MOLLY C. DWYER, CLERK U.S. COURT OF APPEALS Convention Against Torture. We have jurisdiction under 8 U.S.C. 1252(a)(1), and we deny the petition.

Substantial evidence supports the IJ and BIA's adverse credibility findings. We review "findings of fact, including credibility findings, for substantial evidence and must uphold the [IJ's] and [the] BIA's finding unless the evidence compels a contrary result." Almaghzar v. Gonzales, 457 F.3d 915, 920 (9th Cir. 2006). Here, the IJ found that Luo had fabricated his story of detention by the Chinese authorities on account of his purported involvement in an underground Christian church in China. Ample record evidence supports the IJ's finding. Luo gave inconsistent information about whether his sister or his mother first introduced him to Christianity. He was also inconsistent about the location of his arrest, testifying that he was arrested while attending a church meeting at Ding Kang's home, but stating in the declaration that he submitted with his application that he was arrested at Brother Ruan's home. Luo gave inconsistent testimony as to food and sleep deprivation while detained and when he learned that his fellow church members remained in detention. Finally, his testimony about the Chinese government's revocation of his business license was inconsistent with the text of the license, and his testimony about his family's residences contradicted his household registration information.

PETITION DENIED.
