MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Before the court are the defendant Reliant Rehabilitation Hospital North Texas (“Reliant”), LP’s motion to dismiss and brief in support, filed March 3, 2014 (docket entry 23), the defendant Alladin Mollabashy (“Mollabashy”), M.D.’s motion to dismiss and brief in support, filed March 4, 2014 (docket entry 26), and the defendant Dana Bond (“Bond”), R.N.’s motion to dismiss and brief in support, filed March 4, 2014 (docket entry 27). Based on the relevant filings and applicable law, Mollabashy’s and Bond’s motions to dismiss are granted in part, and denied in part. Reliant’s motion to dismiss is granted.

I. BACKGROUND¹

In October 2010, the plaintiff Gloria Bunch (“Bunch”) underwent knee surgery in Arkansas. Answers to Magistrate Judge Questionnaire (“Questionnaire”) (docket entry 10) at 1.² After the surgery, she was in severe pain and was unable to walk. Id. Bunch saw Mollabashy in Dallas, Texas, for a second opinion. Id. On May 5, 2011, Mollabashy, assisted by Bond, performed “revision” surgery on Bunch’s knee at Baylor Hospital (“Baylor”). Id. at 1-2. Bunch claims they cut out her muscle, caused nerve damage in her knee, and failed to inform her. Id. at 3. Mollabashy told her family that he had to place a rod in her leg for additional support. Id. at 2, 10. After the surgery, Bunch was discharged to Reliant, but she had to be re-hospitalized at Baylor due to hemorrhaging around the site of the surgery. Id. at 2. Bunch attempted to return to Reliant after discharge, but Reliant declined to admit her due to its lack of space. Id. Mollabashy and Bond saw her on an out-patient basis after the surgery. Id. Bunch’s pain worsened, and she could not lift or extend her leg. Id. at 2. She contends that is unable to walk without a walker. Id. at 2-3.

On March 13, 2013, Bunch sued Mollabashy, Bond, Baylor, and Reliant (collectively, “the defendants”), alleging that they provided negligent medical care, committed fraud, committed criminal acts, and violated her civil rights. See Complaint (docket entry 3); Questionnaire (docket entry 10) at 3-4, 9-11. She sought monetary damages, revocation of Mollabashy’s and Bond’s state medical licenses, and criminal prosecution of Mollabashy and Bond. Questionnaire (docket entry 10) at 3-4, 10-11. On January 16, 2014, the magistrate judge recommended that Bunch’s claims for violation of her civil rights, revocation of Mollabashy’s and Bond’s medical licenses, and criminal prosecution were dismissed at the preliminary screening stage under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2) for failure to state a claim. Findings, Conclusions and Recommendation (docket entry 14). The undersigned district judge accepted the recommendation on February 12, 2014 (docket entry 20). Her medical negligence and fraud claims were permitted to proceed. Id.

Reliant, Mollabashy, and Bond have all moved to dismiss this action (docket entries 23, 26, 27).³ Bunch has filed her response, and Mollabashy and Bond have filed a reply (docket entries 33, 35). The motions are ripe for determination.

II. RULE 12(b)(1) MOTION TO DISMISS

Mollabashy and Bond move to dismiss in part on the ground that Bunch has not stated a plausible claim for relief because the damages she seeks “are not supported by law or facts and as such the $75,000 jurisdictional requirement for diversity of citizenship fails.” (docket entries 26 at 3; 27 at 3).

A. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Although the defendants expressly invoke Rule 12(b)(6) in support of their motion to dismiss for failure to state a plausible claim, their argument concerning the amount in controversy implicates the existence of subject matter jurisdiction over this case. Federal courts have matter jurisdiction over civil cases “arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States” (federal question jurisdiction), or over civil cases in which the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and there is diversity of citizenship between the parties (diversity jurisdiction). 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1332. They “must presume that a suit lies outside this limited jurisdiction, and the burden of establishing federal jurisdiction rests on the party seeking the federal forum.” Howery v. Allstate Insurance Co., 243 F.3d 912, 916 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 993 (2001). Courts have “a continuing obligation to examine the basis for their jurisdiction.” See MCG, Inc. v. Great Western Energy Corp., 896 F.2d 170, 173 (5th Cir. 1990). They may sua sponte raise the jurisdictional issue at any time. Id.; Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. Agro Distribution, LLC, 555 F.3d 462, 467 (5th Cir. 2009) (even without an objection to subject matter jurisdiction, a court must consider sua sponte whether jurisdiction is proper).

A motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction arises under Rule 12(b)(1). FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(1); Home Builders Association of Mississippi, Inc. v. City of Madison, Miss., 143 F.3d 1006, 1010 (5th Cir. 1998). “When a Rule 12(b)(1) motion is filed in conjunction with other Rule 12 motions, the court should consider the Rule 12(b)(1) jurisdictional attack before addressing any attack on the merits.” Ramming v. United States, 281 F.3d 158, 161 (5th Cir. 2001) (citing Hitt v. City of Pasadena, 561 F.2d 606, 608 (5th Cir. 1977) (per curiam)), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 960 (2002). Considering Rule 12(b)(1) motions first “prevents a court without jurisdiction from prematurely dismissing a case with prejudice.” Id. When the court dismisses for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, that dismissal “is not a determination of the merits and does not prevent the plaintiff from pursuing a claim in a court that does have proper jurisdiction.” Id.

The district court may dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction based on (1) the complaint alone; (2) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts in the record; or (3) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts plus the court’s resolution of disputed facts. Williamson v. Tucker, 645 F.2d 404, 413 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 897 (1981). A motion to dismiss based on the complaint alone presents a “facial attack” that requires the court to merely decide whether the allegations in the complaint, which are presumed to be true, sufficiently state a basis for subject matter jurisdiction. See Paterson v. Weinberger, 644 F.2d 521, 523 (5th Cir. 1998). “If those allegations are sufficient, the complaint stands.” Id. Facial attacks are usually made early in the proceedings. Id. When evidence is presented with the motion to dismiss, the attack is “factual.” Williamson, 645 F.2d at 413. In that case, “no presumptive truthfulness attaches to [the] plaintiff’s allegations, and the existence of disputed material facts will not preclude the trial court from evaluating for itself the merits of jurisdictional claims.” Id. A factual attack may occur at any stage of the proceedings. Menchaca v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 613 F.2d 507, 511 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 953 (1980). Regardless of the nature of attack, the party asserting federal jurisdiction continually carries the burden of proof to show it exists. Ramming, 281 F.3d at 161.

Here, the defendants rely solely on Bunch’s complaint to support their motions to dismiss. The motions therefore present a facial attack that does not require the resolution of factual matters outside the pleadings. See Williamson, 645 F.2d at 412-13.

B. Amount in Controversy

Mollabashy and Bond contend that Bunch has not adequately plead sufficient damages to meet the threshold amount for diversity jurisdiction.

Bunch seeks $37,100,000 from each of the individual defendants and $77,100,000 from each hospital for the permanent damage she suffered to her knee, and for pain, suffering, and mental anguish (docket entry 10 at 11). She claims that she derived these figures from prayer. Id.

Courts may look beyond a plaintiff's allegations when "it appears or is in some way shown that the amount stated in the complaint is not claimed in 'good faith.'" Horton v. Liberty Mutual Insurance Co., 367 U.S. 348, 353 (1961) (quoting St. Paul Mercury Indemnity Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 288 (1938)). "While a federal court must of course give due credit to the good faith claims of the Bunch, a court would be remiss in its obligations if it accepted every claim of damages at face value, no matter how trivial the underlying injury." Diefenthal v. Civil Aeronautics Board, 681 F.2d 1039, 1052 (5th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1107 (1983). Once a plaintiff is put on notice that a concern exists as to the amount of damages claimed, he or she is obligated to show a good faith basis for the amount of damages claimed. See id. at 1053.

Dismissal of an alleged diversity action for lack of jurisdiction is proper when it "appear[s] to a legal certainty that the claim is really for less than the jurisdictional amount." Horton, 367 U.S. at 353 (quoting St. Paul Mercury Indemnity Co., 303 U.S. at 289). When determining the amount in controversy, the courts may apply common sense to the allegations. Allen v. R & H Oil & Gas Co., 63 F.3d 1326, 1336 (5th Cir. 1995). Courts may also refer to the types of claims alleged by the plaintiff and the nature of the damages sought. See id. As the party seeking to invoke federal jurisdiction, Bunch bears the burden of establishing the amount in controversy by a preponderance of the evidence. Hartford Insurance Group v. Lou-Con, Inc., 293 F.3d 908, 910 (5th Cir. 2002).

Here, Bunch asserts claims for medical negligence that allegedly resulted in permanent physical injury. Questionnaire at 2-4. She has alleged sufficient facts to support a finding that her claim is for more than the jurisdictional amount of $75,000. See Carleton v. CRC Industries, Inc., 49 F. Supp.2d 961, 962 (S.D. Tex. 1999) (applying the “common knowledge” that cases involving severe and permanent injuries will meet the threshold amount for federal jurisdiction); see also Henson ex rel. Henson v. Power, Rogers & Smith P.C., No. 3:06-CV-0566-L, 2007 WL 313313, at *5 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 31, 2007) (applying Carleton in a suit involving wrongful death); Cross v. Bell Helmets, USA, 927 F.Supp. 209, 214 (E.D. Tex. 1996) (stating that “compensatory damages alone in a case involving severe and permanent head injuries often will subject a tortfeasor to possible exposure well beyond the jurisdictional minimum of this court”). It does not appear to a legal certainty that Bunch’s claims are actually for less than $75,000. See Ginter ex rel. Ballard v. Belcher, Prendergast & Laporte, 536 F.3d 439, 455 n.6 (5th Cir. 2008) (Dennis, Cir. J.) (dissenting) (dismissal is justified only when it appears “to a legal certainty that the claim is really for less than the jurisdictional amount.” (quoting St. Paul Mercury Indemnity Co., 303 U.S. at 289)).

Mollabashy and Bond's motions to dismiss on grounds that Bunch has not sufficiently alleged damages in excess of the threshold jurisdictional amount are denied.

III. RULE 12(b)(5) MOTION TO DISMISS

Bond moves to dismiss this action against her under Rule 12(b)(5) based on defective service of process (docket entry 27 at 4). She was served at Mollabashy's clinic, where she had not worked "for quite some time[.]" Id. at 3-4.

Rule 12(b)(5) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure "permits a challenge to the method of service attempted by the plaintiff," or the lack of delivery of the summons and complaint. See FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(5); Tinsley v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service, No. 3:96-CV-1769-P, 1998 WL 59481, at *3 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 9, 1998). A federal court is without personal jurisdiction over a defendant unless the defendant has been served with process in accordance with Rule 4 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See Pavlov v. Parsons, 574 F.Supp. 393, 399 (S.D. Tex. 1983) (holding the court had personal jurisdiction over the defendants because the plaintiff properly served them in compliance with Rule 4).

FED. R. CIV. P. 4(e) governs service on individuals. It provides in relevant part:

[A]n individual . . . may be served in a judicial district of the United States by:

- (1) following state law for serving a summons in an action brought in courts of general jurisdiction in the state where the district court is located or where service is made; or

(2) doing any of the following:

(A) delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the individual personally;

(B) leaving a copy of each at the individual's dwelling or usual place of abode with someone of suitable age and discretion who resides there; or

(C) delivering a copy of each to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process.

FED. R. CIV. P. 4(e)(1)-(2). A plaintiff has the burden to ensure that the defendants are properly served with a summons and a copy of the complaint. FED. R. CIV. P. 4(c)(1). A return of service is prima facie evidence of the manner of service. Nabulsi v. Nahyan, No. H-06-2683, 2009 WL 1658017, at *4 (S.D. Tex. June 12, 2009), aff'd, 383 F. App'x 380 (5th Cir. 2010). Unless some defect in service is shown on the face of the return, a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(5) requires the defendant to produce admissible evidence establishing the lack of proper service. Nabulsi, 2009 WL 1658017, at *4 (citing O'Brien v. R.J. O'Brien & Associates, Inc., 998 F.2d 1394, 1398 (7th Cir. 1993)).

Because Bunch was proceeding in forma pauperis, the U.S. Marshal's Service was ordered to serve copies of the summons and complaint on all four defendants (docket entry 15). The proof of service shows that Bond was not personally served with a copy of the summons and complaint; a Deputy U.S. Marshal left it with the office manager of Mollabashy's clinic (docket entry 22 at 1). The complaint includes no allegation that the office manager was Bond's authorized agent for service of process.

“[A] plaintiff proceeding in forma pauperis is entitled to rely upon service by the U.S. Marshals and should not be penalized for failure of the Marshal's Service to properly effect service of process, where such failure is through no fault of the litigant.” Rochon v. Dawson, 828 F.2d 1107, 1110 (5th Cir. 1987). In Sanchez v. Perez, No. 96-40049, 1996 WL 512289 (5th Cir. Aug. 30, 1996) (unpublished), the Fifth Circuit found that dismissal was improper when a plaintiff proceeding in forma pauperis provided the last known work address of the defendants, and the U.S. Marshal's Service never informed the plaintiff it had a problem serving those defendants who no longer worked there. Id. at *2; see also Pickens v. Powell, 188 F. App'x 258, 259 (5th Cir. 2006) (ruling that the U.S. Marshal's Service improperly performed its duty when it attempted to serve only by certified mail and not personally, and dismissal was improper).

Here, the U.S. Marshal's Service never informed Bunch of any problems serving Bond, and she should not be penalized for the failure. See Sanchez, 96 F.3d at *2. “As an alternative to dismissal, a district court has discretion to quash service and give the plaintiff an additional opportunity to properly effect service.” Neely v.

Khurana, No. 3:07-CV-1344-D, 2008 WL 938904 at *2 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 7, 2008).

Dismissal is therefore unwarranted, and the appropriate remedy is to provide Bunch an opportunity to properly effect service. Bond's motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(5) is denied.

IV. RULE 12(b)(6) MOTIONS TO DISMISS

Mollabashy, Bond, and Reliant move under Rule 12(b)(6) to dismiss this action for failure to state a claim (docket entries 23, 26, 27).

Rule 12(b)(6) allows motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6). Motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) are disfavored and rarely granted. Sosa v. Coleman, 646 F.2d 991, 993 (5th Cir. 1981). Under the 12(b)(6) standard, a court cannot look beyond the face of the pleadings. Spivey v. Robertson, 197 F.3d 772, 774 (5th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1229 (2000); Baker v. Putnal, 75 F.3d 190, 196 (5th Cir. 1996). It is well-established that “pro se complaints are held to less stringent standards than formal pleadings drafted by lawyers.” Miller v. Stanmore, 636 F.2d 986, 988 (5th Cir. 1981). However, regardless of whether the Bunch is proceeding pro se or is represented by counsel, pleadings must show specific, well-pleaded facts, not mere conclusory allegations to avoid dismissal. Guidry v. Bank of LaPlace, 954 F.2d 278, 281 (5th Cir. 1992). The court must accept those well-pleaded facts as true and view them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Baker, 75 F.3d at 196. “[A] well-pleaded complaint may proceed even if it strikes a savvy judge that actual proof of [the alleged] facts is improbable, and ‘that a recovery is very remote and unlikely.’” Bell Atlantic Corporation v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556 (2007) (citation omitted). Although “detailed factual allegations” are not necessary, a plaintiff must provide “more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Id. at 555; accord Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (emphasizing that “the tenet that a court must accept as true all of the allegations contained in a complaint is inapplicable to legal conclusions”). The alleged facts must “raise a right to relief above the speculative level.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555. In short, a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted when it fails to plead “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Id. at 570.

A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. The plausibility standard is not akin to a “probability requirement,” but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Where a complaint pleads facts that are “merely consistent with” a defendant’s liability, it “stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of ‘entitlement to relief.’” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citations omitted). When plaintiffs “have not nudged their claims across the line from conceivable to plausible, their complaint must be dismissed.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570; accord Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 680.

A. Mollabashy and Bond

Mollabashy and Bond assert that dismissal is proper based on Bunch’s (1) failure to send them pre-suit notice; (2) failure to file an expert report; (3) failure to state a medical negligence claim; and (4) failure to state a fraud claim (docket entries 26, 27).

1. Pre-suit Notice

Mollabashy and Bond contend that Bunch’s claims against them should be dismissed because she failed to provide the pre-suit notice required by Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code §§ 74.051 and 74.052 (docket entries 26 at 4; 27 at 4).

Section 74.051(a) states:

Any person or his authorized agent asserting a health care liability claim shall give written notice of such claim by certified mail, return receipt requested, to each physician or health care provider against whom such claim is being made at least 60 days before the filing of a suit in any court of this state based upon a health care liability claim. The notice must be accompanied by the authorization form for release of protected health information as required under Section 74.052.

Id. Section 74.052(a) states:

Notice of a health care claim under Section 74.051 must be accompanied by a medical authorization in the form specified by this section. Failure to provide this authorization along with the notice of health care claim shall abate all further proceedings against the physician or health care provider receiving the notice until 60 days following receipt by the physician or health care provider of the required authorization.

Id. “The Legislature’s purpose in requiring notice in a medical liability suit is to encourage pre-suit negotiations, settlement, and reduce litigation costs.” Rabatin v. Vazquez, 281 S.W.3d 563, 566 (Tex. App.--El Paso 2008, no pet.).

In Schepps v. Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas, 652 S.W.2d 934, 938 (Tex. 1983), the Texas Supreme Court ruled that dismissal is not a proper remedy for a failure to provide the 60-day notice letter.⁴ It “conclude[d] that to bar prosecution for failure to give notice would constitute . . . an undue restriction of claimant’s right[]” and held that the notice provision was “mandatory, yet only subjecting the cause to abatement.” Id. The plain language of § 74.052 also states that a failure to provide a medical authorization abates “all further proceedings against the physician or health care provider receiving the notice until 60 days following receipt . . . of the required authorization.” TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 74.052(a).

Mollabashy and Bond argue that because the Texas Medical Liability Act adopted a strict two-year statute of limitations, the pre-suit notice requirement cannot be abated (docket entries 26 at 4; 27 at 4). They cite no authority to support this argument. “It is well-settled . . . that a plaintiff’s failure to comply with § 74.051 does not bar recovery against the defendant.” Everett v. Merck & Co., Inc., No. C-06-480, 2006 WL 3302527, at *2 n.2 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 13, 2006); see also Rice v. Pfizer, Inc., No. 3:06-CV-0757-M, 2006 WL 1932565, at *3 (N.D. Tex. July 7, 2006) (“Compliance with [§ 74.051] is mandatory; however, failure to comply will not result in dismissal of the claim.”). Mollabashy’s and Bond’s motions to dismiss for Bunch’s failure to send the pre-suit notice are therefore denied. See Rice, 2006 WL 1932565, at *3.

2. Expert Report

Mollabashy and Bond next contend that the claims against them should be dismissed because Bunch failed to file an expert report as required by Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code § 74.351 (docket entries 26 at 4-6; 27 at 4-6).⁵

Section 74.351(a) delineates the requirements for the expert report filings in medical malpractice actions in Texas. It states:

In a health care liability claim, a claimant shall, not later than the 120th day after the date each defendant’s original answer is filed, serve on that party or the party’s attorney one or more expert reports, with a curriculum vitae of each expert listed in the report for each physician or health care provider against whom a liability claim is asserted. The date for serving the report may be extended by written agreement of the affected parties. Each defendant physician or health care provider whose conduct is implicated in a report must file and serve any objection to the sufficiency of the report not later than the later of the 21st day after the date the report is served or the 21st day after the date the defendant's answer is filed, failing which all objections are waived.

Id. If the required expert report is not filed within 120 days of the filing of the original petition, courts are required to dismiss the suit related to the physician or health care provider who moves to dismiss under § 74.351(b).⁶

“It is a long-recognized principle that federal courts sitting in diversity cases [such as this one], ‘apply state substantive law and federal procedural law.’” Shady Grove Orthopedic Associates, P.A. v. Allstate Insurance Co., 559 U.S. 393, 417 (2010) (Stevens, J., concurring) (quoting Hanna v. Plumer, 380 U.S. 460, 465 (1965)); see

⁶ Section 74.351(b) states:

If, as to a defendant physician or health care provider, an expert report has not been served within the period specified by Subsection (a), the court, on the motion of the affected physician or health care provider, shall, subject to Subsection (c), enter an order that:

(1) awards to the affected physician or health care provider reasonable attorney's fees and costs of court incurred by the physician or health care provider; and also Guzman v. Memorial Hermann Hospital System, No. H-07-3973, 2008 WL 5273713, at *14 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 17, 2008) (“As a general rule, under the Erie doctrine, when a plaintiff asserts a state-law claim in federal court, the federal court applies state substantive law to adjudicate the claims but applies federal procedural law.”) (citing Hall v. GE Plastic Pacific PTE Ltd., 327 F.3d 391, 394 (5th Cir. 2003)). “Federal courts are not bound, however, to follow a state law that merely is in some sense substantive, if it is in conflict with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.” Nelson v. Myrick, No. 3:04-CV-0828-G, 2005 WL 723459, at *2 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 29, 2005) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). If the federal rule in question is “sufficiently broad to cause a direct collision with the state law, or implicitly, to control the issue before the court,” there is “no room for the operation of [the state] law.” Burlington Northern Railroad Co. v. Woods, 480 U.S. 1, 4-5 (1987) (internal quotation marks omitted).

(2) dismisses the claim with respect to the physician or health care provider, with prejudice to the refileing of the claim.

Here, the “[e]xpert disclosure rules and sanctions for failure to comply with those rules are governed in federal courts” by Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 26(a)(2) and 37(c)(1). See Poindexter v. Bonsukan, 145 F.Supp.2d 800, 804 (E.D. Texas 2001); see also Yates-Williams v. Nihum, 268 F.R.D. 566, 569-70 (S.D. Tex. 2010). Rule 26(a)(2) states, in relevant part:

(A) In General. In addition to the disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1), a party must disclose to the other parties the identity of any witness it may use at trial to present evidence under Federal Rule of Evidence 702, 703, or 705.

(B) Witnesses Who Must Provide a Written Report. Unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court, this disclosure must be accompanied by a written report -- prepared and signed by the witness -- if the witness is one retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony in the case or one whose duties as the party's employee regularly involve giving expert testimony.

(D) Time to Disclose Expert Testimony. A party must make these disclosures at the times and in the sequence that the court orders.

Id. (emphasis added). "The purpose of these procedures is to provide information on expert testimony sufficiently in advance of trial [so] that opposing parties have a reasonable opportunity to prepare for effective cross examination and perhaps arrange for expert testimony from other witnesses." Poindexter, 145 F.Supp.2d at 804 (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting FED. (1) Failure to Disclose or Supplement. (A) may order payment of the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure;

(B) may inform the jury of the party's failure;
and

(C) may impose other appropriate sanctions, including any of the orders listed in Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi).

This court agrees with the majority of the district courts in this circuit that have found that § 74.351 is preempted by Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 26 and 37. The mandatory nature of § 74.351 on the time limit and sanctions collide with the provisions of Rules 26 and 37. See Nelson, 2005 WL 723459, at *3; see also Sauceda, 2007 WL 87660, at *2-3; Beam, 2006 WL 2844907, at *2-3; Garza, 234 F.R.D. at 622-23. Mollabashy's and Bond's motions to dismiss Bunch's claims based on her failure to file an expert report pursuant to § 74.351 are denied.

⁸ In Cruz v. Chang, 400 F.Supp.2d 906, 914-15 (W.D. Tex. 2005), the court found that § 13.01 of article 4590i of Texas Revised Civil Statutes [the predecessor of § 74.351] was not merely a procedural rule, but part of a “comprehensive scheme governing plaintiff’s substantive right in state court proceedings” and “a vehicle for dismissal of frivolous claims,” so Texas law applied in federal court. Two years later, however, the same court noted the change from § 13.01 of Texas Revised Civil Statute to § 74.351 and ruled that “[i]n light of the recent change in law and the persuasive reasons provided by every district court in Texas to consider this issue, the Court holds that § 74.351 does not apply in federal court.” See Mason, 486 F.Supp.2d at 625. In Privett v. United States, No 5:13CV79, 2014 WL 174596, at *2 (E.D. Tex. Jan. 8, 2014), the court cited Chapman to apply the 120-day rule, but conducted no legal analysis. In Prentice, the court relied on Chapman even though it noted that the § 74.351 discussion was dicta, found another district court’s reasoning related to a different Texas statute persuasive, and did not address other cases analyzing § 74.351 in determining that it did not conflict with federal law. Prentice, 980 F.Supp.2d at 752 (citing Garland Dollar General, 2010 WL 4259818).

Mollabashy and Bond argue that Bunch's medical negligence claim is subject to dismissal because she failed to allege all four elements of such a claim under Texas law (docket entries 26 at 4, 27 at 4). Bunch contends that these defendants failed to properly diagnose, warn and treat her, and that her injuries from her first knee surgery worsened as a result (docket entry 10 at 1-3).

Under Texas law, a plaintiff asserting a medical negligence claim bears the burden of establishing: (1) a duty to act according to an applicable standard of care; (2) a breach of that standard of care; (3) injury; and (4) causation. Hannah v. United States, 523 F.3d 597, 601 (5th Cir. 2008) (citing Quijano v. United States, 325 F.3d 564, 567 (5th Cir. 2003)). The plaintiff must establish the standard of care before the factfinder may consider whether the defendant breached that standard. Id. Because Bunch is pro se, her complaint is held to a less stringent standard. Miller, 636 F.2d at 988. The court must accept her well-pleaded facts as true and view them in the light most favorable to her. FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6); Calhoun v. Hargrove, 312 F.3d 730, 733 (5th Cir. 2002).

Bunch alleges that Mollabashy recommended an unnecessary knee revision surgery on her, which he and Bond performed (docket entry 10 at 1). During the surgery, she claims, they "cut out" her quadricep muscles and placed a rod in her leg. Id. at 3. She has therefore sufficiently alleged the first element of a medical negligence claim. See Ramirez v. Carreras, 10 S.W.3d 757, 761 (Tex. App.--Corpus Christi 2000, pet. denied) (“[T]he duty to treat the patient with proper professional skill flows from the consensual relationship between the patient and physician, and only when that relationship exists can there be a breach of a duty resulting in medical malpractice.”). She claims that the surgery caused further injury to her knee and nerve damage, and that her pain is worse and she cannot walk on her own. Id. at 3, 10. These averments are sufficient to allege the second, third and fourth elements. See Sauceda v. Pfizer, Inc., No. C-06-519, 2006 WL 3813777, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 26, 2006).

Bunch asserted sufficient facts meet all four elements of the medical negligence claim related to the knee revision surgery and the claim has facial plausibility. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556. Mollabashy’s and Bond’s motions to dismiss the medical negligence claim are denied.

4. Fraud Claim

Mollabashy and Bond move to dismiss Bunch’s fraud claims against them because she failed to plead with specificity (docket entries 26 at 3, 8; 27 at 3, 9). Bunch contends that these defendants falsely represented that she needed knee revision surgery, and that they falsified their medical records to “aid and abet” the malpractice of the doctors in Arkansas in concealing it (docket entry 10 at 1-3).

Rule 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure contains a heightened pleading standard requiring a plaintiff to plead the circumstances constituting fraud with particularity. See FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b); City of Clinton, Arkansas v. Pilgrim's Pride Corporation, 632 F.3d 148, 153 (5th Cir. 2010). “[A]rticulating the elements of fraud with particularity requires a plaintiff to specify the statements contended to be fraudulent, identify the speaker, state when and where the statements were made, and explain why the statements were fraudulent.” Williams v. WMX Technologies, Inc., 112 F.3d 175, 177 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 966 (1997). “Put simply, Rule 9(b) requires ‘the who, what, when, where, and how’ to be laid out” with respect to a fraud claim. Benchmark Electronics, Inc. v. J.M. Huber Corporation, 343 F.3d 719, 724 (5th Cir. 2003) (citation omitted). A dismissal for failure to plead fraud with particularity under Rule 9(b) is treated the same as a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal for failure to state a claim. McCall v. Genentech, Inc., No. 3:10-CV-1747-B, 2011 WL 2312280, at *3 (N.D. Tex. June 9, 2011) (citing Lovelace v. Software Spectrum Inc., 78 F.3d 1015, 1017 (5th Cir. 1996)).

In Texas, the elements of fraud by misrepresentation are: (1) the defendant made a representation to the plaintiff; (2) the representation was material; (3) the representation was false; (4) when the defendant made the representation, the defendant knew it was false or made the representation recklessly and without knowledge of its truth; (5) the defendant made the representation with the intent that the plaintiff act on it; (6) the plaintiff relied on the representation; and (7) the representation caused the plaintiff injury. Shandong Yinguang Chemical Industries Joint Stock Co., Ltd. v. Potter, 607 F.3d 1029, 1032-33 (5th Cir. 2010).

a. Unnecessary Revision Surgery

Bunch contends that Mollabashy misled her into having unnecessary knee revision surgery (docket entry 10 at 1). She fails to allege sufficient facts to show that the alleged representation was false, or that Mollabashy made the alleged misrepresentation recklessly or without knowledge of the truth of the statement. In response to Mollabashy's and Bond's motions to dismiss, Bunch contends for the first time that Dr. Joseph Teynor allegedly opined that his "gut feeling" was that the knee revision surgery was "for no reason" and expressed concern whether the revision surgery "needed to be done[.]" (docket entry 33 at 6).⁹ Even if Dr. Teynor's opinion

⁹ Bunch's new allegations in her response are not part of the pleadings to be considered for purposes of the motion to dismiss. See Hearn v. Deutsche Bank National Trust Co., 3:13-CV-2417-B, 2014 WL 4055473, at *4 n.3 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 15, 2014); see also Renfrow v. CTX Mortgage Co., LLC, No. 3:11-CV-3132-L, 2012 WL 3582752, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 20, 2012) (finding the plaintiffs' allegations were insufficient for the court to determine whether equitable tolling was warranted where they raised equitable tolling for the first time in their response to the defendant's motion to dismiss); Cutrera v. Board of Supervisors, 429 F.3d 108, 113 (5th Cir. 2005) (explaining that a claim raised for the first time in a response to a motion for summary judgment is not properly before the court); Middleton v. Life Insurance Company of North America, H-09-CV-3270, 2010 WL 582552, at *5 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 12, 2010) (ruling that a claim raised for first time in response to motion to dismiss was not properly before the Court (citing Fisher v. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., 895 F.2d 1073, 1078 (5th Cir. 1990)). She has not sought or been granted leave to amend her complaint to add these allegations, and she has not shown that the defendants consented to an amendment. See FED. R. CIV. P. 15(a)(2). Nevertheless, the pro se response may be liberally construed as a request for leave to amend her is considered, a “gut feeling” or “concern” is not sufficient to support an inference that Mollabashy’s representation that Bunch needed revision surgery was false, or made recklessly or without knowledge of the truth of the statement. See Dorsey v. Portfolio Equities, Inc., 540 F.3d 333, 339 (5th Cir. 2008) (alterations in original) (citations omitted) (“The plaintiffs must set forth specific facts supporting an inference of fraud[,] . . . such as identify[ing] circumstances that indicate conscious behavior on the part of the defendant.”). Bunch fails to meet Rule 9(b)’s heightened pleading standard for any fraudulent representation claim against Mollabashy.

b. Medical Records

Bunch also asserts that Mollabashy and Bond intentionally falsified her medical records to protect themselves and the doctors in Arkansas (docket entry 10 at 3). She notes that she had “Medical & Attorney Professionals” review the “Operative Report of Mollobashy of 05/05/2011”, and they found no record of any complications involving the revision surgery. Id. at 2. Bunch does not allege that Mollabashy and Bond made a material, false representation of her medical records to her upon which she relied to her detriment. See Grisham v. Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas, No. 4:11-CV-3680, 2012 WL 2568178, at *4 (S.D. Tex. June 28, 2012) complaint. See Cash v. Jefferson Assocs., Inc., 978 F.2d 217, 218 (5th Cir. 1992) (deciding that a response to a motion to dismiss, in which the plaintiff first alleged that she had been willfully discriminated against, should be treated as a motion to amend her pleadings).

(emphasis original) (dismissing a fraud claim for failure to state a claim where the plaintiff alleged that the defendant “committed fraud by manufacturing documentation to support its alleged ownership of the Note” but he did “not contend that [the defendant] made this material misrepresentation to him”) (emphasis in original). Any fraud claims based on the allegedly altered medical records fail. Id.

To the extent Bunch asserts fraud claims against Mollabashy and Bond, she has failed to plead her claims with specificity, and they are dismissed for failure to state a claim.

B. Reliant

Reliant also moves to dismiss Bunch’s claims against it on grounds that her allegations against it fail to state a claim (docket entry 23). Bunch alleges that Reliant is vicariously liable for allowing Mollabashy and Bond to practice medicine, and that it is guilty of negligence, falsifying medical records, and aiding and abetting medical malpractice (docket entry 10 at 9). She specifically alleges that it “forgot” that she has a rod and a hole in her leg, it intentionally and fraudulently failed to document her first failed knee replacement surgery in Arkansas, and that it refused to re-admit her after her hospitalization at Baylor. Id. at 10.

1. Vicarious Liability

In Texas, “the doctrine of vicarious liability, or respondeat superior, makes a principal liable for the conduct of his employee or agent.” F.F.P. Operating Partners,

L.P. v. Duenez, 237 S.W.3d 680, 686 (Tex. 2007). Under the vicarious liability doctrine, if an employee or agent causes injury to an innocent third party, “the enterprise itself, not only the agent, should be held accountable.” Id. “[T]here are a number of factors affecting whether and when vicarious liability is appropriate. Paramount among those factors, however, is whether the person being held responsible can be said to have had a right to control the activities of the wrongdoer.” St. Joseph Hospital v. Wolff, 94 S.W.3d 513, 541 (Tex. 2003); Golden Spread Council, Inc. No. 562 of Boy Scouts of America v. Akins, 926 S.W.2d 287, 290 (Tex. 1996) (ruling that when determining whether vicarious liability applies, “[t]he right to control remains the ‘supreme test’ for whether the master-servant relationship exists”).

Here, Bunch fails to assert any facts showing that Mollabashy and Bond were employees or agents of Reliant, the rehabilitation center where she went after her surgery at Baylor. Nor has she alleged that it had any control over them. She has failed to plead “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face,” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570, against Reliant based on the actions of Mollabashy and Bond.

2. Medical Records

Bunch next alleges that Reliant intentionally and fraudulently failed to document her first failed knee replacement surgery in Arkansas and/or falsified medical records. To the extent that she is asserting fraud claims against Reliant, they fail for the same reasons as her similar fraud claims against Mollabashy and Bond. She has failed to plead any fraud claim with specificity and therefore fails to state a claim.

3. Negligence

Bunch alleges generally that Reliant was negligent (docket entry 10 at 9). Her only specific allegations relating to Reliant are her statements that it forgot she had a rod in her leg, that she had to be rushed back to Baylor following a continuous hemorrhage from her knee following physical therapy, and that she was not allowed to return. Id. at 10. She has not alleged sufficient facts to state a plausible negligence claim against Reliant.

4. Refusal to Admit

Bunch complains that after she was discharged from Baylor, Reliant refused to re-admit her because it had no room available (docket entry 10 at 2, 10). She contends that Reliant was a new facility that had a vacant floor when she had left it only seven days prior to her return. Id. at 2. Even taken as true, these conclusory allegations fail to state a plausible cause of action against Reliant for any refusal to admit her.

Reliant's motion to dismiss Bunch's claims against it is granted.

V. OPPORTUNITY TO AMEND

“Generally a district court errs in dismissing a pro se complaint for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) without giving the plaintiff an opportunity to amend.” Amonduron v. American Airlines, 416 F. App’x 421, 423 (5th Cir. 2011) (per curiam) (quoting Bazrowx v. Scott, 136 F.3d 1053, 1054 (5th Cir. 1998) (per curiam)). Courts may appropriately dismiss an action with prejudice without giving an opportunity to amend, however, when the plaintiff fails to respond to a motion to dismiss after being specifically invited to do so by the court, the defendant has specifically noted the failure to respond, and the plaintiff has had ample opportunity to amend the complaint. Rodriguez v. United States, 66 F.3d 95, 97-98 (5th Cir. 1995) (per curiam) (noting passage of 327 days), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1166 (1996). Dismissal with prejudice is also appropriate if a court finds that the plaintiff has alleged his or her best case. Jones v. Greninger, 188 F.3d 322, 327 (5th Cir. 1999) (per curiam). A court may also deny the opportunity to amend if the amendment is futile. See Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182 (1962); Briggs v. Mississippi, 331 F.3d 499, 508 (5th Cir. 2003) (stating that an amendment would be futile if such amended complaint “could not survive a FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) motion[.]”), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1108 (2004).

Bunch’s response to the defendants’ motions to dismiss may be liberally construed as a motion for leave to amend her complaint. See Cash v. Jefferson Associates, 978 F.2d 217, 218 (5th Cir. 1992) (deciding that a response to a motion to dismiss, in which plaintiff first alleged that she had been willfully discriminated against, should be treated as a motion to amend her pleadings). It asserts, without supporting facts, that Reliant should be liable for denying that Bunch had ever been its patient, denying the privilege of returning to the facility, and for psychologically harming her when she was discharged to the Silverado dementia unit instead of Reliant (docket entry 33 at 11). None of Bunch's conclusory assertions provide additional support for her claims against Reliant, and she seems to have alleged her best case against it. See Jones v. Greninger, 188 F.3d at 327. No opportunity to amend her claims against it is therefore warranted.

VI. CONCLUSION

Mollabashy and Bond's motions to dismiss are GRANTED in part, and Bunch's fraud claims against them are DISMISSED. Their motions to dismiss Bunch's medical negligence claim are DENIED. This case is ABATED for 60 days in order for Bunch to provide Mollabashy and Bond the required pre-suit notices and for Bunch to effect service on Bond. Reliant's motion to dismiss is GRANTED.

SO ORDERED.
