

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

United States Court of Appeals
Fifth Circuit

FILED

October 26, 2010

---

No. 10-10005
Summary Calendar

---

Lyle W. Cayce
Clerk

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff-Appellee

v.

BELMIN RIVAS PORTILLO, also known as Belmin Oswaldo Rivas,

Defendant-Appellant

---

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas
USDC No. 3:09-CV-219-1

---

Before HIGGINBOTHAM, SMITH, and HAYNES, Circuit Judges

PER CURIAM:*

Belmin Rivas Portillo pleaded guilty of illegal reentry following removal and was sentenced to a 15-month term of imprisonment and to a one-year period of supervised release. Portillo now appeals his sentence, which was at the top of the range recommended by the Sentencing Guidelines.

The district court sentenced Portillo within a properly calculated guideline range, considered the factors enumerated in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), and adequately explained the reasons for its chosen sentence, so Portillo's sentence enjoys a

---

* Pursuant to 5TH CIR. R. 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5TH CIR. R. 47.5.4.

No. 10-10005

presumption of reasonableness. See, e.g., Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38, 51 (2007); United States v. Caldwell, 448 F.3d 287, 290 (5th Cir. 2006). Portillo can rebut that presumption only by making “a showing that the sentence does not account for a factor that should receive significant weight, [] gives significant weight to an irrelevant or improper factor, or [] represents a clear error of judgment in balancing sentencing factors.” United States v. Cooks, 589 F.3d 173, 186 (5th Cir. 2009), cert. denied, 130 S. Ct. 1930 (2010). Making such a showing is no easy feat: “It will be the rare sentence indeed that was required under the Guidelines before Booker but [is] forbidden afterward, when discretion has gone up rather than down.” United States v. Gama-Gonzalez, 469 F.3d 1109, 1110 (7th Cir. 2006) (Easterbrook, J.).

Portillo first argues that the district court imposed his sentence in a manner that “contradicts Gall’s directive to treat each defendant as a unique individual, rather than a mathematical construct.” Nothing in the record supports Portillo’s contention that the district court treated him as a mathematical construct. Gall forbids a court of appeals from using a “rigid mathematical formula” to evaluate a non-Guidelines sentence, see 552 U.S. at 47, or requiring such a sentence to be “supported by a justification that is proportional to the extent of the difference between the advisory range and the sentence imposed,” id. at 45 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). The district court did not calculate Portillo’s sentence in a manner that ran afoul of the Supreme Court’s teachings in Gall.

Portillo next contends that the district court erred in considering his close ties to the United States as an aggravating factor. However, it is not apparent that the district court regarded Portillo’s close ties to this country as an aggravating sentencing factor. The district court concluded that “a sentence at the higher of the Guidelines is appropriate essentially for the reasons stated by the government.” The government’s stated reasons were Portillo’s criminal history, demonstrated lack of respect for the law, and membership in a gang.

No. 10-10005

The district court only discussed Portillo's close ties to the United States in response to a suggestion from defense counsel that those ties weighed in favor of a lesser sentence. "While cultural assimilation may be considered as a mitigating factor, there is no requirement that a sentencing court must accord it dispositive weight." United States v. Lopez-Velasquez, 526 F.3d 804, 807 (5th Cir.) (per curiam) (internal citation omitted), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 625 (2008). Because Portillo has failed to make a showing that the district court gave "significant weight to an irrelevant or improper factor," see Cooks, 589 F.3d at 186 (emphasis added), his sentence is:

AFFIRMED.