Defendants.

Pending before the Court is the Motion for Summary Judgment of Defendants County 18 of Maricopa and Phillip Keen. (Dkt. # 111.) For the reasons set forth below, the Court grants 19 Defendants' motion in part and denies Defendants' motion in part.

BACKGROUND

21

I. Facts

22

On May 1, 1994, Shawn Mayon, a private security officer at the "Sister's" nightclub 23 located in Phoenix, Arizona, was shot and killed in the nightclub's parking lot. Shortly after 24 the shooting, at approximately 4:00 a.m, Phoenix Police stopped a white Volvo station 25 wagon with four passengers, one of whom was Plaintiff Byron Lacy. Lacy was arrested 26 under suspicion of his involvement in the nightclub shooting. During a pat-down search, 27 Police found .45 caliber ammunition rounds in his left front pocket. Police also recovered 28 a .45 caliber pistol from the rear seat of the Volvo. That afternoon, Detective Ronald Jones

1 interviewed Lacy regarding the nightclub shooting. After relating several false stories, Lacy 2 admitted ownership of the .45 caliber pistol and that, earlier in the evening, he was at the 3 nightclub parking lot and fired his weapon multiple times. Lacy was subsequently released 4 from custody.

5 At the time of the shooting, Dr. Phillip Keen was employed as the Medical Examiner 6 for Maricopa County. Dr. Keen conducted an autopsy on Mayon's body on May 2, 1994.
7 The resulting report opined that the cause of Mayon's death was a gunshot wound caused by 8 a bullet that entered his head through his nose, passed through his brain, and exited the back 9 of his skull. (Dkt. 112 Ex. H at 1.) At Lacy's trial, Keen testified that during the autopsy 10 he used a ruler to measure the size of the defect in the back of Mayon's skull and was very 11 precise about his measurement. After the report was prepared, Keen testified that he 12 reviewed the contents before signing it. In the report, Keen stated that the exit wound from 13 the bullet "ranges up to 5/16 inch in greatest dimension." (Id. at Ex. H at 5.) The autopsy 14 report did not comment on the caliber of the bullet that passed through Mayon's skull. (Id.
15 Ex. H.) On January 25, 1995, Detective Jones, together with Prosecutor Teresa Sanders, 16 presented the case against Lacy to a grand jury. Jones testified from Keen's report that "the 17 cause of death [was] a single gunshot wound entering from the nose and exiting out the base 18 of the skull, slightly to the left of center, meaning the shot came forward and slightly to the 19 left." (Dkt. # 114 Ex. 1 at 12-13.) Based on the cumulative evidence, the grand jury indicted 20 Lacy on charges of murder in the first degree and aggravated assault, and a warrant was 21 issued for his arrest. (Id. at 35-36.)

22 During a pretrial interview, Keen advised Lacy's defense counsel of his 5/16" 23 measurement and admitted that it would be very atypical for a .45 caliber bullet to have 24 caused the defect in Lacy's skull. Approximately two weeks before Lacy's criminal trial was 25 to begin, Prosecutor Sanders contacted Keen in person to inform him that Lacy's expert, 26 Joseph Collier, would testify at trial that it is impossible for a .45 caliber bullet to exit 27 Mayon's skull through the 5/16" exit wound as reported from Keen's autopsy. Sanders 28 requested that Keen re-evaluate the defect size, suggesting that the 5/16" measurement could

1 have been a mistake because, based on her own measurements of the exit wound in a 2 photograph that appeared smaller than scale, the exit wound appeared to be larger than 5/16".
3 Keen reviewed the photograph, and concluded that the 5/16" measurement included in his 4 report was likely inaccurate. Keen and Sanders discussed his conclusions as well as a theory 5 that would allow a .45 caliber bullet to pass through a defect that is smaller in diameter than 6 the diameter of the bullet. Keen relayed his revised conclusions to Sanders but did not issue 7 a supplemental autopsy report, nor did he provide a written disclosure of his revised findings 8 to the defense. Sanders informed Keen that defense counsel for Lacy might contact him to 9 inquire into the matter. However, Lacy's defense counsel did not initiate contact with Keen.

10 At trial, Keen testified to his revised opinions of the size of the exit wound.
11 Specifically Keen testified that he believed that his original 5/16" measurement of the exit 12 wound was not correct:

13 [b]ecause the [photo provided by Sanders was] taken of the 14 wound itself without a scale, the defect in the photo is 15 approximately 5/16s of an inch. And the photo is not one to one 16 in size of the dimensions of the skull. In extrapolating back to skull sizes and other photos that do have scale in them, it is approximately one third under size.

17 (Dkt. # 157 Ex. B at 24.) Keen testified that he could only state "that [the defect] is greater 18 than 5/16s" but could not state "how much more it is than 5/16s." (Id. at 25.) Lacy's counsel 19 cross-examined Keen on the basis of his opinion and its late-breaking nature. On cross-20 examination, Keen testified regarding his theory of how a .45 caliber bullet may have passed 21 through Mayon's skull leaving a smaller diameter defect than the actual diameter of the 22 bullet. (Id. at 98-99.) Lacy was convicted of reckless manslaughter and aggravated assault 23 and was sentenced to seventeen years. The conviction was affirmed on appeal. Lacy then 24 filed a petition for post-conviction relief in state court. On October 25, 2002, the Arizona
25 Superior Court granted the petition, set aside Lacy's conviction on grounds of ineffective 26 assistance of counsel and insufficient evidence, and ordered a new trial. Upon reassignment, 27 the court determined that a new trial was improper because double jeopardy applied in light 28

1 of the insufficient evidence finding, and the court dismissed the charges against Lacy on 2 February 23, 2004.

3 II. Procedural History

4 In this action, Plaintiffs allege that Lacy's arrest, the investigation of the crime, and 5 his prosecution were improper and deprived him of his constitutional rights. On February 6 1, 2008, the Court dismissed counts one, two, four, five, seven, nine, and ten against 7 Defendants Maricopa County and Phillip Keen. (Dkt. # 64.) Plaintiffs have since expressly 8 abandoned count six. (Dkt. # 149 at 16.) Accordingly, the following counts against 9 Defendants Maricopa County and Phillip Keen remain: count three (unconstitutional 10 practice) and count eight (a derivative claim on behalf of Debra Finley for denial of familial 11 association). On June 24, 2008, Defendants Maricopa County and Phillip Keen filed a 12 motion for summary judgment seeking judgment on the remaining counts. (Dkt. # 111.)

13 DISCUSSION

14 I. Summary Judgment Standard of Review

15 A court must grant summary judgment if the pleadings and supporting documents, 16 viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, "show that there is no genuine 17 issue as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law."
18 Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-23 (1986); 19 Jesinger v. Nev. Fed. Credit Union, 24 F.3d 1127, 1130 (9th Cir. 1994). "Only disputes over 20 facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude 21 the entry of summary judgment." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986);
22 see Jesinger, 24 F.3d at 1130. In addition, the dispute must be genuine, that is, the evidence 23 must be "such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party."
24 Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248.

25 There is no issue for trial unless there is sufficient evidence favoring the nonmoving 26 party; if the evidence is merely colorable or is not significantly probative, summary judgment 27 may be granted. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249-50. However, because "[c]redibility 28 determinations, the weighing of evidence, and the drawing of inferences from the facts are

1 jury functions, not those of a judge, . . . [t]he evidence of the non-movant is to be believed, 2 and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in his favor” at the summary judgment stage.
3 Id. at 255 (citing Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 158-59 (1970)); Harris v.
4 Itzhaki, 183 F.3d 1043, 1051 (9th Cir. 1999).

5 II. Analysis

6 Defendants argue that they are entitled to summary judgment on the two remaining 7 counts. Title 42 of the United States Code section 1983 governs all remaining claims against 8 these Defendants. Section 1983 creates a cause of action against a person who, acting under 9 color of state law, deprives another of rights guaranteed under the Constitution.¹ It does not 10 create any substantive rights; rather, it is a vehicle whereby plaintiffs can challenge actions 11 by government officials. To prove a case under § 1983, Plaintiffs must demonstrate that (1) 12 the action occurred under color of state law² and (2) the action resulted in the deprivation of 13 a constitutional right or federal statutory right. Jones v. Williams, 297 F.3d 930, 934 (9th Cir.
14 2002). “A person deprives another ‘of a constitutional right, within the meaning of section 15 1983, if he does an affirmative act, participates in another’s affirmative acts, or omits to 16 perform an act which he is legally required to do that causes the deprivation of which [the 17 plaintiff complains].” Leer v. Murphy, 844 F.2d 628, 633 (9th Cir. 1988) (quoting Johnson 18 v. Duffy, 588 F.2d 740, 743 (9th Cir. 1978)).

20 A. Count Three – Unconstitutional Practice

21 In count three, Plaintiffs assert four possible bases for relief. First, Plaintiffs argue 22 that “Keen’s alter[ation] of his medical findings set forth in certified autopsy reports violated

24 ¹42 U.S.C. § 1983 states, in relevant part: “Every person who, under color of any 25 statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of 26 Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person 27 within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities 28 secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in any action at law, suit in equity, or other proceeding for redress”

²Defendants do not contest that the conduct at issue occurred under color of state law.

1 . . . Lacy’s due process right under the Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendment to present 2 a ‘complete defense.’” (Dkt. # 1 Ex. A at ¶ 106.) Second, Plaintiffs argue that “Keen 3 breached his statutory duty under A.R.S. § 11-597 by failing to prepare and file an accurate 4 autopsy report, and to accurately record critical medical/forensic measurements, which 5 violated Plaintiff Lacy’s federally ‘protected liberty interest’ in this statute under the Due 6 Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. (Id. ¶ 107.) Third, Plaintiffs argue that “Keen 7 . . . altered his medical findings . . . in order to support the State’s theory of guilt.” (Id. ¶ 8 105.) As explained below, this claim is properly stated as a violation of due process. Fourth, 9 Plaintiffs argue that “Keen testified to his ‘altered findings in his autopsy report to support 10 [the] Detectives’ ‘single bullet’ crime scene theory, and thereby to assist in the malicious 11 prosecution of Plaintiff Lacy.” (Id. ¶ 108.)

12 1. Right to Present a Complete Defense

13 The Supreme Court has long recognized that “[w]hether rooted directly in the Due 14 Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment . . . or in the Compulsory Process or 15 Confrontation clauses of the Sixth Amendment, . . . the Constitution guarantees criminal 16 defendants ‘a meaningful opportunity to present a complete defense.’” Crane v. Kentucky, 17 476 U.S. 683, 690 (1986) (internal citations omitted) (quoting California v. Trombetta, 467 18 U.S. 479, 485 (1984)); see also Washington v. Texas, 388 U.S. 14, 19 (1967) (indicating that 19 “the right to present a defense” is a “fundamental element of due process law”).

20 As Defendants’ motion points out, Plaintiffs provide no evidence demonstrating that 21 Keen deprived Lacy of the right to present a complete defense. At trial, Lacy had a 22 meaningful opportunity to fully cross examine the witnesses who testified against him and 23 to present witnesses and evidence on his own behalf. There is no evidence that Keen or the 24 trial court unconstitutionally restricted Lacy’s right to present his defense. This conclusion 25 is supported by the findings of Judge Arellano on Lacy’s motion for post-conviction relief.
26 At the evidentiary hearing, Judge Arellano found:

27 The evidence clearly establishes that the defense counsel knew 28 of the change in the medical examiner’s opinion. He was so advised telephonically by the deputy attorney. The medical

1 examiner was a critical witness in this case. The information
2 that the medical examiner was to convey and did, in fact, testify
3 to was critical testimony. The Deputy County Attorney 4 suggested to defense counsel that he re-interview the medical 5 examiner. Defense counsel failed to do so. That amounts to 6 fundamental error. Had defense counsel conducted a re-7 interview before or even during the trial, defense counsel would 8 have been able to properly prepare to address the testimony. He 9 could have addressed the testimony by proper preparation of his 10 expert witness, proper presentation of an opening statement, 11 proper preparation of cross-examination, and closing argument.
12 In fact, the totality of the evidence establishes that defense 13 counsel simply became angry and his performance was 14 ineffective given the evidence at hand. That strategy was 15 indefensible given that the defense attorney knew of the change 16 in the medical examiner's opinion.

17 (Dkt. # 157 Ex. A at 110-11.)

18 The state court already granted Lacy relief after concluding that his defense counsel 19 knew of Keen's revised opinion before trial and could have adequately prepared to address 20 it, but failed to do so. Thus any infringement of Lacy's ability to present his case at trial 21 resulted from his own attorney's failures. No conduct by Keen deprived Lacy of his ability 22 to present a complete defense, or if it did, Plaintiffs fail to demonstrate how it may have done 23 so. Plaintiffs make assertions of error within their brief, but never argue or explain how the 24 evidence supports their "complete defense" claim. That is not the "specific[] and distinct[]" argument that is required. See Indep. Towers of Wash. v. Wash., 350 F.3d 925, 930 (9th Cir. 2003). Therefore, the Court grants summary judgement to Keen and the County on Plaintiffs' § 1983 "complete defense" claim.

21 2. Protected Liberty Interest

22 Plaintiffs assert that "Dr. Keen breached his statutory duty under A.R.S. section 11-23 597 by failing to prepare and file an accurate autopsy report, and to accurately record critical 24 medical/forensic measurements, which violated Plaintiff Lacy's federally 'protected liberty 25 interest' in this statute under the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment." (Dkt.
26 # 36 ¶ 107.) Plaintiffs' assertion fails to state a valid due process claim because the Arizona 27 statute does not create a constitutionally-protected liberty interest in Lacy to obtain an 28 amendment to an autopsy report.

1 Ordinarily, a violation of state law cannot be a basis for a § 1983 action because § 2 1983 provides a remedy for “deprivation of rights secured by the Federal Constitution and 3 Laws.” Lovell ex rel. Lovell v. Poway Unified Sch. Dist., 90 F.3d 367, 370 (9th Cir. 1996);
4 see also Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 924 (1982); Cambell v. Burt, 141 F.3d
5 927, 930 (9th Cir. 1998) (“As a general rule, a violation of state law does not lead to liability
6 under § 1983.”). Plaintiffs have failed to respond to the arguments advanced on this matter 7 by Defendants.

8 The Ninth Circuit has held that a state law must satisfy two requirements to create a 9 liberty interest protected by the Constitution. “First, the law must set forth substantive 10 predicates to govern official decision making and, second, it must contain explicitly 11 mandatory language, i.e., a specific directive to the decision maker that mandates a particular 12 outcome if the substantive predicates have been met.” Valdez v. Rosenbaum, 302 F.3d 1039, 13 1044 (9th Cir. 2002) (internal citations and quotations omitted). The Supreme Court has 14 stated that a “state creates a protected liberty interest by placing substantive limitations on 15 official discretion.” Cambell, 141 F.3d at 930 (quoting Olim v. Wakinekona, 461 U.S. 238, 16 249 (1983)). Here, the statute merely requires that “a full record or report of the facts 17 developed by [an] autopsy in the findings of the person performing the autopsy shall be 18 properly made and filed in the office of the county medical examiner or the board of 19 supervisors.” A.R.S. § 11-597(E). This law does not set forth “substantive predicates to 20 govern official decision making,” nor does it attempt in any way to constrain the judgment 21 or decision making of the medical examiner, or specifically direct any particular result. It, 22 thus, does not create individual due process rights in state citizens. See Olim, 461 U.S. at 23 250 (“The State may choose to require procedures for reasons other than protection against 24 deprivation of substantive rights, of course, but in making that choice the State does not 25 create an independent substantive right.”); Town of Castle Rock, Colo. v. Gonzales, 545 U.S.
26 748, 765 (2005) (“Making the actions of government employees obligatory can serve various 27 legitimate ends other than the conferral of a benefit on a specific class of people.”); Sandin

28

1 v. Conner, 515 U.S. 472, 482 (1995) (finding no constitutionally-protected liberty interest 2 because state regulations “are not set forth solely to benefit the prisoner”).

3 Plaintiffs cite no authority that supports a finding that Lacy has a due process liberty 4 interest in having medical examiners file amendments to their autopsy reports. Additionally, 5 Plaintiffs do not explain how Keen’s failure to amend his autopsy report would have resulted 6 in any constitutional harm to Lacy when he was otherwise informed of Keen’s revised 7 opinions. Even if Dr. Keen failed to follow Arizona statutory procedures as they apply to 8 medical examiners, there exists no basis under A.R.S. section 11-597(E) for a § 1983 claim.
9 Therefore, summary judgment is granted in favor of Defendants on any claim founded in 10 A.R.S. § 11-597(E).

11 3. Intentional or Reckless Fabrication of Evidence

12 Plaintiffs next argue that Keen intentionally or recklessly fabricated evidence when 13 he revised his opinions regarding his autopsy measurements just before trial. (Dkt. # 149 at 14 14-16.) Under the Fourteenth Amendment, there exists a “right not to be deprived of liberty 15 without due process of law, or more specifically, as the result of the fabrication of evidence 16 by a government officer acting in an investigative capacity.” Pierce v. Gilchrist, 359 F.3d 17 1279, 1285 (10th Cir. 2004); see also Devereaux v. Abbey, 263 F.3d 1070, 1074-75 (9th Cir.
18 2001) (finding a due process right not to be subjected to criminal charges on the basis of false 19 evidence that was deliberately fabricated); Zahrey v. Coffey, 221 F.3d 342, 349 (2nd Cir.
20 2000) (recognizing a constitutional right “not to be deprived of liberty as a result of the 21 fabrication of evidence by a government officer acting in an investigating capacity.”); 22 Stemler v. City of Florence, 126 F.3d 856, 872 (6th Cir. 1997) (holding that constitutional 23 rights are violated when evidence is knowingly fabricated and a reasonable likelihood exists 24 that the false evidence would have affected the decision of the jury); cf. Ricciuti v. New York 25 City Transit Auth., 124 F.3d 123, 130 (2d Cir. 1997) (“When a police officer creates false 26 information likely to influence a jury’s decision and forwards that information to prosecutors, 27 he violates the accused’s constitutional right to a fair trial . . .”).

28

1 The Ninth Circuit, in Galbraith v. County of Santa Clara, clarified the requisite 2 mental state for liability in this type of case. 307 F.3d 1119 (9th Cir. 2002). There, a 3 plaintiff brought a § 1983 action against a county coroner, claiming that the coroner falsified 4 an autopsy report, leading to his false arrest and prosecution. Id. at 1121. In Galbraith, the 5 plaintiff’s wife had been found dead and the investigating officers originally concluded that 6 the cause of death was suicide. Id. The defendant, Dr. Ozoa, the county’s medical examiner, 7 performed an autopsy on the body and concluded that Galbraith’s wife did not commit 8 suicide but was instead strangled. Id. at 1122. Ozoa’s autopsy findings were communicated 9 to law enforcement and soon thereafter Galbraith was charged with murdering his wife. Id.
10 Galbraith alleged that Ozoa’s conclusion was a result of his incompetence and that Ozoa 11 deliberately attempted to cover up his incompetence from that point forward. Id. On motion, 12 under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), the Court relied on “authority holding that 13 government investigators may be liable for violating the Fourth Amendment when they 14 submit false and material information in a warrant affidavit.” Id. at 1126. That authority 15 suggested that a “1983 plaintiff must show that the investigator made deliberately false 16 statements or recklessly disregarded the truth in the affidavit and that the falsifications were 17 material to the finding of probable cause.” Id. (quotations omitted) (emphases added).
18 Relying on these warrant affidavit cases, the Court held that, “a coroner’s reckless or 19 intentional falsification of an autopsy report that plays a material role in the false arrest and 20 prosecution of an individual can support a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and the Fourth 21 Amendment.” Id. (emphasis added).

22 While the Galbraith court faced allegations of fabrications of evidence that led to 23 Fourth Amendment deprivations, the Galbraith standard is also applicable in this case. Here, 24 there are allegations that a medical examiner formed revised opinions with reckless disregard 25 as to their truth and those allegations may have been both instrumental in the prosecutor’s 26 charging decisions as well as material to the outcome of the trial. See also Franks v.
27 Delaware, 438 U.S. 154, 155-56 (1978) (employing a standard of “knowingly and 28 intentionally, or with reckless disregard for the truth,” falsifying or omitting evidence in the 1 context of a Fourth Amendment challenge); Pierce, 359 F.3d at 1292 (holding that a 2 plaintiff’s allegations that a forensic chemist, “with knowing and reckless disregard for the 3 truth,” fabricated forensic evidence was sufficient to state a § 1983 claim under the Due 4 Process Clause).

5 The question is thus, whether the facts in the record, when viewed in the light most 6 favorable to Plaintiffs, permit the inference that, with reckless disregard for the truth, Keen 7 incorrectly interpreted and revised his opinion on the size of the exit wound. Because 8 Plaintiffs bear the burden of proof in this matter, they must present sufficient evidence for 9 a reasonable jury to conclude that Keen’s revised opinions were developed with reckless 10 disregard for the truth and were in fact incorrect. To support such allegations, Plaintiffs must 11 show that Keen “in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth” of his revised 12 measurements and opinions or that “circumstances evince obvious reasons to doubt the 13 veracity” of those revisions. United States v. Ranney, 298 F.3d 74, 78 (1st Cir. 2002).

14 Plaintiffs argue that the circumstantial evidence surrounding Keen’s autopsy and the 15 subsequent revision of his opinion implies that Keen’s revised opinion and statements to 16 Sanders were inaccurate and were recklessly fabricated. According to Keen, he revised his 17 opinions based on the following scenario:

18 Approximately one week before the criminal trial was to begin, 19 the prosecutor Ms. Theresa Sanders, contacted me and informed 20 me that she had met with Mr. Lacy’s defense counsel and he 21 was maintaining it was impossible for a .45 caliber bullet to exit 22 Mr. Mayon’s skull through a 5/16" “defect” that I had noted in 23 my autopsy report. Ms. Sanders also inquired if the 5/16" 24 measurement could have been a mistake. She indicated that she 25 had measured the “defect” in the unscaled autopsy photo and it 26 appears to be about 5/16" and the photo appeared to be smaller 27 than an actual skull size. I informed Ms. Sanders that it was 28 unusual, but not impossible, that a skull exit “defect” could measure smaller than the bullet diameter; especially in a case like Mr. Mayon where there are numerous small bone fractures near the “defect (i.e. displaced bone) which could hinge outward and allow the bullet to pass through and then hinge back, held by skin and hair, leaving an exit wound bone defect appearing to be smaller than the bullet caliber. . . . Subsequently, after review of the unscaled photo, I concluded that the 5/16" measurement of the exit “defect” was likely incorrect.

(Dkt. # 112 Ex. A.)

1 At Lacy’s trial, Dr. Keen testified to the high level of care he exercised during the 2 initial autopsy in measuring the exit defect as 5/16". He further testified that he reviewed the 3 report before signing it and subsequently informed Lacy’s defense counsel that the 4 measurement was 5/16" and that it would be very atypical for a .45 caliber bullet to have 5 caused the exit defect. Keen failed to photograph the defect with a ruler during the autopsy.
6 It was not until approximately a week before trial, after Sanders had been informed that the 7 defense and their experts were prepared to focus on the fact that a .45 caliber bullet could not 8 physically fit through a 5/16" exit defect, that Keen, at the suggestion of Sanders, reviewed 9 and revised his opinion as to the size of the defect. To the extent that Keen revised his 10 opinion as to the size of the defect based on the unscaled photograph shown him by the 11 prosecutor, it is unclear whether Keen had sufficient expertise in the field of reconstructing 12 measurements based on unscaled photographs to form such a revised opinion with adequate 13 regard for Lacy’s rights. Had Keen not revised his opinion, it is unclear whether Sanders 14 would have pursued homicide charges against Lacy in light of the anticipated testimony by 15 defense experts. Given the circumstances surrounding the initial autopsy measurement and 16 subsequent revision, the Court cannot say that a reasonable jury could not infer that Keen’s 17 revised opinions were in fact inaccurate and done with reckless indifference to both the truth
18 and Lacy’s rights for the purpose of assisting the prosecution of Lacy. See Ranney, 298 F.3d 19 at 78.

20 In support of the veracity of Keen’s revised opinion, Defendants provide the expert 21 witness report of Dr. Debra Komar. Dr. Komar, a forensic anthropologist, concludes that the 22 actual defect size was 14mm in diameter – 3mm larger than the diameter of a .45 caliber
23 bullet. Plaintiffs, however, submit an expert witness report of Dr. Karen Griest that assails 24 the methodology and conclusions of Dr. Komar. Additionally, Dr. Griest concludes that 25 “based on Dr. Keen’s estimated exit wound size, no competent pathologist could conclude 26 that the defect in Mr. Mayon’s skull was made by a .45 caliber bullet.” (Dkt. # 161 Ex. C

1 ¶ K(1).) Here, a reasonable jury could infer that Dr. Komar’s report is flawed in light of Dr.
2 Griest’s report.³

3 Defendants argue that “[a]ll of Plaintiff’s § 1983 claims against Dr. Keen rest upon 4 his trial testimony” and that Keen is entitled to absolute immunity from liability arising from 5 that testimony. The Supreme Court has extended absolute immunity to testifying witnesses, 6 which would include Keen, at judicial proceedings. Briscoe v. LaHue, 460 U.S. 325, 333 7 (1983). It reasoned that without such immunity, “[a] witness’s apprehension of subsequent 8 damages liability might induce . . . self-censorship,” either by making witnesses reluctant to 9 come forward in the first place or by distorting their testimony. Id. Such self-censorship 10 may “deprive the finder of fact of candid, objective, and undistorted evidence.” Id.

11 Even though Defendants are correct that Keen is entitled to absolute immunity for his 12 trial testimony, see id. at 335-36; Franklin v. Terr, 201 F.3d 1098, 1101 (9th Cir. 2000), this 13 immunity does not extend to the intentional or reckless pretrial fabrication of evidence. See 14 Gregory v. City of Louisville, 444 F.3d 725, 738-39 (6th Cir. 2006) (“Subsequent testimony 15 cannot insulate previous fabrications of evidence merely because the testimony relies on that 16 fabricated evidence. The Court has never endorsed such a self-serving result. Merely 17 because a state actor compounds a constitutional wrong with another wrong which benefits 18 from immunity is no reason to insulate the first constitutional wrong from the actions for 19 redress. This Court has consistently held that nontestimonial, pretrial acts do not benefit 20 from absolute immunity, despite any connection these acts might have to later testimony.”)

21 _____
22 ³Plaintiffs have filed a Motion to Strike Dr. Komar’s Report. (Dkt. # 154.) Plaintiffs 23 argue that Dr. Komar’s report should be stricken because it is not in affidavit form, because 24 it does not set forth the qualifications of the witness, because it is hearsay, and because it is 25 based on speculation. (Dkt. # 154 at 1.) Defendants argue that Plaintiffs have waived their 26 objections to Dr. Komar’s report because Plaintiffs present another expert report that 27 incorporates by reference the report of Dr. Komar. (Dkt. # 164 at 4.) Whether the Court 28 strikes the report of Dr. Komar is of no consequence, as the Court must view facts in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs and Plaintiffs have presented evidence that questions the methodology and conclusions of Dr. Komar. Therefore, Plaintiffs’ motion to strike is denied as moot.

1 (citation omitted); Pierce v. Gilchrist, 359 F.3d 1279, 1300 (10th Cir. 2004) (holding that an 2 action could proceed against a forensic hair examiner accused of intentionally or recklessly 3 falsifying her investigative report and recording a “match” when one did not exist); Keko v.
4 Hingle, 318 F.3d 639, 644 (5th Cir. 2003) (declining to extend absolute immunity to a 5 forensic examiner who allegedly falsified a forensic report); Paine v. City of Lompoc, 265 6 F.3d 975, 981 (9th Cir. 2001) (noting that absolute immunity “does not shield non-7 testimonial conduct [P]olice officers . . . obviously enjoy no immunity for non-8 testimonial acts such as fabricating evidence.”) (internal quotations and citations omitted); 9 Cunningham v. Gates, 229 F.3d 1271, 1291 (9th Cir. 2000) (holding that “testimonial 10 immunity does not encompass non-testimonial acts such as fabricating evidence”).

11 Here, it is undisputed that Keen’s re-evaluation and disclosure of his revised opinion 12 to the prosecutor was a non-testimonial pretrial act. Thus, it was not covered by the 13 immunity extended to witnesses at trial. While it is true that Keen’s testimony was the only 14 vehicle by which the allegedly fabricated evidence was introduced at trial, Lacy’s claim 15 seeks not to impose liability based on Keen’s testimony, but to impose liability arising from 16 the alleged fabrication itself and its pretrial effect on the prosecutor’s decisions about what 17 charges to advance at trial. See Castellano v. Fragozo, 352 F.3d 939, 958 n.107 (5th Cir.
18 2003) (“Defendants cannot shield any pretrial investigative work with the aegis of absolute 19 immunity merely because they later offered the fabricated evidence or testified at trial.”); 20 Hinchman v. Moore, 312 F.3d 198, 205 (6th Cir. 2002) (holding that a municipal officer’s 21 verbal fabrications as told to a state trooper and to prosecutors were not entitled to absolute 22 immunity, despite the officer’s consistent testimony with these fabrications at the plaintiff’s 23 later criminal proceedings). Therefore, because there are issues of fact as to whether Keen 24 revised his opinion with reckless indifference to its truth and whether the revised opinion was 25 accurate, summary judgment is denied against Keen.

26 4. Malicious Prosecution

27 Plaintiffs allege that Keen “testified to his ‘altered’ findings in his autopsy report to 28 support the Detectives’ ‘single bullet’ crime scene theory, and thereby to assist in the 1 malicious prosecution of Plaintiff Lacy.” (Dkt. # 1 Ex. A at ¶ 108.) A claim for malicious 2 prosecution or abuse of process is not generally cognizable under § 1983 if process is 3 available within the state judicial system to provide a remedy. Usher v. City of Los Angeles, 4 828 F.2d 556, 561 (9th Cir. 1987). In order to prevail on the § 1983 claim that the homicide 5 prosecution violated his civil rights, Lacy “must show that the defendants prosecuted [him] 6 with malice and without probable cause, and that they did so for the purpose of denying 7 [him] equal protection or another specific constitutional right.” Freeman v. City of Santa 8 Ana, 68 F.3d 1180, 1189 (9th Cir. 1995) (citations omitted).

9 Malicious prosecution actions are not limited to suits against prosecutors, but may also 10 be “brought against other persons who have wrongfully caused the charges to be filed.”
11 Awabdy v. City of Adelanto, 368 F.3d 1062, 1066 (9th Cir. 2004) (citing Galbraith, 307 F.3d 12 at 1126-27).

13 Ordinarily, the decision to file a criminal complaint is presumed 14 to result from an independent determination of the prosecutor, 15 and, thus, precludes liability for those who participated in the 16 investigation or filed a report that resulted in initiation of 17 proceedings. However, the presumption of prosecutorial 18 independence does not bar a subsequent § 1983 claim against state or local officials who improperly exerted pressure on him, knowingly provided misinformation to the prosecutor, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad faith conduct that was actively instrumental in causing the initiation of legal proceedings.

19 Id. at 1067.

20 Here, because Plaintiffs have presented sufficient facts to survive summary judgment 21 based on Keen’s alleged fabrication of opinion evidence, Plaintiffs have also presented 22 sufficient facts to rebut the presumption of prosecutorial independence. While Awabdy spoke 23 of bad faith conduct that is instrumental in “causing the initiation” of legal proceedings, id., 24 the principle applies with equal force to one who engages in reckless conduct that is actively 25 instrumental in causing legal proceedings to be improperly maintained even if that conduct 26 played no role in the initiation of the legal proceedings. Should a jury find that Keen’s 27 statements to Sanders were incorrect and were made with reckless indifference to the truth, 28

1 the presumption of prosecutorial independence in maintaining and prosecuting homicide 2 charges will be successfully rebutted.

3 Despite this conclusion, Plaintiffs must still present evidence sufficient for a 4 reasonable jury to conclude that Keen acted with malice and with the intent to deprive Lacy 5 of a constitutional right and that probable cause to prosecute Lacy for homicide was lacking.
6 Thus, the relevant inquiry is whether the facts in the record, when viewed in the light most 7 favorable to Plaintiffs, permit the inference that (1) probable cause was lacking to prosecute 8 Lacy on homicide charges; (2) Keen acted with malice; and (3) Keen acted with the intent 9 to deprive Lacy of constitutional rights.

10 “Probable cause is a fluid concept – turning on the assessment of probabilities in 11 particular factual contexts – not readily, or even usefully, reduced to a neat set of legal rules.” 12 Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 232 (1983); see also Pierce, 359 F.3d at 1295 (asserting that 13 probable cause is a dynamic concept, as an investigation may result in accumulation of 14 evidence that changes the assessment of probability at a specific instance in time). Probable 15 cause also requires consideration of the totality of facts known at the time a probable cause 16 determination is made. See Gregory, 444 F.3d at 758 (“[D]eliberate obfuscation or omission 17 of material facts by an investigator at the preliminary hearing makes the investigator’s 18 subsequent reliance on the hearing’s conclusions unreasonable.”) (citing Albright v. Oliver, 19 510 U.S. 266, 280 (1994)); Bigford v. Taylor, 834 F.2d 1213, 1218 (5th Cir. 1988) (“[P]olice 20 may rely on the totality of facts available to them in establishing probable cause, they also 21 may not disregard facts tending to dissipate probable cause”); Kuehl v. Burtis, 173 F.3d 646, 22 650 (8th Cir. 1999) (“[B]ecause the totality of the circumstances determines the existence of 23 probable cause, evidence that tends to negate the possibility that a suspect has committed a 24 crime is relevant to whether the officer has probable cause . . . even if substantial inculpatory 25 evidence (standing by itself) suggests that probable cause exists.”).

26 Here, although the Grand Jury’s indictment is probative of whether probable cause 27 existed to prosecute Lacy on homicide charges, it is undisputed that the Grand Jury was not 28 informed of Keen’s autopsy report measurement indicating that the exit defect was smaller

1 in diameter than a .45 caliber bullet. This potentially exculpatory evidence may not have 2 been fully appreciated by Sanders until the defense disclosed their plan to utilize Keen's 3 measurement in arguing that Lacy could not have been the shooter that killed Mayon.
4 Because a jury might conclude from the evidence that Keen recklessly fabricated evidence 5 at the time he subsequently met with the prosecutor, the jury could also conclude that 6 probable cause was lacking to prosecute Lacy for the murder of Mayon.

7 Similarly, if a jury finds that Keen recklessly fabricated evidence and finds that 8 probable cause to prosecute homicide charges was lacking, a reasonable jury could also infer 9 malice and intent to deprive Keen of constitutional rights. Cf. New York Times Co. v.
10 Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254, 280 (1964) (stating that malice may be found based upon a statement 11 that was known to be false or was made with reckless disregard for the truth). Because 12 genuine issues of fact exist, Plaintiffs' malicious prosecution claim should also properly be 13 resolved by a jury. Summary judgment is therefore denied on Plaintiffs' § 1983 malicious 14 prosecution claim against Keen.

15 5. Governmental Liability

16 In count three, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant County of Maricopa is:

17 liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for deprivations of Plaintiff 18 Lacy's federal civil rights caused by Dr. Phillip Keen, as Chief 19 Medical Examiner for Maricopa County, the policymaker with 20 final decision making authority for the Office of the Medical 21 Examiner, in that Plaintiff Lacy was unconstitutionally 22 convicted . . . and imprisoned . . . in violation of the Fourth, 23 Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments.

21 (Dkt. # 1 Ex. A at ¶ 109.) The only remaining claims upon which the County might be liable 22 hinge on whether Keen recklessly fabricated evidence against Lacy. Defendants argue that 23 Lacy cannot show that an official policy or custom was the driving force behind any of his 24 alleged constitutional deprivations. (Dkt. # 163 at 4.)

25 A municipality or other local government entity may be sued for constitutional torts 26 committed by its officials according to an official policy, practice, or custom. Monell v. N.Y.
27 City Dep't of Soc. Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 690-91 (1978). A litigant can establish a Monell 28 claim in one of three ways:

1 (1) by showing a longstanding practice or custom which 2 constitutes the standard procedure of the local governmental 3 entity; (2) by showing that the decision-making official was, as 4 a matter of state law, a final policy-making authority whose 5 edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy in 6 the area of decision; or (3) by showing that an official with final 7 policymaking authority either delegated that authority to, or 8 ratified the decision of, a subordinate.

9 Menotti v. City of Seattle, 409 F.3d 1113, 1147 (9th Cir. 2005); see also Pembaur v. City of 10 Cincinnati, 475 U.S. 469, 484 (1986).

11 Here, Plaintiffs assert that Keen was, as a matter of state law, a final policy-making 12 authority whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy in the area of 13 decision. Plaintiffs rely exclusively on Pembaur, (Dkt. # 149 at 12), which held that 14 “municipal liability may be imposed for a single decision by a municipal policymaker under 15 appropriate circumstances.” 475 U.S. at 470. The Supreme Court has stated that “the 16 conclusion that the action taken or directed by the municipality[‘s] . . . authorized 17 decisionmaker itself violates federal law will also determine that the municipal action was 18 the moving force behind the injury of which the plaintiff complains.” Bd. Of County 19 Comm’rs v. Brown, 520 U.S. 397, 405 (1997).

20 An official policymaker is one in whom state or local law vests the “authority to 21 establish municipal policy with respect to the [relevant actions],” and such authority is 22 “final.” Id.

23 In Galbraith v. County of Santa Clara, under similar facts, the Ninth Circuit held that 24 a medical examiner “was a final policymaker for the municipality in the area of written 25 autopsy reports,” and that summary judgment was not proper for the defendant county under 26 Pembaur for a medical examiner’s falsification of an autopsy report, 231 Fed. App’x. 576, 27 577 (9th Cir. 2007). (Dkt. # 149 at 13.) Defendants argue that in Galbraith the issue did not 28 relate to the medical examiner’s conduct in falsifying an autopsy report, but only to whether the County of Santa Clara lacked training policies and procedures. (Dkt. # 163 at 5.) After careful review of Galbraith, however, it is apparent that the Ninth Circuit believed that a governmental liability claim based on a county medical examiner’s conduct in falsifying

1 autopsy reports was a sufficient basis to reverse summary judgment in the county’s favor.
2 In Galbraith’s brief to the Ninth Circuit, he argued two independent bases for municipal 3 liability – one based on Pembaur, and one based on the county’s custom of failing to train.
4 See Brief of Petitioner-Appellant at 41-49, Galbraith v. County of Santa Clara, No. 06-5 16025, 2006 WL 3097094 (9th Cir. Aug. 25, 2006). The Ninth Circuit accepted either as a 6 basis for reversing the summary judgment entered in favor of the county. The court held 7 “that (1) Dr. Ozoa was a final policymaker for the municipality in the area of written autopsy 8 reports and (2) there [was] a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the County’s lack 9 of training policies and procedures amounted to deliberate indifference to Galbraith’s 10 constitutional rights.” Galbraith, 231 Fed. App’x. at 577 (citations omitted). Because 11 Keen’s position and conduct are sufficiently analogous to facts set forth in Galbraith as it 12 pertains to Keen’s role as a final policymaker in the area of autopsy reports, summary 13 judgment in favor of Defendant County of Maricopa is not proper.⁴

14
15 16 B. Count Eight – Derivative Claims

17 Debra Ann Finley asserts a § 1983 claim against Defendants for “deprivation of her 18 substantive due process right to familial association with her natural son in violation of [the] 19 First and Fourteenth Amendments.”⁵ (Dkt. # 36 at ¶ 139.) The Ninth Circuit has held that 20 21 ⁴During oral argument on this matter, counsel for Plaintiffs moved to amend his 22 complaint to remove any reference to vicarious municipal liability and clarify his intent to 23 assert direct municipal liability against the County of Maricopa. (Dkt. # 183.) Because the 24 Court has proceeded as if the matter were properly pled, the Court denies Plaintiffs’ motion as moot.

25 ⁵Debra Ann Finley also asserts a “deprivation of her due process right to be free from 26 the onerous badge of infamy placed on her son caused by unconstitutional breaches of duty 27 and criminal conduct by the government and its agents, which she vicariously suffers from 28 within her community associations.” (Dkt. # 36 at ¶ 140.) Plaintiffs have failed to even mention such a claim in response to the motion for summary judgement. The Court is unaware of any case law supporting such a due process right. Because Plaintiffs have

1 “[P]arents can challenge under section 1983 a state’s severance of a parent-child relationship 2 as interfering with their liberty interest in the companionship and society of their children.”
3 Smith v. City of Fontana, 818 F.2d 1411, 1418 (9th Cir. 1987). Thus, so long as the violation 4 of Finley’s due process rights (i.e., the interference in her relationship with her son) was 5 caused by violations to Byron Lacy’s own constitutional rights, Finley’s claim is actionable.
6 See id. at 1420-21 (“[T]he state has no legitimate interest in interfering with this liberty 7 interest through the use of excessive force by police officers. Such an action constitutes the 8 very sort of affirmative abuse of government power which the substantive protections of the 9 due process clause are designed to prevent. Therefore, the same allegation of excessive force 10 giving rise to Mr. Smith’s substantive due process claim based on his loss of life also gives 11 the children a substantive due process claim based on their loss of his companionship.”).
12 Defendants’ recognize this in stating that “[c]ount eight must be dismissed to the same extent 13 that the underlying claims of the Plaintiff, Bryon Lacy[,] against Dr. Keen and Maricopa 14 County are dismissed.” (Dkt. # 163 at 9.) Therefore, summary judgment on count eight is 15 granted in favor of Maricopa County and Keen to the same extent summary judgment is 16 granted in favor of Defendants on count three.

20 Phillip Keen and the County of Maricopa (Dkt. # 111) is GRANTED IN PART and 21 DENIED IN PART.
