UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

Daniel L. Kloberdanz,)	2:13-cv-2182 JWS
Plaintiff,)	ORDER FROM CHAMBERS
vs.)	(Motion at Docket 221)
Joseph K. Pellino,)
Defendant.)

I. MOTION PRESENTED

At docket 221, Defendant Joseph Pellino (“Pellino”) filed a motion asking the court to reconsider its order at docket 220, which denied his motion in limine at docket 218. Plaintiff Daniel Kloberdanz (“Kloberdanz” or “Plaintiff”) responded to the motion for reconsideration as directed at docket 224. Oral argument was requested, but would not be of assistance to the court.

1 II. BACKGROUND

2 Klobberdanz filed suit in state court against numerous defendants seeking to 3 recover damages arising from events which transpired on June 15, 2012. Early in the 4 litigation, Klobberdanz agreed to the dismissal of his claims against the Maricopa County
5 Board of Supervisors, the five individual Supervisors, and the Maricopa County
6 Attorney. In an order at docket 20, the court granted defense requests to dismiss
7 Klobberdanz’s claims against defendants Arpaio, the Maricopa County Sheriff’s office
8 and Maricopa County. The remaining claims were those pled against Defendants 9 Burghart, Carpenter, and Pellino. Later, the parties stipulated to dismiss Count Three 10 in its entirety as to all defendants and Count Seven, which was directed only at Pellino.¹
11 The remaining claims were the subject of a seven-day jury trial in August of 2016.
12

14 During trial, the court granted a directed verdict in favor of Pellino as to the 15 Malicious Prosecution claim. The jury later returned verdicts in favor of Burghart and 16 Carpenter on Klobberdanz’s Fourth Amendment Excessive Force claim, his only claim
17 against them. The jury also returned a verdict in favor of Pellino on Klobberdanz’s false 18 arrest claim, but could not agree on verdicts on Klobberdanz’s other claims against 19 Pellino. A mistrial was declared as to those claims. They will be litigated in a second 20 trial scheduled for February 6, 2017.
21

23 Pellino filed a motion in limine at docket 218. In that motion, Pellino asked that 24 the court “issue an order precluding the presentation of any evidence of claim for 25 damages regarding Plaintiff’s allegations that, after he was pushed by Pellino and then

1 taken to the ground to be arrested, Pellino then pounded/slammed Plaintiff's head into 2 the ground three times, before he was stood up in handcuffs, and also that he was 3 kicked and punched during that same time."² Plaintiff filed a response in opposition at 4 docket 219. The court filed a text order denying the motion, indicating that it found
5 Plaintiff's position to be correct.³ Pellino then filed his motion for reconsideration, 6 arguing that Plaintiff's response did not adequately address his arguments nor provide 7 any credible rebuttal for the court to rely upon. The court directed Kloberdanz to 8 respond.

10 III. STANDARD OF REVIEW

11 Under the law of the case doctrine, a court is generally precluded from 12 reconsidering an issue that has already been decided by the same court or a higher
13 court in the same case.⁴ However, as long as a district court retains jurisdiction over a 14 case, it has inherent power to reconsider and modify an interlocutory order for sufficient 15 cause.⁵ That inherent power is not unfettered: "the court may reconsider previously 16 decided questions in cases in which there has been an intervening change of 17 controlling authority, new evidence has surfaced, or the previous disposition was clearly 18 erroneous and would work a manifest injustice."⁶ Local Rule of Civil

1 Procedure 7.2(g)(1) recites essentially the same rule, requiring a showing of “manifest
2 error.”⁷

3 IV. DISCUSSION

4 Pellino’s motion in limine is essentially asking the court to find that collateral
5 estoppel prevents Kloberdanz from retrying the issue of whether any head slamming,
6 kicking, and punching took place during his arrest. Collateral estoppel, or issue
7 preclusion, “prohibits relitigation of issues that have been adjudicated in a prior action.”⁸

8 It applies when the following requirements have been met: (1) the issue sought to be 9 precluded is the same as that involved in the prior action; (2) the issue must have been 10 actually litigated; (3) the issue must have been determined by a valid and final 11 judgment; and (4) the determination must have been essential to the final judgment.”⁹

12 “The party asserting issue preclusion bears the burden of proof as to all elements and 13 must introduce a sufficient record to reveal the controlling facts and the exact issues 14 litigated.”¹⁰

15 The requirement that an issue be actually litigated and determined does not 16 mean that there had to be a specific finding or opinion on the matter.¹¹ Necessary

1 inferences from the entire record—the judgment, pleading, evidence, and jury
2 instructions—will be given preclusive effect as well.¹²

4 Here, Pellino asks this court to consider what the jury necessarily determined
5 about Pellino’s conduct based on its verdict in favor of Burghart on the Excessive Force
6 claim. In that claim, which was brought against all three officers, Kloberdanz alleges
7 that Pellino pushed him down to the ground and that when he stood back up Pellino
8 knocked him back down to the ground. He alleges that while he was on the ground
9 being handcuffed, Pellino pushed and pounded his head into the ground multiple times 10 and some combination officers kicked and punched him. Burghart and Carpenter are 11 not alleged to have been involved in the push and take down of Kloberdanz, but they 12 are alleged to have participated in the alleged excessive force that occurred after the 13 second take down—the head pounding, kicking, and punching.
14
15

16 The court’s instruction on Excessive Court included the following paragraph:

17 . . . Kloberdanz must show that the defendant personally participated in 18 actions which allegedly deprived Kloberdanz of his particular rights under 19 the United States Constitution. Personal participation does not require 20 that the officer’s actions themselves rise to the level of a constitutional 21 violation but rather only that the officer was an active participant in the 22 constitutional deprivation rather than a mere bystander.¹³

28 v. TBWA Chiat/Day Inc., 552 F.3d 1137, 1145 (9th Cir. 2009) (finding that the jury instructions underlying the finding left doubt as to what the jury decided).

¹³Doc. 192 at p. 12.

1 The undisputed evidence showed that Burghart was at least assisting with the 2 handcuffing and arrest of Kloberdanz at the time of the alleged excessive force.¹⁴
3 Burghart testified that he had control of Kloberdanz’s right arm to secure handcuffs
4 when Kloberdanz was on the ground the second time and that he assisted in lifting
5 Kloberdanz back up to his feet, which is the time during which Kloberdanz alleges 6 Pellino pushed and slammed his head multiple times and the officers kicked and 7 punched him.

10 Pellino asserts that, because Burghart was undisputedly hands-on during the 11 arrest and because the jury was instructed to find excessive force in the event a 12 defendant actively participated in the unconstitutional conduct, the jury members could 13 not have rationally found for Burghart as to the Excessive Force claim if they thought 14 Pellino had done any of the alleged beating while Kloberdanz was on the ground. In 15 other words, given that the jury found for Burghart on the excessive force claim, Pellino 16 argues that there is only one rational inference to be drawn from this case record: the 17 jury determined that the head slamming and beating did not happen.
18

19 Pellino’s rationale is appealing. Indeed, there is some case law suggesting that 20 Burghart’s actions would make him liable. In Blankenhorn v. City of Orange,¹⁵ the Ninth 21 Circuit explained in a footnote that liability for excessive force is predicated on the 22 officer’s “integral participation.” Integral participation does not require that the officer’s 23

25 ¹⁴The facts were contradictory about where Carpenter was during the handcuffing and 26 beating, and therefore the court cannot make any inferences about what the jury necessarily 27 found about the alleged beating based on their verdict in favor of Carpenter on the Excessive 28 Force Claim.

¹⁵485 F.3d 463 (9th Cir. 2007).

1 actions themselves be unconstitutional, but that the officer had a “fundamental” role in 2 the conduct.¹⁶ The court in Blankenhorn concluded that where excessive force was 3 alleged, in part based on the use of hobble restraints on the plaintiff’s wrists and ankles, 4 an officer’s assistance in handcuffing the plaintiff before the other officer applied the 5 hobble restraints was instrumental to the efforts to restrain the plaintiff in an allegedly 6 excessive manner.¹⁷ On the other hand, there are district court cases which have held 7 that assistance in handcuffing does not amount to “integral participation.” For example, 8 in Mendez v. Montour,¹⁸ the district court held that an officer who was holding the 9 plaintiff during his arrest did not actively participate in the excessive force used by his 10 partner, who had suddenly performed a take down of the plaintiff and then later
11 slammed the plaintiff’s head against the patrol car.¹⁹

12
13
14
15 As the case law shows, what constitutes active participation is highly fact 16 dependent. The court’s instruction was not that nuanced: it did not provide the jury with 17 specific guidance on what situations have and have not been considered “active 18 participation.” The instruction explained that participation does not require each 19 officer’s actions themselves rise to the level of a constitutional violation, but it did not 20 otherwise try to define or explain what active participation would mean besides that it 21 does not include “mere bystander[s].” The court did not instruct the jury that any hands-22 on participation is per se “active participation,” nor does the case law necessarily

1 support such an instruction. Therefore, the jury could have found that while Burghart 2 was a participant in the arrest, which they deemed lawful, he was not a participant in 3 Pellino's actions.

5 Pellino cites a Tenth Circuit case, Estate of Booker v. Gomez,²⁰ to argue that 6 active participation includes failing to intervene when another officer uses excessive
7 force. Again, however, the court's instruction to the jury was not that specific. It did not 8 tell the jury that complicity is tantamount to participation.

10 While all jury members necessarily found that Burghart was not actively lifting 11 and dropping Kloberdanz or kicking and hitting him, the court concludes, based on its 12 instruction, that some members of the jury could have potentially found that Pellino
13 must have engaged in some level of force—pressure to the head, pounding of the head
14 to some extent, or kicking and hitting—given Kloberdanz's injuries. It is also possible 15 that, as Pellino suggests, the jury unanimously agreed that Pellino did not engage in the 16 alleged head slamming, but that some members thought the claim against Pellino for 17 excessive force was still valid based on Pellino's pushing of Kloberdanz. However, the 18 court cannot speculate on which is the most likely scenario. There is simply no way to 19 know what specific testimony jury members believed and what they did not.
20

22 While it is a close call, the court cannot conclude that collateral estoppel on the 23 issue of Pellino's actions is warranted here. "Where doubt exists as to the basis for the 24 jury's finding, collateral estoppel does not apply."²¹

1 V. CONCLUSION

2 For the reasons above, the court denies the motion at docket 221 and maintains 3 its denial of Pellino's motion in limine.
