

1 WO

2

3

4

5

6 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
7 FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

8

9 National Labor Relations Board,)

CV 11-00913-PHX-FJM

10 Plaintiff,)

ORDER

11 vs.)

12 State of Arizona,)

13 Defendant,)

14 and)

15)
16 Save Our Secret Ballot; Joyce McClain;)
17 Jose Barraza; R. Scott Brooks, Jr.; Sandra)
18 Brown; Dominic T. Drobeck; Rafael)
19 Barraza; Jamie Franklin; Ahelardo Garcia;)
20 Angelo Granata; Justin Helwig; Jose)
21 Hernandez; Raul Hernandez; Reyes)
22 Inzunza; Derek Kaiser; Enrique Lara, Jr.;)
23 Benny P. Martinez; Gabriel Mendez;)
24 Eleuterio Miguel; Chad A. Mullenax;)
25 Roger S. Myllenbeck; Adalberto Pena)
26 Parra; Tyson Petrie; Jeff Phillips; Shawn)
27 Riegle; Daniel Rusch; David Santellano;)
28 Roy C. Smith; Kelvin L. Steffen; Johnnie)
Teller, III; Marco Teran; Steven R.)
Tulloss; Israel Vargas; Harvey Wietting;)
Raeleen Kasinec,) Intervenor-Defendants.)

25

26

27

28

The court has before it the intervenor-defendants' motion for certification (doc. 53), plaintiff's response (doc. 56), and the intervenor-defendants' reply (doc. 58). We also have

1 before us the National Labor Relation Board's ("NLRB") motion for summary judgment
2 ("MSJ") (doc. 49) and separate statement of facts (doc. 50), an amicus brief from United
3 Food and Commercial Workers, Local 99 and Arizona AFL-CIO in support of the NLRB's
4 MSJ (doc. 57), the intervenor-defendants' response (doc. 60), the State of Arizona's ("the 5 State") response (doc. 61), and the NLRB's reply (doc. 63). In addition, we have the 6 intervenor-defendants' MSJ (doc. 51) and separate statement of facts (doc. 52), the State's 7 MSJ (doc. 54) and separate statement of facts (doc. 55), the NLRB's consolidated response
8 to both motions (doc. 59) and controverting statement of facts (doc. 59-1), the intervenor-
9 defendants' reply (doc. 62), and the State's reply (doc. 64).

10 I

11 The facts are undisputed. The NLRB is the agency tasked with administration of the 12 National Labor Relations Act ("NLRA"). See 29 U.S.C. §§ 151, 153. On November 2,
13 2010, a majority of Arizona voters approved adding Article 2 § 37 to the Arizona
14 Constitution.¹ It states that "[t]he right to vote by secret ballot for employee representation 15 is fundamental and shall be guaranteed where local, state or federal law permits or requires
16 elections, designations or authorizations for employee representation." Id. To date, Arizona
17 courts have not addressed Article 2 § 37.

18 The NLRB asks for a declaration that Article 2 § 37, to the extent that it applies to 19 employers, private employees, and labor organizations subject to the NLRA, is preempted 20 because it creates a state forum to protect employee representation rights, a task which 21 Congress assigned exclusively to the NLRB.² The intervenor-defendants and the State each 22 cross-move for summary judgment.

23
24 ¹ Article 2 of the Arizona Constitution is the "Declaration of Rights."

25 ² The NLRB alleged in its original complaint that Article 2 § 37 was also preempted
26 because it eliminated the possibility of voluntary recognition of a union (doc. 1). It amended
27 the complaint to eliminate this argument after the State represented in earlier stages of this 28 litigation that Article 2 § 37 guarantees a secret ballot election when the voluntary recognition option is not selected (doc. 31).

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

II

The Arizona Supreme Court may answer questions of Arizona law certified to it by a district court "which may be determinative of the cause then pending in the certifying court," and for which there is no controlling state court precedent. A.R.S. § 12-1861. Under federal law, it is "manifestly inappropriate to certify a question" if there is no uncertain state law question whose resolution may affect the federal claim. Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914, 945, 120 S. Ct. 2597, 2617 (2000) (quoting Houston v. Hill, 482 U.S. 451, 471, 107 S. Ct. 2502, 2514 (1987)).

The intervenor-defendants move to certify the following question to the Arizona Supreme Court: "[d]oes Ariz. Const. Art. II, § 37 create a parallel state enforcement mechanism for protecting employee representation rights in addition to such enforcement mechanisms that may exist under the [NLRA], 29 U.S.C. § 151, et seq.?" Mot. for Certification at 1. The intervenor-defendants argue that the resolution of this question may be outcome-determinative, as the NLRB's sole argument for preemption will evaporate if the Arizona Supreme Court holds that Article 2 § 37 does not create a cause of action. Even if the court holds that it does, the intervenor-defendants argue that the court's articulation of the scope and nature of the cause of action will permit us to better assess the arguments raised by the parties here.

Although there is no state court precedent addressing whether Article 2 § 37 may be enforced in state courts, ample precedent in Arizona shows that litigants have brought lawsuits to enforce state constitutional rights, including lawsuits to enforce Article 2 rights. See, e.g., Chavez v. Brewer, 222 Ariz. 309, 320, 214 P.3d 397, 408 (Ct. App. 2009) (plaintiff stated a claim for violation of Article 2 § 21, the right to a free and equal election); Aida Renta Trust v. Maricopa Cnty., 221 Ariz. 603, 607, 212 P.3d 941, 945 (Ct. App. 2009) (taxpayer sued county for violation of Article 9 § 1); Bailey v. Myers, 206 Ariz. 224, 230, 76 P.3d 898, 904 (Ct. App. 2003) (property owners brought suit alleging violation of Article 2 § 17); Mecham v. Gordon, 156 Ariz. 297, 303, 751 P.2d 957, 963 (1988) (governor facing impeachment had rights under both the Federal Constitution and Article 2 of the Arizona

1 Constitution; remedy for violation of these rights "will be by appropriate motion in superior
2 court"). Accordingly, the proposed question is not one for which there is no precedent at all.

3 Moreover, we disagree that the question proposed by the intervenor-defendants is 4 determinative of the question before us. Although Article 2 § 37 does not on its face create 5 a state court remedy, the parties here have all agreed (at least, for the purposes of these 6 motions) that litigants may invoke Article 2 § 37 in state court proceedings. Indeed, the 7 intervenor-defendants argue that Article 2 § 37 is not preempted, notwithstanding the 8 existence of a state court action. Moreover, whether the Arizona Supreme Court might adopt 9 a narrowing construction of the amendment or more narrowly define the scope of a cause of 10 action is not crucial to our resolution of this action. This is because the NLRB has brought 11 a facial challenge to Article 2 § 37, which can only succeed if it shows that "no set of 12 circumstances exists under which the [amendment] would be valid." United States v.
13 Salerno, 481 U.S. 739, 745, 107 S. Ct. 2095, 2100 (1987). According to the NLRB, no 14 matter what interpretation of Article 2 § 37 the Arizona Supreme Court adopts, it is 15 preempted because "the right to a secret ballot election has long been defined by the NLRA."
16 Resp. to Mot. for Certification at 7.

17 We have the duty to decide federal questions when they are presented to us. See 18 Potrero Hills Landfill, Inc. v. Cnty. of Solano, 657 F.3d 876, 889-90 (9th Cir. 2011) (citation
19 omitted). At its heart, this action involves a quintessential federal question: whether a state
20 law is preempted by operation of the NLRA and the Supremacy Clause. See Local 926, Int'l
21 Union of Operating Eng'rs, AFL-CIO v. Jones, 460 U.S. 669, 675-76, 103 S. Ct. 1453, 1458
22 (1983) (Supreme Court has "often been asked" to assess whether state causes of action are 23 preempted by the NLRA). Given that this is a facial challenge to Article 2 § 37, that there 24 is state precedent supporting the premise that Arizona provides a judicial forum for the 25 vindication of state constitutional rights, and considering the delay that would result from 26 certification, we conclude that certification of the intervenor-defendants' question is 27 unnecessary.

28

1 III

2 By design, federal and state governments operate independently. Their dual existence,
3 however, creates the possibility that federal and state law may clash. Arizona v. United 4 States, ___ U.S. ___, 132 S. Ct. 2492, 2500 (2012). Under the Supremacy Clause, Congress
5 may preempt state law. Id. Absent an express preemption provision, federal law preempts
6 state law when Congress determines that it must exclusively regulate a particular field, or 7 when state law impermissibly conflicts with federal law. Id. at 2500-01. We begin with the 8 assumption that the state's police power is not superseded, "unless that was the clear and 9 manifest purpose of Congress." Id. at 2501 (citation omitted).

10 The NLRA states that it is "the policy of the United States to . . . protect[] the exercise 11 by workers of full freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of 12 representatives of their own choosing." 29 U.S.C. § 151. Under § 7 of the NLRA, 13 employees possess "the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations,
14 to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other 15 concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or 16 protection," and have the right to refrain from such activities. Id. § 157. The NLRB is 17 empowered "to prevent any person from engaging in any unfair labor practice." Id. § 160(a).
18 Section 8 of the NLRA establishes that it is an unlawful labor practice for employers "to 19 interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees" in their exercise of § 7 rights. Id. § 158(a)(1).
20 One example of an unfair labor practice is an employer's refusal to bargain with the 21 bargaining representative certified by the NLRB. NLRB v. Fin. Inst. Emps. of Am., Local 22 1182, 475 U.S. 192, 198, 106 S. Ct. 1007, 1010 (1986); see also 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(5).

23 The NLRA provides two paths for choosing a bargaining representative. A bargaining
24 representative may be voluntarily recognized by an employer if there is convincing evidence
25 of majority support. Alternatively, the NLRB may certify a union as the bargaining
26 representative after it conducts a secret ballot election. See Linden Lumber Div., Summer 27 & Co. v. NLRB, 419 U.S. 301, 306-307, 95 S. Ct. 429, 432-33 (1974). Section 9 of the 28 NLRA addresses elections and questions of representation. When questions regarding

1 representation arise, an employee, a labor organization, or an employer may file a petition
2 with the NLRB. 29 U.S.C. § 159(c)(1). If the NLRB determines that there is a question of 3 representation, it is instructed to "direct an election by secret ballot" and "certify the results
4 thereof." Id. Once the NLRB has held an election and certified the results, the only way an 5 employer may obtain judicial review of the election is to refuse to bargain with the election
6 winner, wait for the NLRB to bring an unfair labor practice charge against it, and challenge
7 the NLRB's decision in federal court. See Magnesium Casting Co. v. NLRB, 401 U.S. 137,
8 139, 91 S. Ct. 599, 600 (1971); see also Napili Shores Condo. Homeowners' Ass'n v. NLRB,
9 939 F.2d 717, 718 (9th Cir. 1991). A federal court "will not overturn [the NLRB's] decision
10 to certify a union unless the [NLRB] has abused its discretion." Napili Shores, 939 F.2d at 11 718.

12 The NLRB has discretion to decline asserting its jurisdiction "over any labor dispute 13 involving any class or category of employers." 29 U.S.C. § 164(c)(1). Under these 14 circumstances, states are not prevented "from assuming and asserting jurisdiction over labor
15 disputes over which the [NLRB] declines. . . to assert jurisdiction." Id. § 164(c)(2). Labor
16 disputes by definition include controversies over employee representation. Id. § 152(9).

17 The NLRA does not contain an express preemption provision. Metro. Life Ins. Co.
18 v. Massachusetts, 471 U.S. 724, 747, 105 S. Ct. 2380, 2393 (1985). Nor does it reveal "a 19 congressional intent to usurp the entire field" of labor relations. Brown v. Hotel & Rest.
20 Emps. & Bartenders Int'l Union Local 54, 468 U.S. 491, 501, 104 S. Ct. 3179, 3185 (1984).
21 In effect, however, the NLRA has "largely displaced" regulation of industrial relations by the 22 states. Wis. Dep't of Indus., Labor & Human Relations v. Gould, 475 U.S. 282, 286, 106 S.
23 Ct. 1057, 1061 (1986). From this principle emerged the general rule of preemption set forth
24 in San Diego Bldg. Trades Council v. Garmon, 359 U.S. 236, 79 S. Ct. 773 (1959). First, 25 "[w]hen it is clear or may fairly be assumed that the activities which a State purports to 26 regulate are protected by § 7 of the [NLRA], or constitute an unfair labor practice under § 27 8, due regard for the federal enactment requires that state jurisdiction must yield." Id. at 244, 28 79 S. Ct. at 779. Moreover, "[w]hen an activity is arguably subject to § 7 or § 8 of the

1 [NLRA], the States as well as the federal courts must defer to the exclusive competence of 2 the [NLRB] if the danger of state interference with national policy is to be averted." Id. at 3 245, 79 S. Ct. at 780. There are, however, exceptions. State regulation of activity will not
4 be preempted under Garmon if the activity is "a merely peripheral concern" of the NLRA,
5 or if it "touche[s] interests so deeply rooted in local feeling and responsibility that, in the 6 absence of compelling congressional direction," we cannot infer that Congress removed the 7 state's power to act. Id. at 243-44, 79 S. Ct. at 779. And state jurisdiction will not be ousted
8 "where the particular rule of law sought to be invoked before another tribunal is so structured 9 and administered that, in virtually all instances, it is safe to presume that judicial supervision
10 will not disserve the interests promoted by the federal labor statutes." Farmer v. United Bhd.
11 of Carpenters & Joiners of Am., Local 25, 430 U.S. 290, 297, 97 S. Ct. 1056, 1062 (1977)
12 (citation omitted). When analyzing whether a law is preempted under Garmon, courts 13 conduct a "balanced inquiry" into the nature of the interests at stake and the "effect upon the 14 administration of national labor policies of concurrent judicial and administrative remedies."
15 Id. at 300-01, 97 S. Ct. at 1063-64.

16 IV

17 The State argues that although Article 2 § 37 may relate to the NLRB's authority to 18 decide representation disputes under § 9 of the NLRA , it is not clear whether Article 2 § 37
19 would interfere with the NLRB's primary jurisdiction to identify unfair labor practices. Thus, 20 the State concludes that a finding of preemption in this case would require an extension of 21 Garmon to § 9 of the NLRA. But, as explained above, NLRB election proceedings and 22 certification of a union under the procedures set forth in § 9 of the NLRA are only judicially
23 reviewable in the context of a challenge to the NLRB's decision concerning an unfair labor
24 practice charge under § 8 of the NLRA. In this sense, the election proceeding and the unfair 25 labor practice charge (over which the State concedes the NLRB has primary jurisdiction) "are 26 really one." Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. NLRB, 313 U.S. 146, 158, 61 S. Ct. 908, 915
27 (1941); see also Pa. Nurses Ass'n v. Pa. State Educ. Ass'n, 90 F.3d 797, 802 (3d Cir. 1996)
28 (as part of NLRB's responsibility under § 9 to select union bargaining representative, NLRB

1 has authority to "take action needed to ensure the workers' freedom of choice"); Aeroground,
2 Inc. v. City & Cnty. of S.F., 170 F. Supp. 2d 950, 955-56 (N.D. Cal. 2001) (applying Garmon
3 to airport commission's rule requiring card check rather than NLRB-conducted secret ballot
4 election, noting that NLRB has authority to address unfair labor practices, including disputes
5 arising out of employee's § 7 right to elect union representation).

6 Although Article 2 § 37 guarantees the "right to vote by secret ballot for employee 7 representation," it does not, on its face, address how, when, or by whom these elections are 8 conducted. Without an actual state court proceeding addressing Article 2 § 37, we are left 9 to speculate how state litigation concerning the right to a secret ballot may arise, and 10 precisely what conduct might be challenged. However, given that the NLRA places the 11 responsibility on the NLRB to conduct secret ballot elections, the outcome of which is only 12 judicially reviewable in the context of an unfair labor practice proceeding, we conclude that 13 state court proceedings invoking Article 2 § 37's guarantee of secret ballot elections will at 14 least arguably overlap with the NLRB's jurisdiction under § 8 of the NLRA to address unfair
15 labor practices. See Garmon, 359 U.S. at 245, 79 S. Ct. at 780.

16 V

17 Neither defendant argues that secret ballot elections are a merely peripheral concern
18 of the NLRA. Instead, defendants assert that Article 2 § 37 falls under the Garmon exception
19 for interests "deeply rooted in local feeling and responsibility." Garmon, 359 U.S. at 244,
20 79 S. Ct. at 779. Whether a particular state regulation falls under this exception requires "a 21 sensitive balancing of any harm to the regulatory scheme established by Congress, either in 22 terms of negating the [NLRB's] exclusive jurisdiction or in terms of conflicting substantive 23 rules, and the importance of the asserted cause of action to the state as a protection to its 24 citizens." Jones, 460 U.S. at 676, 103 S. Ct. at 1459. The State argues that it has an 25 "overriding interest in protecting employees from intimidation and undue influence when 26 deciding whether to be represented by a union." State MSJ at 10. Additionally, the 27 intervenor-defendants argue that Article 2 § 37 protects freedom of association by favoring 28 secret ballot elections over voluntary recognition, an option that they argue "supplants the

1 freedom of choice guaranteed by the [NLRA]." Intervenor-Defendants' MSJ at 9. The 2 NLRB counters that regardless of the existence or strength of state interests, "the inevitable
3 result" of Article 2 § 37 is that Arizona courts will address "the same secret ballot issues" that
4 the NLRB is "assigned to resolve." NLRB Resp. at 11. Thus, the NLRB argues that Article
5 2 § 37 must be preempted, as a state court proceeding addressing the right to a secret ballot
6 election would duplicate issues presented to the NLRB when questions of representation
7 arise. See Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. San Diego Cnty. Dist. Council of Carpenters, 436 U.S.
8 180, 197, 98 S. Ct. 1745, 1757 (1978).

9 The NLRB presumes that a state proceeding concerning Article 2 § 37 will mirror
10 issues arising in an NLRB proceeding. This presumption is merely speculative, however, 11 because at this juncture we have no state court proceeding to examine. We do not know, for 12 example, whether Article 2 § 37 will result in the State conducting, supervising, or certifying
13 its own elections. See La Crosse Tel. Corp. v. Wis. Emp't Relations Bd., 336 U.S. 18, 25-26,
14 69 S. Ct. 379, 382-83 (1949) (state law permitting state board to conduct secret ballot 15 election and certify results when question of employee representation arises preempted by 16 NLRA); Bethlehem Steel Co. v. N.Y. State Labor Relations Bd., 330 U.S. 767, 775-777, 67
17 S. Ct. 1026, 1031 (1947) (state law outlining procedure for determining collective bargaining
18 unit preempted by NLRA); Mich. Cmty. Servs. Inc. v. NLRB, 309 F.3d 348, 361 (6th Cir.
19 2002) (NLRB had "exclusive jurisdiction to direct or supervise" union elections at issue).

20 Moreover, we do not know when such a dispute may arise. If a state action to enforce 21 Article 2 § 37's secret ballot guarantee is only brought after the NLRB has declined to 22 exercise its jurisdiction over a particular class of employers, the state may be statutorily
23 permitted to assume jurisdiction over the controversy. See 29 U.S.C. § 164(c)(2); NLRB v.
24 Olaa Sugar Co., 242 F.2d 714, 720 (9th Cir. 1957) (when considering questions presented 25 to it, NLRB has "right to determine the propriety of exercising its power on a given state of 26 facts"). The state court action might arise after the NLRB has granted comity to a particular
27 union election conducted by an Arizona agency. See Pl.'s Reply at 8. In that sense, the state
28 court may only be asked to address issues that the NLRB has chosen not to address.

1 Alternatively, an employee might bring an action in state court to petition the state to 2 conduct a secret ballot election rather than file a petition with the NLRB pursuant to § 9. Or,
3 a party may bring an action challenging an election held by the NLRB. The state court
4 might, if faced with those inquiries, analyze whether Garmon principles preempt its own
5 jurisdiction over a particular action. See Ethridge v. Harbor House Rest., 861 F.2d 1389,
6 1400 (9th Cir. 1988) ("Nothing in the history of the Garmon doctrine suggests that state
7 courts are incapable of determining their own jurisdiction."). This is a function that Arizona
8 courts already perform. See, e.g., Smith v. CIGNA HealthPlan of Ariz., 203 Ariz. 173, 52
9 P.3d 205 (Ct. App. 2002) (analyzing whether state law claims were preempted by the 10 NLRA); Hill v. Peterson, 201 Ariz. 363, 35 P.3d 417 (Ct. App. 2001) (same); Chavez v.
11 Copper State Rubber of Ariz., Inc., 182 Ariz. 423, 897 P.2d 725 (Ct. App. 1995) (same). If 12 a state court holds that an action invoking Article 2 § 37 is preempted by the NLRA, it is 13 hard to see how the NLRB's exclusive jurisdiction to decide the underlying representation 14 issue would be negated.

15 Thus, the negation of or intrusion into the NLRB's jurisdiction to investigate unfair 16 labor practices or resolve questions of employee representation could vary widely depending 17 on the procedural and factual posture of a particular state court proceeding. See Sears, 436
18 U.S. at 197, 98 S. Ct. at 1757 ("critical inquiry" is whether state court controversy is identical 19 to "that which could have been, but was not, presented to" the NLRB) (emphasis added); see 20 also Farmer, 430 U.S. at 297, 97 S. Ct. at 1062. Moreover, deciding that a state court 21 proceeding creates a realistic risk of interference with the NLRB's primary jurisdiction is 22 only half the battle. We must still balance the harm to the regulatory scheme with the 23 importance of the state cause of action in the protection of its citizens. See Jones, 460 U.S.
24 at 676, 103 S. Ct. at 1459. Without details concerning when actions invoking Article 2 § 37
25 arise, what they look like, and who brings them, we cannot perform the "sensitive balancing"
26 the law requires. See id.

27 On its face, Article 2 § 37 does not address who must hold secret ballot elections, who 28 must ensure that these are conducted appropriately, and when in the course of union

1 organizing these must occur. It guarantees the right to election by secret ballot, a process that
2 the NLRB itself must follow when it determines an election is needed. See 29 U.S.C. §
3 159(c)(1) ("If the [NLRB] finds. . . that such a question of representation exists, it shall direct
4 an election by secret ballot") (emphasis added). It is possible that state litigation invoking
5 Article 2 § 37 may impermissibly clash with the NLRB's jurisdiction to resolve disputes over 6 employee recognition, conduct secret ballot elections, and address unfair labor practices. But 7 because we are presented with a facial challenge to a law for which there "is a basic 8 uncertainty about. . . how it will be enforced," it "would be inappropriate" for us to assume 9 that Arizona courts will construe, and enforce, Article 2 § 37 "in a way that creates a 10 conflict" with the NLRA. See Arizona, 132 S. Ct. at 2510. Thus, we cannot conclude as a 11 matter of law that Article 2 § 37, on its face, is preempted by the NLRA. Our ruling today, 12 however, should not be construed to foreclose as-applied challenges if and when they 13 materialize.

14 VI

15 IT IS ORDERED DENYING the intervenor-defendants' motion for certification
16 (doc. 53). IT IS ORDERED DENYING the NLRB's motion for summary judgment (doc.
17 49). IT IS ORDERED GRANTING the intervenor-defendants' motion for summary
18 judgment (doc. 51). IT IS FURTHER ORDERED GRANTING the State's motion for 19 summary judgment (doc. 54). The Clerk shall enter judgment in favor of defendants and 20 against plaintiff.

21 DATED this 5th day of September, 2012.

22
23
24

 Frederick J. Martone
25 United States District Judge
26
27
28