Plaintiff Gerald Kirkish was employed by Honda Cars of Mesa, an automobile dealership operated by Defendant Mesa Imports, Inc. (“Mesa Imports”), from approximately July 2003 until his employment was terminated on August 9, 2007. On October 27, 2008, Kirkish filed his Complaint (doc. # 1) alleging that Mesa Imports violated the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (“ADA”) by inquiring into his medications. The Complaint was amended on February 25, 2009, to include a second ADA claim that Mesa Imports unlawfully discriminated against Kirkish on the basis of his disability. (Doc. # 6).

25

Now pending before the Court are the parties cross-motions for summary judgment (doc. ## 39, 44). Mesa Imports moves for summary judgment on both claims. Kirkish moves for summary judgment only on the claim that Mesa Imports’ inquiry into his

26

27

28

1 medications violated the ADA. For the following reasons, Mesa Imports' Motion is 2 granted and Kirkish's Motion is denied.

3 I. Legal Standard for Summary Judgment

4 Summary judgment is warranted if the evidence shows there is no genuine issue as 5 to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed.
6 R. Civ. P. 56(c). The moving party must produce sufficient evidence to persuade the 7 Court that there is no genuine issue of material fact. Nissan Fire & Marine Ins. Co., Ltd.
8 v. Fritz Cos., Inc., 210 F.3d 1099, 1102 (9th Cir. 2000). Conversely, to defeat a motion 9 for summary judgment, the nonmoving party must show that there are genuine issues of 10 material fact. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250 (1986). A material fact 11 is one that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law, and a factual 12 issue is genuine "if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for 13 the nonmoving party." Id. at 248.

14 The party seeking summary judgment bears the initial burden of informing the 15 court of the basis for its motion and identifying those portions of the pleadings, 16 depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the 17 affidavits, if any, which it believes demonstrate the absence of any genuine issue of 18 material fact. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). The nature of this 19 responsibility varies, however, depending on whether the moving party or the nonmoving 20 party would bear the burden of proof at trial on the issues relevant to the summary 21 judgment motion. If the nonmoving party would bear the burden of persuasion at trial, 22 the moving party may carry its initial burden of production under Rule 56(c) by 23 producing "evidence negating an essential element of the nonmoving party's case," or by 24 showing, "after suitable discovery," that the "nonmoving party does not have enough 25 evidence of an essential element of its claim or defense to carry its ultimate burden of 26 persuasion at trial." Nissan Fire, 210 F.3d at 1105-06; High Tech Gays v. Defense Indus.
27 Sec. Clearance Office, 895 F.2d 563, 574 (9th Cir. 1990).

28

1 When the moving party has carried its burden under Rule 56(c), the nonmoving 2 party must produce evidence to support its claim or defense by more than simply showing 3 “there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts.” Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co.
4 v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586 (1986). Where the record, taken as a whole, 5 could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party, there is no genuine 6 issue of material fact for trial. Id.

7 The nonmoving party’s evidence is taken as true and all inferences from the 8 evidence are drawn in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Eisenberg v. Ins.
9 Co. of North America, 815 F.2d 1285, 1289 (9th Cir. 1987). If the nonmoving party 10 produces direct evidence of a genuine issue of fact, the court does not weigh such 11 evidence against the moving party’s conflicting evidence. Rather, the motion for 12 summary judgment is denied. Id.

13 II. Undisputed Facts

14 Since approximately 1994, Kirkish has suffered from peripheral neuropathy, also 15 known as small fiber neuropathy, a painful nerve disorder that causes numbness, burning, 16 and stinging sensations primarily in Kirkish’s feet and to a lesser extent in his legs. In 17 around 2003, after several unsuccessful attempts to control the pain, Kirkish began 18 treating with Dr. Eric Shreder in Gilbert, Arizona. Dr. Shreder prescribed, and Kirkish 19 began to take, various pain medications, including Neurontin. The prescribed medical 20 information sheet for Neurontin warns of possible side effects of drowsiness, dizziness, 21 unsteadiness, and fatigue, and instructs the patient to “use caution engaging in activities 22 requiring alertness such as driving or using machinery.” Kirkish’s dose of Neurontin 23 began at one pill a day, but was increased over time to four pills a day. Although the 24 combination of medications has generally proved effective, it has not entirely eliminated 25 the pain he feels in his feet and legs.

1 In July 2003, Kirkish was hired as a Fleet/Internet Manager at Honda Cars of 2 Mesa,¹ an automobile dealership operated by Mesa Imports. Fleet/Internet Managers sell 3 new and used cars and are therefore required to drive dealership vehicles for various 4 reasons, including taking customers on test drives and moving vehicles from one location
5 to another. Because driving vehicles safely is an essential part of the job, which Kirkish
6 admits, Mesa Imports generally does not employ salespeople who are not “insurable” 7 under the company’s insurance policy. Therefore, when Kirkish was hired, he was 8 required to provide Mesa Imports with his driver’s license so that its insurance company 9 could obtain his Motor Vehicle Report and verify his insurability. Mesa Imports also 10 includes a prescription drug use policy in its Employee Handbook. The policy requires 11 all employees who take prescription drugs that “may adversely affect judgment, 12 coordination or the ability to perform assigned job duties” to notify their supervisors, who 13 “will decide whether to allow the employee to remain at work or to make other suitable 14 arrangements as allowed by law.”

15 Throughout his employment at Honda Cars of Mesa, Kirkish was in at least the top 16 half of all salespeople and usually in the top third. In fact, he was named Salesman of the 17 Year in 2004. He had no accidents and received no tickets while driving a dealership 18 vehicle and never exhibited any other poor or unsafe driving behaviors. Until 2007, there 19 were no concerns whatsoever with his job performance.

20 In 2007, although there was no noticeable decrease in Kirkish’s sales figures and 21 no discernible change in his physical capabilities, some of his co-workers became 22 concerned with his sales performance. In or around March 2007, Kirkish misinformed 23 customers on two separate occasions within a short period of time that they could receive 24 both a rebate and a special finance rate. Mesa Imports’ incentive offer had previously 25 included both the rebate and special rate. However, shortly before Kirkish’s misquotes, 26

27 ¹Honda Cars of Mesa relocated and changed its name to San Tan Honda in November 28 2007, but is still operated by Mesa Imports.

1 the incentive program was changed to include one incentive or the other, but not both.
2 Another employee, Mark Gieger, made the same mistake during the time period in which 3 Kirkish erred. Kirkish eventually received a written disciplinary warning for the two 4 misquotes, but no further action was taken. Finally, on one other occasion, Kirkish could 5 not remember the name of a customer to whom he had sold a car a few days prior.
6 However, he had contact with dozens of customers and prospective customers on a 7 weekly basis. Despite these explanations for his shortcomings, Terry Treece, Kirkish's 8 Team Leader, claims to have noticed a "distinct change" in Kirkish and was concerned 9 that something was affecting his cognitive abilities.

10 Throughout his employment, Kirkish had openly discussed his nerve disorder and 11 medications with co-workers and supervisors. Specifically, he explained to co-workers 12 that he experienced "numbness, tingling, and burning sensations" in his feet and that he 13 was taking pain medication to control the condition. Therefore, Treece was aware that 14 Kirkish was taking pain medications. Suspecting that the medications were having a 15 negative effect, Treece asked Kirkish to consider consulting his doctor, but Kirkish 16 declined to discuss his medications. Still concerned about the possible impact on his 17 sales abilities and armed with a new concern about his ability to operate a vehicle safely 18 while on the medications, Treece consulted Barry Bauman, a Sales Manager. At 19 Bauman's direction, Treece voiced his concerns to Richard Cvijanovich, Mesa Imports' 20 General Sales Manager, and explained that Kirkish was taking prescription pain 21 medications. After consulting with Bud Thurston, owner and President of Mesa Imports, 22 and Monte Yocum, the General Manager, Cvijanovich asked Kirkish what medications he 23 was taking so that he could determine whether Kirkish could safely operate the 24 company's vehicles in conformity with the company's prescription drug use policy.
25 Although Kirkish initially agreed to share information regarding his medications with 26 Cvijanovich, he later changed his mind for privacy reasons and offered instead to ask his 27 doctor to respond to Mesa Imports' concerns.

28

1 Thereafter, Mesa Imports contacted Seth Huber, a representative of its insurance
2 company. Mesa Imports informed Huber that Kirkish was taking prescription pain
3 medications and expressed its concern about his ability to drive. Huber advised Mesa 4 Imports to obtain a medical release indicating that Kirkish is able to drive safely while on 5 the medications. Therefore, on April 6, 2007, Mesa Imports sent Kirkish a letter 6 informing him that he would not be permitted to drive the company's vehicles until the 7 company "received a release from a health care professional attesting to [his] ability to 8 safely operate a motor vehicle." Kirkish submitted a request for a release to Dr. Shreder, 9 who, instead of providing a release, responded with an April 17, 2007, letter indicating 10 that Kirkish is currently taking Neurontin, that he "understands the risks and hazards of 11 driving are severe while under this medication," and that he "currently does not suffer 12 from any symptoms, although the side effects are attached to the medication."

13 Upon receiving Dr. Shreder's letter, Mesa Imports asked Kirkish to provide 14 prescription information for Neurontin, which he refused to do. Mesa Imports therefore 15 contacted its insurance company for the second time. Tom Leander, an underwriter and 16 risk manager for the insurance company, researched Neurontin's side effects and advised 17 Mesa Imports that Kirkish would be considered "uninsurable" while taking Neurontin.
18 Based on that advice and an FMLA certification from Dr. Shreder, Mesa Imports placed 19 Kirkish on FMLA leave. Mesa Imports explained that Kirkish would need to submit a 20 medical release before returning to work and provided him with a "Return to Work" form 21 for his doctor to complete. On May 23, 2007, Dr. Shreder completed the "Return to 22 Work" form, certifying that Kirkish had no work-related restrictions, but indicating that 23 his "medication limitations" were "as described on the package inserts." Because Kirkish 24 refused to disclose his package inserts, Mesa Imports told him that he would need to 25 submit a second "Return to Work" form clarifying his medication limitations.

26 When Mesa Imports did not receive clarification, it asked Kirkish for permission 27 to contact Dr. Shreder directly. On June 25, 2007, after Kirkish had authorized the 28 inquiry, Mesa Imports asked Dr. Shreder whether it was safe for him to drive the 1 company's vehicles, to which Dr. Shreder responded that he "could drive safely so long 2 as he is controlled on his medication." On June 28, 2007, unable to obtain an unqualified

3 certification that Kirkish could drive vehicles safely while on Neurontin, Mesa Imports 4 sent Dr. Shreder a letter explaining the reason for its inquiry and asking Dr. Shreder to 5 certify, in an enclosed "Return to Work" form, that "Mr. Kirkish is medically able to 6 safely perform the essential functions of his job, including driving, without creating a 7 safety risk to himself or others." Because Mesa Imports had yet to receive a response on 8 July 23, 2007, it required Kirkish to submit the "Return to Work" form by no later than 9 August 9, 2007. On August 9, 2007, Kirkish submitted the completed form in which Dr.
10 Shreder had certified the language quoted above. However, one hour later, Mesa Imports 11 received a faxed copy of the same form, cancelling the certification and stating that "Dr.
12 Shreder will not authorize driving. Mr. Kirkish is on his own recognisance (sic)." During 13 discovery, Dr. Shreder explained that he cancelled the certification because it was too 14 much of a "blanket statement."

15 On August 15, 2007, Mesa Imports sent Kirkish a letter terminating his 16 employment as of August 9, 2007, because his doctor "would not release [him] to drive, 17 and because driving is an essential function of [his] job" By that time, Kirkish had 18 already filed a discrimination charge with the Equal Employment Opportunity 19 Commission ("EEOC"), alleging discrimination under the ADA. Kirkish informed the 20 EEOC that his medical condition does not limit any of his major life activities. This 21 action followed.

22 III. Analysis

23 A. Improper Medical Inquiry in Violation of ADA

24 The ADA prohibits an employer from requiring an employee to undergo a medical 25 examination and from inquiring "as to whether [an] employee is an individual with a 26 disability or as to the nature or severity of the disability, unless such examination or 27 inquiry is shown to be job-related and consistent with business necessity." 42 U.S.C. § 28 12112(d)(4)(A). This prohibition applies to all employees, regardless of whether they

1 qualify as “disabled” under the ADA. Indergard v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 582 F.3d
2 1049, 1052-53 (9th Cir. 2009); Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep’t of Health 3 Servs., 172 F.3d 1176, 1182-83 (9th Cir. 1999). Furthermore, although an inquiry into an 4 employee’s prescription medications is not technically an inquiry into the disability itself, 5 it qualifies as a disability-related inquiry for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(A). See 6 Roe v. Cheyenne Mountain Conference Resort, Inc., 124 F.3d 1221, 1230 (10th Cir.
7 1997).

8 Mesa Imports challenges Kirkish’s claim on the bases that he is not “disabled” 9 under the ADA and, alternatively, that its inquiry into his prescription pain medications 10 was job-related and consistent with business necessity. Kirkish’s sole argument in 11 support of its cross-motion for summary judgment is that the inquiry was not job-related 12 or driven by business necessity. As mentioned, an employee need not be disabled under 13 the ADA to be protected under 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(A), so Mesa Imports’ first 14 argument is foreclosed. This claim therefore turns on whether Mesa Imports’ inquiry was 15 job-related and consistent with business necessity. See Fredenburg, 172 F.3d at 1182 16 (concluding that the defendant bears the burden of making the requisite showing of 17 business necessity).

18 Medical inquiries are job-related and consistent with business necessity when an 19 employer has good cause to determine whether an employee is capable of performing his 20 or her job-related functions. See Yin v. State of California, 95 F.3d 864, 868 (9th Cir.
21 1996). In this case, it is undisputed that selling cars and driving cars are two essential 22 functions of Kirkish’s job as a car salesperson. Mesa Imports does not argue that it had 23 cause to determine whether Kirkish was capable of selling cars while taking his 24 medications. In any event, Mesa Imports had no concerns with Kirkish’s sales 25 performance other than his two misquotes regarding sales incentives and his one-time 26 inability to recall the name of a customer to whom he had sold a car.

27 Mesa Imports argues only that it had good cause to determine whether Kirkish was 28 capable of driving safely, the other essential function of his job, and to address the related

1 concern about his continued “insurability” under the company’s insurance policy.
2 “[E]nsuring that the workplace is safe and secure” is a legitimate business necessity.
3 Conroy v. N.Y. State Dep’t of Corr. Servs., 333 F.3d 88, 97 (2d Cir. 2003). Therefore, in 4 the context of jobs that require driving, verifying the ability of an employee to drive
5 safely qualifies as a business necessity. See EEOC v. J. B. Hunt Transp., Inc., 128 F.
6 Supp. 2d 117, 131 (N.D.N.Y. 2001) (a policy of screening employees who will operate 7 vehicles for medications which may impair their ability to drive is undoubtedly job-8 related).

9 Here Kirkish had openly discussed his nerve disorder and medications with co-10 workers and supervisors throughout his employment. Specifically, he explained to co-11 workers that he experienced “numbness, tingling, and burning sensations” in his feet and 12 that he was taking pain medications. Therefore, prior to inquiring into Kirkish’s 13 medications, Mesa Imports was aware that he was taking prescription pain medications, 14 which have possible side effects that include drowsiness. In light of this knowledge, it 15 was reasonable for Mesa Imports to be concerned about Kirkish’s driving ability. See 16 Tice v. Ctr. Area Transp. Auth., 247 F.3d 506, 517 (3d Cir. 2001) (“legitimate safety 17 concerns” about driving ability existed where the plaintiff had openly “complained of 18 severe pain and difficulty walking to the point of requiring ‘narcotic’ medication” and 19 where the employer had received complaints about plaintiff’s reckless driving). Although 20 a history of drowsiness, accidents, or other poor driving behavior would certainly provide 21 an additional basis for good cause, it is not necessary. Common sense suggests that an 22 employer should not have to wait for an accident to occur to justify taking preventative 23 steps. See Wice v. General Motors Corp., No. 07-10662, 2008 WL 5235996, at *3, 2008 24 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106727, at *7-8 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 15, 2008). The fact that Kirkish was 25 taking prescription pain medications was sufficient to give rise to a legitimate concern 26 about his ability to drive safely. Because Mesa Imports’ inquiry was job-related and 27 consistent with business necessity, it is entitled to summary judgment in its favor on this 28 claim.

1 B. Discrimination in Violation of ADA

2 Pursuant to the ADA, an employer is prohibited from discriminating against “a 3 qualified individual” because of a disability in regard to job application procedures, 4 hiring, discharge, compensation, training, and “other terms, conditions, and privileges of 5 employment.” 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a). A section 12112(a) discrimination claim is 6 analyzed under the burden-shifting framework laid out in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v.
7 Green, 411 U.S. 792 (1973). See Raytheon Co. v. Hernandez, 540 U.S. 44, 49-50 (2003).
8 Under that framework, the plaintiff bears the initial burden of establishing a prima facie
9 case of discrimination. McDonnell, 411 U.S. at 802. If the plaintiff succeeds, the burden 10 shifts to the defendant to “articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason” for its 11 actions. Id. The burden then shifts back to the plaintiff to demonstrate that the 12 defendant’s proffered reason was a pretext for discrimination. Id. at 804.

13 1. Prima Facie Case

14 To establish a prima facie case of discrimination under the ADA, Kirkish must 15 demonstrate that (1) he is “disabled” within the meaning of the ADA, (2) he is a 16 “qualified individual” within the meaning of the ADA, and (3) he suffered an adverse 17 employment action because of his disability. Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 511 18 F.3d 974, 988 (9th Cir. 2007); Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 164 F.3d 1243, 1246 (9th 19 Cir. 1999). Mesa Imports moves for summary judgment on the ground that Kirkish has 20 failed to establish the first two elements of his prima facie case.

21 a. Disability

22 Kirkish is “disabled” under the ADA if he has a “physical or mental impairment 23 that substantially limits one or more . . . major life activities,” he has a “record of such an 24 impairment,” or he was “regarded as having such an impairment.” 42 U.S.C. § 12102(2).²

25
26 ² Although not raised in the parties’ briefs, the ADA was amended by the ADA 27 Amendments Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-325, 122 Stat. 3553 (2008). The amendment was 28 effective January 1, 2009. Because the alleged acts of discrimination occurred before January 1, 2009, and because the amendment does not apply retroactively, Kirkish’s claim

1 Kirkish maintains only that he was “regarded as having such an impairment,” which 2 requires him to show that Mesa Imports subjectively believed that he had an impairment 3 and subjectively believed that the impairment substantially limited one of his major life
4 activities. Walton v. United States Marshals Serv., 492 F.3d 998, 1005-06 (9th Cir. 2007) 5 (following Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc., 527 U.S. 471, 489 (1999)); EEOC v. United 6 Parcel Service, Inc., 306 F.3d 794, 805 (9th Cir. 2002). If an employee has no direct 7 evidence of the employer’s subjective belief that he was substantially limited in a major 8 life activity, the employee must demonstrate that the perceived impairment objectively 9 limits the major life activity to a substantial degree. Walton, 492 F.3d at 1006.

10 Kirkish argues only that Mesa Imports perceived an impairment that substantially 11 limited his thinking abilities. As a preliminary matter, thinking qualifies as a major life 12 activity under the ADA. See Head v. Glacier Northwest, Inc., 413 F.3d 1053, 1061 (9th 13 Cir. 2005). As for whether Mesa Imports perceived an impairment, any physiological, 14 mental, or psychological disorder qualifies as an “impairment” under the ADA. 29 15 C.F.R. § 1630.2(h). The evidence clearly indicates that Kirkish’s co-workers and 16 supervisors were aware that he suffered from peripheral neuropathy and was taking 17 prescription pain medications. Therefore, Mesa Imports perceived an impairment.
18 However, there is insufficient evidence that it believed the impairment substantially 19 limited Kirkish’s thinking abilities. Terry Treece, Mesa Imports’ Team Leader, claims to 20 have noticed a “distinct change” in Kirkish and was concerned that his medications were 21 affecting his cognitive abilities. Although Treece perceived Kirkish’s cognitive problems 22 to be serious enough to voice the concerns to Cvijanovich, Cvijanovich did no more than 23 issue a written disciplinary warning to Kirkish with respect to his two misquotes and 24 inquire into his medications. The extent of the perceived limitation on Kirkish’s thinking 25

26
27
28 _____
will be analyzed under the law in effect in 2008. See Becerril v. Pima County Assessor’s Office, 587 F.3d 1162, 1164 (9th Cir. 2009).

1 abilities is not reflected in Mesa Imports' decision to terminate his employment, because, 2 as Kirkish admits, he was terminated for his inability to drive, not his inability to think.

3 There is also insufficient evidence to support an objective determination that 4 Kirkish's thinking abilities were substantially limited. A major life activity is 5 substantially limited if an individual is "unable to perform" the activity or is 6 "significantly restricted as to the condition, manner or duration" under which the 7 individual can perform the activity compared to an average person in the general 8 population. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(j). Here the record indicates only that Kirkish misquoted 9 customers on two occasions shortly after Mesa Imports' sales incentives changed, and 10 that he failed to recall the name of one customer to whom he had sold a car. These 11 cognitive shortcomings were by no means significant, especially in light of the facts that 12 another employee also misquoted a customer on sales incentives and that Kirkish had 13 contact with dozens of customers each week. There is no other evidence of a substantial 14 limitation on Kirkish's thinking abilities. Throughout his employment, there was no 15 noticeable drop in Kirkish's sales figures, no impaired speech, and no signs of significant 16 memory loss. In short, nothing suggests that the limitation on Kirkish's thinking was 17 severe enough to qualify as "substantial" within the meaning of the ADA. Cf. Fraser v.
18 Goodale, 342 F.3d 1032, 1044 (9th Cir. 2003) (concluding that the inability to think three 19 times in a five month period due to insulin reactions was not a substantial limitation on 20 thinking). Therefore, Kirkish has failed to produce sufficient evidence that he is 21 "disabled" under the ADA.

22 b. Qualified Individual

23 Under the ADA, a "qualified individual" is an "individual with a disability who, 24 with or without reasonable accommodation, can perform the essential functions of the 25 employment position that such individual holds or desires." 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8). The 26 individual must satisfy the "requisite skill, experience, education and other job-related 27 requirements of the employment position" 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(m). Here, both 28 parties admit that driving is an essential function of Kirkish's position as a car

1 salesperson. The dispute centers on whether he was capable of performing that function.
2 Mesa Imports argues that because Dr. Shreder refused to certify, without qualification, 3 that Kirkish could drive safely while on his medications, he was incapable of driving for 4 purposes of the ADA. Kirkish, on the other hand, maintains that he was capable of 5 driving because he exhibited no driving problems throughout his employment and, 6 although Dr. Shreder refused to certify unqualifiedly that he could drive safely, Dr.
7 Shreder imposed no restrictions on his driving.

8 The ADA does not require an employer “to permit an employee to perform a job 9 function that the employee’s physician has forbidden.” Alexander v. Northland Inn, 321 10 F.3d 723, 727 (8th Cir. 2003). Therefore, an employer may rely on the written advice of 11 an employee’s physician. Id. In this case, in his April 17, 2007, letter, Dr. Shreder stated 12 that Kirkish “understands the risks and hazards of driving are severe while under this 13 medication,” and that he “currently does not suffer from any symptoms, although the side 14 effects are attached to the medication.” On May 23, 2007, Dr. Shreder completed a 15 “Return to Work” form, certifying that Kirkish had no work-related restrictions, but 16 indicating that his “medication limitations” were “as described on the package inserts.”
17 On June 25, 2007, when Mesa Imports asked Dr. Shreder whether it was safe for Kirkish 18 to drive the company’s vehicles, Dr. Shreder responded that he “could drive safely so 19 long as he is controlled on his medication.” Finally, on August 9, 2007, although Dr.
20 Shreder initially certified that “Mr. Kirkish is medically able to safely perform the 21 essential functions of his job, including driving, without creating a safety risk to himself 22 or others,” he later changed his mind, stating that “Dr. Shreder will not authorize driving.
23 Mr. Kirkish is on his own recognisance (sic).” While these statements do not 24 unqualifiedly release Kirkish to drive, they also do not expressly forbid driving. In light 25 of evidence indicating that Kirkish had no accidents, speeding tickets, or any other 26 driving problems throughout his employment with Mesa Imports, and that Dr. Shreder did 27 not expressly restrict or forbid Kirkish’s driving, a reasonable jury could find that Kirkish 28 was qualified to drive. However, as explained above, because there is insufficient

1 evidence that Kirkish was “disabled” under the ADA, Kirkish has failed to establish his 2 prima facie case of disability discrimination.

3 2. No Evidence of Pretext

4 Mesa Imports argues that even if Kirkish had established his prima facie case of 5 discrimination, Mesa Imports is nevertheless entitled to summary judgment in its favor 6 because Kirkish has produced no evidence of pretext. As explained, if an employee 7 successfully establishes a prima facie case of discrimination under the ADA, the burden 8 shifts to the employer to “articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason” for its 9 actions. McDonnell, 411 U.S. at 802. The burden then shifts back to the employee to 10 demonstrate that the employer’s reason was a pretext for discrimination. Id. at 804.

11 Here Mesa Imports has articulated a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for 12 terminating Kirkish’s employment. Specifically, Mesa Imports terminated Kirkish’s 13 employment because Dr. Shreder would not unqualifiedly release him to drive while 14 taking his medications and because driving is an essential function of his job. That reason 15 is legitimate for two reasons. First, Mesa Imports has a policy of requiring all prospective 16 and current employees to disclose prescription medication use so that it can verify the 17 employee’s driving ability. Second, Mesa Imports also has a policy of declining to 18 employ anyone who is not insurable under the company’s insurance policy. The evidence 19 establishes that Kirkish was not insurable while taking his medications unless his doctor 20 provided a medical release. Perhaps the obvious should be stated that the ADA does not 21 apply to an insurer’s underwriting of risks. The reason is also nondiscriminatory, because 22 there is no evidence that Mesa Imports discriminatorily applied its policies to Kirkish and 23 not others, or that its policies screen out individuals with disabilities.

24 The burden therefore shifts back to Kirkish to produce evidence that Mesa 25 Imports’ proffered reason is merely a pretext for discrimination. However, Kirkish has 26 entirely failed to address pretext in his response to Mesa Imports’s motion. He has 27 therefore identified no genuine issues of material fact as to pretext.

28

1 Because Kirkish has not established a prima facie case of discrimination under the 2 ADA, and alternatively because he has failed to produce any evidence of pretext, 3 summary judgment in Mesa Imports' favor will be granted on the ADA discrimination 4 claim.

5 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment 6 (doc. # 39) is granted and Plaintiff's Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment (doc. # 44) is 7 denied.

8 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of the Court enter judgment in favor 9 of Defendant and that Plaintiff take nothing. The Clerk shall terminate this action.
