a brief arguing that the district court abused its discretion in ordering the revocation sentence to run consecutively to a sentence imposed on a new charge.

We conclude that the district court did not abuse its discretion in imposing a consecutive sentence upon revocation of Thompson's supervised release. See United States v. Valure, 835 F.3d 789, 790-91 (8th Cir. 2016) (standard of review). The court considered the factors listed in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), and did not err in weighing the relevant factors. See United States v. Larison, 432 F.3d 921, 923 (8th Cir. 2006) (revocation sentence may be unreasonable if district court fails to consider relevant § 3553(a) factor, gives significant weight to improper or irrelevant factor, or commits clear error of judgment); see also 18 U.S.C. § 3584 (district court may impose consecutive or concurrent sentences and shall consider § 3553(a) factors). Accordingly, we grant counsel leave to withdraw, and we affirm.
