consolidated review of the Board of Immigration Appeals' (BIA) denials of his motions to reopen and reconsider.<sup>1</sup> Magallon-Del Toro argued that he was entitled to equitable tolling of the 90-day statute of limitations due to ineffective assistance of counsel.<sup>2</sup> We review BIA denials of motions to reopen and reconsider for abuse of discretion,<sup>3</sup> and review de novo questions of law and constitutional claims.<sup>4</sup> We deny the petitions.<sup>5</sup>

Ineffective assistance of counsel may be grounds for reopening immigration proceedings where a petitioner establishes a due process violation under the Fifth Amendment.<sup>6</sup> Magallon-Del Toro's motion to reopen alleged ineffective assistance by his three prior representatives ("Lawyers 1, 2, and 3," respectively). Magallon-Del Toro now argues that during his removal hearing, Lawyers 1 and 2

<sup>5</sup> Although Magallon-Del Toro filed petitions for review of the BIA's denials of both his motions to reopen and reconsider, he states in his briefing that he challenges only the denial of his motion to reopen. Accordingly, the petition for review of the motion to reconsider is denied as waived, and this memorandum disposition addresses only the petition for review of the motion to reopen.

abandoned their agreed-upon plan to accept voluntary departure only if the Immigration Judge (“IJ”) denied him additional time to apply for withholding of removal and relief under the Convention Against Torture (“CAT”). Magallon-Del Toro also argues that Lawyer 3 — who brought earlier, unsuccessful motions to reopen and reconsider on his behalf — was ineffective because he failed to explain the extent of Lawyers 1 and 2’s ineffectiveness.<sup>7</sup>

Magallon-Del Toro has not established that the removal hearing was so fundamentally unfair as to give rise to a due process violation. Rather, the record supports the BIA’s finding that Lawyers 1 and 2 acted, for strategic reasons, based on consultation with their client. Although the record indicates that Magallon-Del Toro could follow and participate in the hearing (he had a Spanish interpreter and at times addressed the IJ in English), and that the IJ offered him an additional week to apply for withholding and CAT relief, he accepted voluntary departure. Additionally, Magallon-Del Toro’s own conflicting statements in the record — including that Lawyers 1 and 2 failed to explain the availability of withholding and CAT relief before the hearing, such that he believed voluntary departure to be his only option — undermine his claims against his prior representatives. As Magallon-Del Toro's ineffectiveness claim against Lawyer 3 is predicated on ineffectiveness by Lawyers 1 and 2, the BIA also properly concluded that he had not established ineffective assistance by Lawyer 3.<sup>8</sup> Petitions DENIED.

<sup>8</sup> To the extent that Magallon-Del Toro argues that the BIA should have exercised its sua sponte authority to reopen his removal proceedings, this Court lacks jurisdiction to review that decision. See Go v. Holder, 744 F.3d 604, 609-10 (9th Cir. 2014).
