UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT SEATTLE

U.S. BANK, N.A.,

Plaintiff,

v.

THE GLOGOWSKI LAW FIRM, PLLC, d/b/a ALLEGIANT LAW GROUP, AND KATRINA GLOGOWSKI,

Defendants.

CASE NO. C19-0074-JCC

ORDER

This matter comes before the Court on Plaintiff U.S. Bank’s motion for a protective order (Dkt. No. 59), Defendants’ motion to extend the fact witness discovery deadline (Dkt. No. 61), and Defendants’ motion to extend the expert testimony disclosure deadline (Dkt. No. 70).

Having thoroughly considered the parties’ briefing and the relevant record, the Court finds oral argument unnecessary and hereby DENIES the motion for a protective order, GRANTS in part and DENIES in part the motion to extend the fact witness discovery deadline, and GRANTS in part and DENIES in part the motion to extend the expert testimony disclosure deadline for the reasons explained herein.

I. BACKGROUND

This is a legal malpractice action in which U.S. Bank alleges that its former attorney, Katrina Glogowski, breached the parties’ engagement letter and her professional duties to U.S.

1 Bank. (See generally Dkt. No. 36.) Throughout this litigation, the parties have stipulated to 2 several extensions of the case schedule. (See Dkt. Nos. 37, 46, 51, 54.) In April 2020, when the 3 parties first requested the most recent extension, they represented that they had “completed 4 written discovery for this matter” but requested additional time to attempt to complete in-person 5 depositions in light of the COVID-19 pandemic. (Dkt. No. 51 at 2; see also Dkt. No. 54 at 2 n.1 6 (“Parties completed written discovery on May 13, 2020.”).) The parties “anticipate[d] no more 7 than four or five depositions . . . including the depositions of Party representative(s) and Katrina 8 Glogowski . . . and the possible deposition of each Party’s expert,” (Dkt. No. 51 at 5), and 9 ultimately agreed that the fact witness deposition deadline should be September 30, 2020, (see 10 Dkt. No. 54 at 1).

11 The Court adopted the parties’ stipulated case schedule on September 10, 2020. (See Dkt.
12 No. 58.) Six days later, on Wednesday, September 16, 2020, Defendants’ counsel requested to 13 depose six witnesses during the final six business days of the discovery period: four former 14 employees of U.S. Bank, one current employee of U.S. Bank, and one Rule 30(b)(6) corporate 15 representative. (See Dkt. No. 60-1 at 2, 17.) The next day, the parties participated in an eight-16 hour deposition of Ms. Glogowski. (See id. at 17.) At 5:38 pm that evening, apparently without 17 discussing the depositions with Plaintiff’s counsel while they were together that day, 18 Defendants’ counsel noticed one deposition for September 24, two depositions for September 25, 19 and three depositions for September 28. (See id. at 18.)

20 The following Monday, Plaintiff’s counsel objected to producing any witnesses during 21 the discovery period but offered to produce a 30(b)(6) witness after September 30 if Defendants 22 would move for leave to extend the discovery deadline and abandon their request to depose the 23 other witnesses. (See id. at 17.) Defendants were willing to schedule a deposition after 24 September 30 but sought to “reserve the right to ask for further documents or witnesses should 25 the representative be ill prepared or unable to answer.” (Id. at 24.) Defendants also informally 26 requested certain documents from U.S. Bank by e-mail. (See id.)

1 Plaintiff objected to producing additional documents and to potential depositions of 2 additional witnesses. (Id. at 23.) The parties met and conferred but were unable to reach 3 agreement on these issues. (Dkt. Nos 51 at 6, 61 at 1.) They filed simultaneous motions on 4 September 23, 2020: Plaintiff filed a motion for protective order and Defendants filed a motion
5 to extend the fact witness deposition deadline and the written discovery deadline until November 6 30, 2020. (See Dkt. Nos. 59, 61.)

7 While those motions were pending, the deadline for the parties to exchange expert reports 8 passed. The day before the deadline, Defendants moved to extend the expert disclosure deadline 9 in light of the pending motions. (See Dkt. No. 70.) U.S. Bank served its expert report by the 10 deadline and opposes an extension. (See Dkt. Nos. 71–72.)

11 II. DISCUSSION

12 A. Legal Standard

13 “The district court has wide discretion in controlling discovery.” Little v. City of Seattle, 14 863 F.2d 681, 685 (9th Cir. 1988). Upon a showing of good cause, the Court may issue a 15 protective order “to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or 16 undue burden or expense.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1).

17 Similarly, the Court may modify a scheduling order if a party demonstrates “good cause.” 18 Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4). In the context of a scheduling order, the good cause standard focuses 19 primarily on “the diligence of the party seeking the” modification. Johnson v. Mammoth Recs., 20 Inc., 975 F.2d 604, 609 (9th Cir. 1992). There is good cause to modify a deadline in a scheduling 21 order if “it cannot reasonably be met despite the diligence of the party seeking the extension.” Id.
22 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b) advisory committee’s note to 1983 amendment). “Mere failure to 23 complete discovery within the time allowed does not constitute good cause for an extension or 24 continuance.” W.D. Wash. Local Civ. R. 16(b)(6).

25 As explained in more detail below, the Court concludes that Defendants bear the burden 26 of showing good cause to extend the discovery deadline to depose the five individual witnesses

1 and to issue additional written discovery, while U.S. Bank bears the burden of showing good 2 cause for a protective order to prevent the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition.

3 B. Depositions

4 Defendants move to extend the discovery deadline to depose six witnesses: four former 5 employees of U.S. Bank, one current employee of U.S. Bank, and one 30(b)(6) corporate 6 representative. (See Dkt. Nos. 61, 60-1 at 4, 17.) Defendants argue there is good cause to extend 7 the deadline because U.S. Bank refused to produce the witnesses in a timely manner, there has 8 been “civil unrest in Portland, Oregon, where the firm representing Defendants is 9 headquartered,” one of Defendants’ attorneys was forced to evacuate her home due to wildfires, 10 and Defendants’ counsel prioritized other cases so “depositions of U.S. Bank did not rise to the 11 top of the to do list until August 2020.” (Dkt. Nos. 63 at 9, 61 at 2, 66 at 3.) The Court’s analysis 12 of whether there is good cause to extend the discovery deadline differs with respect to the 13 individual witnesses and the 30(b)(6) witness.

14 1. Individual Witnesses

15 With respect to the individual witnesses, U.S. Bank argues that the deposition notices 16 Defendants served on U.S. Bank are ineffective because the current and former employees are 17 not parties to the litigation. (See Dkt. No. 59 at 6–7.) The Court agrees. “If a person is a party, a 18 simple notice of deposition is sufficient to compel attendance, while a non-party’s attendance can 19 be compelled only by subpoena.” Jules Jordan Video, Inc. v. 144942 Canada, Inc., 617 F.3d 20 1146, 1158 (9th Cir. 2010). A corporation’s employees are generally treated as non-parties. See, 21 e.g., Calderon v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., 290 F.R.D. 508, 516 (D. Idaho 2013) (“[A] corporate 22 employee or agent who does not qualify as an officer, director, or managing agent is not subject 23 to deposition by notice.”); Schindler Elevator Corp. v. Otis Elevator Co., 2007 WL 1771509, 24 slip. op. at 2 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (same). Because Defendants did not properly subpoena these 25 witnesses by the discovery deadline, there is no discovery pending from which to protect U.S.
26

1 Bank, and Defendants bear the burden of demonstrating good cause to extend the deadline.¹

2 Defendants offer a host of arguments for why there is good cause to extend the deadline, 3 none of which are persuasive. First, Defendants cite “civil unrest in Portland, Oregon” as a cause 4 of their delay in serving the subpoenas. (Dkt. No. 63 at 9.) The Court is troubled by this 5 explanation when Defendants’ lead attorney works in Seattle, not Portland, and Defendants 6 admit that “except for a handful of support staff . . . Bullivant Houser employees in the Portland 7 office continue to work from home.” (Dkt. No. 66 at 2.) Defendants further admit that Amanda 8 Bryan, the associate attorney who ultimately emailed the discovery requests to U.S. Bank, lives 9 in Sherwood, Oregon, (id.), and Defendants do not argue that any “civil unrest” in Sherwood 10 prevented her from working diligently to serve discovery by the deadline. Because Defendants 11 do not offer any explanation of how “civil unrest” in Portland caused their delay, the Court does 12 not find it to constitute good cause to extend the discovery deadline.

13 Second, Defendants argue that there is good cause to extend the deadline because Ms.
14 Bryan evacuated her home due to wildfires in Oregon. (See Dkt. Nos. 63 at 9, 61 at 1–2, 62 at 1.) 15 The Court is sympathetic to Ms. Bryan, but Defendants have not provided enough evidence to 16 show good cause for failing to meet the discovery deadline. Ms. Bryan’s declaration does not 17 explain when she evacuated her home, whether she was able to work while evacuated, when she 18 returned home, or why she was unable to serve discovery during that time. Without that 19 evidence, the Court cannot find that there was good cause for failing to meet the deadline.
20 Further, Defendants offer no explanation for why their other attorneys, who are located in Seattle 21 and Bellevue, could not have served the discovery in a timely manner.

22 Finally, Defendants’ counsel argues that there is good cause to extend the discovery 23 deadline because they prioritized other cases and “depositions of U.S. Bank did not rise to the 24 top of the to do list until August 2020.” (Dkt. No. 66 at 3.) Simply prioritizing other work does

26 ¹ For the same reason, the Court need not address whether and to what extent U.S. Bank would have standing to object to subpoenas directed to non-parties.

1 not provide good cause to extend the deadline in these circumstances, particularly where 2 Defendants had at least five months to schedule depositions and the depositions deadline has 3 been extended several times already. Further, Defendants do not explain why they did not make 4 any effort to subpoena the non-party witnesses after U.S. Bank warned Defendants that their 5 deposition notices were not properly served, (see Dkt. No. 60-1 at 17), nor do they explain why 6 these witnesses are likely to have relevant testimony that they cannot obtain from the 30(b)(6) 7 deposition of U.S. Bank.

8 In sum, Defendants were not diligent in pursuing these depositions, and therefore 9 Defendants' motion to extend the discovery deadline to subpoena these witnesses is DENIED.

10 2. 30(b)(6) Deposition

11 Unlike the other depositions, Defendants properly noticed a 30(b)(6) deposition by the 12 deadline so U.S. Bank bears the burden of showing good cause for a protective order. U.S. Bank 13 argues that there is good cause for a protective order here because six days' notice of the 14 30(b)(6) deposition in this case was unreasonable, especially since Defendants gave U.S. Bank 15 only four business days to prepare. (See Dkt. No. 59 at 8–10.) But the Court need not address this 16 argument because U.S. Bank objected not just to producing a 30(b)(6) witness by the date in the 17 deposition notice, but also to producing a 30(b)(6) witness at any time before the discovery 18 deadline. (See Dkt. No. 60-1 at 17.) In other words, U.S. Bank objected to producing a 30(b)(6) 19 witness even on September 30, 2020, which was 13 days (and 9 business days) after the notice 20 was served.

21 A party seeking a deposition must provide “reasonable written notice to every other 22 party.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(1). “Rule 30(b)(1)’s ‘reasonable written notice’ requirement is 23 designed to ensure that a deponent has the opportunity to prepare adequately for her deposition.” 24 Evans v. Griffin, 932 F.3d 1043, 1048 (7th Cir. 2019). “The rules do not require any particular 25 number of days, so that reasonableness may depend on the particular circumstances.” Hart v.
26 United States, 772 F.2d 285, 286 (6th Cir. 1985). That a deposition is noticed late in the 1 discovery period does not, standing alone, render the notice unreasonable. See Doe v. Trump, 2 329 F.R.D. 262, 274 (W.D. Wash. 2018) (“[T]he ‘eleventh hour’ of a discovery period is still 3 within the discovery period, and there is no basis for denying a discovery request simply because 4 it is served toward the end of the designated period.”).

5 The Court concludes that 13 days’ notice (and 9 business days) was reasonable under 6 these circumstances. Contrary to U.S. Bank’s argument, the parties’ stipulation expressly 7 recognized that depositions of party representatives could be necessary. (See Dkt. No. 51 at 5.)
8 Further, this case is not especially complex, and the 30(b)(6) notice includes only ten topics, 9 many of which overlap, and most of which appear to be focused on U.S. Bank’s allegations. (See 10 Dkt. No. 60-1 at 12–14.) To the extent the topics are objectionable, U.S. Bank should have met 11 and conferred with Defendants rather than flatly refusing to produce a witness by the deadline.
12 Under these circumstances, 13 days’ notice is not unreasonable.

13 C. Written Discovery

14 Defendants also seek an extension of the discovery deadline so that they can request 15 certain documents from U.S. Bank related to Ms. Glogowski’s performance. (See Dkt. Nos. 61 at 16 2, 60-1 at 24.) Defendants informally requested the documents from U.S. Bank by e-mail but did 17 not serve U.S. Bank with a formal document request. (See Dkt. No. 60-1 at 24.) Because 18 Defendants did not properly serve the document requests on U.S. Bank before the deadline, 19 Defendants bear the burden of showing good cause to extend it.²

20 Defendants argue that there is good cause to extend written discovery deadline because 21 they “were unaware of U.S. Bank’s position that Defendants were terminated for cause based on 22 the Defendants’ performance” until Ms. Glogowski’s deposition on September 17, 2020. (Dkt.
23 No. 63 at 4.) Defendants’ argument is not well taken. From the outset of this case, U.S. Bank has 24

25 ² In addition, because the written discovery deadline had already passed by the time Defendants 26 filed their motion, (see Dkt. No. 54 at 2 n.1), Defendants must show that their failure to serve the discovery requests by the deadline was due to “excusable neglect.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b)(1)(B).

1 alleged the following:

2 Still unaware of the full extent of Defendants' negligence, but nonetheless 3 dissatisfied with Defendants' non-responsiveness and inadequate representation 4 across the board in other matters and concerns about Defendants raised by the 5 Attorney General of Washington, U.S. Bank briefly placed all loan files assigned 6 to Defendants on hold during the summer of 2016, before eventually terminating 7 the relationship on December 5, 2016, with all U.S. Bank files transferred away 8 from Defendants by January 31, 2017.

9 (Dkt. No. 1 at 7; see also Dkt. No. 36 at 8–9.) Thus, for nearly 16 months before the written 10 discovery deadline, Defendants were aware of U.S. Bank's contention that it terminated 11 Defendants based on allegedly poor performance yet failed to request the documents they now 12 seek. Defendants do not offer any good cause for their delay. Therefore, the Court DENIES 13 Defendants' motion to extend the discovery deadline to seek additional written discovery.

14 D. Attorney Fees

15 U.S. Bank requests that the Court order Defendants to pay the attorney fees it incurred in 16 preparing its motion for protective order. (See Dkt. No. 59 at 11–12.) When a Court grants in 17 part and denies in part a motion for a protective order, it “may . . . apportion the reasonable 18 expenses for the motion.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(C). Here, the Court concludes that both parties 19 acted unreasonably and therefore declines to award attorney fees to either party.

20 E. Expert Testimony Disclosure Deadline

21 While the motions for a protective order and to extend the fact discovery deadline were 22 pending, the expert testimony disclosure deadline approached. The day before the deadline, 23 Defendants filed a motion to extend the deadline by 60 days in light of the pending motions. (See 24 Dkt. No. 70). Defendants also chose not to serve an expert report by the deadline, (see Dkt. No.
25 72 at 2), despite Local Civil Rule 7(j)'s warning that “[p]arties should not assume that [a] motion 26 [for relief from a deadline] will be granted and must comply with the existing deadline unless the court orders otherwise.” U.S. Bank, by contrast, did serve its expert report by the deadline, and argues that the additional discovery Defendants seek is not relevant to Defendants' expert report,

1 which will address whether Ms. Glogowski met her duty of care, and does not excuse 2 Defendants' failure to meet the deadline. (See Dkt. No. 71 at 2–3.) In reply, Defendants do not 3 dispute that their expert will opine on whether Ms. Glogowski met the appropriate standard of 4 care, but argue that “the procedures and practices of U.S. Bank with respect to service of process, 5 onboarding of legal service providers, and decisions to pursue appeals as well as facts related to 6 the Defendants performance over time . . . could affect the expert’s analysis.” (Dkt. No. 73 at 2.) 7 The Court is skeptical of Defendants’ sparse explanation but concludes that some of the topics in 8 the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice may be relevant to Defendants’ expert opinion. (See Dkt. No.
9 60-1 at 12–14.) Therefore, the Court GRANTS in part and DENIES in part Defendants’ motion 10 to extend the expert testimony disclosure deadline.

11 III. CONCLUSION

12 For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES Plaintiff’s motion for a protective order 13 (Dkt. No. 59), GRANTS in part and DENIES in part Defendants’ motion to extend the fact 14 discovery deadline (Dkt. No. 61), and GRANTS in part and DENIES in part Defendants’ motion 15 to extend the expert testimony disclosure deadline (Dkt. No. 70). The Court ORDERS as 16 follows:

- 17 1. U.S. Bank’s 30(b)(6) deposition must be completed by December 1, 2020.³
- 18 2. Expert reports must be produced by December 11, 2020.
- 19 3. Rebuttal expert reports must be produced by December 31, 2020.
- 20 4. Expert depositions must be completed by January 29, 2021.
- 21 5. All discovery must be completed by January 29, 2021.
- 22 6. Dispositive motions must be filed by February 26, 2021.

26 ³ The Court understands that all other fact discovery has been completed.
