

1 Background

2 This diversity of citizenship-based matter arises from two reinsurance 3 agreements between the parties. Scottsdale, after settling a consolidated class 4 action proceeding, known as the Billieson action, against its insured for $57 million, 5 allocated the settlement amount equally between the two policy years covered by 6 its insurance and then billed the loss payment to its reinsurers, one of which was 7 John Deere, as ten occurrences in each policy year. Scottsdale billed John Deere 8 the sum of $1,173,014.26 based on its calculation of the percentage of loss that 9 John Deere assumed through its reinsurance agreements. John Deere disputed 10 Scottsdale's settlement amount and the manner in which Scottsdale allocated the 11 settlement to various occurrences. Pursuant to a binding arbitration provision in the 12 reinsurance agreements, the parties submitted their dispute to a three-person 13 arbitration panel consisting of insurance and reinsurance professionals. The 14 arbitration panel, after conducting a three-day hearing and considering additional 15 post-arbitration briefing, issued its final award on January 14, 2015. The final award 16 stated in its entirety:

17 After conducting a final hearing in this arbitration between 18 Scottsdale Insurance Company ("Scottsdale"), on the one hand; and 19 John Deere Insurance Company ("John Deere"), on the other hand; on 20 October 28, 2014, October 29, 2014 and December 17, 2014; 21 considering testimony, documentary evidence, briefs, and arguments 22 of the parties; and deliberating on these matters, the Panel, hereby;

23 1. Declares that the September 15, 2002 trial court ruling in the 24 Billieson action is not binding on Scottsdale as "law of the case";

25 _____
26 be confirmed or modified, and other arguments raised by the parties, such as John Deere's argument that Scottsdale's acceptance of its payment of the award amount constituted an accord and satisfaction, were deemed not to be necessary to that resolution.

1 2. Directs John Deere to pay its respective share of reinsurance, 2 based on an adjusted settlement amount of $43.16 million for 3 reinsurance billing purposes, which results in a total payable by John 4 Deere of $888,198.12 within fourteen (14) calendar days of this award;

5 3. The Panel determined that no other further relief is award in 6 this arbitration[.]

7 John Deere has paid Scottsdale the amount ordered by the arbitration panel.

8 Discussion

9 In its petition, Scottsdale seeks to modify and correct the arbitration award 10 pursuant to § 11(a) of the Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”), 9 U.S.C. § 11(a), and the 11 Arizona Uniform Arbitration Act, A.R.S. § 12-1513(A)(1); in its memoranda, 12 Scottsdale relies mainly on Arizona law to support its position, whereas John Deere 13 contends that the FAA governs this matter.

14 Both reinsurance agreements provided that “[t]o the extent not otherwise 15 mutually agreed or provided for in this Article, the procedures and rules applicable 16 to arbitration under the laws of the state of Arizona, as from time to time set forth, will 17 govern the procedures of the arbitration with the appointed umpire fulfilling the rule 18 and authority of the judge unless the parties otherwise mutually agree.” The same 19 arbitration article in both agreements further provided that “[e]ither party may apply 20 to the United States District Court in Arizona for an order confirming the award; a 21 judgment of such Court will thereupon be entered on the award.”

22 The Court concludes that while Arizona law governed the procedures 23 applicable to the arbitration process itself, the parties’ arbitration provision does not 24 clearly and unambiguously provide that Arizona law is to govern the procedure for 25 confirming the arbitration award. Fidelity Federal Bank v. Durga Ma Corp., 386 F.3d 26 1306, 1311-12 (9th Cir.2004) (Court noted that there is a strong presumption that the

1 FAA, not state law, supplies the rules for arbitration and that to overcome that 2 presumption, the parties to an arbitration agreement “must evidence a clear intent 3 to incorporate state rules for arbitration.”) Based on this standard, the court 4 concluded that an arbitration clause providing that disputes were to be resolved by 5 arbitration “in accordance with the laws of the State of California and the rules of the 6 American Arbitration Association” meant that the parties elected California 7 substantive law but federal procedural law and that a challenge to the arbitration 8 award had to be resolved under the FAA.) (some internal quotation marks omitted).
9 The Court will thus resolve the issues involved in this action pursuant to the FAA. Cf.
10 Kyocera Corp. v. Prudential-Bache Trade Services, Inc., 341 F.3d 987, 1000 and 11 1003 (9th Cir.2003) (en banc) (Court, in concluding that “[p]rivate parties may design 12 an arbitration process as they wish, but once an award is final for the purpose of the 13 arbitration process, Congress has determined how the federal courts are to treat that 14 award[,]” further stated that “[o]nce a case reaches the federal courts, ... the private 15 arbitration process is complete, and because Congress has specified standards for 16 confirming an arbitration award, federal courts must act pursuant to those standards 17 and no others.”)

18 Under the FAA, the Court’s authority to review an arbitration award is 19 exceedingly limited. Id., at 998 (The FAA provides “an extremely limited review 20 authority[.]”); accord, U.S. Energy Corp. v. Nukem, Inc., 400 F.3d 822, 830 (10th 21 Cir.2005) (“[T]he standard of review of arbitral awards is among the narrowest 22 known to the law.”) (internal quotation marks omitted); AIG Baker Sterling Heights 23 v. American Multi-Cinema, 508 F.3d 995, 1001 (11th Cir.2007) (same); Maine Central 24 Railroad Co. v. Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, 873 F.2d 425, 428 25 (1st Cir.1989) (same).
26

1 Section 9 of the FAA mandates that the award must be confirmed unless it is 2 required to be vacated, modified or corrected under §§ 10 or 11. Scottsdale 3 contends that the award must be modified pursuant to § 11(a), which permits an 4 application to modify or correct an arbitration award “[w]here there was an evident 5 material miscalculation of figures or an evident material mistake in the description 6 of any person, thing, or property referred to in the award.”² Scottsdale’s argument 7 is that the arbitration panel committed a computational error that is plain on the face 8 of the award because

9 in identifying $888,198.12 as the amount of [John Deere’s] respective 10 share of reinsurance, the panel miscalculated the manner in which the 11 respective layers of reinsurance applied to the loss. Rather than 12 calculate [John Deere’s] respective share of reinsurance based on its 13 respective share of the limit and retention applicable to the “adjusted 14 settlement amount,” the panel appears to have simply reduced the 15 original amount billed in proportion to the reduction in the overall 16 settlement amount. As a result, the amount the Award directs [John 17 Deere] to pay - $888,198.12 - is $284,816.20 less than [John Deere’s]
18 actual “respective share of reinsurance” based on the adjusted 19 settlement amount.

20 Under § 11(a), the issue to be resolved by the Court is not whether the 21 arbitration panel reached what the Court believes is the correct decision based on 22 the underlying facts, but solely whether the panel’s alleged mathematical 23 miscalculation is plainly evident from the face of the award. See e.g., Apex Plumbing 24 Supply v. U.S. Supply Co., 142 F.3d 188, 194 (4th Cir.1998) (Court held that an

26 Scottsdale’s reliance on Arizona law does not change the outcome here because Arizona’s standard for modifying or correcting an arbitration award under A.R.S. § 12-1513(A)(1) is the same as that under § 11(a).

1 arbitration award could not be modified under § 11(a) because the alleged 2 mathematical miscalculation was not “evident” because it did not appear on the face 3 of the award.) Notwithstanding Scottsdale’s contention that the award provides the 4 necessary input for the Court to conclude that the panel miscalculated the amount 5 due Scottsdale, the Court concurs with John Deere that a finding of a computational 6 error would require improper speculation because such an error is not patently 7 obvious from the face of the award.

8 The panel’s award did not detail its computational reasoning, and the panel 9 was not required to do so. A.G. Edwards & Sons v. McCollough, 967 F.2d 1401, 10 1403 (9th Cir.1992) (“[A]rbitrators are not required to state the reasons for their 11 decisions[,]” and “[t]he rule that arbitrators need not state their reasons presumes the 12 arbitrators took a permissible route to the award where one exists.”) As the record 13 shows, Scottsdale submitted a proposed form of an award to the panel wherein it 14 requested a payment of $1,173,014.20 from John Deere, which is an amount that 15 the panel obviously rejected. See McIlroy v. Painewbber, Inc., 989 F.2d 817, 821 (5th 16 Cir.1993) (“Receipt of less than one requests in an arbitration proceeding does not, 17 standing alone, constitute a miscalculation under section 11 of the [FAA].”); Kenneth 18 H. Hughes, Inc. v. Aloha Tower Development Corp., 654 F.Supp.2d 1142, 1152
19 (D.Hawaii 2009) (“The fact that the arbitrator did not agree with all of Petitioner’s 20 damage estimates, and granted Petitioner less money that requested, is not 21 evidence of a material miscalculation.”) Although Scottsdale asserts that the panel 22 found that Scottsdale’s billing of the loss as ten occurrences was proper, the Court 23 cannot determine the correctness of that assertion from the face of the award given 24 that the panel’s award did not include Scottsdale’s proposed award provision to that
26

1 effect and the award did not otherwise specifically say anything about the issue.³
2 Scottsdale also asserts that the panel's reduction in the per occurrence loss amount 3 from $2,800,000 to $2,158,000 in its award did not result in a reduced payment by 4 reinsurers and that John Deere's "respective share of reinsurance" based on the 5 adjusted settlement amount remained the same as the amount that Scottsdale 6 originally billed it. The Court also does not know whether this assertion is correct 7 since the face of the award does not set forth how or why the panel reduced the per 8 occurrence loss amount, if that is in fact what it did to reach its adjusted settlement 9 amount. While Scottsdale's contention that the panel erred by misapprehending the 10 reinsurance agreements' retention and limit provisions in arriving at its award 11 amount may be correct, it is well established, given the FAA's highly deferential 12 standard of review, that neither an arbitration panel's erroneous legal conclusions 13 nor unsubstantiated factual findings justify federal court review of an arbitral award.
14 Bosack v. Soward, 586 F.3d 1096, 1102 (9th Cir.2009); French v. Merrill Lynch, 15 Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 784 F.2d 902, 905 (9th Cir.1986); accord, Apex 16 Plumbing Supply, 142 F.3d at 194 ("[C]ourts have held generally that even a mistake 17 of fact or misinterpretation of law by an arbitrator provides insufficient grounds for the 18 modification of an award."); see also, Kyocera, 342 F.3d at 1003 ("The risk that 19 arbitrators ... may make errors with respect to the evidence on which they base their 20

22 The record establishes that Scottsdale's proposed award included a 23 provision that stated that the panel "[d]eclares that Scottsdale's presentation of the 24 Billieson class action loss settlement as ten 'occurrences' under the terms of the 25 Casualty Excess of Loss Reinsurance Agreements ... is reasonable and 26 permissible[.]" For a reason not explained in the panel's award, that proposed provision was not included in the final award. The Court cannot determine from the face of the award whether the panel's computation was based on its agreement or disagreement with Scottsdale's position as to this issue.

1 rulings, is a risk that every party to arbitration assumes[.]”)

2 Since the Court cannot grant Scottsdale’s motion to modify or correct the 3 arbitration award based on its conclusion that there is no “evident material 4 miscalculation” or other basis justifying Scottsdale’s request, it concludes that John 5 Deere’s motion to confirm the award should be granted pursuant to the mandatory 6 terms of § 9 of the FAA. The Court rejects Scottsdale’s argument that no 7 confirmation order is necessary or proper since John Deere has already paid the 8 award. Collins v. D.R. Horton, Inc., 361 F.Supp.2d 1085, 1093 (D.Ariz. 2005) (In a 9 confirmation action in which the defendant argued that the plaintiffs’ confirmation 10 request was spurious because they had already paid the arbitration award, the court, 11 noting that satisfaction of an arbitration award and confirmation of the award are 12 separate issues, rejected the defendant’s argument on the ground that § 9 of the 13 FAA is phrased in mandatory terms that require the entry of a confirmation order 14 unless the arbitration award is modified, corrected or vacated.); accord, Gorsuch, 15 Ltd. v. Wells Fargo National Bank Ass’n, 2013 WL 4494304, at *1-2 (D.Colo. Aug.
16 21, 2013) (Court concluded that confirmation of an arbitration award was required 17 by § 9 of the FAA notwithstanding that the award had been complied with because 18 there was no basis for vacating, modifying or correcting the award.)

19 John Deere has requested an award of its reasonable attorneys’ fees and 20 costs incurred in seeking confirmation of the arbitration award, which Scottsdale 21 opposes. While there is nothing in the FAA which provides for attorney’s fees to a 22 party who is successful in obtaining confirmation of an arbitration award, Menke v.
23 Monchecourt, 17 F.3d 1007, 1009 (7th Cir.1994), both of the parties’ reinsurance 24 agreements specifically provided that if this Court enters an order confirming the 25 arbitration award, “the attorneys’ fees of the party so applying and court costs will be 26

1 paid by the party against whom confirmation is sought.” The Court will grant John 2 Deere its reasonable fees and costs associated with its application and motion to 3 confirm the arbitration award, provided that it timely files an application for its fees 4 and costs that complies with the requirements of LRCiv 54.2(d) and (e). Scottsdale
5 may file a timely response to John Deere’s application in compliance with LRCiv 6 54.2(f). Therefore,

7 IT IS ORDERED that petitioner Scottsdale Insurance Company’s Motion for 8 an Order to Modify or Correct Arbitration Award (Filed Doc. 19) is denied.

9 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that respondent John Deere Insurance
10 Company’s Motion to Confirm Award and Enter Judgment (Filed Doc. 22) is granted 11 and that the Final Award of the Arbitration Panel, dated January 14, 2015, is 12 confirmed by the Court pursuant to § 9 of the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 9.

13 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that respondent John Deere Insurance Company 14 is awarded its reasonable attorneys’ fees and costs it incurred in seeking the 15 confirmation of the final arbitration award as provided in this Order, and its 16 application for fees and costs shall be filed no later than March 18, 2016.

17 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of the Court shall enter a judgment 18 in favor of respondent John Deere Insurance Company confirming the Final Award 19 of the Arbitration Panel, dated January 14, 2015.

20 DATED this 16th day of February, 2016.
