OPINION*

SMITH, Chief Judge.

After his arrest for burglary and related charges, Arthur Chester was held pending trial in the Cape May County Correctional Center. He claims the County and several of its officers violated his constitutional rights by failing to protect him from a fellow inmate whom Chester testified against years before. Yet even with the benefit of discovery, Chester never adduced sufficient evidence supporting his allegations. So the District Court awarded the County and its officers summary judgment in a thorough and well-reasoned opinion. See No. 17-39, 2019 WL 2710651 (D.N.J. July 2, 2019) (noting “[w]here the non-moving party fails to ‘make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party’s case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial,’ the movant is entitled to summary judgment” (quoting Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477
