HELLO GORGEOUS SALON

On Appeal from the United States District Court

(No. 1-08-cv-06143)
District Judge: Hon. Joseph H. Rodriguez

Submitted Pursuant to Third Circuit L.A.R. 34.1(a)

Before: FUENTES, SLOVITER, and ROTH, Circuit Judges

(Filed: August 31, 2015)

OPINION*

* This disposition is not an opinion of the full Court and pursuant to I.O.P. 5.7 does not constitute binding precedent.

FUENTES, Circuit Judge:

In October 2008, Jeannette Brown, who suffers from various disabilities, visited the Hello Gorgeous Salon. Brown alleges that one of the bathrooms at the salon was not in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (the “Act”), 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq. Specifically, the bathroom did not have a proper sign; the door knob was round rather than at a right angle; the toilet seat did not have grab bars; and there were no emergency lights. Brown sued Hello Gorgeous Salon for violations of the Act and New Jersey law. The District Court granted summary judgment in favor of Hello Gorgeous Salon, holding that Brown lacked standing.¹

Title III of the Act creates a private right of action for persons subjected to disability discrimination.² Besides attorney’s fees, the only remedy available to a private litigant is injunctive relief.³ To establish Article III standing to seek an injunction, a plaintiff must demonstrate a “real or immediate threat that the plaintiff will be wronged again—a likelihood of substantial and immediate irreparable injury.”⁴ A plaintiff’s intention to return to the place she visited “some day”—“without any description of concrete plans”—is insufficient.⁵ Courts have looked to the following four factors to determine whether a plaintiff has demonstrated the requisite likelihood of future injury:

² 42 U.S.C. § 12188(a).

(1) the proximity of the defendant's business to plaintiff's residence; (2) plaintiff's past patronage of defendant's business; (3) the definitiveness of plaintiff's plans to return; and (4) plaintiff's frequency of travel near the defendant's business.⁶ We agree with the District Court that Brown has not established a likelihood of future injury and, therefore, does not have standing. Factors two and three support this conclusion.

As to the second factor, Brown's October 2008 visit to the Hello Gorgeous Salon was her first time there. Courts have found that, "[w]hile a single visit does not preclude a finding of standing, the lack of a history of past patronage seems to negate the possibility of future injury at that particular location."⁷

With respect to the third factor, Brown has not demonstrated any concrete plan to return to the salon. Brown points out that in the years since her first visit, she has, in fact, gone to the salon twice. But these post-complaint trips do not help her because standing is assessed at the time she filed the complaint.⁸ In any case, even if we took these two visits into account, Brown has not put forward any evidence establishing that the bathroom continued to be in violation of the Act. Moreover, Brown argues generally that she would like to return once the barriers are removed. We find this argument tantamount to saying she plans to return “some day”—an argument the Supreme Court has found insufficient to support standing.⁹ Finally, Brown maintains that the Act does not require a disabled person to engage in the “futile gesture” of returning to a building with known barriers.¹⁰ However, she must at least show that Hello Gorgeous Salon has no intention of remedying the barriers and that she would visit the salon in the imminent future but for those barriers.¹¹ Brown has made no such showing.¹²

For these reasons, we affirm the District Court’s order.
