10 Plaintiff,

11 v.

12 United States Department of 13 Transportation, et al.,

14 Defendants.

No. CV-15-02654-PHX-DLR

ORDER

16 Defendants have filed a motion to dismiss. (Doc. 27.) The motion is fully 17 briefed.<sup>1</sup> For the reasons below, the motion is granted.

18 BACKGROUND

19 This lawsuit arises out of Plaintiff Andrew Brigida's failed application for 20 employment as an air traffic controller with the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).
21 Prior to 2014, as part of their hiring program, the FAA considered candidates who 22 completed Air Traffic-Collegiate Training Initiative (CTI) programs at approved CTI
23 Institutions. (Doc. 26, ¶¶ 22-24.) To be eligible for employment as a trainee controller, 24 graduates of these programs were then required to pass an air traffic aptitude test, known 25 as the Air Traffic Control Selection and Training (AT-SAT) exam. (Id., ¶ 26.) Once the 26 candidates graduated from an approved CTI Institution and passed the AT-SAT, they

27
28 <sup>1</sup> Plaintiff's request for oral argument is denied. The issues are fully briefed, and the Court finds that oral argument will not aid in the resolution of this matter. See LR Civ. 7.2(f); Fed. R. Civ. P. 78(b).

1 were entered into a “direct hire pool of applicants, were placed on a Qualified Applicant
2 Register List, and were given hiring preference for Air Traffic Control Specialist”
3 (ATCS) positions. (Id., ¶ 31.)

4 In 2013, the FAA decided to modify its hiring process and notified candidates that 5 it was “planning to open a general public announcement in FY 2014 to add more depth 6 and diversity to [its] controller hiring sources.” (Id., ¶ 41.) As part of this new hiring 7 strategy, the FAA required all applicants, including CTI graduates, to apply through this 8 vacancy announcement. (Id., ¶ 49.) A revised testing process was also implemented, 9 under which candidates were required to complete a biographical questionnaire (BQ).
10 (Id., ¶ 50.) If the candidate passed the BQ, he would then be eligible to take the cognitive 11 portion of the AT-SAT and be referred for a selection decision. (Id.)

12 On May 13, 2013, around the time the FAA began modifying its hiring practices, 13 Brigida passed the AT-SAT exam “with the top numerical score possible of 100%.” (Id., 14 ¶ 76.) On August 13, 2013, he graduated from Arizona State University’s FAA-approved 15 CTI program. (Id., ¶ 77.) That same month, ASU recommended him to the FAA and he 16 was placed on the Qualified Applicant Register. (Id., ¶¶ 77-78.) In December 2013, 17 however, the new hiring process took effect and “the FAA eliminated the CTI Applicant 18 Register, which resulted in Plaintiff Brigida, and other putative Class Members, losing 19 their employment preference and opportunity.” (Id., ¶ 52.)

20 On January 27, 2014, Brigida was informed of the changes to the hiring process 21 and was told that he should reapply under the new process. (Id., ¶ 79.) On February 10, 22 2014, Brigida reapplied for the position, and on February 27, 2014, the FAA notified him 23 that he failed the BQ, and was therefore ineligible for hire. (Id., ¶¶ 80, 82.) In the 24 following months, Brigida applied for thirty-six positions with the FAA, but was never 25 hired. (Id., ¶ 87.)

26 In December 2015, Brigida filed suit challenging the FAA’s new hiring process.
27 (Doc. 1.) Several months later, on July 15, 2016, “Congress passed the FAA Extension, 28 Safety, and Security Act of 2016, which, inter alia, addressed the hiring of ATCS

1 positions by the FAA.” (Doc. 26, ¶ 67.) The Act provides that the “FAA should give 2 preferential treatment for ATCS positions to qualified individuals maintaining 52 3 consecutive weeks of civilian or military air traffic control experience.” (Id., ¶ 68.) The 4 remaining ATCS positions are then hired equally out of two pools. (Id., ¶ 69.) The first 5 pool is made up of: (1) CTI graduates who have received recommendations from their 6 institution, (2) honorably discharged veterans, (3) eligible veterans with aviation 7 experience, and (4) preference eligible veterans. (Id., ¶ 70.) The second pool is made of 8 up “off-the-street” (OTS) applicants. (Id., ¶ 71.) The Act “prevents the FAA from using 9 the [BQ] on applicants from the first pool,” but “does not prevent the FAA from using the 10 [BQ] on OTS hires.” (Id., ¶ 72.) Further, the Act permits any applicant who was 11 previously disqualified as a result of the BQ to reapply for an ATCS position. (Id., ¶ 74.)

12 On August 19, 2016, Brigida filed a two-count second amended class action 13 complaint against Anthony Foxx, Secretary, U.S. Department of Transportation; the 14 FAA; Michael Huerta, Administrator, FAA; and Stephanie Jones, Acting Director, 15 Departmental Office of Civil Rights, U.S. Department of Transportation. (Doc. 26.) He 16 alleges that the FAA’s hiring practice violates Title VII and the equal protection 17 component of the Fifth Amendment. (Id., ¶¶ 97-114.) He seeks damages and an order 18 directing the FAA “to reinstate the purged Qualified Applicant Register and give hiring 19 preference to Plaintiff Brigida and other putative Class Members.” (Id.)<sup>2</sup>

20 LEGAL STANDARD

21 To survive dismissal for failure to state a claim pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil 22 Procedure 12(b)(6), a complaint must contain factual allegations sufficient to “raise a 23 right to relief above the speculative level.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 24 (2007). The task when ruling on a motion to dismiss “is to evaluate whether the claims 25 alleged [plausibly] can be asserted as a matter of law.” See Adams v. Johnson, 355 F.3d 26 1179, 1183 (9th Cir. 2004); see also Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). When

27
28 <sup>2</sup> Brigida does not challenge the recently enacted FAA Extension, Safety, and Security Act of 2016.

1 analyzing the sufficiency of a complaint, the well-pled factual allegations are taken as 2 true and construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Cousins v. Lockyer, 568
3 F.3d 1063, 1067 (9th Cir. 2009). However, legal conclusions couched as factual 4 allegations are not entitled to the assumption of truth, Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 680, and 5 therefore are insufficient to defeat a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, In re
6 Cutera Sec. Litig., 610 F.3d 1103, 1108 (9th Cir. 2008).

7 ANALYSIS

8 Defendants move to (1) dismiss Brigida’s Equal Protection claim and all 9 Defendants except Anthony Foxx, (2) strike Brigida’s request to reinstate the hiring 10 preference for CTI graduates, and (3) transfer the remainder of this action to the District 11 of Columbia. The Court will address each issue in turn.

12 I. Equal Protection Claim

13 Brigida alleges that the FAA’s adoption of the “new hiring practice for Air Traffic 14 Controllers with the intent and purpose of increasing racial diversity of Air Traffic 15 Controller applicants” violates the equal protection component of the Fifth Amendment.
16 (Doc. 26, ¶¶ 105, 112.) Defendants argue that this claim must be dismissed because Title 17 VII is the exclusive remedy for claims of discrimination in employment. The Court 18 agrees with Defendants.

19 “Section 717 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16 (1970 ed., 20 Supp. IV), proscribes federal employment discrimination and establishes an 21 administrative and judicial enforcement system.” Brown v. Gen. Servs. Admin., 425 U.S.
22 820, 829 (1976).<sup>3</sup> In Brown, the Supreme Court held that § 717 is a “precisely drawn, 23 detailed statute [that] preempts more general remedies,” and thus it “provides the 24 exclusive judicial remedy for claims of discrimination in federal employment.” Id. at 25 834-35. In cases where the plaintiff brings a Title VII claim, courts have rejected 26 supplemental statutory and constitutional claims where such claims were remediable

27
28 <sup>3</sup> Section 717 “extends Title VII protection to federal employees[.]” Smith v. Lujan, 780 F. Supp. 1275, 1279 (D. Ariz. 1991).

1 under Title VII or involved the same factual predicate. See Otto v. Heckler, 781 F.2d
2 754, 756 (9th Cir. 1986) (harassment claim not actionable because it was remediable 3 under Title VII); Nolan v. Cleland, 686 F.2d 806, 814-15 (9th Cir. 1982) (striking due 4 process claim based on the same facts as Title VII claim). The Ninth Circuit has held that 5 equal protection claims fall under this purview, see Brazil v. U.S. Dep't of Navy, 66 F.3d 6 193, 197 (9th Cir. 1995) (rejecting equal protection claim brought under Bivens), and 7 other circuits have reached the same conclusion, see e.g., Mlynczak v. Bodman, 442 F.3d
8 1050, 1056-57 (7th Cir. 2006) (rejecting equal protection claim because “Brown squarely 9 holds that § 717 provides the exclusive judicial remedy for claims of discrimination in 10 federal employment” (internal quotation marks omitted)); Belhomme v. Widnall, 127 F.3d 11 1214, 1217 (10th Cir. 1997) (“Title VII preempts any constitutional cause of action that a 12 court might find under the First or Fifth Amendments for discrimination in federal 13 employment.”).

14 Here, Brigida’s equal protection claim relies on the same allegations that form the 15 basis of his Title VII claim. (Doc. 26, ¶¶ 97-114.) He alleges the FAA’s decision to 16 purge the Qualified Applicant Register was made with the purpose of increasing 17 diversity, which “constituted intentional racial discrimination.” (Id., ¶¶ 101, 107.) 18 Moreover, he seeks the same remedies in both claims: (1) an order directing the FAA to 19 reinstate the Qualified Applicant Register and give hiring preference to Brigida, and (2) 20 damages in the form of back pay, front pay, hiring, and reinstatement. (Id., ¶¶ 102-03, 21 113-14.) Not only is Brigida’s equal protection claim based on the same factual predicate 22 as his Title VII claim, but it is also remediable by his Title VII claim. As such, his equal 23 protection claim is precluded by § 717.

24 Brigida argues that his equal protection claim is necessary because Title VII does 25 not vindicate all of his constitutional rights. (Doc. 29 at 14.) He asserts the violation of 26 his rights under Title VII “is not coextensive with the violation of his rights under the 27 Fifth Amendment.” (Id.) But he fails to specify how his Title VII claim affords less 28 relief than his equal protection claim. In fact, he seeks the same remedies under both

1 counts. Moreover, Brigida fails to cite a single case in which a plaintiff bringing a Title
2 VII employment discrimination claim was permitted to also maintain a separate 3 constitutional claim with the same factual predicate.

4 Brigida also argues that Brown and Brazil are distinguishable because they dealt 5 with statutory claims and a Bivens claim, respectively. (Doc. 29 at 15.) But Brown's 6 holding is clear: § 717 is the “exclusive judicial remedy for claims of discrimination in 7 federal employment.” Brown, 425 U.S. at 829. Contrary to Brigida’s claim, Brown's 8 holding is not based on the doctrine of sovereign immunity, (Doc. 29 at 5), but the fact 9 that the “balance, completeness, and structural integrity of [§ 717] are inconsistent with 10 the . . . contention that the judicial remedy afforded by [a § 717 action] was designed 11 merely to supplement other putative judicial relief.” Id. at 832. Thus, that the rejected 12 claims were statutory in nature, as opposed to constitutional in nature, does not affect 13 Brown's application to this case, where Brigida has brought a Title VII action seeking the 14 same relief as his equal protection claim. Likewise, that the plaintiff in Brazil brought his 15 equal protection claim in the Bivens context is of no import. The result is the same: Title
16 VII's remedies are triggered, thereby precluding Brigida's equal protection claim.<sup>4</sup>

17 Because Brigida's Title VII claim is the only remaining claim in this action, 18 several Defendants must be dismissed. “[W]hen a federal employee alleges employment 19 discrimination, the only proper defendant is the head of the agency which employs 20 them.” Ardalan v. McHugh, No. 13-CV-01138-LHK, 2013 WL 6212710, at *20 (N.D.
21 Cal. Nov. 27, 2013) (internal quotation marks omitted). Anthony Foxx is the head of the 22 U.S. Department of Transportation—the department that would have employed Brigida.
23 (Doc. 26, ¶ 5.) Thus, Defendants U.S. Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation 24 Administration, Michael Huerta, and Stephanie Jones are dismissed from this action.<sup>5</sup>

25 II. Request to Reinstate Hiring Preference

26
27 <sup>4</sup> In fact, Brigida's equal protection claim is a Bivens claim inasmuch as it seeks 28 damages for constitutional violations committed by federal officials. Bivens v. Six Unknown Agents of Fed. Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388, 397 (1971).

<sup>5</sup> Brigida does not oppose dismissal of these Defendants. (Doc. 29 at 5 n.1.)

1 In his prayer for relief, Brigida seeks an “order directing the FAA to reinstate the 2 purged Qualified Applicant Register and give hiring preference to Plaintiff Brigida and 3 other Putative Class Members[.]” (Doc. 26 at 25.) Defendants argue that this request is 4 improper because Brigida does not challenge the recently enacted FAA Extension, 5 Safety, and Security Act of 2016, which imposes new hiring practices for Air Traffic 6 Controllers. The Court agrees.

7 Brigida’s request is equitable in nature, but “[c]ourts of equity can no more 8 disregard statutory and constitutional requirements and provisions than can courts of 9 law.” Armstrong v. Exceptional Child Care Ctr., Inc., 135 S. Ct. 1378, 1385 (2015). In 10 enacting the FAA Extension, Safety, and Security Act, Congress sought to give hiring 11 preference to more experienced air traffic controllers. See 49 U.S.C. § 44506(f)(1)(A) 12 (giving preference to “qualified individuals maintaining 52 consecutive weeks of air 13 traffic control experience”). The Act eliminates the BQ for CTI graduates, but does not 14 restore the Qualified Applicant Register or give hiring preference to CTI graduates who 15 pass the AT-SAT. Brigida admittedly does not challenge the Act under Title VII; his 16 challenge remains against the FAA’s elimination of the Qualified Applicant Register at 17 the end of 2013. Although Title VII permits the Court to “order such affirmative action 18 as may be appropriate” to make Brigida whole, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g)(1), the Court 19 cannot prescribe relief in contravention of an unchallenged statute.

20 Brigida argues that the Act does not grant full relief to him and the putative class 21 members. (Doc. 29 at 17.) He asserts that the Act “can only limit relief in this case if the 22 Court decide[s] that the 2016 Act expressly repeals or amends the enforcement provisions 23 of Title VII.” (Id. at 18.) But the effect of the Act on Title VII is irrelevant. The Act 24 supersedes the FAA hiring practices challenged by Brigida in this suit. Brigida does not 25 dispute that the hiring practices he originally challenged are no longer employed by the 26 FAA—the BQ is no longer used to evaluate CTI graduates. Nor does he argue that the 27 Act discriminates in hiring on the basis of race. Boiled down further, his allegations 28 reveal that he is simply dissatisfied that the FAA changed its hiring practices and decided

1 to give preference to more experienced controllers, which the FAA is free to do as long 2 as it does not violate Title VII.

3 Furthermore, Brigida cites no authority for granting the equitable relief he seeks.
4 If the Court granted his requested relief, the FAA would be bound by two inconsistent 5 directives: (1) a court order to reinstate the Qualified Applicant Register and give 6 preference to CTI graduates who passed the AT-SAT, and (2) the Act, which directs that 7 hiring preference be given to experienced Air Traffic Controllers. Brigida does not argue 8 that both of these directives can reasonably be accomplished. Accordingly, the Court 9 strikes this claim for relief from the second amended complaint.

10 III. Transfer

11 Defendants argue that the remainder of this action should be transferred to the 12 District of Columbia. They argue that venue is improper in this district, and even if 13 venue is proper, the Court should exercise its discretion and transfer this action for the 14 convenience of the parties. Defendants also point out that, since filing this lawsuit, 15 Brigida has relocated from Arizona to Arlington, Virginia—a few miles outside of 16 Washington, D.C. Because venue is improper in this District, the Court will not address 17 whether discretionary transfer is warranted.

18 A. Improper Venue

19 Venue for a Title VII claim is proper (1) “in any judicial district in the State in 20 which the unlawful employment practice is alleged to have been committed,” (2) “in the 21 judicial district in which the employment records relevant to such practice are maintained 22 and administered,” (3) “or in the judicial district in which the aggrieved person would 23 have worked but for the unlawful employment practice.” 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(3).
24 “Plaintiff has the burden of proving that venue is proper in the district in which the suit 25 was initiated.” Golden Scorpio Corp. v. Steel Horse Bar & Grill, 596 F. Supp. 2d 1282, 26 1286 (D. Ariz. 2009) (internal quotation marks omitted).

27 It is undisputed that (1) the FAA’s decision to adopt a new hiring process was 28 made in Washington, D.C., (2) the relevant employment records are kept at the FAA

1 headquarters in Washington, D.C., and (3) Brigida cannot demonstrate that he would 2 have worked in Arizona but for the alleged unlawful employment practice. Brigida 3 argues, however, that courts have found that “venue is proper in both the forum where the 4 employment decision is made and the forum in which that decision is implemented or its 5 effects are felt.” Passantino v. Johnson & Johnson Consumer Prods., Inc., 212 F.3d 493, 6 506 (9th Cir. 2000). Relying on Passantino, he asserts that he was a resident of Arizona
7 when he applied for the ATCS position, and therefore the effects of the FAA’s decision
8 to change its hiring practices were felt in Arizona. (Doc. 29 at 20.)

9 In Passantino, the plaintiff brought a failure-to-promote claim in the Western 10 District of Washington, where she worked for nearly two decades. 212 F.3d at 500-03.
11 The defendant argued that venue was proper in New Jersey where the decision to take the 12 unlawful employment action was made. Id. at 504. The court rejected the defendant’s 13 argument, noting that “venue should be found where the effect of the unlawful 14 employment practice is felt: where the plaintiff works, and the decision to engage in that 15 practice is implemented.” Id. at 505.

16 The court in Davidson v. Korman, No. C 09-1695 SBA, 2010 WL 3515760, at *3 17 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 8, 2010) addressed Passantino’s ruling, and the Court finds its reasoning 18 persuasive. In Davidson, the plaintiff worked as an attorney for the Army Corps of 19 Engineers in Sacramento, California, but lived in San Francisco. Id. at *1. She filed a 20 retaliation claim under Title VII in the Northern District of California. Id. The 21 defendants moved to dismiss for improper venue, arguing that the alleged unlawful 22 employment practices occurred in Sacramento, which is in the Eastern District of 23 California. Id. at *2. The relevant employment records were also kept in that district. Id.
24 Relying on Passantino, the plaintiff argued that venue was proper in San Francisco 25 because she lived there and felt the effects of the unlawful employment decision there.
26 Id. at *3. The court rejected this argument, noting that “an out-of-context quotation” 27 from Passantino does not support venue in the district where the plaintiff lived or “had 28 interactions with . . . in connection with her job.” Id.

1           The result is no different here. Like Davidson, Brigida argues that venue is proper 2 in this District simply because he once lived here. A close reading of Passantino reveals 3 that its holding should not be construed so broadly. The court began by noting that, “[i]n 4 general, the effect if Title VII’s venue provision is to allow suit in the judicial district in 5 which the plaintiff worked or would have worked.” 212 F.3d at 504-05. To further 6 support its decision, the court relied on principals of personal jurisdiction, namely that 7 jurisdiction is proper over a defendant who has no contacts with the state if the effects of 8 the defendant’s actions are felt in that state. Id. at 505. Indeed, it necessarily follows that 9 plaintiffs who are “unlawfully denied a promotion . . . feel the effects of their injury 10 where they actually work.” Id. The court appeared to define the phrase “where the effect 11 of the unlawful employment practice is felt,” as the place “where the plaintiff works, and 12 the decision to engage in that practice is implemented.” Id.

13           Here, Brigida never worked for the FAA. He simply filed suit in Arizona because 14 he lived here at the time. Under Passantino, venue is not proper—Brigida did not work 15 in Arizona and the alleged unlawful practice was not implemented here. In fact, the 16 argument for venue in this case is even more attenuated than that posed in Davidson, 17 given that Brigida has since moved from Arizona to Arlington, Virginia, and thus can no 18 longer reasonably assert that the effects of the alleged unlawful employment decision are 19 felt here. Consequently, the Court finds that venue is improper in this district.

20           B. Transfer of this Case to the District of Columbia is Appropriate

21           Because venue is improper in this district, the Court may “transfer [the] case to 22 any district or division in which it could have been brought.” 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a).
23 Defendants seek transfer to the District of Columbia. Brigida seeks transfer to the 24 Western District of Oklahoma because “all CTI graduates must complete a training 25 course at the FAA Academy in Oklahoma City upon hiring by the FAA.” (Doc. 29 at 26 23.) Therefore, he asserts he “would have worked in Oklahoma City, at least for the 27 length of [his] training.” (Id. at 23-24.) Brigida also asserts that relevant witnesses are 28 located there and that “meetings that preceded the challenged actions were held in

1 Oklahoma City.” (Id. at 24.) Last, he argues that the Western District of Oklahoma
2 would be more convenient for his witnesses and counsel. (Id.)

3 The Court finds that this action should be transferred to the District of Columbia.
4 Defendant is headquartered there, Brigida lives close nearby, the relevant documents are 5 located there, the alleged discriminatory employment actions were taken there, and 6 Defendants have several witnesses that are located in or near the area. (Doc. 27-1, ¶¶ 2, 7 4-6, 10, 12, 13, 15.) It is undisputed that this action could have been filed in that district.
8 Brigida identifies no witnesses that will be required to travel a great distance to testify.
9 Nor does he identify the content of the alleged meetings that took place in Oklahoma 10 City. As such, the most appropriate and convenient venue for the parties is the District of 11 Columbia.

12 IT IS ORDERED that:

- 13 1. Defendants’ motion to dismiss, (Doc. 27), is GRANTED.
- 14 2. Count two of the Second Amended and Supplemental Complaint is
