40 Appeal from an Order of the United States District Court for the Southern District of 41 New York (Richard J. Holwell, Judge) granting declaratory and injunctive relief in favor of class
42 plaintiffs, who are applicants for, or recipients of, certain Medicaid services. The District Court
43 permanently enjoined defendants to ensure that—in accordance with the Medicaid Act and an 44 applicable federal regulation—“final administrative action” is taken within 90 days of plaintiffs’

requests for Medicaid fair hearings. The District Court declared “final administrative action” to include the holding of fair hearings, the issuance of fair hearing decisions, and the implementation of relief ordered in such decisions. We hold that plaintiffs’ statutory right to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings, as construed by the regulation, is enforceable through 42 U.S.C. § 1983. But we also hold that the District Court’s injunctive order is overbroad because “final administrative action” does not include the implementation of relief ordered in fair hearing decisions. Accordingly, we AFFIRM in part and VACATE in part the Order of the District Court, and we REMAND for proceedings consistent with this opinion.

STRAUB, Circuit Judge:

Defendants-Appellants, commissioners of the New York State Office of Temporary and Disability Assistance and of the New York State Department of Health, appeal from an Order entered in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York (Richard J. Howell, Judge) granting declaratory and injunctive relief against them and in favor of Plaintiffs-Appellees, who are applicants for, or recipients of, Medicaid home health services who are not solely challenging any decision regarding Medicaid eligibility.

Plaintiffs allege that they have a statutory right, enforceable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings. Plaintiffs further allege that this right, as construed by an applicable federal regulation, entitles them to “final administrative action” within 90 days of their fair hearing requests, and that Defendants violated this right.

1 The District Court agreed. It declared that “final administrative action” includes the
 2 holding of Medicaid fair hearings, the issuance of fair hearing decisions, and the implementation
 3 of any relief ordered in those decisions. And it permanently enjoined Defendants to ensure that
 4 “final administrative action”—so defined—is implemented within 90 days of Plaintiffs’ fair
 5 hearing requests.

6 We AFFIRM in part the Order of the District Court, because we conclude that Plaintiffs
 7 have a right to a Medicaid hearing and decision ordinarily within 90 days of their fair hearing
 8 requests, and that such right is enforceable under § 1983. But we also conclude that the District
 9 Court’s permanent injunction is overbroad because “final administrative action” refers not to the 10 implementation of relief ordered in fair hearing decisions, but to the holding of fair hearings and 11 to the issuance of fair hearing decisions. Accordingly, we VACATE in part the Order of the 12 District Court, and we REMAND the matter for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

13 BACKGROUND

14 I. Overview of Medicaid and the Fair Hearing System.

15 A. Medicaid.

16 “Medicaid is a cooperative federal-state program through which the Federal Government
 17 provides financial assistance to States so that they may furnish medical care to needy
 18 individuals.” Wilder v. Va. Hosp. Ass’n, 496 U.S. 498, 502 (1990).<sup>1</sup> The federal and state
 19 governments share the cost of Medicaid, but each state government administers its own Medicaid
 20 plan. See Conn. Dep’t of Soc. Servs. v. Leavitt, 428 F.3d 138, 141 (2d Cir. 2005). State
 21 Medicaid plans must, however, comply with applicable federal law and regulations. See 42
 22 U.S.C. § 1396c; 42 C.F.R. § 430.0.

Any state that participates in Medicaid must designate “a single State agency” (“State agency”) to administer—or to supervise the administration of—the state’s Medicaid plan. See 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(5). Although the State agency may delegate to local entities the performance of certain responsibilities, see 42 C.F.R. § 431.10(e), the State agency must (1) “[h]ave methods to keep itself currently informed of the adherence of local [entities] to the State plan provisions and the agency’s procedures for determining eligibility,” and (2) “[t]ake corrective action to ensure their adherence,” 42 C.F.R. § 435.903.

B. The Fair Hearing System.

1. Applicable Federal Law and Regulations.

States that participate in Medicaid must grant “an opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency to any individual whose claim for medical assistance under the plan is denied or is not acted upon with reasonable promptness.” 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3).

Section 431.244 of Title 42 of the Code of Federal Regulations—entitled “Hearing decisions”—provides that the State agency “must take final administrative action . . . [o]rdinarily, within 90 days” of the date a fair hearing is requested. See 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f)(1)(ii) (“regulation”). The phrase “final administrative action” is not defined in the regulation or in the Medicaid Act.

2. New York’s Fair Hearing System.

In New York, the State agency responsible for administering Medicaid is the New York State Department of Health (“DOH”). See N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 363-a(1).

In accordance with federal law, the DOH has established a Medicaid fair hearing system, which purportedly allows individuals an opportunity to be heard with respect to claims for medical assistance that are “denied or [are] not acted upon with reasonable promptness.” 42

1 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3); see N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 22. The DOH has elected to delegate to the
 2 New York State Office of Temporary and Disability Assistance (“OTDA”) the duty to conduct
 3 Medicaid fair hearings. But the DOH itself remains responsible for “making final administrative 4 determinations and issuing final decisions,” see N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 364(2)(h), and for 5 ensuring the fair hearing system’s compliance with federal law and regulations, see 42 C.F.R.
 6 § 431.205.

7 II. The Instant Matter.

8 A. The Complaint.

9 Plaintiffs in this class action are residents of New York City who applied for or received
 10 Medicaid-funded home health services,<sup>2</sup> and who requested or will request fair hearings to 11 challenge the denial, reduction, or termination of such services.

12 For purposes of this appeal, Plaintiffs allege that DOH and OTDA (collectively, 13 “Defendants”) failed “to take and/or ensure final administrative action within 90 days from the
 14 date [Plaintiffs] request fair hearings challenging the denial, discontinuance and/or reduction of 15 Medicaid home health services” (“90-day claim”). Am. Compl. ¶ 131. According to Plaintiffs,
 16 this conduct violated their statutory right to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings, see 42
 17 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3)—a right which, as construed by the regulation, allegedly entitles Plaintiffs
 18 to “final administrative action . . . [o]rdinarily, within 90 days” from the dates they requested fair
 19 hearings, see 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f)(1)(ii). See id.

20 Plaintiffs claim they may enforce the foregoing statutory right—as construed by the 21 regulation—through an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

<sup>2</sup> “Home health services” is a category of services provided to Medicaid recipients in the home, rather than in a hospital or other facility. See 42 C.F.R. § 440.70.

1 The District Court subsequently issued an Order granting declaratory and injunctive relief
 2 in favor of Plaintiffs. See Order, Shakhnes ex rel. Shakhnes v. Eggleston, No. 06 Civ. 4778,
 3 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 15, 2011), ECF No. 146 (“2011 Order”).

4 In pertinent part, the District Court declared that

5 Final Administrative Action occurs when defendants, separately or collectively,
 6 have scheduled a Fair Hearing, held the Fair Hearing, issued a Decision After 7 Fair Hearing (“DAFH”), and taken all actions necessary to implement the relief
 8 ordered in the DAFH. For cases in which care is ordered by the DAFH, Final 9 Administrative Action occurs on the date on which an aide goes to the 10 Appellant’s home to provide the ordered home health care services.

11
 12 Id. at 2 ¶ 4.

13
 14 The District Court also directed Defendants to ensure that “Final Administrative 15 Action”—as defined above—is provided “within 90 days of . . . [a] request for a Fair Hearing.”

16 Id. at 3 ¶ 7.

17 C. Subsequent Proceedings.

18 Defendants now appeal.

19 First, they argue that the District Court erred by concluding that the regulation “merely 20 flesh[es] out the meaning of” the statutory right to an opportunity for a fair hearing. Def. Mem.
 21 at 22. Defendants contend that because the regulation’s 90-day requirement is an “additional”
 22 obligation “not contained or reasonably implicit in [the Medicaid Act], the regulation cannot be 23 enforced through § 1983.” Id.

24 Second, Defendants argue that the District Court’s injunction is overbroad. Specifically, 25 they argue (1) that “the district court’s construction of the phrase ‘final administrative action’ to 26 include the actual provision of services is wrong as a matter of law,” id. at 21; and (2) that the 27 injunction applies the 90-day requirement to certain hearings “that are outside the express terms 28 of the regulation,” id. at 43.

DISCUSSION

I. Standards of Review.

We review de novo a district court’s legal conclusions made in the context of an order granting summary judgment. See Vera v. Saks & Co., 335 F.3d 109, 116 (2d Cir. 2003) (per curiam).

“We review the scope of a district court’s injunction for abuse of discretion, which can be found if the district court . . . incorrectly applied the law.” Catanzano v. Wing, 103 F.3d 223, 228 (2d Cir. 1996) (citation and quotations omitted).

II. The Right to an Opportunity for a Fair Hearing.

The District Court correctly concluded in its 2010 Order that Plaintiffs’ statutory right to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings—as construed by the regulation—is enforceable through § 1983.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs argue that we lack jurisdiction to consider any aspect of the District Court’s 2010 Order granting partial summary judgment, because Defendants appealed only from the District Court’s 2011 Order granting declaratory and injunctive relief.

Plaintiffs are wrong. In reviewing an order granting a permanent injunction, we “may also address the summary judgment order that served as the district court’s principal legal basis for granting the injunction,” at least where “the district court’s ruling on summary judgment was inextricably intertwined with its ruling granting a permanent injunction.” Law v. NCAA, 134 F.3d 1010, 1015 (10th Cir. 1998); see also SongByrd, Inc. v. Estate of Grossman, 206 F.3d 172, 178 (2d Cir. 2000) (an “appeal from a final judgment brings up for review all reviewable rulings which produced the judgment” (quotations omitted)).

The 2010 Order served as the District Court’s “principal legal basis for granting” declaratory and injunctive relief in the 2011 Order. See Law, 134 F.3d at 1015. Any doubt as to whether the two Orders are “inextricably intertwined” should have been dispelled by the first sentence of the 2011 Order, which states that the District Court granted certain relief “[f]or the reasons set forth in [the 2010 Order].” See 2011 Order at 1.

In short, Defendants’ failure to explicitly state in their Notice of Appeal that they sought to appeal from the 2010 Order does not preclude our review of that Order.

1           A.     Applicable Framework.

2           Section 1983 creates a cause of action against any person who, acting under color of state
3 law, abridges “rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws” of the 4 United States. 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Violations of rights thus give rise to § 1983 actions; mere 5 violations of laws do not. See Gonzaga Univ. v. Doe, 536 U.S. 273, 284-85 (2002). The 6 question, then, is whether an alleged right is enforceable under § 1983.

7                   1.     Source of the Alleged Right.

8           We think it important to underscore the source of the alleged right here at issue.

9           Defendants correctly observe that many of our Sister Courts have held that regulations
10 may not independently create individual rights enforceable under § 1983.<sup>4</sup> But this observation
11 is beside the point, because the District Court did not hold that the regulation here at issue
12 independently creates a right enforceable under § 1983.

13           Instead, the District Court held that Plaintiffs have a statutory right under 42 U.S.C.
14 § 1396a(a)(3) to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings that is enforceable through a cause of 15 action under § 1983. Defendants do not argue that this particular holding was in error.

16                   2.     Determining the Scope of the Alleged Right.

17           Defendants do, however, argue that the District Court misconstrued the scope of 18 Plaintiffs’ statutory right to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings. That is, Defendants argue
19 that the regulation requiring “final administrative action” ordinarily within 90 days of a fair
20 hearing request cannot properly be deemed to “merely flesh out the meaning of” the statutory

1 right to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings. Def. Mem. at 22 (quotations omitted). As a
 2 result—say Defendants—Plaintiffs cannot enforce the statute in conjunction with the regulation.

3 a. Applicable Standard.

4 It is well-settled that, “[a]s an agency interpretation of a statute, a regulation may be
 5 relevant in determining the scope of the right conferred by Congress.” Save Our Valley v. Sound
 6 Transit, 335 F.3d 932, 943 (9th Cir. 2003). The following rubric guides our inquiry in that 7 regard:

8 [S]o long as the statute itself confers a specific right upon the plaintiff, 9 and a valid regulation merely further defines or fleshes out the content of that 10 right, then the statute—in conjunction with the regulation—may create a federal 11 right as further defined by the regulation. . . .

12
 13 On the other hand, if the regulation defines the content of a statutory 14 provision that creates no federal right . . . , or if the regulation goes beyond 15 explicating the specific content of the statutory provision and imposes distinct 16 obligations in order to further the broad objectives underlying the statutory 17 provision, . . . the regulation is too far removed from Congressional intent to 18 constitute a “federal right” enforceable under § 1983.

 20 Harris v. James, 127 F.3d 993, 1009 (11th Cir. 1997) (quotations omitted) (emphasis and 21 formatting added); see also D.D. v. N.Y.C. Bd. of Educ., 465 F.3d 503, 513 (2d Cir. 2006)
 22 (parenthetically quoting Harris).

23 b. Applications of the Standard.

24 A review of the case law in this area proves instructive.

25 * * *

26 We begin with Wright v. City of Roanoke Redevelopment and Housing Authority, 479
 27 U.S. 418 (1987), a decision on which the Eleventh Circuit relied in formulating the rubric we 28 apply here, see Harris, 127 F.3d at 1008-09.

1           The plaintiffs in Wright brought a § 1983 claim alleging that a public housing authority
 2   overbilled them for utilities. According to the plaintiffs, the housing authority's conduct violated
 3   (i) a federal statute, which imposed a rent ceiling based on plaintiffs' incomes, and (ii) the 4   statute's implementing regulations, which required the housing authority to include a reasonable
 5   utility allowance in plaintiffs' rents. See Wright, 479 U.S. at 419-20. In response, the housing
 6   authority argued that neither the statute nor the regulations gave the plaintiffs a right enforceable
 7   through § 1983. See id. at 429-430.

8           The Court rejected this argument. According to the Court, the applicable statute "could 9   not be clearer: . . . tenants could be charged as rent no more and no less than 30 percent of their 10   income." Id. at 430. In addition, the applicable regulations "expressly required that a 11   'reasonable' amount for utilities be included in rent that [the housing authority] was allowed to 12   charge." Id. The Court then observed that the relevant federal agency had "adhered" to the 13   regulations' "interpretation" of the statute, and noted that the agency's "view is entitled to 14   deference." See id. The Court rejected the argument that the regulations' "definition of rent as 15   including a reasonable charge for utilities is not authorized by the statute." Id. at 431 n.11.

16           The Court subsequently described its holding in Wright as follows:

17
 18           [A] statute providing that tenants in low-income housing could only be 19           charged 30% of their income in rent, in conjunction with regulations
 20           providing that "reasonable utilities" costs were included in the rental
 21           figure, created [a] right under § 1983 to not be charged more than a 22           "reasonable" amount for utilities.

23
 24           Suter v. Artist M., 503 U.S. 347, 361 n.13 (1992).

25           We emphasize that "the regulation at issue in Wright merely defined the specific right
 26   that Congress already had conferred through the statute." See S. Camden Citizens in Action v
 27   N.J. Dep't of Env'tl. Prot., 274 F.3d 771, 783 (3d Cir. 2001). In other words, "the Wright Court

1 located the alleged right in the statutory provision and then relied upon the implementing
 2 regulations to define and interpret that right.” Id.; see also Harris, 127 F.3d at 1007-08 (same).

3 * * *

4 Our decision in D.D. v. New York City Board of Education, 465 F.3d 503 (2d Cir. 2006)
 5 provides another example of a regulation deemed to “define” the scope of an extant, statutory 6 right, such that the right—so defined—is enforceable under § 1983.

7 The plaintiffs in D.D. alleged that the New York City Department of Education (“DOE”)
 8 violated their rights under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (“IDEA”). Id. at 506.

9 Pursuant to the IDEA, states must provide disabled students with “free appropriate public
 10 education” designed to serve the students’ needs. Id. “Free appropriate public education” is 11 defined in part as “special education and related services that . . . are provided in conformity with 12 the individualized education program [“IEP”] required under [the IDEA].”<sup>5</sup> Id. at 512
 13 (quotations omitted). The IDEA does not specify a time frame for implementing an IEP after it
 14 has been developed. Id. But the applicable federal regulation requires that the IEP be 15 “implemented as soon as possible” following its development. Id. at 512-13 (quotations 16 omitted) (emphasis added). The plaintiffs in D.D. alleged that the DOE violated the IDEA by 17 failing to implement their IEPs “immediately, or at least within 30 days, after their IEPs [were]
 18 developed.” Id. at 512 & n.11.

19 Citing to Wright, we concluded (i) that the IDEA “creates the right to a free appropriate
 20 public education enforceable through § 1983,” and (ii) that the federal regulation “merely defines 21 the scope of that right with respect to the requisite time frame for implementing an IEP.” Id. at 22 513. We emphasized, however, that the federal regulation “requires only that IEPs be

<sup>5</sup> The IEP “is a written statement that . . . describes the specially designed instruction and services that will enable the child to meet [certain] objectives.” D.D., 465 F.3d at 507-08 (quotations omitted).

1 implemented ‘as soon as possible,’” and not “immediately” or within 30 days, as the plaintiffs
2 had asserted. See id.

3 * * *

4 The Eleventh Circuit’s decision in Harris provides an example of a regulation that “goes 5 beyond explicating the specific content of [a] statutory provision,” such that the underlying 6 statutory right—at least as “defined” by the regulation—could not be enforced under § 1983.
7 See Harris, 127 F.3d at 1009.

8 In Harris, the court considered whether Medicaid recipients have a federal right to 9 transportation to and from Medicaid providers, which right may be enforced in an action under 10 § 1983. Id. at 996. The court answered that question in the negative.

11 As a preliminary matter, the Harris court noted that “the plaintiffs seek to enforce a 12 transportation requirement that appears explicitly not in the Medicaid Act, but in a federal 13 regulation.” Id. at 1005. But the court rejected any suggestion that an enforceable right could be 14 created (i) by a regulation alone, or (ii) by a regulation’s “valid . . . interpretation of a statute that 15 creates some enforceable right.” Id. at 1008. Instead, the court held that the plaintiffs’ purported 16 right would be enforceable under § 1983 only if “the statute itself confers a specific right upon 17 [them], and [the] valid regulation merely further defines or fleshes out the content of that right.”
18 Id. at 1009. Under such circumstances, “the statute—in conjunction with the regulation—
19 [would] create a federal right as further defined by the regulation.” Id. (quotations omitted).

20 The court then examined certain of the statutory provisions which allegedly conferred
21 specific rights on the plaintiffs. See id. at 1010-12. One required state Medicaid plans to provide 22 medical assistance “with reasonable promptness.” Id. at 1005. Another required the plans to 23 provide comparable assistance to different categories of needy individuals. See id. The court

1 assumed that these provisions “create[ ] some federal right.” See id. at 1011 & n.27. And the 2 court further assumed that “the transportation regulation is a valid interpretation of each of these
 3 provisions.” See id. at 1011. But the court nevertheless concluded that the plaintiffs enjoyed no
 4 “federal right to transportation.” Id. The court reasoned as follows:

5 [T]he transportation regulation would be valid not because it
 6 reasonably defines the content of rights created by the statutory
 7 provisions, as did the regulation in Wright, but only because the regulation
 8 furthers the broad objectives underlying each statutory provision.

10 In other words, we do not think that transportation to and from 11 providers is reasonably understood to be part of the content of a [statutory]
 12 right to prompt provision of assistance [or] comparable assistance . . . .
 13 Instead, if the regulation is a valid interpretation of these [statutory]
 14 provisions, it would be because transportation may be a reasonable means 15 of ensuring the prompt provision of assistance [or] comparable assistance .
 16 . . . Such links to Congressional intent may be sufficient to support the 17 validity of a regulation; however, we think they are too tenuous to support
 18 a conclusion that Congress has unambiguously conferred upon Medicaid
 19 recipients a federal right to transportation enforceable under § 1983.
 20

21 Id. at 1011-12 (first emphasis and formatting added).

22 B. Analysis.

23 The District Court correctly held that 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3)—as construed by the 24 regulation—creates a right, enforceable under § 1983, to receive a fair hearing and a fair hearing
 25 decision “[o]rdinarily, within 90 days” of a fair hearing request.

26 1. Fair Hearings.

27 We conclude that the regulation’s 90-day requirement “merely further defines or fleshes
 28 out the content” of the right to “an opportunity” for Medicaid fair hearings, such that Plaintiffs 29 have a right—enforceable under § 1983—to final administrative action “[o]rdinarily, within 90
 30 days” of their request, see 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f).

31 * * *

1 As discussed, the regulation here at issue says Defendants must take “final
 2 administrative action . . . [o]rdinarily, within 90 days” of the date a fair hearing is requested. See
 3 id. § 431.244(f)(1)(ii). Defendants strenuously argue that “final administrative action” refers to
 4 the issuance of decisions after fair hearings.<sup>6</sup> Defendants’ argument makes sense; the regulation
 5 is, after all, entitled “Hearing decisions.” See id. § 431.244. If the regulation calls for the 6 issuance of a decision after a fair hearing “[o]rdinarily, within 90 days” of the date the fair
 7 hearing was requested, the regulation necessarily also calls for the hearing itself to be held within 8 that time frame.

9 But does this aspect of the regulation merely further define or flesh out the content of the 10 statutory right to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings? We conclude it does. And we think 11 our decision in D.D. leaves no room to conclude otherwise.

12 The statute at issue in D.D.—the IDEA—did not specify a time frame for implementing 13 the statutory right to a free appropriate public education. The regulation at issue in D.D.,
 14 however, required that IEPs be implemented “as soon as possible” following their development.
 15 We concluded that this regulation “merely defines the scope” of the statutory right to a free
 16 appropriate public education “with respect to the requisite time frame for implementing” that 17 right. See D.D., 465 F.3d at 513.

18 Similarly, the Medicaid Act does not specify a time frame within which Defendants must 19 provide Plaintiffs with Medicaid fair hearings; the relevant statutory provision says only that

<sup>6</sup> See Def. Mem. at 30 (“[T]he ninety-day time frame of 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f) applies to the adjudication of fair hearings.”); id. at 35 (“[T]he term ‘final administrative action’ refers . . . to the issuance of a final administrative decision by the state agency that is subject to judicial review.”); id. at 37 (“[T]he plain text of the regulation governs hearing decisions.”); id. (“[T]he term ‘final administrative action’ is most reasonably read to mean a final and definitive decision after fair hearing by the state agency.”); id. at 41 (noting that the relevant federal agency has “repeatedly described the ninety-day time limit in § 431.244(f) as a deadline for issuance of a final hearing decision”).

Defendants must grant “an opportunity” for such hearings to individuals whose claims for medical assistance have not been decided with reasonable promptness. See 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3). Just as the regulation in D.D. “merely define[d]” the time frame for implementing the right to a free appropriate public education, the 90-day requirement in the regulation here at issue “merely defines” the time frame with respect to Plaintiffs’ right to an “opportunity” for Medicaid fair hearings.<sup>7</sup> Or, as the District Court reasoned, the right to an opportunity for a fair hearing includes the right to a fair hearing within some period of time, and the regulation’s 90-day requirement simply defines what that period of time is.

We find no merit in Defendants’ contention that D.D. is inapposite to the instant matter.

Defendants argue that, unlike the regulation at issue in D.D., the regulation at issue here imposes specific temporal guidelines and thus affords Plaintiffs greater relief than they could obtain under the Medicaid Act itself. Specifically, Defendants contend that, in D.D., we “construed the regulation’s ‘as soon as possible’ language as by design, a flexible requirement, and stressed that the regulation did not impose a rigid, outside time frame for implementation, but rather permitted specific inquiry into the causes of the delay in the particular case.” Def. Mem. at 29 (quotations omitted). By contrast—Defendants argue—the regulation at issue in the instant matter “imposes a rigid, outside time frame for final administrative action . . . , and does not permit specific inquiry into the causes of the delay on a case-by-case basis.” Id. at 30 (quotations omitted).

<sup>7</sup> Cf. Doe v. Chiles, 136 F.3d 709, 717 (11th Cir. 1998) (statutory right to medical assistance “with reasonable promptness” was deemed to be “fleshed out” by corresponding regulations, which required (a) that medical aid be furnished “without any delay caused by the agency’s administrative procedures,” and (b) that eligibility determinations be made within 90 days for disability-based applications and within 45 days for all others).

1 Contrary to Defendants' reading of D.D., we did not hold in that case that a regulation
2 may be deemed to "further define[ ]" or "flesh[ ] out the content" of a statutory right only if the
3 regulation imposes "flexible" requirements. Rather, our discussion in D.D. of the "flexible"
4 nature of the language in the regulation there at issue came in response to an argument made by
5 the plaintiffs: According to the plaintiffs, the regulation in D.D. required that their statutory right
6 to a free appropriate public education be implemented either "immediately," or "within 30 days."
7 See D.D., 465 F.3d at 513. We rejected that argument based on our review of certain rulemaking
8 "commentary." We observed that the Secretary of Education had explicitly declined to adopt "a 9 rigid, outside time frame for implementation." See id. at 514. This observation does not,
10 however, signify that a regulation's "rigid" temporal guideline may never "further define[ ]" or 11 "flesh[ ] out the content" of an underlying statutory right.

12 * * *

13 Finally, we note that the statute and regulation at issue here stand in contrast to those that 14 were at issue in Harris. The regulation in Harris required that the plaintiffs be given
15 transportation to and from Medicaid providers. Harris, 127 F.3d at 996. Such a requirement
16 could not "reasonably [be] understood to be part of the content of," for example, a statutory right 17 to receive medical assistance with reasonable promptness; the regulation thus did not merely 18 define the content of that underlying right. See id. at 1012. By contrast, the 90-day requirement
19 in the regulation at issue here may reasonably be understood to be part of the content of the right
20 to an opportunity for Medicaid fair hearings; the regulation merely defines the scope of that right
21 with respect to the time frame in which the right must be provided. See D.D., 465 F.3d at 513.

2. Fair Hearing Decisions.

We further conclude that the right to an opportunity for Medicaid “fair hearings” includes a right to a decision following such hearings. That being so, we have little difficulty concluding that the regulation’s 90-day requirement “merely further defines or fleshes out the content of that right.” See Harris, 127 F.3d at 1009.

* * *

The Medicaid Act does not define the contours of “a fair hearing” for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3). But the applicable federal regulation says that the Medicaid “hearing system must meet the due process standards set forth in Goldberg v. Kelly, 397 U.S. 254 (1970).” See 42 C.F.R. § 431.205(d).

The due process standards set forth in Goldberg entitle Plaintiffs to decisions following their Medicaid fair hearings. For one, Goldberg says that “the decisionmaker’s conclusion . . . must rest solely on the legal rules and evidence adduced at the hearing,” and that “the decision maker should state the reasons for his determination and indicate the evidence he relied on.” Goldberg, 397 U.S. at 271 (emphasis added). In addition, the Goldberg Court emphasized that “an impartial decision maker is essential.” Id. We see little reason why this would be so unless the right to a fair hearing includes the right to a decision.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>8</sup> See, e.g., Morgan v. United States, 304 U.S. 1, 18-19 (1938) (“Those who are brought into contest with the Government in a quasijudicial proceeding . . . are entitled . . . to be heard upon its proposals before it issues its final command.” (emphasis added)); Grossmuller v. Int’l Union, United Auto., Aerospace & Agric. Implement Workers of Am., 715 F.2d 853, 858 n.5 (3d Cir. 1983) (“[T]he persistent core requirements of review intended to be full and fair include . . . having the decision-maker consider the evidence presented by both parties prior to reaching and rendering his decision.” (emphasis added) (citing Morgan)); Billington v. Underwood, 613 F.2d 91, 95 (5th Cir. 1980) (per curiam) (“The very notion of a hearing, however informal, connotes that the decision maker will listen to the arguments of both sides before basing a decision on the evidence and legal rules adduced at the hearing.” (emphasis added)); Whitfield v. Hanges, 222 F. 745, 749 (8th Cir. 1915) (“Indispensable requisites of a fair hearing . . . are that . . . the decision shall be governed by and based upon the evidence at the hearing, and that only; and that the

1 In light of the foregoing, we conclude that the statutory right to an opportunity for a “fair
 2 hearing” includes the right to a decision. Implicit in the right to a decision is that the decision
 3 must be issued within some period of time. The regulation—which, Defendants concede, 4 encompasses the issuance of fair hearing decisions—says what that period of time is.
 5 Accordingly, we hold that the regulation merely defines or fleshes out Plaintiffs’ fair hearing
 6 right, which is enforceable under § 1983. See D.D., 465 F.3d at 513.

7 III. Scope of the Injunction.

8 Although the District Court correctly held that the statutory right to an opportunity for 9 Medicaid fair hearings—as construed by the regulation—is enforceable under § 1983, the 10 District Court exceeded the bounds of its allowable discretion by granting an impermissibly
 11 broad injunction.<sup>9</sup>

12 An injunction is overbroad when it restrains defendants from engaging in legal conduct.
 13 See City of N.Y. v. Mickalis Pawn Shop, LLC, 645 F.3d 114, 145 (2d Cir. 2011).

14 The injunction here at issue is thus overbroad because it compels Defendants to 15 implement the relief ordered in a fair hearing decision within the regulation’s 90-day time frame,
 16 despite the fact that the regulation imposes on Defendants no such obligation.

decision shall not be without substantial evidence taken at the hearing to support it.”); see also Slaney v. Int’l Amateur Athletic Fed’n, 244 F.3d 580, 592 (7th Cir. 2001) (“A fundamentally fair hearing is one that meets the minimal requirements of fairness—adequate notice, a hearing on the evidence, and an impartial decision by the arbitrator.” (quotations omitted) (emphasis added)).

<sup>9</sup> Defendants’ arguments as to the scope of the injunction are advanced for the first time on appeal. We nevertheless exercise our discretion to consider these arguments, because (a) they raise pure issues of law, see, e.g., Dean v. Blumenthal, 577 F.3d 60, 67 n.6 (2d Cir. 2009); Vintero Corp. v. Corporacion Venezolana de Fomento, 675 F.2d 513, 515 (2d Cir. 1982) (per curiam); and (b) doing so is “necessary to remedy [the] obvious injustice,” Greene v. United States, 13 F.3d 577, 586 (2d Cir. 1994), that would result if Defendants were forced to comply with an impermissible injunction.

1 Defendants also contend that the injunction is overbroad because it applies the
2 regulation's 90-day requirement to persons who are not enrollees in Medicaid managed care
3 organizations. We disagree.

4 A. “Final Administrative Action” Does Not Include the Implementation of Relief.

5 In its 2011 Order, the District Court enjoined Defendants to provide “final administrative 6 action” within 90 days of a request for a Medicaid fair hearing. According to the District Court,
7 “[f]inal [a]dministrative [a]ction occurs when [D]efendants . . . have . . . taken all actions
8 necessary to implement the relief ordered” in decisions after fair hearings. 2011 Order at 2 ¶ 4
9 (emphasis added).

10 We do not agree with the District Court's construction of “final administrative action.”
11 That phrase is not defined in the Medicaid Act or in the applicable regulations. But the structure, 12 text, and drafting history of the applicable regulations, together with a review of administrative 13 law principles and other statutory and regulatory provisions, convince us that “final 14 administrative action” does not include the implementation of relief ordered in fair hearing
15 decisions. Accordingly, although we have previously acknowledged that the statutory right to 16 Medicaid fair hearings under 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3) “must include within it the right to 17 effective redress,” Catanzano, 103 F.3d at 229, that right—at least in conjunction with the 18 regulation here at issue—does not require Defendants to implement the relief ordered in fair
19 hearing decisions within the regulation's 90-day time frame. The District Court's injunction is 20 thus overbroad. Cf. Mickalis Pawn Shop, 645 F.3d at 145.

1                   I. Structure, Text, and Drafting History.

2                   The structure and text of the applicable regulations lead us to conclude that “final
3 administrative action” refers to the holding of fair hearings and to the issuance of fair hearing
4 decisions, rather than to the implementation of relief ordered in those decisions.

5                   As a preliminary matter, the regulation appears under a subpart entitled “Fair Hearings
6 For Applicants and Recipients.” The regulation itself is entitled “Hearing decisions.” See 42
7 C.F.R. § 431.244 (emphasis added). It sets forth the required elements of fair hearing
8 decisions,<sup>10</sup> and it states that such decisions “must be based exclusively on evidence introduced 9 at the hearing,” id. § 431.244(a). Subsection (f) of § 431.244—the subsection at issue here—
10 appears between two subsections which relate exclusively to the issuance of decisions after fair
11 hearings: Section 431.244(e) details the requisite elements of a decision following a de novo
12 hearing; Section 431.244(g) states that the public must have access to all hearing decisions.

13                  The subject matter of § 431.244 is thus generally confined to the composition and 14 issuance of decisions after fair hearings. And nothing in the regulation’s text suggests that “final 15 administrative action” encompasses the implementation of relief authorized in such decisions.
16 This makes sense, because a separate regulation, entitled “Corrective action,” covers the 17 implementation of certain types of relief. See 42 C.F.R. § 431.246 (stating that Defendants must 18 provide retroactive benefits and provide for the admission to medical facilities if hearing
19 decisions so require). Indeed, we have observed that “the results of [fair] hearings will be 20 binding on the state” based on the “Corrective action” regulation, rather than on the “Hearing
21 decision” regulation that is at issue here. See Catanzano, 103 F.3d at 228.

<sup>10</sup> See, e.g., 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(d) (stating that, in an evidentiary hearing, the decision must be in writing, and must summarize the facts and identify the regulations supporting the decision); id. § 431.244(e) (stating that, in a de novo hearing, the decision must specify the reasons for the decision, and must identify the supporting evidence and regulations).

* * *

The drafting history of the regulation further demonstrates that the 90-day time frame applies to the issuance of decisions rather than to the implementation of relief.

We begin with 45 C.F.R. § 205.10, the predecessor to 42 C.F.R. § 431.244. Section 205.10 was entitled “Fair hearings.” See Fair Hearings, 35 Fed. Reg. 8448 (May 29, 1970). Subsection (11) of § 205.10 provided that “[p]rompt, definitive and final administrative action will be taken within 60 days from the date of the request for a fair hearing, except where the claimant requests a delay in the hearing.” Id. at 8449. The time frame for “[p]rompt, definitive, and final administrative action” was later extended to 90 days. See Methods for Determination of Eligibility, 38 Fed. Reg. 22,005, 22,008 (Aug. 15, 1973). The relevant agency explained the need for the change as follows: “In view of the difficult position facing States with substantially increased hearing caseloads, the 60-day period is considered insufficient for the orderly processing of cases.” Id. at 22,006 (emphasis added). The agency concluded that “[n]inety days for processing hearings” was “a more realistic time frame.” Id. (emphasis added). And the agency described the change as an “[e]xtension from 60 to 90 days for hearing decisions.” Id. (emphasis omitted).

Later agency commentary similarly referred to the 90-day requirement in § 431.244 as a deadline for the issuance of hearing decisions. See, e.g., Medicaid Program; Medicaid Managed Care: New Provisions, 67 Fed. Reg. 41,989, 41,060 (June 14, 2002) (referencing “the 90-day clock for a fair hearing decision” (emphasis added)); id. (“[T]he State is required to resolve the State fair hearing within 90 days.” (emphasis added)); id. at 41,064 (referencing “the overall 90-day timeframe for a final fair hearing decision” (emphasis added)); id. at 41,076 (referencing “the 90-day timeframe for resolution of the State fair hearing” (emphasis added)).

1 The agency's commentary with respect to § 431.244(f)(2) and (3) is particularly
 2 revealing. These provisions once required that "final administrative action" be taken within "72
 3 hours" for certain cases necessitating expedited review. See 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f)(2), (3)
 4 (2001). The agency described this requirement as follows: "States must conduct a State fair
 5 hearing and issue a final decision on these cases . . . no later than 72 hours from receipt of the 6 appeal." Medicaid Program; Medicaid Managed Care, 66 Fed. Reg. 6228, 6338 (Jan. 19, 2001)
 7 (emphasis added).

8 The provisions were later amended, such that "final administrative action" for expedited
 9 cases was required "within 3 working days" of certain triggering events. See 42 C.F.R.
 10 § 431.244(f)(2), (3) (2002). In explaining this amendment, the agency noted that "commenters
 11 recommended that the State Medicaid agency be permitted 3 working days to hear expedited
 12 appeals that they receive, rather than 72 hours." 67 Fed. Reg. at 41,062 (emphasis added). The 13 agency "agree[d]," and noted that the amended regulation "now requires the State to conduct a 14 fair hearing and make its decision within 3 working days." Id. (emphasis added).

15 If taking "final administrative action" "within 3 working days" means that the State is 16 required to implement relief in that time frame, the agency made no mention of it.

17 2. The State Medicaid Manual.

18 The State Medicaid Manual ("Manual"), to which we owe deference,<sup>11</sup> further indicates 19 that "final administrative action" refers not to the implementation of relief, but to the issuance of 20 fair hearing decisions.

<sup>11</sup> See, e.g., Sai Kwan Wong v. Doar, 571 F.3d 247, 258-60 (2d Cir. 2009); see also id. at 253 n.6 (noting that the Manual "makes available to all State Medicaid agencies . . . informational and procedural material needed by the States to administer the Medicaid program. . . . The manual provides instructions, regulatory citations, and information for implementing provisions of Title XIX of the Social Security Act (the Act). Instructions are official

For one, the Manual says that “[a] conclusive decision in the name of the State agency shall be made by the hearing authority.” Manual § 2903.2(A) (emphasis added). Although the hearing authority may remand the matter to a local hearing officer where “the materials submitted are insufficient to serve as [a] basis for a decision,” the Manual clarifies that such a remand “is not a substitute for definitive and final administrative action.” Id. (emphasis added) (quotations omitted). If “final administrative action” refers to the issuance of a final agency decision, the foregoing clarification is justifiable: It could make sense to clarify that a decision to remand a matter for further consideration does not discharge the obligation to issue a final decision. But if, as Plaintiffs contend, “final administrative action” refers to the implementation of relief, the foregoing clarification would be unnecessary: The decision to remand a matter for further consideration could never constitute the implementation of relief.

In addition, § 2903.3 of the Manual—entitled “State Agency Responsibility In Carrying Out The Hearing Decision”—states that Defendants “are responsible for assuring that the [hearing authority]’s decision is carried out promptly.” Id. § 2903.3(A) (emphasis added). “Promptly” does not, however, necessarily mean “within 90 days” of a request for a hearing. Had the drafters of the Manual wished to use the latter standard in § 2903.3(A), they certainly could have done so; indeed, the Manual recites that standard in the very next subsection, see id. § 2903.3(B).

3. Administrative Law Principles.

Well-settled principles of administrative law further indicate that the phrase “final administrative action” in the regulation here at issue refers to a final determination after a Medicaid fair hearing, rather than to the implementation of relief.

interpretations of the law and regulations, and, as such, are binding on Medicaid State agencies”) (quotations omitted).

Under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 551 et seq., courts may not review agency actions unless such actions are “final.” See, e.g., Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 177 (1997); Fund for Animals, Inc. v. United States BLM, 460 F.3d 13, 18 (D.C. Cir. 2006). An agency action is final if two conditions are met: (1) “the action must mark the ‘consummation’ of the agency’s decisionmaking process—it must not be of a merely tentative or interlocutory nature,” and (2) “the action must be one by which ‘rights or obligations have been determined,’ or from which ‘legal consequences will flow.’” Bennett, 520 U.S. at 177-78 (citation omitted).

Defining “final administrative action” in accordance with the background principles of administrative law makes good sense. Plaintiffs may not obtain judicial review of Medicaid fair hearing decisions until such decisions are “final.” See N.Y. Soc. Serv. L. § 22(9)(b) (“Any aggrieved party . . . may apply for review as provided in [N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 7801].”); N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 7801 (“[A] proceeding under this article shall not be used to challenge a determination . . . which is not final.”). The drafters of 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f) were no doubt aware of the administrative law scheme to which they contributed. We thus cannot discount the possibility that they used the phrase “final administrative action” to signify the final determination of rights or obligations which sets the stage for judicial review in state court.

4. Other Statutory and Regulatory Provisions.

Finally, we note that other statutory and regulatory provisions not at issue in this case explicitly cover the furnishing of Medicaid. Section 1902(a)(8) of the Medicaid Act requires state plans for medical assistance to provide that “medical assistance . . . shall be furnished with reasonable promptness to all eligible individuals.” 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(8). A regulation that implements § 1902(a)(8) directs state agencies to “[f]urnish Medicaid promptly to beneficiaries without any delay caused by the agency’s administrative procedures.” 42 C.F.R. § 435.930(a).

Had the drafters of 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f) wished to require the “furnish[ing]” of Medicaid within the regulation’s 90-day time frame, they clearly knew how to do so.

5. Summary.

In light of the foregoing, we conclude that “final administrative action” in 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f) does not include the implementation of relief ordered in decisions after Medicaid fair hearings. The District Court thus exceeded the bounds of its allowable discretion by enjoining Defendants to “take[ ] all actions necessary to implement the relief ordered” in such decisions within 90 days of Plaintiffs’ fair hearing requests. See 2011 Order at 2 ¶ 4.

B. “Enrollees.”

As discussed, the injunction requires Defendants to ensure that “every New York City applicant for, and recipient of,” Medicaid-funded home health services receive final administrative action within the time frame specified in 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f). See 2011 Order at 3 ¶ 7.

Defendants argue that the injunction is overbroad because it applies the 90-day requirement “to fair hearings that are outside the express terms of the regulation.” Def. Mem. at 43. In particular, Defendants argue that [T]he regulation’s ninety-day time frame, on its face, applies only to fair hearings requested by enrollees in Medicaid [managed care organizations and prepaid inpatient health plans]. Yet the [D]istrict [C]ourt’s injunction applies the ninety-day deadline to all Medicaid applicants’ and recipients’ requests for fair hearing[s] . . . , even if those individuals are not enrollees in Medicaid managed care.

Id.

We reject Defendants’ construction of the regulation. In our view, the regulation applies to all Medicaid “enrollees,” and not just to enrollees in managed care organizations (“MCOs”).

* * *

1 Section 431.244(f), by its terms, applies to “enrollees.” Specifically, the regulation
2 provides that “final administrative action” must be taken

3 [o]rdinarily, within 90 days from the earlier of the following:

5 (i) The date the enrollee filed [a managed care organization or 6 prepaid inpatient health plan appeal], not including the number
7 of days the enrollee took to subsequently file for a State fair
8 hearing; or

10 (ii) If permitted by the State, the date the enrollee filed for direct
11 access to a State fair hearing.

12
13 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f) (emphasis added).

14 What, then, is the intended scope of “enrollees”? The term is not defined in 42 C.F.R.
15 § 431.244. But the regulation’s drafting history, together with a definition provided in a related 16 regulation, convince us that the term must simply refer to persons who are enrolled in the 17 Medicaid program.

18 As originally implemented, the regulation provided that “[t]he agency must take final 19 administrative action within 90 days from the date of the request for a hearing.” See 42 C.F.R.
20 § 431.244(f) (1979); see also Medicaid Program: Redesignation and Rewrite, 44 Fed. Reg.
21 17,926, 17,933 (Mar. 23, 1979). In 2001, the regulation was amended to its current form. See 42
22 C.F.R. § 431.244(f) (2001).

23 The enactment of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (“BBA”), Pub. L. No. 105-33, 111
24 Stat. 251 (1997), led to the 2001 amendment. In brief, when the Medicaid program was 25 originally created, “coverage typically was provided through reimbursements by the State agency
26 to health care providers who submitted claims for payment after they provided health care
27 services to Medicaid beneficiaries.” 67 Fed. Reg. at 40,989. This “fee-for-service” arrangement

1 gradually faded from prominence as State agencies began to provide Medicaid coverage through
2 contracts with MCOs. See id.; see also id. at 40,992.

3 The BBA “significantly renovated the Medicaid managed care program.” Id. at 40,990.

4 In pertinent part, the BBA required MCOs “to establish internal grievance procedures under 5 which Medicaid enrollees . . . may challenge the denial of coverage of, or payment for, medical 6 assistance.” See 42 C.F.R. § 438.400(a)(3) (emphasis added); see also 67 Fed. Reg. at 41,054.

7 An applicable regulation clarified that each MCO “must have a system in place for enrollees that
8 includes a grievance process, an appeal process, and access to the State’s fair hearing system.”
9 42 C.F.R. § 438.402 (emphasis added).

10 It was against this backdrop that the drafters of 42 C.F.R. § 431.244(f) “proposed
11 conforming amendments . . . to reflect changes in terminology and other new provisions enacted
12 in the BBA.” 67 Fed. Reg. at 41,054. In particular, the drafters “made conforming changes to 13 the fair hearing regulations in [§ 431.244], to reflect the MCO grievance and appeals process.”
14 Id. at 41,054-55. Those changes appear in the current version of the regulation, which, by its 15 terms, now explicitly applies only to Medicaid “enrollees.”

16 We find nothing in the foregoing drafting history which suggests that the relevant federal 17 agency intended to strip non-MCO enrollees of their long-standing statutory right to “final
18 administrative action” “[o]rdinarily, within 90 days.” See 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(3); 42 C.F.R. §
19 431.244(f). As noted, the agency itself described the 2001 revision to the regulation as a mere 20 “conforming” amendment. 67 Fed. Reg. at 41,054. Defendants offer no evidence that the 21 agency additionally intended its “conforming” amendment to eviscerate the statutory fair hearing
22 right enjoyed by the millions of people nationwide who are not enrolled in MCOs.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>12</sup> According to government statistics, as of July 2010, approximately 15.6 million people nationwide were enrolled in Medicaid, but were not enrolled in MCOs. See Centers for

1 In addition, we note that another regulation defines the term “enrollee” as encompassing
 2 persons beyond those who are enrolled in MCOs. Part 1003 of Title 42 of the Code of Federal 3 Regulations in part provides for the imposition of civil money penalties against persons who 4 “[s]ubstantially fail to provide an enrollee with required medically necessary items and 5 services.” See 42 C.F.R. § 1003.100(b)(1)(vii) (emphasis added); see also id.
 6 § 1003.103(f)(1)(i). For purposes of Part 1003, “enrollee” is defined broadly as “an individual
 7 who is eligible for . . . Medicaid and who enters into an agreement to receive services from a
 8 contracting organization that contracts with the Department under . . . title XIX of the Act.” 42
 9 C.F.R. § 1003.101.<sup>13</sup> We fail to see why a similarly broad definition of “enrollee” would not 10 apply in the context of the statutory right at issue here. That right, after all, aims to help
 11 individuals secure the provision of Medicaid-funded services to which they are entitled, just as 12 does Part 1003.

13 In light of the foregoing, we conclude that the regulation applies to all Medicaid
 14 “enrollees.” The District Court’s injunction thus is not overbroad on the ground that it covers
 15 such persons. And we note that Defendants do not dispute that the certified class consists only of 16 persons who, at a minimum, are Medicaid “enrollees.”<sup>14</sup>

<sup>13</sup> The same regulation defines “contracting organization” as “a public or private entity . . . which has contracted with the Department or a State to furnish services to . . . Medicaid recipients.” 42 C.F.R. § 1003.101.

<sup>14</sup> As noted, the District Court certified a class of all New York City applicants for, and recipients of, Medicaid-funded home health services, who have requested or will request fair hearings challenging adverse actions regarding their home health services and who are not solely challenging any decision regarding Medicaid eligibility, and

1 IV. Conclusion.

2 We have considered the parties' remaining contentions, and find them to be moot or
3 without merit.

4 To summarize, we hold as follows:

5 (a) Section 1396a(a)(3) of Title 42 of the U.S. Code, as construed by 42 C.F.R.
6 § 431.244(f), creates a right—enforceable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983—to have Medicaid fair
7 hearings held, and fair hearing decisions issued, within the regulation's specified time frame;

8 (b) The District Court's injunction is overbroad because it compels Defendants to 9 implement the relief ordered in fair hearing decisions within the regulation's 90-day time frame,
10 despite the fact that the regulation contemplates no such obligation.

11 On remand, the District Court must craft an order of injunctive relief consistent with this 12 opinion.

13 For the reasons stated above, the Order of the District Court is AFFIRMED in part and 14 VACATED in part, and the case is REMANDED for further proceedings.

who do not receive final administrative action from Defendants within
