COMES NOW the Plaintiff Randy Sammy Roberts and presenting to the Court as supportive-evidence Affidavit Statements that compliment his Compensatory Argument. The said statements concern the personal stress, pain and suffering experienced by the Plaintiff's Significant Others who were affected by this adverse Administrative Action of the military that is predicated on the perjured testimony of the attending medical officer with a disclaimer stating "Observation, mental, without further need of medical care" that resulted in the Plaintiff's "Wrongful Discharge". Said significant others are: Betty Jean Brown, the Plaintiff's then common-law wife, and his daughter from this relationship, Bejaye Patrice Roberts.

Hon. Stephen M. McNamee:

I am Betty J. Brown, former significant other of Randy Sammy Roberts, plaintiff/petitioner in case number CV '06 2625 PHX SMM. I am writing this letter to express my experiences with Randy during our years as a couple, and my interactions with him as my daughter's father.

In the beginning of our relationship, I really enjoyed Randy's companionship. We had many common interests and life ambitions. However, as the years rolled on, our relationship drastically deteriorated. Although he went to great lengths to hide the strong foundation of falsehood on which he built his life, I began to see Randy for who he truly was. Randy's character was manipulative, deceitful, repulsive, disappointing, and extremely exasperating.

I invested years of my life doing what I could to make our relationship work, listening to his empty promises, and upset by his unfulfilled commitments. I can not fully convey the frustration my relationship with Randy caused me. From friction between my family and I (specifically my children), to loss of sleep, energy, money, and time, Randy disrupted my life in a way I never imagined. He used me and every resource I had to accomplish his objectives: obtain the next high and cover up the next lie. He repeatedly embarrassed me with his impropriety and his lack of concern for my feelings. Moreover, he angered me with his utter disrespect for me and our daughter, BeJaye.

Randy presented himself to be very interested in the development of our daughter from her conception into the early years of her life. Nonetheless, it became apparent that his concern for her was limited. I knew undoubtedly that he loved her and wanted her to have the best, however, he did very little to ensure that. For her entire life, I alone supported her every need. Notwithstanding my tainted relationship with Randy, which was completely dissolved before BeJaye became a teenager, I never once prevented Randy from having a rapport with her. I never expected Randy to do much to provide for our daughter, however, it would have been nice to see him contribute something more than despair and disillusionment. When Randy decided to become completely absent from her life, I was relieved. I witnessed daily Randy's negative effect on BeJaye, and was glad to have that part of her life removed.

Now that I have moved on with my life and BeJaye is an adult, my interactions with Randy are infrequent; we communicate with one another for the benefit of our daughter. I have forgiven Randy for the many things he did in the past, but some are very unforgettable. I respect the fact that he has dramatically changed his life and desires to amend past wrongs. It is my hope that he accomplishes his ambitions and is successful in every endeavor.

Respectfully,

Ms. Betty J. Brown
