8 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

9 Appellee,

10 - v. -

11 DEREK ANDRE ENGLISH and RONALD ANDERSON,

12 Defendants-Appellees.

13
14 Before: KEARSE, WINTER, and HALL, Circuit Judges.

15 Appeals from orders of the United States District Court
16 for the Southern District of New York, Colleen McMahon, Judge, 17 denying defendants' motions for bail pending trial, and ordering 18 their pretrial detention pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3142 on grounds 19 of risk of flight and danger to the community.

20 Affirmed.

21 SANTOSH ARAVIND, Assistant United States
22 Attorney for the Southern District of New 23 York, New York, New York, for Appellee.

24 RICHARD B. LIND, New York, New York, for 25 Defendant-Appellant English.

26 RONALD RUBINSTEIN, New York, New York
27 (Rubinstein & Corozzo, New York, New York, 28 of counsel), for Defendant-Appellant
29 Anderson.

1 KEARSE, Circuit Judge:

2 Defendants Derek Andre English and Ronald Anderson, who 3 have been indicted on charges of conspiring to traffic in 4 cocaine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 846, 841(a)(1), and 5 841(b)(1)(A), and engaging in firearms offenses, in violation of 6 18 U.S.C. §§ 922(g)(1), 924(c)(1)(A)(i), and 2, appeal from orders 7 entered in the United States District Court for the Southern 8 District of New York by Colleen McMahon, Judge, to whom their case 9 is assigned, denying their applications for bail pending trial and 10 ordering their pretrial detention pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3142(e) 11 on grounds of risk of flight and danger to the community.
12 Following their arrests but prior to the filing of the indictment 13 and the assignment of the case to Judge McMahon, defendants had 14 unsuccessfully applied for bail before a magistrate judge and had 15 appealed the denial to District Judge Lawrence M. McKenna, who was 16 then sitting as the "Part I" judge for, inter alia, certain 17 emergency matters and preliminary criminal proceedings, see 18 S.D.N.Y. Local Rules 3, 7(a)-(b); Judge McKenna denied their 19 motions, finding that although the combinations of bail conditions 20 proposed by English and Anderson, respectively, were sufficient to 21 assure their future court appearances as required, a firearm that 22 defendants had possessed persuaded him that these defendants posed 23 danger to the community. In challenging the orders of Judge
24 McMahon, English and Anderson contend principally that the judge 25 was predisposed against their bail applications, that she 26 impermissibly revisited Judge McKenna's finding that they posed no

1 risk of flight, and that they should be released in light of new 2 information bearing on Judge McKenna's danger-based denial of 3 their bail motions. Finding no merit in defendants' contentions, 4 we affirm the orders of the district court.

5 I. BACKGROUND

6 All of the events described below occurred in 2010 unless 7 otherwise noted. English and Anderson were arrested on April 28
8 by Drug Enforcement Administration ("DEA") agents investigating a 9 drug-trafficking organization. According to the complaint filed 10 on April 29 ("Complaint"), the events of April 28 included the 11 following. DEA agents intercepted a Federal Express package 12 containing approximately five kilograms of cocaine; the person who 13 attempted to collect the package was arrested and agreed to become 14 a cooperating witness ("CW"). (See Complaint ¶¶ 6-7.) Acting on 15 information provided by the CW, the agents seized from a car 16 belonging to one Rodney Johnson another package containing five 17 kilograms of cocaine and a gun in a hidden compartment. (See id.
18 ¶¶ 8(a), 10.) DEA agents also conducted surveillance of a Queens, 19 New York, house that the CW described as a stash house for drugs, 20 money from drug sales, and guns. (See id. ¶ 8(b).) The agents 21 observed English, Anderson, and Johnson arrive and enter the 22 house; when English exited carrying a bag and began to drive away, 23 he was stopped and arrested; the bag was found to contain 24 approximately 10 kilograms of cocaine. (See id. ¶¶ 11(a)-(c).)

1 After arresting English, the agents arrested Anderson and Johnson.
2 In subsequently executing a search warrant for the house, the 3 agents found, inter alia, "(1) two kilograms of a substance that 4 appeared to be cocaine in the kitchen; (2) an undetermined 5 quantity of money in the living room; [and] (3) a firearm that 6 appears to be a machine gun with what appears to be a silencer in 7 the hallway closet." (Id. ¶¶ 11(d)-(e).)

8 On April 29, English and Anderson were presented before 9 Magistrate Judge Kevin N. Fox and moved to be released on bail.
10 The Assistant United States Attorney ("AUSA") opposed the motions 11 and asked that defendants be detained on the grounds that they 12 were flight risks and posed a significant danger to the community.
13 By letter dated May 3, 2010, the government reiterated the main 14 allegations of the Complaint, including that the agents had found 15 in the stash house what appeared to be a machine gun, and added, 16 inter alia, that

17 [b]oth defendant[s] have significant criminal 18 histories, including prior narcotics felonies.
19 Specifically, English was sentenced to a term of 10 20 years' imprisonment for conspiracy to traffic in 21 cocaine and Anderson was sentenced to a term of 28
22 months' to 7 years' imprisonment for criminal 23 possession of a controlled substance in the fifth 24 degree. As a result, both defendants are facing 25 20[-]year mandatory minimums pursuant to 21 U.S.C.
26 § 841(b)(1)(A). The substantial prison sentence 27 faced by these defendants provides a considerable 28 incentive to flee. Multiple orders of protection 29 have been filed against Anderson, including at least 30 one currently active such order. As memorialized in 31 the Pretrial Services report, English tested positive 32 for marijuana on the day he was presented on the 33 instant charge.

1 (Letter from AUSA Michelle K. Parikh to Magistrate Judge Fox dated 2 May 3, 2010, at 3-4.) At the May 4 hearing on the motions, the 3 government also stated, inter alia, that the stash house was 4 leased in Anderson's name and that the landlord had seen Anderson 5 there on several occasions (see Joint Hearing Transcript, May 4, 6 2010 ("May 4 Tr."), at 4); that when he was arrested, Anderson 7 "was running from the location" (id. at 5); that the search of the 8 house revealed not only the gun and silencer, but also ammunition 9 (see id. at 4); and that "both of these defendants have been 10 linked through numerous sources of the DEA to a much larger 11 narcotics conspiracy" and "have also been linked to violent 12 activity as part of that conspiracy" (id. at 6).

13 The magistrate judge denied the bail motions. Although 14 finding that both defendants had rebutted the statutory 15 presumption of flight risk, see 18 U.S.C. §§ 3142(e), (f)(1), he 16 concluded that in light of the large quantity of cocaine involved, 17 the sophistication of defendants' narcotics operation, and the 18 weapon recovered from the stash house, defendants posed a danger
19 to the community. (See May 4 Tr. 25-27.)

20 A. The Proceedings Before Judge McKenna

21 English and Anderson appealed, and their motions came 22 before Judge McKenna as the Part I judge on May 5. The court 23 indicated that it was particularly concerned about the gun found 24 in the stash house. (See Joint Hearing Transcript, May 5, 2010 25 ("May 5 Tr."), at 5.) English's attorney argued principally that

1 there was no evidence that English had been to the closet in which 2 the gun was found; Anderson's attorney argued principally that 3 Anderson was unarmed when arrested and that, although he leased 4 the house, none of his personal belongings were on the premises.
5 (See id. at 6, 16-18.) The government responded principally that 6 it was highly unlikely that English and Anderson, handling large 7 quantities of narcotics in the house, did not know that a machine
8 gun, silencer, and ammunition were there. (See id. at 19.)

9 In response to an inquiry from the court as to why the 10 government's letter to the magistrate judge said that the weapon 11 found in the closet merely "appear[ed]" to be a machine gun, the 12 AUSA stated that

13 the events were developing rapidly. The agent who 14 was swearing out the complaint had not actually seen 15 the firearm in question. The agents who had seized 16 it identified it as a machine gun but had not had an 17 opportunity to test it. And so in an abundance of 18 caution, in the event that maybe it was semiautomatic 19 as opposed to a machine gun, a fully automatic 20 machine gun, I characterized it as a weapon that 21 was--that appeared to be a machine gun. . . .

22 Your Honor, I understand from both agents that 23 they have since confirmed that the gun is a MAC 11
24 and that is a fully automatic firearm.

25 (May 5 Tr. 20-21.)

26 After hearing additional argument, Judge McKenna stated 27 that he viewed it as an extremely close case but concluded that 28 the detention orders should not be disturbed. He found that the 29 bail packages proposed by defendants were sufficiently 30 substantial to ensure "that these defendants would be available 31 when needed in court." (Id. at 33.) However, he found that, in

1 light of the gun found in the stash house, defendants posed a
2 danger to the community. The court felt there was little or no
3 danger of continued drug selling. I have the feeling
4 that the bail packages would deal with that. Home 5 confinement would deal with that. Maybe the 6 recognition that to be caught doing even tiniest bit 7 of drug dealing while you're under an indictment 8 with a multi[-]kilo case might not be the smartest 9 thing in the world to do, it might end up in front of 10 the jury with the rest of it, would probably prevent 11 that.

12 Now my experience is that most people arrested 13 and on bail for drug offenses do not, while they're 14 on bail pending trial, continue dealing drugs. . . .

15

16 The gun is the problem, in my view. From the 17 gun you can certainly draw an inference of, somebody 18 who possess[es] a gun--and I haven't heard anybody 19 suggest this gun was legally possessed or it was a 20 licensed weapon--you can always infer that the 21 person who possesses a gun is prepared to use it for 22 his benefit. I am aware that from many many many 23 many cases that in the narcotics trade, the context, 24 the guns are typically possessed not with a view to 25 harm to the general public, but with a view to 26 protection against other drug dealers or people who 27 are in the trade of robbing drug dealers, which is 28 not an uncommon situation.

29 However, a gun is a gun. A machine gun is a 30 machine gun. There are witnesses out there. And I'm 31 going to deny bail for the sole reason of the gun. I 32 want to make that record clear if somebody wants to 33 appeal. It's if the gun had not been found in the 34 closet, I would accept these bail packages and these 35 defendants would have been released on bail on the 36 basis of those packages.

37 (May 5 Tr. 33-35 (emphases added).)

38 Thereafter, the government, by letter dated May 14, 2010
39 ("Government May 14 Letter"), relayed to defendants, inter alia, a 40 laboratory report dated May 12, 2010, from the Firearm Analysis 41 Section ("FAS") of the New York Police Department with respect to

1 the operability of the gun found in the stash house ("NYPD Lab.
2 Report"). The report, characterizing the gun as a semiautomatic 3 pistol, stated in pertinent part that the weapon had

4 been tested and is not operable; pistol received 5 without hammer pin, hammer pin retainer, and sear
6 spring holder Unable to test fire, parts
7 unavailable in FAS Pistol has the following 8 assault weapon characteristics: threaded barrel,
9 copy of a SWD M-10 type pistol. Pistol also received 10 with a barrel extender (wrapped in black tape) which 11 does attach to the threaded barrel (overall length 12 attached is 20 7/8").

13 (NYPD Lab. Report.) The government's accompanying letter stated 14 that "certain characteristics of the firearm" found in the stash 15 house thus "differ from the Government's understanding of those 16 characteristics at the time of the bail hearing in this case on 17 May 5, 2010." (Government May 14 Letter at 1-2.)

18 On May 16, defendants asked Judge McKenna to reconsider 19 his gun-based denial of their bail motions "in light of dramatic 20 new evidence" that the weapon in question was not a machine gun 21 and was inoperable. (Letter from Richard B. Lind to Judge McKenna 22 dated May 16, 2010, at 1.) On May 18, English and Anderson, along 23 with Johnson, were indicted and charged with conspiring to possess 24 five kilograms and more of cocaine with intent to distribute, in 25 violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 846, 841(a)(1), and 841(b)(1)(A); using 26 and carrying a firearm during and in relation to a drug-27 trafficking crime, and possessing a firearm in furtherance of such 28 a crime, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 924(c)(1)(A)(i) and 2; and 29 being felons in possession of a firearm, in violation of 18 U.S.C.
30 § 922(g)(1). The case was assigned to Judge McMahon. On May 20,

1 Judge McKenna referred the reconsideration motions to Judge
2 McMahon.

3 B. The Proceedings Before Judge McMahon

4 At the initial pretrial status conference before Judge
5 McMahon, the AUSA informed the court of the nature of the charges 6 and stated that the amount of cocaine involved was "approximately 7 27 kilograms." (Joint Hearing Transcript, June 9, 2010 ("June 9 8 Tr."), at 2.) English and Anderson asked the court to schedule a 9 bail hearing. After discussing possible dates for such a hearing, 10 and determining that defendants had already been denied bail by 11 the magistrate judge and Judge McKenna, Judge McMahon said "I must 12 tell you in a 27-kilo case I don't think I've ever let anybody
13 out. You're free to come and make your pitch" (id. at 5).

14 On July 20 and 28, the court held bail hearings for 15 Anderson and English, respectively. At Anderson's hearing (see 16 Hearing Transcript, July 20, 2010 ("Anderson Tr.")), his attorney 17 emphasized the new information as to the nature and inoperability 18 of the gun, arguing that both the magistrate judge and Judge 19 McKenna had denied bail on the basis of the government's 20 representation that Anderson had in his closet a machine gun and a 21 silencer. Judge McMahon stated that she could not review the 22 order entered by Judge McKenna, stating "You're starting over 23 with me." (Anderson Tr. 3.) However, Judge McMahon told 24 Anderson's attorney to "forget about the gun. I'm not going to 25 take the gun into account. I'm going to ignore it." (Id.)

1 After hearing argument, Judge McMahon denied Anderson's 2 application for bail. The court noted that, with respect to the 3 crimes charged in the indictment, there is a statutory presumption 4 against bail, and it concluded that the presumption "hasn't been 5 rebutted in this case." (Id. at 18.) The court found that 6 Anderson posed both a danger to the community and, notwithstanding 7 his "incredibly strong" proposed bail package (id.), a risk of 8 flight:

9 The nature and the circumstances of the crime 10 . . . auger against bail. The fact that the 11 defendant is facing a 20[-]year mandatory minimum 12 sentence gives him a tremendous incentive to flee and 13 augers against granting bail. The weight of the 14 evidence against the defendant is a factor that is to 15 be taken into consideration. Defense counsel 16 suggested it is not an important factor. As far as 17 this Court is concerned, it is one of the most 18 important factors to consider.

19 The case against the defendant is incredibly 20 strong. The fact that it's a triable case, from a 21 lawyer's perspective, does not mean that it's not a 22 strong case. Even the Court's assessment of the 23 evidence, after seeing thousands upon thousands of 24 these cases, it is a very strong case.

25 The history and characteristics of the 26 defendant, including his family ties, employment, 27 community ties and past conduct cuts both ways. The 28 defendant has a large and incredibly supportive and 29 loving family. He has ties. He's a life[long] 30 resident of Queens. He has ties to the community.
31 He has been engaged in employment. Those are 32 positive factors. He has a history with law 33 enforcement going back to 1995. . . .

34 And so as far as I'm concerned, his prior 35 history, his past conduct cancels out the positive 36 factors, including family ties, employment and 37 community ties.

38 The nature and the seriousness, the danger of 39 the community or to individuals is manifest from the 40 charge. Unlike Judge McKenna, I did not find it at

1 all impossible to believe that someone who is, say,
2 on electronic monitoring could not engage in further 3 sale of narcotics. All you need is a telephone and 4 access to a person or persons who are willing to 5 participate in the crime.

6 (Anderson Tr. 16-18 (emphases added).)

7 At English's detention hearing (see Hearing Transcript, 8 July 28, 2010 ("English Tr.")), his attorney, Richard B. Lind, 9 began by arguing that Judge McMahan could not engage in a de novo 10 consideration of whether to grant bail but could consider only how 11 the new information about the gun affected Judge McKenna's 12 findings, stating that he had sought only "reconsideration of 13 Judge McKenna's order." (Id. at 2.) Lind pointed out that 14 "[w]hen Judge McKenna ordered . . . my client detained, it was 15 based solely on the gun" (id. at 4); "[w]ith regard to the issue 16 of dangerousness, [Judge McKenna] said that the only issue, 17 otherwise he would have given bail, was the issue of [the] gun, 18 that it was a machine gun with a silencer" (id. at 3); and that 19 "[a] couple days later the government said that the so-called 20 machine gun was an inoperable pistol" (id. at 4). Lind stated 21 that he had immediately asked Judge McKenna for reconsideration, 22 but as the case was now before Judge McMahan, following the filing 23 of the indictment, he sought reconsideration of the dangerousness
24 issue from Judge McMahan. (See id. at 5.)

25 Judge McMahan stated that she understood the new 26 information with respect to the gun and that she would not take 27 the gun into account (English Tr. 3); but she would consider the 28 request for bail de novo (see id. at 4). She pointed out that

1 "Judge McKenna and I are Judges of coordinate jurisdiction and I'm 2 not the Court of Appeals." (Id. at 3.) She stated that if 3 English merely wanted reconsideration of Judge McKenna's order he 4 would have to seek it from Judge McKenna; if he wanted review of 5 Judge McKenna's order he would have to go to the Court of Appeals; 6 if he wanted a grant of bail by Judge McMahon, she would consider 7 the request as "a totally new application." (Id. at 3-4.)

8 After hearing argument, Judge McMahon found that English 9 presented both a flight risk and a safety risk, and thus ordered 10 him detained:

11 This is a case in which the evidence is 12 extraordinarily strong. The defendant was arrested 13 with 10 kilograms of cocaine in his possession. His 14 co-conspirators had cars that were equipped for drug 15 dealing and one of them had a weapon indicating that 16 there was the possibility of violence in connection 17 with this particular incident. That, alone, would be 18 enough for me to keep the defendant in. I
19 acknowledge that this defendant has a strong bail 20 package, he has substantial ties to the community;
21 however, he is looking at, I think, a 20-year
22 mandatory minimum. . . .

23 A 20-year mandatory minimum sentence which 24 overcomes virtually any tie to the community and 25 gives him an extraordinary incentive to flee.

26 The defendant's conviction for narcotics in the 27 past is indeed an old conviction but it does not give 28 the Court any comfort that the defendant was in fact 29 convicted and sentenced to 10 years, however long he 30 served for narcotics, and was then later arrested 31 with 10 kilograms of cocaine in his possession and 32 that suggests a strong possibility of recidivism 33 notwithstanding the defendant's strong family ties to 34 the community. The defendant tested positive for 35 drugs[,] which raises the issue of non-appearance.

36 The Court concludes that in all of the 37 circumstances and especially given the strength of 38 the government's case and the mandatory minimum 39 sentence which the defendant is facing, that there

1 § 3142(e)(1). "The facts the judicial officer uses to support a 2 finding pursuant to subsection (e) that no condition or 3 combination of conditions will reasonably assure the safety of any 4 other person and the community shall be supported by clear and 5 convincing evidence." Id. § 3142(f)(2). In a detention order 6 issued under § 3142(e)(1), "the judicial officer shall . . .
7 include written findings of fact and a written statement of the 8 reasons for the detention" Id. § 3142(i)(1).

9 Subsection (e) of § 3142 provides that there is a 10 rebuttable presumption that "no condition or combination of 11 conditions will reasonably assure" against flight or danger where 12 probable cause supports a finding that the person seeking bail 13 committed certain types of offenses, including "an offense for 14 which a maximum term of imprisonment of ten years or more is 15 prescribed in the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et 16 seq.)," 18 U.S.C. § 3142(e)(3)(A), or "an offense under [18 U.S.C.
17 §] 924(c)," id. § 3142(e)(3)(B). "[A]n indictment returned by a 18 duly constituted grand jury conclusively establishes the existence 19 of probable cause for the purpose of triggering the rebuttable 20 presumptions set forth in § 3142(e)." United States v. Contreras, 21 776 F.2d 51, 55 (2d Cir. 1985).

22 Where there is such a presumption, the defendant "bears a 23 limited burden of production--not a burden of persuasion--to rebut 24 that presumption by coming forward with evidence that he does not 25 pose a danger to the community or a risk of flight." United 26 States v. Mercedes, 254 F.3d 433, 436 (2d Cir. 2001). Satisfying

1 the burden of production does not eliminate the presumption 2 favoring detention; it "remains a factor to be considered among 3 those weighed by the district court." Id. At all times, however, 4 "the government retains the ultimate burden of persuasion by clear 5 and convincing evidence that the defendant presents a danger to 6 the community," and "by the lesser standard of a preponderance of 7 the evidence that the defendant presents a risk of flight." Id.

8 Subsection (f) of § 3142 provides that, on motion of the 9 government, a hearing must be held with respect to a detention 10 request in a case that triggers the § 3142(e)(3) presumption, see 11 18 U.S.C. § 3142(f)(1), or in a case that involves "a serious risk 12 that such person will flee," id. § 3142(f)(2)(A). Where the 13 judicial officer perceives a serious risk of flight, a detention 14 hearing may be held "upon the judicial officer's own motion." Id.

15 The factors that the judicial officer must consider "in 16 determining whether there are conditions of release that will 17 reasonably assure the appearance of the person as required and the 18 safety of any other person and the community," include "the nature 19 and circumstances of the offense charged, including whether the 20 offense is a crime of violence," or involves a firearm; "the 21 weight of the evidence against the person"; "the history and 22 characteristics of the person," including his "physical and mental 23 condition, family ties, employment, financial resources, length of 24 residence in the community, community ties, past conduct, history 25 relating to drug or alcohol abuse, criminal history, and record 26 concerning appearance at court proceedings"; and "the nature and

1 seriousness of the danger to any person or the community that 2 would be posed by the person's release." 18 U.S.C. § 3142(g).
3 The same factors are to be considered in determining "whether the 4 presumptions of dangerousness and flight are rebutted." United 5 States v. Mercedes, 254 F.3d at 436.

6 We review a district court's findings as to the accused's 7 risk of flight and potential danger to the community for clear
8 error. See, e.g., United States v. Ferranti, 66 F.3d 540, 542 (2d 9 Cir. 1995) (danger to the community); United States v. Melendez-10 Carrion, 820 F.2d 56, 61 (2d Cir. 1987) (risk of flight). "Where 11 there are two permissible views of the evidence, the factfinder's 12 choice between them cannot be clearly erroneous." Anderson v.
13 Bessemer City, 470 U.S. 564, 574 (1985). We review rulings of law 14 de novo, and "the court's ultimate finding may be subject to 15 plenary review if it rests on a predicate finding which reflects a 16 misperception of a legal rule applicable to the particular factor 17 involved," United States v. Shakur, 817 F.2d 189, 197 (2d Cir.), 18 cert. denied, 484 U.S. 840 (1987).

19 B. The Contention that Judge McMahon Was Barred from Considering 20 Flight Risk

21 Defendants' principal contention on these appeals is that 22 because Judge McKenna had stated that the bail packages proffered 23 by defendants were sufficient to assure against risk of flight, 24 and that he would grant their bail motions were it not for the 25 gun, Judge McMahon was precluded from considering the issue of 26 risk of flight. We reject this contention. A district judge

1 before whom a bail motion is properly made should consider the 2 subsection (g) factors and make the determinations required by 3 § 3142. We see no flawed procedure here.

4 First, Judge McMahon's view that she could not entertain
5 an appeal from the orders entered by Judge McKenna was correct. A 6 judge of "the court having original jurisdiction over the offense" 7 may "[r]eview" a detention order only where the "person [wa]s 8 ordered detained by a magistrate judge, or by a person other than 9 a judge of a court having original jurisdiction over the offense
10 and other than a Federal appellate court." 18 U.S.C. § 3145(b) 11 (emphases added). As both Judge McMahon and Judge McKenna are 12 judges of the court having original jurisdiction over defendants' 13 offenses, neither is authorized to review a detention order issued 14 by the other.

15 Second, the reconsideration motions made to Judge McKenna 16 were properly referred to Judge McMahon. "In a criminal case, 17 after an indictment has been returned by the Grand Jury . . . , 18 the magistrate judge on duty will randomly draw the name of a 19 judge in open court from the criminal wheel, and assign the case
20 to said judge for all purposes thereafter." S.D.N.Y. Local Rule 21 8(a) (emphasis added).

22 Finally, we see nothing in the Bail Reform Act to suggest 23 that a judge to whom a criminal case is assigned for all purposes 24 may not fully consider all of the § 3142(g) factors when presented 25 with a motion for pretrial release. Indeed, as set out above, 26 when such a judge perceives a serious risk that a defendant will

1 flee, he or she is authorized to convene a detention hearing "upon 2 [his or her] own motion." 18 U.S.C. § 3142(f)(2)(A). Implicit in 3 this provision is the concept that the judge in charge of the case 4 is not bound by prior rulings as to risk of flight.

5 Accordingly, we reject defendants' contentions that Judge
6 McMahon was bound by Judge McKenna's view that the bail packages
7 proffered by English and Anderson were sufficient to assure 8 against the risks that they would flee.

9 C. English's Contention that the Writing Requirement Was Not Met

10 We also reject English's contention that his detention 11 order should be vacated because it was not accompanied by written 12 findings, as required by § 3142(i)(1). While we have not, in a 13 published opinion, ruled on the contours of the writing 14 requirement in that section, we have determined that a transcript 15 of the court's findings and reasons will satisfy a writing 16 requirement in the context of a bail revocation proceeding under 17 18 U.S.C. § 3148. See United States v. Davis, 845 F.2d 412 (2d 18 Cir. 1988). Although we noted in Davis that § 3148 is silent as 19 to what a revocation order must contain, we found guidance in 20 § 3142(i)(1). We held that § 3142(i)(1)'s requirement that the 21 court's findings and reasons for ordering detention be stated in 22 writing should be equally applicable to an order revoking release 23 pursuant to § 3148, Davis, 845 F.2d at 415, for "[w]hether an 24 individual is detained without bail pursuant to § 3142 or § 3148, 25 the result is the same," 845 F.2d at 414. A requirement of 1 written findings is generally intended to ensure that the district

2 court's reasons for its decision are sufficiently clear to permit 3 meaningful appellate review, and in remanding for such findings in 4 Davis we stated that "the district court's findings and its 5 reasons for revocation and detention . . . may be embodied in a 6 transcript of the proceedings," id. at 415. Cf. United States v.
7 Barth, 899 F.2d 199, 201 (2d Cir. 1990) (transcript satisfies a 8 probationer's due process entitlement to "'a written statement by 9 the factfinder as to the evidence relied on and the reasons for 10 revoking probation'" (quoting Black v. Romano, 471 U.S. 606, 612
11 (1985))), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1083 (1991).

12 Here, as in Davis, we see no meaningful distinction 13 between detention orders and bail revocation orders insofar as the 14 need for written findings is concerned. And we conclude, in 15 accord with Davis, that where the court's findings and reasons for 16 issuing a detention order are clearly set out in the written 17 transcript of the hearing, the requirement of a writing is 18 satisfied. The transcripts in the present case met this standard.

19 D. The Alleged Bias

20 Defendants' contention that Judge McMahon was 21 "predisposed" to deny their bail motions is based principally on 22 the judge's statement at the June 9 status conference that "I must 23 tell you in a 27-kilo case I don't think I've ever let anybody
24 out" (June 9 Tr. 5). In considering a claim of judicial bias, we 25 review the court's comments and rulings in the context of the

1 record as a whole, see, e.g., United States v. Rosa, 11 F.3d 315, 2 343 (2d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1042 (1994); and even 3 "expressions of impatience, dissatisfaction, annoyance, and even 4 anger" would not establish bias or partiality, Liteky v. United 5 States, 510 U.S. 540, 555-56 (1994).

6 We see no basis in the above-quoted statement or any other 7 statement by Judge McMahon, whether viewed singly or in 8 combination, for an inference that she held any impermissible
9 bias. Rather, the record shows that when English and Anderson 10 requested a bail hearing, she immediately sought to schedule it.
11 A separate hearing was eventually held for each defendant. At 12 each hearing, addressing the point that the after-acquired 13 laboratory evidence revealed that what had been found in the stash 14 house were not a machine gun and a silencer, as had been 15 represented in opposition to the prior bail motions, Judge McMahon 16 promptly stated that she would not consider the gun. Neither 17 defendant has called to our attention any defense argument that 18 was not considered. Judge McMahon reviewed the bail packages 19 proffered by English and Anderson and noted that they were, 20 respectively, "extraordinarily strong" (English Tr. 14) and 21 "incredibly strong" (Anderson Tr. 18). Judge McMahon simply 22 concluded, as she was entitled to do, that other factors 23 outweighed the proffered bail packages in the analysis of flight 24 risk and community safety. Her reasons were explicitly tied to 25 the facts before the court and were fully explained on the record.
26 The record does not support defendants' claims of bias.

1 E. The Merits

2 Finally, as to the merits, neither defendant makes any 3 concrete argument as to error in the district court's findings, 4 and we see no basis on which to overturn them. Both English and 5 Anderson are charged with offenses under 18 U.S.C. § 924(c); that 6 charge triggers the § 3142(e) presumption against bail. Both are 7 charged with drug-trafficking conspiracy in violation of 21 U.S.C.
8 § 846 which, in light of their prior felony convictions, exposes 9 them to mandatory minimum prison terms of 20 years; that charge 10 too triggers the presumption against bail, and the case against 11 each defendant seems quite strong.

12 As set out in greater detail in Part I.B. above, Judge 13 McMahon considered the § 3142(g) factors--summarized in Part II.A.
14 above--that were relevant to each defendant. Although Judge 15 McMahon's findings were more extensive with respect to risk of 16 flight than to danger to the community, both concerns are 17 reflected in her findings. With respect to Anderson, she noted 18 that "the danger of the community or to individuals is manifest 19 from the charge," and that the proposal for electronic monitoring 20 did not eliminate the danger that he would "engage in further sale 21 of narcotics" by telephone with a willing collaborator. (Anderson 22 Tr. 18.) As to English, Judge McMahon pointed out that he and his 23 codefendants were equipped for drug dealing and violence; she 24 stated that "that, alone, would be enough for me to keep [English] 25 in" (English Tr. 13); and she found that his record suggested a

1 "strong possibility of recidivism" (id.)--plainly a reference to 2 the danger of continued narcotics trafficking, not to the risk of 3 flight.

4 We conclude that Judge McMahon's findings were amply 5 supported by the evidence and that her orders of detention were 6 proper substantially for the reasons stated on the record.

7 CONCLUSION

8 We have considered all of defendants' contentions in 9 support of their appeals and of their motions to have this Court 10 grant them release on bail, and we have found them to be without 11 merit. The orders of the district court are affirmed. The bail 12 motions are denied.
