PER CURIAM:*

than 1,000 kilograms of marijuana. The district court determined that Perez-Barocela failed to show extraordinary and compelling reasons warranting relief and that the policy statements set forth in the applicable Sentencing Guidelines and the 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factors did not weigh in favor of relief. See § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i).

Perez-Barocela first contends that his preexisting conditions and vulnerability to COVID-19 were extraordinary and compelling circumstances that warranted compassionate release and that the district court should have obtained his medical records or a response from the Government. Second, he argues that a shift in “societal norms and attitudes towards marijuana” constituted an extraordinary and compelling circumstance warranting relief. Finally, Perez-Barocela argues that the district court, in discussing his criminal history as a basis for denying relief based on the § 3553(a) factors, erred in finding that he had charges pending in Florida for cocaine trafficking, when he had actually pleaded guilty to and was convicted of those charges. Perez-Barocela fails to identify a nonfrivolous argument for appeal. See Ward v. United States, 11 F.4th 354, 361 (5th Cir. 2021); United States v. Chambliss, 948 F.3d 691, 693-94 (5th Cir. 2020).

Accordingly, his IFP motion is DENIED, and the appeal is DISMISSED as frivolous. See Baugh v. Taylor, 117 F.3d 197, 202 & n.24 (5th Cir. 1997); Howard v. King, 707 F.2d 215, 220 (5th Cir. 1983); 5TH CIR. R. 42.2.
