

1 I. ANALYSIS

2 A properly pleaded complaint must provide a “short and plain statement of the claim 3 showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 4 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). While Rule 8 does not require detailed factual allegations, it demands 5 more than “labels and conclusions” or a “formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of 6 action.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quotation omitted). The complaint must set 7 forth coherently “who is being sued, for what relief, and on what theory, with enough detail to 8 guide discovery.” See McHenry v. Renne, 84 F.3d 1172, 1178 (9th Cir. 1996). “Factual
9 allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level.” Twombly, 550 10 U.S. at 555. To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must “contain sufficient factual matter 11 . . . to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quotation 12 omitted). Allegations of a pro se complainant “are held to less stringent standards than formal 13 pleadings drafted by lawyers.” Hughes v. Rowe, 449 U.S. 5, 9 (1980) (quotation omitted).
14 Although I “construe pleadings liberally in their favor, pro se litigants are bound by the rules of 15 procedure.” Ghazali v. Moran, 46 F.3d 52, 54 (9th Cir. 1995).

16 I apply a two-step approach when considering motions to dismiss. First, I must accept as 17 true all well-pleaded factual allegations and draw all reasonable inferences from the complaint in 18 the plaintiff’s favor. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678; Brown v. Elec. Arts, Inc., 724 F.3d 1235, 1247-48
19 (9th Cir. 2013) (quotations omitted). Legal conclusions, however, are not entitled to the same 20 assumption of truth even if cast in the form of factual allegations. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679; Brown, 21 724 F.3d at 1248 (quotation omitted). Mere recitals of the elements of a cause of action, 22 supported only by conclusory statements, do not suffice. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678.

1 Second, I must consider whether the well-pleaded factual allegations allege a plausible 2 claim for relief. Id. at 679. A claim is facially plausible when the complaint alleges facts that 3 allow the court to draw a reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the alleged 4 misconduct. Id. at 678. Where the complaint does not permit the court to infer more than the 5 mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has “alleged—but it has not shown—that the 6 pleader is entitled to relief.” Id. at 679 (quotation omitted). When the claims have not crossed 7 the line from conceivable to plausible, the complaint must be dismissed. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 8 570. “Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief will . . . be a context-9 specific task that requires the [district] court to draw on its judicial experience and common 10 sense.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679.

11 A motion for judgment on the pleadings is “functionally identical” to a motion to dismiss, 12 so “the same standard of review applicable to a Rule 12(b) motion applies to its Rule 12(c) 13 analog.” Dworkin v. Hustler Magazine Inc., 867 F.2d 1188, 1192 (9th Cir. 1989). Accordingly, I 14 follow the same process for both motions.

15 a. McNally’s Motion to Dismiss (ECF No. 6)

16 The Seeligs allege that McNally engaged in a civil conspiracy to obstruct their access to 17 a neighborhood pedestrian gate (claim 26) and that he subjected them to intentional infliction 18 emotional distress (IIED) (claim 30). McNally moves to dismiss both claims, arguing that I 19 lack subject matter jurisdiction, that supplemental jurisdiction should not apply, that the Seeligs 20 do not plausibly allege prima facie civil conspiracy or IIED claims, and that Mrs. Seelig is not 21 connected to any relevant facts such that she may state a claim.

22 ////

1 supplemental jurisdiction lies within my discretion. Satey v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 521 F.3d 2 1087, 1090 (9th Cir. 2008).

3 The Seeligs' Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and Fair Housing Act (FHA) claims 4 fall within my original, federal-question jurisdiction. Those claims arise in part from disputed 5 access to common elements located in the Old Vegas Manor and Estates subdivision, including 6 the pedestrian gate that the Seeligs allege McAnally conspired to obstruct. ECF No. 11 at 35-36, 7 39-40. The Seeligs further allege that this obstruction contributed to their emotional distress. Id.
8 McAnally's conduct underlies both the federal and state claims, so those claims share a common 9 nucleus of operative fact such that they comprise the same case or controversy. In other words, 10 one would ordinarily expect to resolve all claims arising from the same gate dispute in a single 11 judicial proceeding.

12 McAnally does not argue that the state law claims against him are novel or complex, that 13 they predominate over the federal claims pending against other defendants, or that exceptional 14 circumstances exist such that supplemental jurisdiction should be disfavored. Regardless, the 15 claims against him are sufficiently intertwined with the federal claims that the goals of economy, 16 convenience, and fairness favor exercising supplemental jurisdiction. I will exercise 17 supplemental jurisdiction over the Seeligs' claims against McAnally.

18 ii. Civil Conspiracy (Claim 26)

19 McAnally argues that the Seeligs fail to state a claim for civil conspiracy because they do 20 not allege an underlying tort. The Seeligs respond that the alleged conspiracy sought to engage 21 in unlawful conduct.

1 Under Nevada law, “civil conspiracy liability may attach where two or more persons 2 undertake some concerted action with the intent to commit an unlawful objective, not necessarily 3 a tort.” Cadle Co. v. Woods & Erickson, LLP, 345 P.3d 1049, 1052 (Nev. 2015).

4 At this stage, the Seeligs plausibly allege that McAnally and others coordinated to block 5 access to the pedestrian gate. ECF No. 11 at 36. That objective could be unlawful under the 6 ADA. It is immaterial at this stage that the Seeligs do not allege ADA violations against 7 McAnally, as the civil conspiracy cause of action does not require concurrent allegations that a 8 defendant in fact accomplished the unlawful objective. I therefore will not dismiss claim 26.

9 iii. IIED (Claim 30)

10 The Seeligs accuse McAnally of IIED based on his alleged participation in the 11 obstruction of the pedestrian gate, his reporting of “bogus” information about Mr. Seelig to a 12 veteran suicide hotline, his disparaging remarks about the couple to neighbors, his criticism of 13 their religion, and his filing of “numerous police reports making outrageous claims” concerning 14 them. ECF No. 11 at 39-40. McAnally argues that the Seeligs fail to state a claim for IIED
15 because (1) the alleged underlying conduct was not extreme and outrageous, (2) the Seeligs fail 16 to plead physical injury or illness, and (3) communications to the police and to the suicide 17 hotline are privileged.² The Seeligs respond that some of the underlying conduct was extreme 18 and outrageous, and they reassert the allegations in their complaint.

19 To state a plausible IIED claim under Nevada law, the Seeligs must allege “(1) extreme 20 and outrageous conduct with either the intention of, or reckless disregard for, causing emotional 21

22 ² I do not consider McAnally’s argument on qualified privilege. He contends that his statements 23 to the police and the suicide hotline are protected but relies on cases in which qualified privilege applied to defamation claims based on Hawaiian law. Without more, he provides an insufficient basis for dismissal given the different cause of action in a different jurisdiction.

1 distress; (2) severe or extreme emotional distress suffered by the plaintiff[s]; and (3) actual or 2 proximate causation.” Jordan v. State ex rel. Dep’t of Motor Vehicles and Pub. Safety, 110 P.3d
3 30, 52 (Nev. 2005) (en banc). I make the initial determination as to whether a reasonable jury 4 could find conduct to be extreme and outrageous. See Alam v. Reno Hilton Corp., 819 F. Supp.
5 905, 911 (D. Nev. 1993) (citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 cmts. h, j) (“[W]hether
6 defendants[’] conduct may reasonably be regarded as so extreme and outrageous as to permit 7 recovery are questions for the Court to answer.”). Extreme and outrageous conduct “is that 8 which is outside all possible bounds of decency and is regarded as utterly intolerable in a 9 civilized community.” Maduikie v. Agency Rent-A-Car, 953 P.2d 24, 26 (Nev. 1998) (internal 10 quotations and citation omitted). “Persons must necessarily be expected and required to be 11 hardened . . . to occasional acts that are definitely inconsiderate and unkind.” Id. (internal 12 quotations and citation omitted). IIED liability “does not extend to mere insults, indignities, 13 threats, annoyances, petty oppressions, or other trivialities.” Welder v. Univ. of S. Nev., 833 F.
14 Supp. 2d 1240, 1246 (D. Nev. 2011) (internal quotations and citation omitted).³

15 Furthermore, “in cases where emotional distress damages are not secondary to physical 16 injuries, but rather, precipitate physical symptoms, either a physical impact must have occurred 17 or, in the absence of a physical impact, proof of serious emotional distress causing physical 18

19 ³ Compare, e.g., Rivera v. Corr. Corp. of Am., 999 F.3d 647, 655 (9th Cir. 2021) (holding that a 20 reasonable jury could find that a prison’s detention of a man for 355 days without arraignment, 21 while ignoring his pleas for counsel or a court appearance, constituted extreme and outrageous 22 conduct for IIED purposes), with Garity v. APWU Nat’l Labor Org., 655 F. App’x 523, 525 (9th 23 Cir. 2016) (holding that a union’s conduct was not extreme and outrageous when it colluded to fire a plaintiff, arranged a six-day work week for the plaintiff, and where the union was otherwise “inconsiderate or unkind” to the plaintiff) and Wilson v. Otto, 297 F. App’x 681, 682-83 (9th Cir. 2008) (holding that ostracism, unfriendly treatment, and unwelcome physical consolation were collectively insufficient to establish extreme and outrageous conduct for IIED purposes).

1 injury or illness must be presented.” Barmettler v. Reno Air, Inc., 956 P.2d 1382, 1387 (Nev.
2 1998) (internal quotations omitted). The physical impact requirement may not be satisfied by 3 pleading “general physical or emotional discomfort.” Chowdhry v. NLVH, Inc., 851 P.2d 459, 4 483 (Nev. 1993); see also Kennedy v. Carriage Cemetery Servs., Inc., 727 F. Supp. 2d 925, 933 5 (D. Nev. 2010) (finding that insomnia, nightmares, general nervousness, and “a purely 6 emotionally upsetting situation” are insufficient to support an IIED claim under Nevada law, and 7 explaining that objectively verifiable evidence, like a need for “psychiatric assistance or 8 medication,” are necessary to meet the physical manifestation requirement).

9 Most of the Seeligs’ well-pleaded allegations do not constitute extreme and outrageous 10 conduct such that they present a plausible IIED claim. The disparaging, unkind, and criticizing 11 comments McAnally allegedly made are the sort the Seeligs should be hardened to endure.
12 Blocking a non-essential pedestrian gate is not outside all possible bounds of decency or utterly 13 intolerable in a civilized society. Similarly, the Seeligs do not sufficiently plead that McAnally’s 14 filing of police reports plausibly constituted extreme and outrageous behavior. See Halbert v.
15 City of Sherman, 33 F.3d 526, 529 (5th Cir. 1994) (applying Texas law and concluding that 16 submitting a false police report that a person was intoxicated or using drugs is not a sufficient 17 basis for IIED). Whether filing false police reports could rise to the level of extreme and 18 outrageous conduct is context dependent. The Seeligs offer no details about the nature or 19 circumstances of the alleged reports. Without more, I cannot conclude the Seeligs plausibly 20 allege the reports were extreme and outrageous.

21 However, the Seeligs plausibly allege that McAnally’s submission of “bogus” 22 information about Mr. Seelig to a veteran suicide hotline could qualify as extreme and 23 outrageous. See ECF No. 11 at 39. It is reasonable to infer from this allegation that McAnally

1 knew of Mr. Seelig's status as a veteran because of the hotline he allegedly called. The 2 implications of a false call to a veteran suicide hotline could be complex and severe, and it is 3 reasonable to infer that both Seeligs could be burdened by its consequences. Taking as true the 4 Seeligs' well-pleaded allegations that the information conveyed was in fact "bogus," the call 5 could plausibly have been extreme and outrageous.

6 But the Seeligs do not identify physical injury or illness sufficient to state a claim.
7 "[A]nxiety, oppression, worry, frustration, anguish, embarrassment, distress, sleeplessness, grief, 8 anger, nightmares, paranoia, social isolation, pain, suffering, public humiliation, distrust, 9 sadness, depression, fear of answering their door, and loss of enjoyment of life within the 10 community" are not actionable, physical impacts for purposes of IIED. ECF No. 11 at 40. The 11 Seeligs do not allege, for example, that they sought psychiatric help in response to McAnally's 12 alleged misconduct.

13 As a result, I dismiss claim 30. Amendment may not be futile, so the Seeligs may amend 14 their complaint to the extent that they can provide plausible factual allegations that McAnally 15 engaged in conduct that was both extreme and outrageous and resulted in physical impact. For 16 example, if the Seeligs still wish to re-allege IIED based on the police reports and feel that facts 17 exist to do so, they must plead the circumstances of the reports and their impact on the couple in 18 more detail. In other words, the Seeligs should explain why the reports were filed, what was 19 extreme or outrageous about filing those reports, and what, if anything, happened as a result.
20 They should further keep in mind that the conduct alleged must be outside all possible bounds of 21 decency. Petty neighborhood disputes will not suffice. Finally, even where extreme and 22 outrageous conduct might exist (for example, the alleged call to the suicide hotline), they must 23 properly plead physical impact.

1 iv. Mrs. Seelig

2 McAnally argues that Mrs. Seelig fails to state a claim for civil conspiracy and IIED 3 because she is not connected to any factual allegations in the action. The Seeligs respond that 4 they were collectively targeted and harmed by the alleged bad acts and that McAnally assaulted 5 Mrs. Seelig during a confrontation that occurred at the blocked pedestrian gate.

6 Mrs. Seelig plausibly alleges that the obstruction of the pedestrian gate constituted an 7 unlawful objective with respect to her, and not just with respect to her husband, based on ADA 8 associational discrimination. Under the ADA, it is unlawful to discriminate against someone 9 “because of the known disability of an individual with whom [that someone] is known to have a 10 relationship or association.” 42 U.S.C. § 12182(b)(1)(E). Courts have permitted associational 11 discrimination claims under circumstances conceptually similar to those here. See, e.g., Huynh v.
12 Bracamontes, No. 5:16-cv-01457-HRL, 2016 WL 3683048, at *3 (N.D. Cal. July 12, 2016) 13 (recognizing a right of action where a hair salon was accessible to a mother but inaccessible to 14 her disabled daughter, thereby barring the mother from getting her hair cut “while enjoying the 15 companionship of her daughter”); George v. AZ Eagle TT Corp., 961 F. Supp. 2d 971, 974-76 16 (D. Ariz. 2013) (recognizing a right of action where a shopping center was accessible to a father 17 but inaccessible to his disabled son, thereby deterring the father from enjoying the shopping 18 center). Here, Mrs. Seelig plausibly alleges that she may not access or enjoy certain common 19 elements in Mr. Seelig’s presence. She thus states a plausible claim for civil conspiracy at this 20 stage. Likewise, it is plausible at this stage that McAnally’s “bogus” call to the veteran suicide 21 hotline could amount to extreme and outrageous conduct with respect to Mrs. Seelig, though I 22 still dismiss that claim for failure to plead physical impact.

1 I do not consider any new factual allegations raised in the Seeligs' opposition brief. If 2 Mrs. Seelig wishes to raise new assault claims or use those allegations to expand on her IIED 3 claim, they must appear as well-pleaded allegations in an amended complaint.

4 b. Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (ECF Nos. 52, 55)⁴

5 The defendants' motions for judgment on the pleadings seek to dismiss: the Seeligs' 6 contract claims (12, 13, and 14) as to defendants Uribe, Gubler, and Fresinski; their ADA claims 7 (2, 5, 6, 8, and 22) as to all defendants named under those claims; four of their state statutory 8 claims (10, 15, 16, and 31) as to all defendants named under those claims; their IIED claims (27, 9 28, and 29) as to all defendants named under those claims; their respondeat superior and 10 negligent supervision claims (32, 33, and 34) as to the only defendant named under those claims; 11 and all remaining claims brought by Mrs. Seelig.

12 i. Contract claims as to Uribe, Gubler, and Fresinski (Claims 12, 13, 14)

13 The Seeligs allege in the complaint that Uribe, Gubler, Fresinski, Old Vegas Manor and 14 Estates (OVME), and OVRMA breached the OVME and OVRMA community covenants, 15 conditions, and restrictions (CC&Rs). They also allege breach of the implied covenant of good 16 faith and fair dealing against those same defendants except for OVRMA. Uribe, Gubler, and 17 Fresinski move to dismiss the claims as to them because the complaint alleges the Seeligs 18 entered into contracts with only the two associations, not with the individual defendants, so no 19 enforceable contracts exist between them and the Seeligs. The Seeligs respond that the CC&Rs 20 are enforceable between them. OVME and OVRMA do not move on these claims.

21 While the Seeligs name Uribe, Gubler, and Fresinski in the section headings of claims 12, 22 13, and 14, they do not adequately explain the capacities in which they sue them, the nature of

⁴ I address these motions together because they raise similar arguments.

1 the contracts between them, or the theories of breach applicable to them. The Seeligs do not 2 indicate in the complaint whether they sue Uribe, Gubler, and Fresinski in their individual 3 capacities or as agents of the associations. They likewise do not plead that the CC&Rs may be 4 enforced among community members. Instead, they plead only that “[p]laintiffs entered into a 5 valid contract with the OVME” and “[p]laintiffs entered into a valid contract with the 6 OVRLMA.” ECF No. 11 at 24-25. They likewise do not plead the ways in which Uribe, Gubler, 7 and Fresinski breached as individuals, assuming the CC&Rs are enforceable among individual 8 community members. As a result, the complaint does not provide adequate notice of the nature 9 of the Seeligs’ allegations against Uribe, Gubler, or Fresinski. I do not consider allegations 10 raised for the first time in the Seeligs’ opposition brief. I therefore dismiss claims 12, 13, and 14 11 as to Uribe, Gubler, and Fresinski.

12 Amendment may not be futile, so the Seeligs may amend their complaint to the extent 13 they can plausibly allege the capacities in which they sue these defendants, the existence of 14 enforceable contracts between them, and coherent theories and facts of breach. Should they 15 amend these claims, the Seeligs must remember to clearly distinguish between their allegations 16 against different defendants.

17 ii. Public accommodations (Claims 2,⁵ 5, 6, 8, 22)

18 The Seeligs allege violations of the ADA based on the defendants’ failure to provide 19 equal access to common elements located in their subdivision, which the Seeligs claim to be 20 public accommodations for ADA purposes. The defendants contend that the subdivision’s 21 common elements are reserved for the exclusive use of unit owners, so they do not constitute

22 _____
23 ⁵ The defendants treat this FHA claim as an ADA claim for purposes of their motion. I do not decide whether this claim is substantively an ADA claim because whether I construe it as such does not impact my decision not to dismiss.

1 public accommodations for ADA purposes. The Seeligs respond that association CC&Rs
2 provide for public use of streets, sidewalks, and a subdivision park, thereby facilitating an ADA 3 cause of action for discriminatory access.

4 The ADA provides that “[n]o individual shall be discriminated against on the basis of 5 disability in the full and equal enjoyment of . . . any place of public accommodation.” 42 U.S.C.
6 § 12182(a). “Public accommodation” under the statute includes parks, places of exercise or 7 recreation, and places of public gathering. 42 U.S.C. § 12181(7)(D), (I) & (L).

8 At this stage, the Seeligs plausibly allege that the common elements located within their 9 subdivision, which include parks and pedestrian pathways, could constitute public 10 accommodations for ADA purposes. ECF No. 11 at 5, 18, 20. In arguing that the common 11 elements are not public accommodations, the defendants rely on a portion of the CC&Rs that 12 speaks to common element ownership. Id. at 63. But other sections of the CC&Rs explicitly 13 reference public access. See ECF Nos. 11 at 111 (“Streets and sidewalks within the Properties 14 shall be or are dedicated as public”); 55-1 at 32 (“The Satellite Park shall be open to the 15 public, but shall be maintained and repaired as the expense of the . . . Association”). While 16 the defendants contend that there is a locking mechanism on at least one gate within the 17 subdivision, that alone is an insufficient basis to conclude there is no public access to common 18 elements. I therefore decline to dismiss claims 2, 5, 6, 8, and 22.

19 iii. Rights of action (Claims 10, 31, 15, 16)

20 The Seeligs allege the defendants breached their statutory duties to: (1) permit dwelling 21 modifications for reason of disability (claim 10); (2) refrain from prohibited community manager 22 conduct (claim 31); and (3) manage the associations in good faith and with due care (claims 15 23 and 16). The defendants argue that none of the three statutes on which the Seeligs base these

1 four claims provides a right of action relevant to the Seeligs' situation. The Seeligs respond by 2 conceding to dismissal of claim 10, re-asserting claim 31, and explaining the misconduct that 3 gives rise to claims 15 and 16, as well as the portions of the CC&Rs that they feel provide for 4 their right of action in those latter two claims.

5 1. Claim 10

6 The Seeligs concede claim 10 should be dismissed, so I dismiss it without leave to 7 amend.

8 2. Claim 31

9 The Seeligs claim the defendants engaged in prohibited community manager conduct 10 under Nevada Revised Statutes (NRS) § 116A.640. The defendants argue that enforcement of 11 that section is reserved to the Commission for Common-Interest Communities and 12 Condominium Hotels, with oversight from the Director of the Department of Business and 13 Industry. NRS § 116A.200. While parties are entitled to judicial review of Commission 14 decisions, the defendants contend the statute does not explicitly provide a direct, private right of 15 action in the courts. Id. § 116A.900(5). The Seeligs respond by restating their claim.

16 In the absence of an express private right of action, whether one may be implied is a 17 question of legislative intent. Baldonado v. Wynn Las Vegas, LLC, 194 P.3d 96, 100-01 (Nev.
18 2008) (en banc). Three factors guide analyzing legislative intent: “(1) whether the plaintiffs are 19 of the class for whose special benefit the statute was enacted; (2) whether the legislative history 20 indicates any intention to create or to deny a private remedy; and (3) whether implying such a 21 remedy is consistent with the underlying purposes of the legislative scheme.” Id. at 101 (internal 22 quotations and alterations omitted). However, “the absence of an express provision providing 23

1 for a private cause of action to enforce a statutory right strongly suggests that the [l]egislature did 2 not intend to create a privately enforceable judicial remedy.” Id.

3 The Seeligs are not members of the class for whose special benefit the statute was 4 enacted. The statute provides that community managers shall not “disclose confidential 5 information relating to a client.” NRS § 116A.640. “Client” here means “an association that has 6 entered into a management agreement with a community manager.” NRS § 116A.045.

7 Therefore, associations themselves are the class for whose special benefit the statute is intended, 8 to guard against improper disclosures of their business or financial affairs when dealing with the 9 management companies they retain.⁶ The legislative history provides no basis for a different 10 conclusion. See Assemb. B. 350 (Nev. 2009). While implying a homeowner cause of action may 11 not hinder the underlying purpose of the legislative scheme, it is no more protective of 12 association rights than the explicit terms of the statute, given the currently unimpeded ability of 13 associations to represent their own interests.

14 The Nevada legislature did not intend to create a homeowner right of action in NRS 15 § 116A.640, so I will not imply one. Amendment would be futile because no well-pleaded 16 factual allegations could support the Seeligs’ claim under the statute, so I dismiss claim 31 17 without leave to amend.

19 _____
20 ⁶ Based on this statutory construction, to permit the Seeligs’ claim 31 would require more than 21 implying a homeowner right of action. If I imply a right of action, the Seeligs could sue for 22 improper disclosures of confidential association business affair information. However, the 23 Seeligs seek to sue for disclosures of some unspecified confidential personal information. I have no reason to believe that the alleged disclosures of confidential personal information constitute disclosures of confidential association business affair information. So for the Seeligs to properly bring claim 31, I would need to imply not only a homeowner right of action, but also a broadened statutory purpose to protect personal homeowner privacy in addition to the current construction’s protection of association privacy. Such a statutory expansion must be left to the legislature.

1 for wrongdoing. See NRS §§ 78.138(7); 82.221(4). I have no reason to believe that Nevada 2 would treat nonprofit corporate officers differently than private corporate officers in the context
3 of individual liability. The two statutes also provide similar approaches to individual director 4 and officer liability. So I predict the state’s general treatment of the two statutes would be the 5 same.

6 In Nevada, “directors and officers owe the fiduciary duties of care and loyalty to the 7 corporation.” Chur v. Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct. ex rel. Cnty. of Clark, 458 P.3d 336, 340 (Nev. 2020)
8 (en banc) (citation omitted) (discussing application of NRS § 78.138). To show that directors or 9 officers breached these duties, Nevada shareholders must allege that, “in light of [§ 78.138],” the 10 defendants “faced a substantial risk of liability in [a] derivative action.” Id. at 341 (internal 11 quotations and citation omitted) (discussing the Tenth Circuit’s proper interpretation of NRS 12 § 78.138). Given that duties under Nevada’s private corporation statute are owed to the 13 corporation and that failure to abide by these duties is vindicated through derivative claims, it 14 reasonably follows that claims brought under § 82.221 must also proceed derivatively. I have no 15 reason to believe that Nevada would intend disparate treatment of officers and directors based on 16 whether they work for private or nonprofit corporations. I therefore conclude that the Seeligs fail 17 to plausibly allege a claim under NRS § 82.221 because they sue the defendants on their own 18 behalf and do not plausibly allege some duty owed specifically to them as opposed to the 19 association generally.

20 As a result, I dismiss claims 15 and 16. Amendment may not be futile, so the Seeligs 21 may amend their complaint to the extent they can plausibly allege derivative claims under NRS 22 § 82.221.

23 ////

1 iv. IIED (Claims 27, 28, 29)

2 Claims 27, 28, and 29 allege IIED against Gubler, Fresinski, and Uribe for: allowing dogs 3 to jump and bark at a party wall; mounting surveillance cameras on their homes with views of 4 the Seeligs' home; filing police reports against the Seeligs; refusing to sign a construction
5 permission form; preventing the Seeligs from accessing common elements; parking a motorhome 6 on the street; and parking a boat on the street. ECF No. 11 at 36-39. The defendants argue that 7 the Seeligs fail to state claims for IIED because none of the alleged conduct rises to the level of 8 extreme and outrageous. The Seeligs respond that the alleged conduct was extreme and 9 outrageous and they raise a host of new allegations.⁸

10 The Seeligs' allegations do not amount to extreme and outrageous conduct such that 11 claims 27, 28, and 29 are plausible. Parking vehicles on the street, installing security cameras on 12 one's own property, and inflicting other petty affronts are not acts that are outside all possible
13 bounds of decency such that they are utterly intolerable in a civilized society. And the Seeligs 14 again offer no details about the nature or circumstances of the alleged false police reports.
15 Without more, I cannot conclude that the reports were plausibly extreme and outrageous. As a 16 result, I dismiss the Seeligs' claims 27, 28, and 29.

17 Amendment may not be futile, so the Seeligs may amend their complaint to the extent 18 that they can provide plausible factual allegations that the dismissed conduct (or conduct 19 previously absent from the complaint) was extreme and outrageous. As above, if the Seeligs

21 _____
22 ⁸ These include allegations concerning the filing of restraining orders, a "be on the lookout" 23 order issued for Mr. Seelig, offensive social media posts, offensive comments made to public officials, and false accusations of dog poisoning, bomb threat responsibility, and "peeking in" neighbors' windows. As above, I do not consider new allegations that were not well-pleaded in the complaint. If the Seeligs feel these new allegations are actionable under the IIED standards provided, they must properly plead them in an amended complaint.

1 choose to amend, they should keep in mind that the conduct alleged must be outside all possible 2 bounds of decency. Petty neighborhood disputes will not suffice. Additionally, while the 3 relevant motion for judgment on the pleadings does not argue failure to state a claim because of 4 no physical impact, dismissal on that ground would have been proper. If the Seeligs choose to 5 amend these claims, they must apply the above guidance on IIED’s physical impact requirement.

6 v. Respondeat superior and negligent supervision (Claims 32, 33, 34)

7 The Seeligs allege that First Service Residential NV (FSR) is a principal management 8 company that oversees the conduct of its agents, the defendant associations. The Seeligs further 9 contend that FSR negligently supervised the defendant associations and is liable for their 10 treatment of the Seeligs via respondeat superior. The defendants argue that FSR is a 11 management company employed by the associations, and that, consequently, the Seeligs 12 mistakenly reverse the doctrines of negligent supervision and respondeat superior liability by 13 attempting to hold an agent (FSR) liable for acts of its principals (the associations). The Seeligs 14 respond that FSR failed to properly manage the associations, that FSR employees contributed to 15 FHA and other violations, and that “the defendants” failed to properly supervise employees.

16 Under Nevada law, respondeat superior liability attaches when “(1) the actor at issue was 17 an employee, and (2) the action complained of occurred within the scope of the actor’s 18 employment.” Rockwell v. Sun Harbor Budget Suites, 925 P.2d 1175, 1179 (Nev. 1996).

19 Negligent supervision requires “(1) defendant owed a duty of care to the plaintiff; (2) defendant 20 breached that duty by . . . supervising an employee even though defendant knew, or should have 21 known, of the employee’s [problematic] propensities; (3) the breach was the cause of plaintiff’s 22 injuries, and (4) damages.” Peterson v. Miranda, 991 F. Supp. 2d 1109, 1118 (D. Nev. 2014).

23 An “employer has a duty to use reasonable care in the training, supervision, and retention of his

1 or her employees to make sure that the employees are fit for their positions.” Hall v. SSF, Inc., 2 930 P.2d 94, 99 (Nev. 1996).

3 At this stage, I must take all well-pleaded allegations in the complaint as true. Iqbal, 556 4 U.S. at 678. The complaint describes FSR as “the Management Company for the OVME and 5 OVRLMA associations.” ECF No. 11 at 41. The Seeligs represent that this means FSR manages 6 OVME and OVRLMA as the associations’ principal, not that FSR is the agent management 7 company hired by the principals OVME and OVRLMA. Taking the Seeligs’ allegations in the 8 complaint as true, I decline to dismiss claims 32, 33, and 34. However, if the Seeligs’ framing of 9 the relationship between these parties is indeed flawed in the ways the defendants describe, these 10 claims may fail at summary judgment.

11 If the Seeligs choose to amend, they should revise the entire complaint (and these three 12 claims, in particular) to include specific party names in their allegations instead of exclusively 13 using the catch-all “defendants.” While the defendants did not raise this criticism in their 14 motions, as the complaint stands it is difficult to ascertain whether the Seeligs’ allege claims 32, 15 33, and 34 against FSR for the associations’ conduct or for conduct of individual FSR 16 employees. The burden to name parties with sufficient specificity such that claims may be 17 understood resides with the Seeligs. McHenry v. Renne, 84 F.3d 1172, 1179-80 (9th Cir. 1996).

18 vi. Mrs. Seelig

19 Mrs. Seelig asserts the same claims as her husband. The defendants argue that her claims 20 1-11, 15-26, and 31-34 should be dismissed because she is “not connected with the underlying 21 alleged disability and/or lack of access to the common elements” such that she may maintain 22 ADA, FHA, or related actions. ECF No. 52 at 13. The Seeligs respond that Mrs. Seelig may 23 maintain actions under the ADA and FHA for associational discrimination, and that she was

1 verbally accosted and physically assaulted by Uribe and McAnally, respectively, during an 2 attempt to access the disputed pedestrian gate.

3 As discussed, Mrs. Seelig plausibly alleges that she may maintain actions under the ADA 4 given her association with Mr. Seelig. 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(2)(C). The same is true under the 5 FHA. See 42 U.S.C. § 12182(b)(1)(E). I thus decline to dismiss her claims on the basis that she 6 has no ADA or FHA right of action. As above, I do not consider new allegations of verbal abuse 7 or assault that were not well pleaded in the Seeligs' complaint. These must appear in an 8 amended complaint if the Seeligs wish them to be considered.

9 c. Amendment

10 “[A] district court should grant leave to amend even if no request to amend the pleading 11 was made, unless it determines that the pleading could not possibly be cured by the allegation of 12 other facts.” Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122, 1130 (9th Cir. 2000) (quotation omitted). The 13 amended complaint must be a complete document in and of itself and will supersede the original 14 complaint in its entirety. Any allegations, parties, or requests for relief from prior papers that are 15 not carried forward in the amended complaint will no longer be before the court.

16 The Seeligs are advised to support each claim with factual allegations because the 17 complaint “must contain sufficient allegations of underlying facts to give fair notice and to 18 enable the opposing party to defend itself effectively.” Starr v. Baca, 652 F.3d 1202, 1216 (9th 19 Cir. 2011). When claims are alleged against multiple defendants, the complaint should clearly 20 indicate which claims apply to which defendant. Renne, 84 F.3d at 1179-80. The Seeligs should 21 identify each defendant and support each claim with factual allegations about each defendant’s 22 actions. Where multiple claims are alleged, the complaint should identify which factual 23 allegations give rise to each particular claim.
