MEMORANDUM OPINION

This matter is before the court on Defendant’s Motion to Withdraw the Reference (Doc. #

1). For the reasons discussed below, the court will deny the motion.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Willie Mae Washington filed for Chapter 13 bankruptcy protection on May 8, 2014. (Doc. # 5-1 at 1-4). On June 18, 2014, Resurgent Capital Services, acting as agent of LVNV Funding, LLC, filed a proof of claim: Proof of Claim 10 (“POC 10”). POC 10 listed an unsecured amount of $1,114.52 and a charge off date of 04/04/02. (Doc. # 5-1 at 5-8). Plaintiff filed this adversary proceeding in the Bankruptcy Court asserting only violations of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (“FDCPA”). (Doc. # 5-1 at 39-43). Defendant moved the District Court for the Northern District of Alabama to withdraw the reference and relieve the Bankruptcy Court of jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(d) and Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 5011. (Doc. # 1).

II. DISCUSSION

District courts possess “original and exclusive jurisdiction of all cases under title 11” of the Bankruptcy Code. 28 U.S.C. § 1334(a) (2012). District courts are permitted, however, to refer all cases to the bankruptcy court to the extent that they arise under Title 11, arise in Title 11, or relate to a case under Title 11. 28 U.S.C. § 157(a) (2012). This court has entered such a general order of reference. See Bank United v. Manley, 273 B.R. 229, 234 n.10 (N.D. Ala. 2001).

The reference that applies to this Chapter 13 case, however, is not absolute. This is because 28 U.S.C. § 157(d) provides for its withdrawal under limited circumstances, either as a mandatory matter or as a permissive matter. The district court is required to withdraw a proceeding “if the court determines that resolution of the proceeding requires consideration of both title 11 and other laws of the United States regulating organizations or activities affecting interstate commerce.” Id.

Some courts, citing the statute’s plain language, have held that withdrawal is required if any consideration of a non-Title 11 federal law is necessary to a resolution of the dispute. See, e.g., In re Kiefer, 276 B.R. 196, 199 (E.D. Mich. 2002). Most courts, however, have found that “withdrawal should be granted only if the current proceeding could not be resolved without substantial and material consideration of the non-Code federal law.” Birgans v. Magnolia Auto Sales, Case No. 5:12-mc-03830-CLS, 2012 WL 6000339, *2 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 30, 2012) (quoting Matter of Vicars Ins. Agency, Inc., 96 F.3d 949, 952 (7th Cir. 1996)); Abrahams v. Phil-Con Services, LLC, Case No. 2:10-cv-00326-WS-N, 2010 WL 4875581, *2 (S.D. Ala. Nov. 23, 2010). This is the approach taken by all of the district courts within the Eleventh Circuit that have considered the issue. Under this approach, for withdrawal to be warranted, “the issues in question [must] require more than the mere application of well-settled or “hornbook” non-bankruptcy law; significant interpretation of the non-Code statute must be required.” Abrahms, 2010 WL 4875581 at *2 (quoting Vicars, 96 F.3d at 953).

This court, in line with the other courts in this circuit, will follow the latter approach. The FDCPA is undisputedly a non-Title 11 federal law impacting interstate commerce, particularly when the use of an “instrumentality of interstate commerce” is a definitional requirement for regulation under the statute. 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6) (2012). Whether withdrawal is required, then, turns on whether substantial and material consideration of the FDCPA will be necessary to the resolution of the dispute.

Plaintiff points to the Eleventh Circuit’s recent holding in Crawford v. LVNV Funding, LLC, 758 F.3d 1254 (11th Cir. 2014), and argues that the court’s inquiry will not require substantial and material consideration of the FDCPA because the Eleventh Circuit has decided the issue. (Doc. # 3). In Crawford, the Eleventh Circuit held that the filing of a proof of claim to collect a stale debt in a Chapter 13 bankruptcy violates the FDCPA. Id. at 1256. LVNV was there sued over the exact same conduct as in this case – filing a proof of claim for a time-barred debt. In Crawford, LVNV moved to dismiss the adversary proceeding, asserting that the FDCPA does not forbid its alleged conduct. The bankruptcy and district courts agreed with LVNV, but the Eleventh Circuit reversed and remanded. The circuit court unequivocally held that “[t]he FDCPA’s broad language, our precedent, and the record compel the conclusion that defendants’ conduct violated a number of the Act’s protective provisions.” Id. at 1257.

Undeterred by that holding, LVNV presents two arguments attempting to establish that, even in light of Crawford, substantial and material consideration of the FDCPA is required to resolve Plaintiff’s claims. First, LVNV contends that “the issue before the Eleventh Circuit [in Crawford] was the sufficiency of the pleadings under a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, and not the ultimate merits of the case.” (Doc. 5 at 3-6). ). According to LVNV, because the appellate opinion in Crawford was not a final determination on the merits, and as the Eleventh Circuit purposefully did not resolve certain initial issues (but left those for the district court to rule upon), Crawford cannot be relied upon for a withdrawal analysis under the FDCPA. This court disagrees because LVNV’s argument does not properly account for the Eleventh Circuit’s plain language in Crawford.

In its Crawford decision, the Eleventh Circuit expressly held that the filing of a proof of claim to collect a stale debt in a Chapter 13 bankruptcy violates the FDCPA. Id. at 1256. The procedural posture of that case does not change the fact that it is binding precedent. A Rule 12(b)(6) motion presents a proper vehicle for the resolution of a question of law. See Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 328 (1989) (“When a complaint raises an arguable question of law which the district court ultimately finds is correctly resolved against the plaintiff, dismissal on Rule 12(b)(6) grounds is appropriate ... .”). While factual issues remained in Crawford and warranted a remand of the action for further proceedings (instead of remand for an entry of judgment), this posture in no way detracts from the precedential value of the Eleventh Circuit’s resolution of the underlying legal issues and, in any event, does not relieve this court from being bound by that analysis. Therefore, this court finds that LVNV’s first argument, that Crawford cannot sufficiently guide this court’s analysis to the same conclusion, is unavailing.

LVNV’s second argument concerns the issue of whether the Bankruptcy Code preempts the FDCPA when creditors misbehave in the bankruptcy context. (Doc. # 5 at 6-8.) This argument likewise fails. First, LVNV has not directly raised the issue here and does not seek a ruling from this court on the issue. Rather, LVNV merely argues that “the Crawford opinion produced disparities between the Bankruptcy Code and the FDCPA[,] and such disparities are ‘complicated interpretive issues[] of first impression,’” which require “substantial and material” consideration of the FDCPA. (Doc. # 5 at 6-8). Thus, according to LVNV, whether the Bankruptcy Code “preempts” the FDCPA is an “example of a ‘complicated interpretive issue [] of first impression.’” (Doc. # 5 at 6). To be clear, LVNV explicitly states the matter is not before the court: “By presenting Patrick, Plaintiff is in essence asking this court to rule on a matter not presently before it.” (Doc. # 5 at 7).

The court is aware that at least one circuit has held that the Bankruptcy Code broadly precludes remedies under the FDCPA for actions taken in bankruptcy. See Walls v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 276 F.3d 502, 510 (9th Cir. 2002). And another court of appeals has held that the Bankruptcy Code precludes remedies under the FDCPA for wrongfully filed proofs of claim. See Simmons v. Roundup Funding, LLC, 622 F.3d 93, 96 (2nd Cir. 2010). However, the court finds that the parties have not placed the preemption issue before the court at this juncture. Moreover, any analysis of the interplay between the Bankruptcy Code and the FDCPA will undoubtedly require a close look at the Bankruptcy Code, which, in actuality, makes the bankruptcy court best situated to undertake that analysis (if a party raises the issue). Thereafter, the issue may be raised before this court on any appeal from the bankruptcy court’s decision. As such, the court finds that mandatory withdrawal is not warranted at this time.

The second type of withdrawal contemplated by section 157(d) is permissive withdrawal. When determining whether adequate cause exists to withdraw a case from bankruptcy court, a district court should consider: “(1) the advancement of uniformity in bankruptcy administration; (2) decreasing forum shopping and confusion; (3) promoting the economical use of the parties’ resources; and (4) facilitating the bankruptcy process.” In re Childs, 342 B.R. 823, 827 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2006). Additionally, the court should consider: “(1) whether the claim is core or noncore; (2) efficient use of judicial resources; (3) a jury demand; and (4) prevention of delay.” In re Childs, 324 B.R. at 827.

LVNV argues that Plaintiff’s FDCPA claim is non-core, but the court is not persuaded. Plaintiff’s FDCPA claim is asserted in response to LVNV’s filing a proof of claim in her bankruptcy case, and would not exist but for that claim. Moreover, this case is readily distinguishable from In re Shortsleeve, 349 B.R. 297 (M.D. Ala. 2006), on which LVNV relies. The claims in that case arose after the debtor’s bankruptcy was discharged, and not during the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings; therefore, the claims could not “conceivably have an effect on the estate being administered in bankruptcy.” Id. at 300 (quoting Miller v. Kemira, Inc., (In re Lemco Gypsum, Inc.), 910 F.2d 784 (11th Cir. 1990)). If Plaintiff succeeds on her FDCPA claims in the instant case and receives a money judgment, without question the judgment will become an asset of the estate. See In re Peed, Case No. 1:09-bk-15486, 2014 WL 2987637 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. July 1, 2014). Thus, the court finds that the adversary proceeding is inextricably related to Plaintiff’s bankruptcy.

Given the court’s determination that the FDCPA claim is inextricably related to the bankruptcy proceeding, two additional factors guide the court’s determination that withdrawal of the bankruptcy reference at this point would not promote the economical use of the parties’ resources, facilitate the bankruptcy process, or be an efficient use of judicial resources. First, LVNV is in the process of filing a petition for certiorari to the Supreme Court in connection with the Crawford decision. Presumably, LVNV will file motions to stay the proceedings in all of its pending cases with the same underlying issues awaiting a decision by the Supreme Court, as it has done in the Crawford case in the Middle District of Alabama. See Crawford, Case No. 12-AP-3033-DHW (M.D. Ala.), Docs. # 38, 42 (LVNV’s motion to stay and the court’s order granting the same). Second, a putative class action has been filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Alabama, wherein the parties and counsel seek to represent a class defined as all consumers in the United States who filed Chapter 13 bankruptcy in which LVNV filed one or more proofs of claim for a debt that was barred by the statute of limitations. Brock v. Resurgent Capital Services, LP, and LVNV Funding, LLC, Case No. 1:14-cv-00324-WS-M (S.D. Ala.). LVNV has already sought to stay numerous actions in the bankruptcy courts across this state until such time as a class certification decision is made, and Plaintiffs have an opportunity to opt out of the Brock Class Action. Given the numerous filings throughout the Alabama bankruptcy courts (in cases with identical claims), the court finds that leaving the bankruptcy reference in place will advance several important interests, including, but not limited to, encouraging uniformity in bankruptcy administration, decreasing confusion, promoting the economical use of the parties' resources, and facilitating the bankruptcy process.

III. CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, Defendant's Motion to Withdraw the Reference (Doc. # 1) is due to be denied without prejudice.

A separate order will be entered.

DONE and ORDERED this March 18, 2015.
