Respondents.)

Pending before the Court is Petitioner Jo Lesly Désiré’s Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus (“Petition”) (Doc. 1). Petitioner filed the instant Petition on July 18, 2008, arguing that the immigration removal proceedings pending against him are barred by res judicata and by Immigration and Customs Enforcement’s (“ICE”) own regulations. (Doc. 1-1, Pet. for a Writ of Habeas Corpus (“Pet.”) at 2.) Respondents filed a Response in Opposition to the Petition on August 18, 2008, arguing that the Court lacked jurisdiction. (Doc. 11, Resp. in Opp’n to Pet. (“Resp. to Pet.”) at 2.) Petitioner filed his Reply on September 8, 2008. (Doc. 13, Pet’r’s Reply to Resp. to Pet. (“Pet’r’s Reply to Pet.”) at 1.)

1 The Magistrate Judge issued a Report and Recommendation on January 28, 2009,
2 recommending that the Court find that jurisdiction is not barred by the immigration statutes,
3 but that the Petition should be dismissed because Petitioner is not “in custody” as required 4 by 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c)(3). (Doc. 16, Report and Recommendation (“R&R”) at 9-13.) The 5 Report and Recommendation did not reach the merits of Petitioner’s claims. (See id.) The 6 Court adopted the Report and Recommendation’s jurisdictional findings in part and rejected 7 the Report and Recommendation’s “in custody” determination, finding that the Court has 8 jurisdiction to hear Petitioner’s res judicata claim but not Petitioner’s claim that ICE violated
9 its own regulations. (Doc. 20, Dec. 14, 2009, Order (“Order”) at 3-10.) The Court then 10 referred the matter back to the Magistrate Judge for a supplemental report and 11 recommendation regarding the merits of Petitioner’s res judicata claim. (Id. at 10.)

12 The Magistrate Judge issued a Supplemental Report and Recommendation on June 13 4, 2010, recommending that the Court find that Petitioner’s res judicata claim is without 14 merit and deny the Petition. (Doc. 26, Supplemental Report and Recommendation (“Supp.
15 R&R”) at 11.) Petitioner filed a timely Objection to the Supplemental Report and 16 Recommendation. (Doc. 28, Pet’r’s Objection to the Supp. R&R (“Pet’r’s Obj. to Supp.
17 R&R”) at 1.) The Court adopts the Magistrate Judge’s Supplemental Report and 18 Recommendation and overrules Petitioner’s Objection.

19 I. BACKGROUND

20 Petitioner is a native and citizen of Haiti and was admitted to the United States as a 21 lawful permanent resident in 1967 at the age of 14. (Pet. at 2.) In 1998, Petitioner was 22 convicted of selling or transporting a controlled substance under California Health and Safety
23 Code § 11352(a) (the “California conviction”). (Pet., Ex. D, Abstract of J.). On August 16,
24 1999, the government served Petitioner with a Notice to Appear based on Petitioner’s 25 California conviction, charging Petitioner with being removable on the ground that his 26 California conviction was an aggravated felony. (Pet., Ex. E, Notice to Appear.) On June 2, 27 2000, an immigration judge (“IJ”) sustained the charges against Petitioner and issued an 28 order for his removal to Haiti. (Pet., Ex. F, IJ Order.) On January 17, 2001, the Board of

1 Immigration Appeals (“BIA”) dismissed Petitioner’s appeal. (Pet., Ex. H, BIA Order.)
2 Petitioner filed a habeas petition challenging the order of removal. Petitioner was removed 3 from the United States in 2006. (Pet. at 2.) On August 15, 2007, the United States Court of 4 Appeals for the Ninth Circuit granted Petitioner’s petition for review and vacated the removal
5 order. Desire v. Gonzales, 245 F. App’x 627, 629 (9th Cir. 2007) (unpublished
6 memorandum). The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that, following a change in the law, 7 Petitioner’s California conviction did not qualify as an aggravated felony under either the 8 categorical approach or the modified categorical approach. Id. The Ninth Circuit granted 9 Petitioner’s petition for writ of habeas corpus and vacated the order of removal. Id.

10 On December 21, 2007, the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) filed a 11 Motion for Remand to the Immigration Court with the BIA. (Pet., Ex. J, DHS Mot. to 12 Remand to Immigration Ct.) The BIA treated the DHS’s motion as a motion to reopen the 13 proceedings. (Pet., Ex. K, Decision of BIA.) Although the BIA agreed with Petitioner that 14 res judicata barred the DHS from attempting to establish that Petitioner’s California 15 conviction was an aggravated felony, it held that res judicata did not bar the DHS from 16 charging that the same California conviction rendered Petitioner removable under 8 U.S.C.
17 § 1227(a)(2)(B)(i) as an alien convicted of a controlled substance offense. (Id.) On February 18 11, 2008, the BIA granted the DHS’s motion to remand Petitioner’s removal proceedings to 19 the immigration court. (Id.) Petitioner then filed the instant Petition arguing that the 20 government is prohibited from reopening the prior immigration proceedings both by the 21 doctrine of res judicata and the relevant immigration regulations. (Pet. at 7-12.) The 22 immigration proceedings have since been “administratively closed,” essentially stayed,
23 pending the resolution of the current Petition. (Pet’r’s Obj. to Supp. R&R at 4.)

24 II. LEGAL STANDARDS AND ANALYSIS

25 The doctrine of res judicata, or claim preclusion, bars further litigation of a claim by 26 the parties and their privies following a final judgment on the merits. Poblete Mendoza v.
27 Holder, 606 F.3d 1137, 1140 (9th Cir. 2010). Under res judicata, a final judgment on the 28 merits precludes parties and their privies from re-litigating all issues that were or could have

1 been raised in the prior action. ProShipLine Inc. v. Aspen Infrastructures Ltd., 609 F.3d 960,
2 968 (9th Cir. 2010); Valencia-Alvarez v. Gonzales, 469 F.3d 1319, 1323 n.6 (9th Cir. 2006)
3 (“Res judicata or claim preclusion bars a subsequent action ‘not only as to every matter 4 which was offered and received to sustain or defeat the claim or demand, but as to any other 5 admissible matter which might have been offered for that purpose.’” (quoting Cromwell v.
6 County of Sac, 94 U.S. 351, 352 (1877)). In the immigration context, res judicata prohibits 7 the government “from initiating a second deportation case on the basis of a charge that [it] 8 could have brought in the first case, when, due to a change of law that occurred during the 9 course of the first case, [it] lost the first case.” Bravo-Pedroza v. Gonzales, 475 F.3d 1358, 10 1358 (9th Cir. 2007).

11 The BIA has the discretion to reopen “any case in which it has rendered a decision.”
12 8 C.F.R. § 1003.2(a). The BIA’s discretion is, however, limited, and “[a] motion to reopen 13 proceedings shall not be granted unless it appears to the Board that evidence sought to be 14 offered is material and was not available and could not have been discovered or presented 15 at the former hearing.” Id. § 1003.2(c). The fact that removal proceedings may be reopened 16 does not change the fact that a final decision on the merits is res judicata in any subsequent, 17 separate proceeding. Ramon-Sepulveda v. INS, 824 F.2d 749, 750 (9th Cir. 1987). However, 18 courts have recognized that the regulations governing motions to reopen or reconsider 19 decisions in immigration proceedings permit reopening or reconsidering a case even after a 20 final judgment on the merits. See Rana v. Gonzales, 175 F. App’x 988, 995 (10th Cir. 2006)
21 (noting that “there are situations in which claim preclusion does not prevent the reopening 22 or reconsideration of a final judgment,” including for example review of a district court 23 judgment pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b), and ultimately finding “no 24 reason . . . that the doctrine of claim preclusion should bar reopening a ‘final’ decision of an 25 agency in accordance with the immigration regulations but allow relief from a ‘final’ 26 judgment of a district court under Rule 60(b)”); Hamzavi v. INS, 46 F.3d 1141, *2 (9th Cir.
27 1995) (unpublished table decision) (rejecting the petitioner’s assertion that the decision to 28 reconsider an administratively final decision violated res judicata and stating that the

1 “[p]etitioner’s position is untenable [and] [t]he Ninth Circuit has consistently acknowledged
2 the BIA’s and the IJ’s right to reopen or reconsider cases in accordance with INS
3 regulations”); see also Rivera-Cruz v. INS, 948 F.2d 962, 969 n.9 (5th Cir. 1991) (noting that 4 “[the court’s] affirmance [of the BIA’s denial of the petitioner’s request for asylum and 5 withholding of removal] has no res judicata effect upon [the petitioner’s] motion to reopen, 6 should he choose to file one”).

7 In the instant matter, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals addressed the merits of the 8 Petition and found that Petitioner’s California conviction “cannot be categorized as an 9 aggravated felony.” Desire, 245 F. App’x at 629. The Ninth Circuit then granted Petitioner’s 10 Petition and vacated the removal order. Id. In the Supplemental Report and 11 Recommendation, the Magistrate Judge found that the Ninth Circuit’s decision only 12 precluded further litigation related to determining whether Petitioner’s California conviction
13 was an aggravated felony. (Supp. R&R at 11.) The Magistrate Judge also noted that “no 14 separate removal proceeding has been initiated against Petitioner.” (Id.) Ultimately, the 15 Magistrate Judge concluded that res judicata does not “prevent[] the Government from 16 seeking to reopen the administrative proceedings and allege new grounds for removal” and 17 that “Petitioner’s res judicata claim is without merit, and his Petition should be denied.” (Id.)
18 Petitioner objects to the Supplemental Report and Recommendation, arguing that the Ninth
19 Circuit’s decision, vacating the removal order and granting his Petition, was a final judgment 20 on the merits and that res judicata thus prohibits the government from reopening the 21 proceedings on the basis of a charge that the government could have brought prior to the 22 Ninth Circuit’s decision. (Pet’r’s Obj. to Supp. R&R at 7-9.)

23 Res judicata does prohibit the government from bringing a subsequent immigration 24 proceeding based on charges that could have been brought in a prior proceeding. See Bravo-
25 Pedroza, 475 F.3d at 1359. Res judicata does not, however, prohibit a motion to reopen
26 following a final decision in immigration proceedings. See Rana, 175 F. App’x at 995;
27 Hamzavi, 46 F.3d at *2. Here, the DHS moved to reopen the immigration proceedings 28 against Petitioner. Petitioner does not cite a single case, and the Court cannot find one, where

1 res judicata limited the ability to reopen an immigration proceeding. Additionally, every case
2 cited by Petitioner in support of the application of res judicata applies res judicata only to 3 prevent subsequent, separate proceedings not initiated through the reopening procedure. See 4 Bravo-Pedroza, 475 F.3d at 1361; Ramon-Sepulveda, 824 F.2d at 750-51. The process for 5 reopening an immigration proceeding is governed and limited by regulations, not the doctrine
6 of res judicata. See 8 C.F.R. § 1003.2; Rana, 175 F. App'x at 995; Hamzavi, 46 F.3d at *2.
7 As held in the Court's previous Order, this Court is without jurisdiction to review the BIA's
8 discretionary decision to reopen pursuant to the immigration regulations. (Order at 6.)
9 Petitioner must raise any challenges to the BIA's decision to reopen and remand by appealing
10 to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. (See id.)

11 III. CONCLUSION

12 While the doctrine of res judicata applies to immigration proceedings, it does not 13 prohibit the reopening of an immigration proceeding in accordance with 8 C.F.R. § 1003.2.
14 Petitioner's challenge to the decision to reopen fails, and the Petition for Writ of Habeas 15 Corpus is denied.

16 IT IS ORDERED overruling Petitioner's Objections to the Supplemental Report and 17 Recommendation (Doc. 28).

18 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED adopting the Supplemental Report and 19 Recommendation (Doc. 26).

20 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED denying Petitioner Jo Lesly Désiré's Petition for Writ
21 of Habeas Corpus (Doc. 1).
