Submitted Pursuant to Rule 21, Fed. R. App. P.

Before: AMBRO, SHWARTZ and BIBAS, Circuit Judges

(Opinion filed: April 27, 2022)

OPINION*

PER CURIAM

Shaquan Brown is a federal pretrial detainee proceeding pro se and in forma pauperis. On October 7, 2021, a grand jury sitting in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania issued a superseding indictment charging him with several counts of Hobbs Act robbery and firearms violations. At the arraignment, Brown—who was represented by counsel—refused to plead not guilty, and the Court entered a not-guilty plea on his behalf. The District Court docket report reflects that the case is still in its pretrial stages.

In March 2022, Brown filed a petition for a writ of mandamus in this Court. He asserts that the District Court violated his constitutional rights by entering a not-guilty plea on his behalf when he made clear that he wanted to review a pre-sentence investigation report before entering a plea. He asks us to, inter alia, “reverse and remand said ‘not guilty’ plea.” Pet. 1, ECF No. 1-3.

We will deny the petition. “Mandamus provides a drastic remedy that a court should grant only in extraordinary circumstances in response to an act amounting to a judicial usurpation of power.” In re Diet Drugs Prods. Liab. Litig., 418 F.3d 372, 378 (3d Cir. 2005) (internal quotation marks omitted). “Before a writ of mandamus may issue, a party must establish that (1) no other adequate means exist to attain the relief he desires, (2) [his] right to issuance of the writ is clear and indisputable, and (3) the writ is appropriate under the circumstances.” Hollingsworth v. Perry, 558 U.S. 183, 190 (2010) (per curiam) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

Brown has not met this burden. First, given that the District Court was required to enter a non-guilty plea in these circumstances, see Fed. R. Crim. P. 11(a)(4) (“If a defendant refuses to enter a plea . . . , the court must enter a plea of not guilty.”), Brown has not shown that he has a “clear and indisputable right” to issuance of the writ or that the writ is “appropriate under the circumstances.” Second, to the extent that he wishes to change his plea, he can, through his counsel, file a motion to do so at an appropriate time in the District Court. Therefore, he has not demonstrated that “no other adequate means exist to attain the relief he desires.” Hollingsworth, 558 U.S. at 190.

Accordingly, we will deny the petition.
