discrimination claims.¹ We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291. We review de novo a dismissal for failure to state a claim under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2)(B)(ii). Watison v. Carter, 668 F.3d 1108, 1112 (9th Cir. 2012). We affirm.

The district court properly dismissed plaintiffs’ discrimination claims under Title VII, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (“ADEA”), and the Arizona Civil Rights Act (“ACRA”) because plaintiffs failed to allege facts sufficient to state a plausible claim. See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679 (2009) (a plaintiff fails to show she is entitled to relief if the complaint’s factual allegations “do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of [the alleged] misconduct”); see also Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs., Inc., 557 U.S. 167, 180 (2009) (“[A] plaintiff bringing a disparate-treatment claim pursuant to the ADEA must prove . . . that age was the ‘but-for’ cause of the challenged adverse employment action.”); Bodett v. CoxCom, Inc., 366 F.3d 736, 742 (9th Cir. 2004) (recognizing that the ACRA is “generally identical” to Title VII and that Title VII case is persuasive in the interpretation of ACRA); Costa v. Desert Palace, Inc., 299 F.3d 838, 847-48 (9th Cir. 2002) (concluding that a protected characteristic must be a motivating factor for a Title VII discrimination claim).

The district court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiffs’ motion to proceed in forma pauperis (“IFP”) because plaintiffs did not demonstrate that they were unable to pay the court’s filing fee due to poverty or indigency. See Escobedo v. Applebees, 787 F.3d 1226, 1234 (9th Cir. 2015) (setting forth standard of review and explaining that an affidavit is sufficient under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a) if it states that “the affiant cannot pay the court costs and still afford the necessities of life”).

We reject as meritless plaintiffs’ contentions that the district judge was prejudiced or biased.

We do not consider matters not specifically and distinctly raised and argued in the opening brief. See Padgett v. Wright, 587 F.3d 983, 985 n.2 (9th Cir. 2009).
