6 Plaintiff,

Case No. 3:15-CV-0294-MMD (VPC)

ORDER

7 v.

8 METALAST INTERNATIONAL, INC., et al.,
9 Defendants.

11 AND RELATED CLAIMS.
12

13 Before the court is plaintiff's motion to compel (ECF Nos. 151, 152 & 153). Defendants
14 opposed (ECF Nos. 156, 157 & 158), and plaintiff replied (ECF Nos. 163 & 164). On August 15 11, 2016, the court heard oral arguments on the motion and other pending matters at the case
16 management conference (ECF No. 166). The court directed that to the extent defendants 17 asserted certain documents are protected by the attorney-client privilege, that defendants provide 18 a privilege log for plaintiff's review. Id. Counsel for the parties then met, and plaintiff 19 challenged thirty-four email communications as falling within the subject matter waiver of the 20 attorney-client privilege (ECF No. 175). Defendants submitted the thirty-four emails for the 21 court's in camera review (ECF No. 176).

22 I. Background and Procedural History

23 Metalast International, LLC (the "LLC") was formed in 1994. The LLC operating 24 agreement provides that Metalast International, Inc. (the "INC") was the manager of LLC and 25 had full authority to act on behalf of the LLC, which included running the LLC's daily 26 operations (ECF No. 152, Exhibit 2). Co-defendant, David Semas ("Mr. Semas"), was the 27 President and CEO of the INC, and in that capacity, was responsible for the overall supervision 28

1 of LLC's business. Id. Mr. Semas was also charged with effectuating the decisions of the 2 manager, INC, in connection with the management of the LLC. Id.

3 Ian Burns ("Mr. Burns") served as the intellectual property attorney for both the INC and 4 the LLC for approximately twenty years (ECF No. 152; see, e.g., Exs. 2, 3, 5, & 6). There is no
5 dispute that Mr. Burns provided legal advice to both the LLC and the INC on issues concerning 6 the development, acquisition, registration, ownership, protection, licensing, and assignment of 7 intellectual property rights, including trademarks. Mr. Burns was directly involved in the 8 registration of the METALAST marks, which are the subject of the current lawsuit. Id. Mr.
9 Burns applied for trademark registrations at the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office ("PTO") related 10 to the METALAST mark and other services related to trademarks assignments and licensing. Id.
11 The LLC paid all of Mr. Burns's attorney's fees. Id.

12 In April, 2013, a state court found the LLC insolvent and appointed a receiver to oversee 13 it (ECF No. 152, Ex. 13). In connection with the receivership, the state court issued a 14 preliminary injunction prohibiting the LLC and the INC from ". . . transferring, assigning, 15 selling, conveying . . . concealing, or in any manner whatsoever destroying or disposing of the 16 whole or any part of the assets of the receivership estate" and from "[d]oing any act which will,
17 or which will tend to, impair, defeat, divert, prevent or prejudice the preservation of the proceeds 18 of the receivership estate in whatever form the interest is held" Id.

19 Plaintiff alleges that on May 7, 2013, during the pendency of the receivership, Mr. Semas 20 caused the INC to assign all of its rights in the METALAST trademark to himself, as an 21 individual (ECF No. 152, Ex. 14.) Seven months later, on November 4, 2013, the state court
22 approved the sale of LLC's assets out of the receivership to plaintiff. See id. Ex. 12. Believing it
23 had acquired the rights to the METALAST mark, plaintiff changed its name to Metalast Surface 24 Technology. See ECF No. 108. It was not until March 21, 2014 – after the assets had been 25 transferred and the receivership terminated – that the assignments from the INC to Mr. Semas 26 were filed with the PTO and made public (ECF No. 152, Ex. 14).

27 Following these events, Mr. Semas and his wife filed for Chapter 11 protection, and 28 plaintiff filed a proof of claim in the amount of $4,028,232.57, including $471,582.08 that Mr.

1 Semas personally guaranteed (ECF No. 108). Plaintiff and the Semases thereafter entered into a 2 settlement agreement, but the parties dispute which trademark assets were awarded to plaintiff as 3 part of the receivership. Id. This lawsuit followed.

4 When plaintiff acquired the LLC's assets, it acquired all of the LLC and INC legal files, 5 which were intermingled and contained in the LLC's database (ECF No. 153). There were 6 voluminous legal files, including attorney correspondence, draft and final legal documents, and 7 there was no segregation of the documents on the basis of the LLC or the INC. Id. The 8 documents ranged from hard copy documents to electronic files, and the legal files in electronic 9 format were all stored in LLC's document database, which the LLC created, paid for and 10 maintained. Id. The legal files include numerous communications to and from Mr. Burns, and, 11 as a result, many communications to and from Mr. Burns were included in the legal documents 12 which are in plaintiff's possession. Id.

13 It is undisputed that at no time has INC, or any of its former or current principals, stated 14 that plaintiff should not be in possession of the legal documents that plaintiff obtained in 15 connection with LLC acquisition, nor has INC or its current or former principals requested that 16 any legal documents be returned. Id. During discovery, plaintiff produced responsive legal 17 documents in its possession, which included many attorney-client communications involving Mr.
18 Burns (ECF No. 152, Exs. 5, 6, 9, & 28). Neither INC nor its former or current principals 19 objected to this production, sought to claw back the materials on the basis of attorney-client
20 privilege or attorney work product, or made any other complaints about this production (ECF 21 No. 152).

22 In April 2016, plaintiff served a request for production of documents, and defendants
23 objected that the requested documents were subject to the attorney-client privilege. Id., Exs. 15 24 & 16. After a hearing on the motion to compel, two case management conferences, and several 25 meet-and-confers between counsel, plaintiff challenged the thirty-four emails as falling within 26 the subject matter waiver of the attorney-client privilege. These emails were submitted for in 27 camera review, and this order follows.

1 II. Discussion

2 The question in what remains of this dispute is whether defendants waived the attorney-3 client privilege as to the remaining email communications submitted for the court's in camera 4 review. The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between a client and 5 his or her attorney for the purpose of obtaining or dispensing legal advice. United States v.
6 Chen, 99 F.3d 1495, 1501 (8th Cir. 1996). "Its purpose is to encourage full and frank 7 communication between attorneys and their clients and thereby promote broader public interests 8 in the observance of law and administration of justice." Upjohn v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 9 389 (1981). Federal privilege law applies where the court's jurisdiction is based in part on 10 federal question claims with pendent state law claims. See Agster v. Maricopa Cty., 422 F.3d 11 836, 839 (9th Cir. 2005).

12 The burden of establishing the attorney-client relationship and the privileged nature of 13 each communication lies with the party claiming the privilege. United States v. Bauer, 132 F.3d 14 504, 507 (9th Cir. 1997). "One of the elements that the asserting party must prove is that it has 15 not waived the privilege." Weil v. Inv./Indicators, Research & Mgmt., Inc., 647 F.2d 18, 25 (9th
16 Cir. 1981). Waiver may be express or implied. Bittaker v. Woodford, 331 F.2d 715, 719 (9th Cir.
17 2003). The voluntary disclosure of privileged or work product information to third parties 18 constitutes a waiver and destroys any privilege claims. See Weil, 647 F.2d at 24. The scope of 19 the waiver is broader than the communications themselves, and "it has been widely held that 20 voluntary disclosure of the content of a privileged attorney communications constitutes waiver of 21 the privilege as to all other such communications on the same subject." Id.

22 In re In-Store Advertising Sec. Litig., 163 F.R.D. 452 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) is instructive on 23 this issue. The court considered the effect of a transfer of assets from In-Store, which 24 reorganized in bankruptcy as Emarc. Emarc then transferred certain assets to Valassis, including 25 250 documents. Id. at 455-56. In subsequent securities litigation related to In-Store, Valassis 26 produced the documents in response a third-party subpoena. This drew objections from certain 27 defendants and a law firm who contended that at least some of the documents were protected by 28 the attorney-client privilege. The court rejected the claims of privilege and stated, "'When those

1 communications were transferred to Valassis in connection with the sale of assets by Emarc to 2 Valassis, Emarc thereby waived any privilege still in effect as to those communications. . . . The 3 former attorney of In-Store. . . cannot claim the privilege that has been waived by the successor
4 to its former client.” Id. at 458.

5 The analysis in In-Store is persuasive in this case. Here, when plaintiff purchased the 6 Metalast assets out of receivership, the co-mingled legal files of the LLC and the INC were 7 included. Plaintiff admits that it has many LLC and INC legal documents in its possession, yet 8 defendants never sought return of the documents, nor did they attempt to claw back materials 9 based on attorney-client privilege.

10 It is the burden of party asserting the privilege to establish all of the elements of the 11 privilege. United States v. Marton, 278 F.3d 988, 999-1000 (9th Cir. 2002). One of the elements
12 the party claiming the privilege must prove is that it has not waived the privilege. Weil, 647 F.2d 13 at 24. Since the basis for the attorney-client privilege is to protect confidential communications, 14 that purpose ends when confidential communications are voluntarily disclosed to a third party.
15 Defendants asserted the attorney-client privilege in refusing to produce the documents at issue, 16 yet their opposition contains no discussion whatsoever concerning the pivotal issue of whether 17 there was a waiver as to attorney-client communications involving legal services associated with 18 the LLC or INC’s development, acquisition, registration, ownership, protection, licensing, and 19 assignment of intellectual property rights. See generally ECF No. 156. By failing to oppose 20 plaintiff’s claim of waiver of the privilege, defendants concede the point. LR 7-2(d).

21 The court finds that defendants’ voluntary disclosure of the attorney-client 22 communications constitutes a waiver of the privilege “as to all other such communications on the 23 same subject.” Weil, 647 F.2d at 24. By “the same subject,” the court finds this includes the 24 provision of legal services related to the development, acquisition, registration, ownership, 25 protection, licensing, and assignment of intellectual property rights for the LLC and the INC.

26 As to the thirty-four documents submitted to the court in camera, the court finds that 27 these documents relate to the universe of documents included in the subject matter waiver; 28 therefore, they are not entitled to any privilege protections.
