would likely pass constitutional muster based upon the 13 evidentiary record before the Court, that is not what Yvon attacks here. See Gammoh v.
14 City of La Habra, 395 F.3d 1114, 1126 (9th Cir. 2005) (characterizing the pre-enactment 15 record as “substantial” and carried the city’s initial burden because the city council was 16 presented with, inter alia, “seventeen studies on secondary effects of adult businesses, a 17 summary of some of those studies, [and] the 1986 Attorney General’s Report on 18 Pornography”). Rather, he levels his constitutional challenge against the buffer zone 19 regulation contained in the 1986 Ordinance as it applies to tattoo shops. Against this 20 challenge, the City has not carried its burden. Accordingly, the Court finds that Yvon has 21 established a likelihood of success on the merits with respect to the buffer zone regulation 22 contained in the 1986 Ordinance.

23 C. Conditional Use Permit Regulation

24 The Supreme Court has repeatedly held an ordinance that “makes the peaceful 25 enjoyment of freedoms which the Constitution guarantees contingent upon the 26 uncontrolled will of an official—as by requiring a permit or license which may be granted 27 or withheld in the discretion of such official—is an unconstitutional censorship or prior 28 restraint upon the enjoyment of those freedoms.” FW/PBS, 493 U.S. at 226 (O’Connor, J.,

1 plurality) (quoting Shuttlesworth v. Birmingham, 394 U.S. 147, 151 (1969)). “The 2 reasoning is simple: If the permit scheme ‘involves appraisal of facts, the exercise of 3 judgment, and the formation of an opinion,’ Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 305 4 (1940), by the licensing authority, ‘the danger of censorship and of abridgment of our 5 precious First Amendment freedoms is too great’ to be permitted, S.E. Promotions, Ltd., 6 420 U.S. at 553.” Forsyth Cnty., Ga., 505 U.S. at 131. Although prior restraints are not 7 unconstitutional per se, any system of prior restraint bears “a heavy presumption against 8 its constitutional validity.” FW/PBS, 493 U.S. at 225 (O’Connor, J., plurality) (quoting S.E.
9 Promotions, Ltd. v. Conrad, 420 U.S. 546, 562 (1975)).

10 To avoid this adverse presumption, a permitting scheme that acts as a prior restraint 11 must contain certain procedural safeguards to guard against the government’s possible 12 abuse of power to censor. First, the permitting scheme must not grant officials unbridled 13 discretion to deny an applicant to speak. Id. at 225–26. Second, it must “place limits on the 14 time within which the decisionmaker must issue the license” Id. at 226. Finally, the 15 scheme must provide for expeditious judicial review. Freedman v. State of Maryland, 380
16 U.S. 51, 58–60 (1965).¹¹

17 The CUP regulation is codified in Article 15 of the City’s 1986 Ordinance. Section 18 1501 requires a CUP applicant to show, inter alia, that (a) “the proposed use . . . is 19 necessary or desirable to provide a service or facility which will contribute to the general 20 well being of the neighborhood or community”; and (b) “such use will not . . . be 21

22 ¹¹ As explained infra, the Court finds the CUP regulation to be an unconstitutional prior 23 restraint because it fails to constrain City officials’ discretion in granting or denying 24 applications. Accordingly, the Court need not reach the issue of whether the safeguard 25 requiring the City to “bear the burden of going to court to suppress the speech and [] bear 26 the burden of proof once in court” applies, which was the core contention between the 27 plurality opinions in FW/PBS, 493 U.S. at 228. Compare id. at 238–39 (Brennan, J., 28 concurring) (“I write separately [] because I believe that our decision two Terms ago in Riley v. National Federation of Blind of N.C., Inc., 487 U.S. 781 (1988), mandates application of all three of the procedural safeguards specified in Freedman v. Maryland, 380 U.S. 51 (1965), not just two of them”).

1 detrimental to the health, safety, peace or general welfare of persons residing or working 2 in the vicinity.” (Doc. No. 5-12 at 3.) Yvon levels his most vicious attack against these 3 particular subsections, arguing that consideration of these factors vests unbridled discretion 4 in City officials. (Doc. No. 3-1 at 9–12.) As support, Yvon points to opinions rendered by 5 other courts, including the Supreme Court, that have struck down as unconstitutional prior 6 restraints regulations containing language nearly identical to section 1500(b).¹² (Id. at 10– 7 11.) The City argues that the CUP regulation is not a prior restraint because City officials 8 exercise no discretion.^{13 14} (Doc. No. 5 at 23–25.)

11 ¹² Yvon also argues that the CUP regulation does not contain the requisite procedural 12 safeguards. (Doc. No. 3-1 at 12–13; Doc. No. 6 at 11.) Because the Court concludes that 13 section 1500 is an unconstitutional prior restraint for vesting unbridled discretion with City 14 officials, and because this conclusion is sufficient, on its own, to support granting Yvon’s 15 motion for preliminary injunction as to the CUP regulation, the Court need not reach 16 Yvon’s alternative argument. See City of Lakewood v. Plain Dealer Pub. Co., 486 U.S.
17 750, 771 (1988) (“Even if judicial review were relatively speedy, such review cannot 18 substitute for concrete standards to guide the decision-maker’s discretion.”). Cf. Burbridge 19 v. Sampson, 74 F. Supp. 2d 940, 953 (C.D. Cal. 1999) (“Because the Court concludes that 20 the Policy’s approval and denial process . . . fails to provide adequate procedural 21 safeguards, the Court need not reach Plaintiffs’ other arguments [including the argument 22 that the licensing scheme vests college officials with unbridled discretion] at this time.”).

23 ¹³ The City also contends that the Renton analysis applies to the CUP regulation because it 24 is a content-neutral time, place, and manner restriction. (Doc. No. 5 at 22–23.) However, 25 the Court need not undertake a Renton analysis with respect to the CUP regulation because 26 it fails at the basic hurdle of constituting an unconstitutional prior restraint, even if it is a 27 content-neutral time, place, and manner restriction. See Diamond v. City of Taft, 29 F.
28 Supp. 2d 633, 647 (E.D. Cal. 1998) (“The weight of authority suggests that an unconstitutional prior restraint cannot be upheld as a ‘content-neutral time, place and manner regulation.’”); see also FW/PBS, 493 U.S. at 223 (“Because we conclude that the city’s licensing scheme lacks adequate procedural safeguards we do not reach the issue decided by the Court of Appeals whether the ordinance is properly viewed as a content-neutral time, place, and manner restriction”).

¹⁴ The City also argues that the CUP regulation contains adequate time limits and means for expeditious judicial review. (Doc. No. 5 at 25–26.) As explained supra, the Court need not reach the issue of whether the CUP regulation fails to place specified brief time limits on when a decision must be rendered. See supra note 12. However, the Court notes, and

1 In Staub v. City of Baxley, the Supreme Court struck down a law that predicated a 2 CUP’s issuance on whether the mayor and city council determined the proposed use to 3 adversely affect the “general welfare” of the citizenry. 355 U.S. 318, 322 (1958). Similarly, 4 in Shuttlesworth, the relevant statute provided that the government official would refuse to 5 issue a CUP if the proposed use threatened “the public welfare, peace, safety, health, 6 decency, good order, morals or convenience” of the community. 394 U.S. at 149–51. The 7 Supreme Court found this ordinance vested “virtually unbridled and absolute power” in the 8 city commission and consequently held it unconstitutional. Id. at 150.

9 Like the ordinances at issue in Staub and Shuttlesworth, the CUP regulation here 10 vests City officials with unbridled discretion to grant or deny a CUP application based upon 11 the applicant’s ability to show, among other things, that the suggested use will not “be 12 detrimental to the health, safety, peace or general welfare of persons residing or working 13 in the vicinity.” (Doc. No. 5-12 at 3.) As the district court in Dease concluded, City 14 officials’ “ability to make decisions based on ambiguous criteria such as the ‘general 15 welfare’ of the community effectively gives [them] the power to make decisions on any 16 basis at all, including an impermissible basis, such as content-based regulation of speech.”
17 826 F. Supp. at 344. Because the CUP regulation does not, on its face or as defined by a 18 California state appellate court,¹⁵ provide “narrow, objective, and definite standards” to 19 guide City officials’ decisional process, the Court finds Yvon has carried his burden of 20 showing a likelihood of success on the issue of whether the CUP regulation infringes upon 21 applicants’ First Amendment rights. Shuttlesworth, 394 U.S. at 150–51 (“[I]n deciding 22 whether or not to withhold a permit, the members of the Commission were to be guided 23

25 the City itself concedes, there is no explicit time constraint included in the 1986 Ordinance.
26 (Doc. No. 5 at 25.)

27 ¹⁵ See In re Schwarzkopf, 626 F.3d 1032, 1038 (9th Cir. 2010) (“We ‘must follow the 28 decision of the intermediate appellate courts of the state unless there is convincing evidence that the highest court of the state would decide differently.’” (quoting Owen By & Through Owen v. United States, 713 F.2d 1461, 1464 (9th Cir. 1983))).

1 only by their own ideas of ‘public welfare, peace, safety, health, decency, good order, 2 morals or convenience.’ This ordinance as it was written, therefore, fell squarely within the 3 ambit of the many decisions of this Court over the last 30 years, holding that a law 4 subjecting the exercise of First Amendment freedoms to the prior restraint of a license, 5 without narrow, objective, and definite standards to guide the licensing authority, is 6 unconstitutional.”); 3570 E. Foothill Blvd., Inc., 912 F. Supp. at 1274–75 (finding it “clear 7 that the Pasadena [CUP] ordinances confer excessive substantive discretion on licensing 8 authorities,” thus permanently enjoining ordinance that permitted city officials to deny a 9 CUP “if the proposed use would be ‘detrimental to the public health, safety, or welfare of 10 persons residing or working adjacent to the neighborhood of such use, or injurious to 11 properties or improvements in the vicinity’”).¹⁶

13
14 ¹⁶ The City’s arguments to the contrary do not alter the Court’s conclusion. The City argues 15 that City officials exercise no discretion because all CUP applications “are subject to sound 16 land-use guidelines[, a]nd with respect to the nature of a tattoo parlor as a Regulated Use, 17 the additional Locational Requirements . . . that apply are non-discretionary and uniformly 18 applied unless the project applicant seeks a waiver of those standards.” (Doc. No. 5 at 24.) 19 Yet this contention does nothing to dispute that section 1500(b) requires consideration of 20 whether the proposed “use will . . . be detrimental to the health, safety, peace or general 21 welfare of persons residing or working in the vicinity,” (Doc. No. 5-12 at 3), language that 22 many other courts have struck down for vesting unbridled discretion in government 23 officials. See, e.g., Shuttlesworth, 394 U.S. at 150–51; 3570 E. Foothill Blvd., Inc., 912 F.
24 Supp. at 1274–75; Dease, 826 F. Supp. at 344.

25 The City’s argument that “City Staff recommends approval or denial of . . . [CUP] 26 applications to the City Council based upon objective criteria in the zoning ordinances” is 27 similarly unavailing. (Doc. No. 10 at 10.) For this proposition, the City relies on the 28 assertion of William Ramsey, the City’s lead planner managing the processing of Yvon’s pending applications, that he is “informed and believe[s] that the City Planner has interpreted the provisions of the [relevant] zoning ordinances . . . to mean that objective criteria or guidelines are to be used in processing applications involving regulated uses with First Amendment considerations.” (Doc. No. 10-1 ¶¶ 16, 19.) Yet, neither the City nor Ramsey provide any insight into what these objective criteria could be. See, e.g., City of Littleton, Colo. v. Z.J. Gifts D-4, L.L.C., 541 U.S. 774, 783 (2004) (noting the ordinance at issue contained “reasonably objective, nondiscretionary criteria” to guide the decisional process, including whether the applicant is underage; has had an adult business license

1 D. Severability

2 The City contends that even if the Court finds the CUP regulation to be 3 unconstitutional, the entire zoning ordinance scheme need not be enjoined because section 4 1501 is severable. (Doc. No. 10 at 10–11.) Yvon does not address this argument.

5 “The standard for determining the severability of an unconstitutional provision is 6 well established: Unless it is evident that the Legislature would not have enacted those 7 provisions which are within its power, independently of that which is not, the invalid part 8 may be dropped if what is left is fully operative as a law.” Alaska Airlines, Inc. v. Brock, 9 480 U.S. 678, 684 (1987) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). A 10 constitutionally flawed provision cannot be severed “if the balance of the legislation is 11 incapable of functioning independently.” Id.

12 Having reviewed the 1986 Ordinance, the Court agrees that the buffer zone and CUP 13 regulations are severable from the majority of what remains.¹⁷ As to the CUP regulation, 14 sections 1502 through 1506 both necessarily rely upon section 1501 and thus cannot be 15 severed from it. See Dease, 826 F. Supp. at 345 (“[T]he court has found that the conditions 16 for obtaining a CUP . . . are unconstitutional. Consequently, all other statutory references 17 to the CUP ordinance are effectively rendered moot.”). Accordingly, these sections are also 18 subject to preliminary injunction. As to the buffer zone regulation, the Court finds that the 19 entire Article 15.2 is subject to preliminary injunction because “it is evident that the 20 Legislature would not have enacted those provisions which are within its power,

21 _____
23 revoked or suspended within the past year; or has been convicted of certain crimes within 24 the past five years).

25 ¹⁷ The Court notes this result is consistent with the severance clause contained in the 1986 26 Ordinance, codified at section 1500.26 of Article 15.2, which provides that, “[i]f any 27 section, sentence, clause, or phrase of this ordinance is for any reason held to be 28 unconstitutional, such decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining sections, sentences, clauses, or phrases of this ordinance, or the ordinance as an entirety, it being the legislative intent that this ordinance shall stand [sic] notwithstanding the invalidity of such section, sentence, clause, or phrase.” (Doc. No. 5-13 at 5.)

1 independently of that which is not” Alaska Airlines, Inc., 480 U.S. at 684. Specifically, 2 it appears that the only reason to identify regulated uses in section 1500.21 and define them 3 in section 1500.22 is to subject those businesses to the buffer zone regulation contained in 4 section 1500.23. Accordingly, while Article 15.2 may be severed from the rest of the 1986 5 Ordinance, section 1500.23 cannot be severed from the remainder of Article 15.2.

6 In sum, should a preliminary injunction issue, sections 1501 through 1506, contained 7 in Article 15 of the 1986 Ordinance, as well as the entire Article 15.2 of the 1986 8 Ordinance, are subject to injunction. The remainder of the 1986 Ordinance is not.

9 II. Irreparable Harm

10 “[P]reliminary injunctive relief is available only if plaintiffs ‘demonstrate that 11 irreparable injury is likely in the absence of an injunction.’” Johnson v. Couturier, 572 F.3d 12 1067, 1081 (9th Cir. 2009) (quoting Winter, 555 U.S. at 22). If the harm to the plaintiff is 13 merely monetary, it “will not usually support injunctive relief.” Am. Trucking Ass’ns v.
14 City of Los Angeles, 559 F.3d 1046, 1057 (9th Cir. 2009).

15 As discussed above, the Court finds that Yvon has established a likelihood that he 16 will succeed on the merits of his case. That being so, Yvon’s First Amendment freedoms, 17 as well as any other member of the public who wishes to operate a regulated use in the 18 coastal zone of the City of Oceanside, “are in danger of impairment if a preliminary 19 injunction does not issue to enjoin” the City from applying the buffer zone and CUP 20 regulations. Baca v. Moreno Valley Unified Sch. Dist., 936 F. Supp. 719, 737 (C.D. Cal.
21 1996). “The loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, 22 unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.” Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976).
23 “[T]he duration of a trial is an ‘intolerably long’ period during which to permit the 24 continuing impairment of First Amendment rights.” Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm.
25 v. Reno, 70 F.3d 1045, 1058 (9th Cir. 1995) (citation omitted). Accordingly, the Court finds 26 that Yvon has established irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary injunctive relief.

27 III. Balance of Equities

28 The balance of equities inquiry requires the Court to “balance the competing claims

1 of injury and [to] consider the effect on each party of the granting or withholding of the 2 requested relief.” Amoco Prod. Co. v. Vill. of Gambell, Alaska, 480 U.S. 531, 542 (1987).
3 If a preliminary injunction does not issue, Yvon will be deprived of his First Amendment 4 rights until trial on the merits. In contrast, based upon the record before the Court, there is 5 no indication that the City has any legitimate compelling interest—let alone a fundamental 6 constitutional right like Yvon’s—that will be adversely affected if a preliminary injunction 7 does issue.¹⁸ As such, the Court finds that the balance of equities favors Yvon. See Baca, 8 936 F. Supp. at 737 (same).

9 IV. Public Interest

10 “In exercising their sound discretion, courts of equity should pay particular regard 11 for the public consequences in employing the extraordinary remedy of injunction.” 12 Weinberger v. Romero-Barcelo, 456 U.S. 305, 312 (1982). “The public interest analysis 13 for the issuance of a preliminary injunction requires [the Court] to consider whether there 14 exists some critical public interest that would be injured by the grant of preliminary relief.”
15 Alliance for the Wild Rockies, 632 F.3d at 1138 (quoting Cal. Pharmacists Ass’n v.
16 Maxwell-Jolly, 596 F.3d 1098, 1114–15 (9th Cir. 2010)). On one hand, the buffer zone and 17 CUP regulations affect not only Yvon’s fundamental First Amendment rights, but also 18 those of any member of the public who may wish to operate a regulated use in the coastal 19 zone of the City of Oceanside. On the other hand, there is documented opposition to Yvon’s 20 operation of a tattoo shop at his desired location by some residents, tenants, and business 21 owners proximately located to his chosen site. (Doc. No. 5-6 at 14.) Given that Yvon’s 22 fundamental constitutional rights hang in the balance, the Court finds this factor weighs 23 marginally in favor of the issuance of a preliminary injunction.

24
26 ¹⁸ The City argues this factor weighs in its favor because the Court must not only consider 27 the party’s interests in the litigation, but also that of the public. (Doc. No. 5 at 19–20.) 28 However, the balance of equities inquiry requires balancing the effect of granting or withholding an injunction on the parties. Furthermore, the public’s interest is a separate factor under the preliminary injunction test, so the Court will consider it separately.

1 CONCLUSION

2 In sum, Yvon has made a strong showing on three of the four preliminary injunction 3 factors. This strong showing “offset[s the] weaker showing” on the public interest factor.
4 Alliance for the Wild Rockies, 632 F.3d at 1131. The Court therefore GRANTS Yvon’s 5 motion for preliminary injunction, (Doc. No. 3), and ORDERS that the City be preliminary 6 enjoined from enforcing the buffer zone and CUP regulations, and the related sections, 7 contained in the 1986 Ordinance, specifically, sections 1501 through 1506 of Article 15 8 and the entire Article 15.2. However, the City has proffered evidence that it has recently 9 undertaken efforts to make the 1992 Ordinance applicable in the coastal zone. (Doc. No.
10 5-2 ¶ 5.) In light of this information, the Court STAYS implementation of the preliminary 11 injunction until October 14, 2016, to allow the City time to take appropriate action in light 12 of the Court’s ruling. The Court ORDERS the City to provide written notice to the Court 13 and Yvon of any official action it takes prior to the injunction’s implementation, at which 14 time pleadings and claims may be amended as necessary.

15
