Defendants.

DISTRICT: Northern District of California JUDGE: Honorable James Ware

DISTRICT COURT NUMBER: 5:07-CV-01389-JW

DATE NOTICE OF APPEAL FILED: 12/19/08

IS THIS A CROSS-APPEAL? ☒ YES

IF THIS MATTER HAS BEEN BEFORE THIS COURT PREVIOUSLY, PLEASE PROVIDE THE DOCKET NUMBER AND CITATION (IF ANY):
Consolidated Appeals, Nos. 08-16745, 08-16849, 08-16873

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF ACTION AND RESULT BELOW:
The notice of appeal giving rise to this cross appeal relates to the same orders and issues that are currently being briefed in Consolidated Appeals, Nos. 08-16745, 08-16849, 08-16873. The notice of appeal and this cross-appeal should be consolidated with those appeals. In a motion to dismiss, Plaintiffs/Cross-Appellants argued that the notices of appeal that gave rise to Appeal Nos. 08-16745 and 08-16873 were premature. This Court denied the motion without prejudice in an order dated December 12, 2008. Cameron Winklevoss, Tyler Winklevoss and Divya Narendra filed this notice of appeal presumably to avoid an argument that their notice of appeal, filed in August 2008, was premature.

This is a conditional cross-appeal. This Court need not reach the issue presented herein if it affirms the judgment and orders from which the appeal is taken.

When Facebook filed the action under appeal, it named individual defendants. The district court dismissed those defendants for lack of personal jurisdiction. This cross-appeal concerns that order of dismissal.

Since the dismissal, the individual defendants entered a settlement agreement along with ConnectU. In July 2008, the district court found that the individual defendants submitted to the jurisdiction of the district court and that the settlement was binding against ConnectU and those individuals. ConnectU appealed. Case No. 08-16745. The individuals appealed. Ninth Circuit Case No. 08-16873.

If this Court affirms the district court's judgment and order concerning the settlement agreement and the individuals' consent to jurisdiction, this cross-appeal would be moot.

PRINCIPAL ISSUES PROPOSED TO BE RAISED ON APPEAL:
Whether the District Court erred in dismissing Cameron Winklevoss, Tyler Winklevoss, and Divya Narendra for lack of personal jursidiction.

PLEASE IDENTIFY ANY OTHER LEGAL PROCEEDING THAT MAY HAVE A BEARING ON THIS CASE (INCLUDE PENDING DISTRICT COURT POST-JUDGMENT MOTIONS):
Consolidated Appeals, Nos. 08-16745, 08-16849, 08-16873

DOES THIS APPEAL INVOLVE ANY OF THE FOLLOWING:

☐ Possibility of settlement

☐ Likelihood that intervening precedent will control outcome of appeal

☐ Likelihood of a motion to expedite or to stay the appeal, or other procedural matters (specify)

☒ Any other information relevant to the inclusion of this case in the Mediation Program The parties participated in an October 2008 mediation sponsored by this Court. The discussions were unsuccessful.

☐ Possibility parties would stipulate to binding award by Appellate Commissioner in lieu of submission to judges.

Case No. C 07-01389 RS

ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO DISMISS CLAIMS AGAINST DEFENDANTS CAMERON WINKLEVOSS, TYLER WINKLEVOSS, AND DIVYA NARENDRA

I. INTRODUCTION

Defendants Cameron Winklevoss, Tyler Winklevoss, and Divya Narendra move to dismiss the claims against them on grounds that prior to removal of this action to this court, the Santa Clara Superior Court ruled that none of them was subject to personal jurisdiction in California. Defendants contend that ruling precludes plaintiffs relitigating personal jurisdiction here. Plaintiffs Facebook and Mark Zuckerberg (collectively "Facebook"), in turn contend that they have discovered and pleaded new facts that were not before the Superior Court that make reconsideration of jurisdiction appropriate and that support personal jurisdiction over the moving defendants. Although Facebook has discovered additional factual detail and have incorporated numerous allegations bearing on jurisdiction into the amended complaint, it has not shown that the basic facts on which it now relies are any different from those presented to the Superior Court. Accordingly, the Superior Court's decision remains conclusive here, and the motion to dismiss will be granted.

II. BACKGROUND

The general background of this action has been described in prior orders and will not be repeated here. Relevant to this motion is the following: When this action was initiated in Santa Clara Superior Court, the named defendants included Cameron Winklevoss, Tyler Winklevoss, and Divya Narendra. The Winklevosses and Narendra are three founders of defendant ConnectU.[1] They promptly filed a motion to quash service of summons, arguing that they were not subject to personal jurisdiction in California. ConnectU itself did not contest jurisdiction.

Facebook sought and was granted leave to take jurisdictional discovery before the motion to quash was heard. Even prior to the filing of this action, Facebook had been taking discovery from ConnectU in connection with litigation between them pending in the District of Massachusetts. By virtue of the Massachusetts discovery, Facebook was aware before this action was filed that Winston Williams of Pacific Northwest Software ("PNS") had assisted ConnectU in collecting email addresses from the Facebook website and that it had used those addresses with the "social butterfly" software. In the jurisdictional discovery, Facebook learned additional facts regarding PNS's development of an "automated" process for sending emails to addresses found on the Facebook site, as well as facts regarding the individual defendants' prior manual collection of addresses from the site.

[1] There has been significant controversy regarding the role Narendra originally was expected to have and regarding how and when anyone became actual "members" of the ConnectU LLC. Those matters are discussed in a contemporaneously-filed order denying plaintiffs' sanction motion. Regardless of that controversy, the characterization of Narendra as a "founder" appears fair.

In opposing the motion to quash, Facebook cited to and relied on evidence regarding both the manual collection of email addresses and the subsequent automatic processes. For reasons it did not explain, the Superior Court rejected Facebook's arguments and granted the motion to quash.[2]

Facebook subsequently filed an amended complaint in the Superior Court that added certain claims but that omitted the Winklevosses and Narendra as defendants. Based on claims that had been added under federal law, ConnectU then removed the action to this Court and brought a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The Court granted that motion in part, with leave to amend. Facebook then filed a second amended complaint that not only addressed the matters that had been raised by the motion to dismiss, but that also (1) added Mark Zuckerberg as a plaintiff, (2) added certain new individual defendants, and (3) renamed as defendants the Winklevoss brothers and Narendra.

Defendants objected to Facebook adding parties without leave of Court. By order issued June 14, 2007, the Court in effect granted Facebook post hoc leave to add the parties, but without prejudice to any substantive arguments as to why they should not be made parties. The present motion to dismiss followed.

III. DISCUSSION

Although the parties have characterized the legal precedents differently, there is no real conflict in their respective positions, or in the cases they cite, as to the circumstances under which a prior state court jurisdictional determination will be deemed conclusive in a subsequent federal proceeding. Put simply, if a plaintiff can show new and different facts supporting jurisdiction, then the prior determination may be revisited. See Kendall v. Overseas Dev. Corp., 700 F.2d 536, 539 (9th Cir. 1983) ("the dispositive question is whether [plaintiff] pleaded any new facts in the federal litigation that would support a different result on the issue of jurisdiction."). If, however, the facts are those that the prior court found insufficient to support jurisdiction, then "even if wrong, an earlier decision involving the same issue and the same parties, 'is as conclusive as a correct' one." Gupta v. Thai Airways Intern. Ltd., 487 F.3d. 759, 767 (9th Cir. 2007) (quoting MIB, Inc. v. Superior Court, 106 Cal.App.3d 228, 235).

Here, Facebook insists it has discovered and pleaded significant new evidence bearing on personal jurisdiction over the Winklevoss brothers and Narendra. Certainly the second amended complaint appears to have been drafted with an eye to preempting the argument that personal jurisdiction is lacking; the complaint is replete with assertions that defendants acted with intent and knowledge that their activities would have effects in this forum. Nevertheless, Facebook has not shown that any of the evidence on which it now relies is materially different from that it previously presented to the Superior Court. At most, Facebook has now garnered additional details, but the basic conduct it contends is sufficient to give rise to jurisdiction is the same conduct it pointed to in the state court motion to quash proceedings.

As noted, the Superior Court did not explain the basis for its decision, leaving it uncertain as to precisely what evidence might or might not have been sufficient to cause it to reach a different result. Because Facebook is relying now on "contacts" that do not differ significantly in kind or in quantity than those it presented during the motion to quash, however, there is no particular reason to believe the "new" details would have changed the result.

Although Facebook attempts to argue that a different result is warranted in light of "new" evidence, it is apparent that Facebook actually believes the Superior Court simply got it wrong.[3] Particularly given that this Court has demonstrated an unwillingness to accept the so-called "fiduciary shield" argument, Facebook appears to believe that it can obtain a different result by arguing the merits better or slightly differently.[4] Rearguing the same basic facts, however, is not

[3] In its motion for sanctions, Facebook candidly suggests that the Superior Court accepted defendants' legally untenable argument that actions they took on behalf of ConnectU did not count as personal contacts with the forum. Although the order regarding the sanctions motion filed contemporaneously with this decision rejects that conclusion as unduly speculative, it does show that in Facebook's view, the Superior Court simply erred.

[4] At the hearing, defense counsel effectively conceded that if this Court were free to reconsider the issues, then under the reasoning this Court employed in denying the motion to dismiss brought by Winston Williams and PNS, personal jurisdiction would be proper over permissible. Even if the Superior Court reached an incorrect legal determination, the outcome is conclusive. Facebook "does not now get a do-over." Gupta, supra, 487 F.3d at 767.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above the motion to dismiss is granted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: November 30, 2007

Cameron Winklevoss. Defendants contend that even in those circumstances personal jurisdiction would not be proper over Tyler Winklevoss or Narendra because there is no evidence they personally participated in any allegedly wrongful conduct at a time when Facebook was located in California.
