Profile | Speaking Engagements | News

Scott Mosko focuses his practice on complex intellectual property litigation. With more than 20 years of experience, Mr. Mosko has tried a variety of business and intellectual property cases, most of which have been located in the Northern California courts. He has litigated patent and trade secret cases involving a variety of technologies, including medical devices, semiconductors, telecommunications, and the Internet.

In the Northern District of California, Mr. Mosko has appeared before nearly all of the Article III and magistrate judges. He has argued or participated in Markman hearings in each division—San Francisco, San Jose, and Oakland. He has also argued before the California Supreme Court. His procedural experience includes successfully acquiring seizure orders, both obtaining and opposing preliminary injunctions, and successfully moving for and opposing motions for change of venue. Mr. Mosko has taken and defended hundreds of depositions, and has substantial experience with protective order issues and motions to compel. In addition, he has served as a court-appointed evaluator for settlement purposes.
