
The “officially released” date that appears near the beginning of each opinion is the date the opinion will be published in the Connecticut Law Journal or the date it was released as a slip opinion. The operative date for the beginning of all time periods for filing postopinion motions and petitions for certification is the “officially released” date appearing in the opinion. In no event will any such motions be accepted before the “officially released” date.

All opinions are subject to modification and technical correction prior to official publication in the Connecticut Reports and Connecticut Appellate Reports. In the event of discrepancies between the electronic version of an opinion and the print version appearing in the Connecticut Law Journal and subsequently in the Connecticut Reports or Connecticut Appellate Reports, the latest print version is to be considered authoritative.

VERTEFEUILLE, J., concurring. I agree with and join part I of the majority opinion. I do not join part II of the majority opinion because I find that part to be premature, and perhaps unnecessary. It is not evident to me that the Appellate Court will pursue any disciplinary action against the plaintiff in error, Francis T. Mandanici, a senior assistant public defender, and, if it were to do so, a determination of the facts regarding his conduct could be made only after the hearing that we have concluded must be held.
