RELEVANT PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Court previously allowed the parties to file the First Amended Complaint, which also quoted and summarized portions of the AGTA, under seal initially, with the parties proposed limited redactions a week later. See ECF No. 48 (order granting joint request to seal limited to those portions referring to the AGTA terms in the First Amended Complaint).

LCR 5(g)(3)(A) CERTIFICATION

The Parties have met and conferred and agree about the need for sealing. In accordance with Local Civil Rule 5(g)(3)(A), the undersigned counsel certify that on December 8 and 9, 2022, the parties communicated about Boeing's intention to include, in its Motion to be filed on December 9, 2022, excerpts to and references from Boeing's Aircraft General Terms Agreements ("AGTAs") with airline lessors that leased aircraft to LOT (and assigned some contractual AGTA terms to LOT during the course of those lease agreements) and refers to portions of the First Amended Complaint that are already under seal.

The Parties therefore agree that Boeing's Motion will be filed under seal in the first instance, subject to this Court's approval. The Parties further agreed that, following Boeing's filing of the Motion under seal, as well as this accompanying Stipulation Motion and [Proposed] Order: (1) the Parties would meet and confer to agree on appropriate redactions to the Motion; and, subject to the Court granting this Stipulated Motion, (2) Boeing would file a redacted copy of its Motion on the public docket within seven (7) days of filing its Motion.

The Parties are in further agreement that there is not another means of protecting the commercially sensitive information in the AGTAs.

LCR 5(g)(3)(B) LEGAL STANDARD AND ARGUMENT

This Court applies a strong presumption favoring public access to court records that ordinarily requires the moving party to provide compelling reasons to seal a document. Kamakana v. City & County of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172, 1178 (9th Cir. 2006). But where the underlying motion is non-dispositive, the showing required to rebut the presumption is far lower.

See, e.g., In re Midland Nat'l Life Ins. Co. Annuity Sales Practices Litig., 686 F.3d 1115, 1119 (9th Cir. 2012) (holding that where the sealed records are "attached to a non-dispositive motion . . . , the usual presumption of the public's right of access is rebutted" (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)); Kamakana, 447 F.3d at 1179 ("The public policies that support the right of access to dispositive motions, and related materials, do not apply with equal force to non-dispositive materials.").

In the case of a non-dispositive motion, a "good cause" showing will suffice to seal any records attached to the motion. Id. at 1180; see also Midland, 686 F.3d at 1119 ("[A] particularized showing of 'good cause' under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(c) is sufficient to preserve the secrecy of sealed discovery documents attached to non-dispositive motions." (citation omitted)). Here, Boeing is not filing a dispositive motion; it is filing a motion to dismiss only some of the causes of the action. Therefore, the Court need only find good cause exists to redact portions of that Motion that address confidential contractual terms.

Boeing and LOT agree that the AGTAs set out the contractual terms on which Boeing sells commercial aircraft to its customers, including the terms of delivery, pricing, rebates, and product warranties. Boeing does not publicly disclose information of this kind. It is particularly sensitive because contracts between Boeing and its customers are heavily negotiated and subject to confidential terms and conditions. Boeing and its customers negotiate those contracts with the understanding that those commercial terms will not be disclosed to the public, thereby resulting in competitive harm both to Boeing and to its customers. For precisely this reason, the AGTAs contain provisions requiring the parties to treat as strictly confidential any information pertaining to the AGTAs, including the documents as well as individual provisions contained therein. Similarly, when airline customers lease Boeing aircraft (versus purchasing them outright), the airline customer, such as LOT here, will execute assignments of certain rights under the lessor's AGTA, and the confidentiality provisions of the AGTAs are one such right assigned.

Other courts have consistently permitted parties to redact similar contractual information on the grounds that it is commercially and competitive sensitive. See, e.g., KM Enters., Inc. v. Glob. Traffic Techs., Inc., 725 F.3d 718, 734 (7th Cir. 2013) (sealing "customer and pricing data"); Apple Inc. v. Samsung Elecs. Co., 727 F.3d 1214, 1223 (Fed. Cir. 2013) (redacting "product-specific financial information"); Amgen Inc. v. Amneal Pharms. LLC, 2021 WL 4843959, at *2 (D. Del. Oct. 18, 2021) (sealing "contract price at which [manufacturer] sells the . . . product to each customer" and the "chargebacks, rebates, and discounts provided to each customer"). As Judge Posner reasoned, information of this type gives "unearned competitive advantage" to other firms, and "the American public does not need to know [such information] in order to evaluate the handling of this litigation by the judiciary." SmithKline Beecham Corp. v. Pentech Pharms., Inc., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1002, 1008 (N.D. Ill. 2003).

Disclosure of the contractual terms of AGTAs would result in harm to Boeing and its customers. If another aircraft manufacturer learns of these terms, Boeing would be unfairly disadvantaged because the competitor could craft its offers with full knowledge of the package of pricing, services, and other terms that Boeing offers its customers. The result would be that the competitor could craft its own proposals with unilateral insight into Boeing's confidential contracts. That unfair advantage would arise by virtue of the litigation process, not through any earned business advantage. Likewise, such disclosure would also give other airline customers (or aircraft lessees) access to confidential pricing, services, and other contract terms that Boeing offers to the counterparties to the AGTAs at issue in this case, which would create unearned leverage in negotiations with Boeing arising by virtue of a routine filing in a litigation unrelated to those business entities, rather than through any earned competitive advantage.

Finally, the Parties do not propose keeping the entirety of the Motion under seal. See LCR 5(g)(3)(B)(iii) (requiring the least restrictive method to ensure protection of material to be sealed). Instead, the Parties anticipate being able to redact only those portions that quote from or specifically detail terms from the AGTAs. As soon as the Motion is filed, and available to LOT to review, the Parties will work together to prepare such a redacted version for filing in the public record.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Parties respectfully request that this Court order the following document be filed under seal: an unredacted copy of Boeing's Motion to Dismiss the First Amended Complaint. The Parties will submit a redacted copy for filing in the public record within seven (7) days of the Court's order sealing this Motion.

IT IS SO STIPULATED by and between the Parties.
