that he violated the terms of his supervised release. Specifically, Rice contends that there was insufficient evidence to show that he violated supervised release by (1) illegally possessing a controlled substance, and (2) failing to report for drug testing. The record reflects that the government proved the violations by a preponderance of the evidence. See United States v. Turner, 312 F.3d 1137, 1142 (9th Cir. 2002). Accordingly, the district court did not abuse its discretion when it revoked Rice's supervised release. See United States v. Daniel, 209 F.3d 1091, 1094 (9th Cir. 2000).
