

1 WO

2
3
4
5
6 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
7 FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA
8

9 Ruby Gatling,

10 Plaintiff,

11 v.

12 United States of America, et al.,

13 Defendants.
14

No. CV-15-08070-PCT-SMM

ORDER

15 Pending before the Court is Defendant United States of America's Motion to 16 Dismiss for Lack of Jurisdiction and for Failure to State a Claim. (Doc. 12.) The United 17 States subsequently also submitted a Notice of Substitution. (Doc. 18.) The parties have 18 properly responded and the matter is fully briefed. (Docs. 19-21.) After carefully 19 considering the briefing, the Court makes the following ruling.

20 I. BACKGROUND

21 A. Statutory Background

22 In 1975, Congress enacted the Indian Self-Determination and Education 23 Assistance Act of 1975 ("ISDEAA"), Pub. L. 93-638, 88 Stat. 2203 (Jan. 4, 1975). "The 24 ISDEAA created a system by which tribes could take over the administration of 25 Programs operated by the [Bureau of Indian Affairs]." Shirk v. U.S. ex rel. Dep't of 26 Interior, 773 F.3d 999, 1001 (9th Cir. 2014) (quoting Los Coyotes Band of Cahuilla & 27 Cupeño Indians v. Jewell, 729 F.3d 1025, 1033 (9th Cir. 2013)) (internal quotations 28 omitted). Under the ISDEAA, a tribe "receiving a particular service from the BIA may submit a contract proposal to the BIA to take over the program and operate it as a

1 contractor and receive the money that the BIA would have otherwise spent on the 2 program.” Shirk, 773 F.3d at 1001.

3 B. Factual Background

4 Plaintiff Ruby Gatling brought the present action on April 30, 2015, pursuant to 5 the Federal Tort Claims Act (“FTCA”), 28 U.S.C. §§ 1346(b), 2674, et seq., and Bivens 6 v. Six Unknown Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388 (1971), alleging claims of negligence, 7 assault, battery, denial of due process, illegal search and seizure, and cruel and unusual 8 punishment. (Doc. 1.) Plaintiff alleges that that on March 15, 2014, she was arrested 9 without explanation and taken to the Window Rock Jail, located on the Navajo Indian 10 reservation in northeastern Arizona. (Id. ¶ 7.) Plaintiff states that while incarcerated, 11 Defendants April Ashley and Eric Williams, both Navajo tribal correctional officers, hit 12 her in the face, fractured her arm, kicked her multiple times, and threw her to the ground 13 causing a severe head injury. (Id. ¶¶ 8-9.) Plaintiff does not allege that Defendant Delores 14 Greyeyes, the director of the Navajo Department of Corrections, participated in the 15 alleged assault and battery, but rather “wrongfully deprived Plaintiff of her liberty by 16 holding her in the Window Rock Jail from March 15-18, 2014 without probable cause, 17 due process and without reasonable suspicion that she had committed an offense.” (Id. ¶ 18 6.) Furthermore, Plaintiff alleges that the United States was negligent on a theory of 19 vicarious liability, or negligent hiring and supervision, for the Navajo Nation’s failure “to 20 conform to its legal duty to properly supervise the Individual Defendants.” (Id. ¶ 13.)

21 At the time of the alleged incident, the Navajo Nation had a contract pursuant to 22 the ISDEAA with the Secretary of the Interior to provide adult corrections services to the 23 Navajo Nation. (Doc. 18 ¶ 5.) Defendants Ashley, Williams, and Greyeyes were engaged 24 in the performance of functions covered by this contract and were acting within the scope 25 of their employment as employees of the United States through its agency, the Bureau of 26 Indian Affairs. (Id. ¶¶ 5, 7; Doc. 18-1.) Pursuant to the Federal Employees Liability 27 Reform and Tort Compensation Act of 1988, §§ 5, 6, Pub. L. No. 100-694 (1988) 28 (“Westfall Act”) (codified at 28 U.S.C. § 2679(d)(2)), the U.S. is substituted for the

1 individual Defendants Ashley, Williams, and Greyeyes for the negligence, battery, and 2 assault claims. (Doc. 18 at 1.)

3 II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

4 The defense of lack of subject matter jurisdiction may be raised at any time by the 5 parties or the Court. See Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(1) and 12(h)(3). Plaintiff, as the party 6 seeking to invoke the jurisdiction of the court, bears the burden of establishing subject 7 matter jurisdiction. See McNutt v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 298 U.S. 178, 182– 8 83 (1936); Fenton v. Freedman, 748 F.2d 1358, 1359 (9th Cir. 1994). A Rule 12(b)(1) 9 motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction may be either a facial or a factual 10 challenge. When the moving party facially challenges jurisdiction based on the 11 allegations in the complaint, the court must consider all the allegations in the complaint 12 as true, and will not look beyond the face of the complaint to determine jurisdiction. See 13 Safe Air for Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004). On the other hand, 14 when a court reviews a complaint under a factual challenge, the allegations have no 15 presumptive truthfulness, Ritza v. International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's 16 Union, 837 F.2d 365, 369 (9th Cir. 1988) (internal quotation omitted), and the court is 17 not limited to the allegations in the pleadings if the “jurisdictional issue is separable from 18 the merits of [the] case.” Roberts v. Corrothers, 812 F.2d 1173, 1177 (9th Cir. 1987).
19 Rather, the court that must weigh the evidence has discretion to allow affidavits, 20 documents, and even a limited evidentiary hearing to resolve disputed jurisdictional facts.
21 See Valdez v. United States, 837 F.Supp. 1065, 1067 (E.D. Cal. 1993), aff'd, (9th Cir.
22 1995); Mortensen, 549 F.2d at 891.

23 A complaint may be dismissed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of 24 Civil Procedure only if "it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of 25 facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Conley v. Gibson, 355 26 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957); Parks Sch. of Bus., Inc. v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th 27 Cir. 1995). To survive dismissal for failure to state a claim pursuant to Federal Rule of 28 Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), a complaint must contain more than “labels and conclusions” or

1 a “formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action”; it must contain factual
2 allegations sufficient to “raise a right to relief above the speculative level.” Bell Atl.
3 Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). While “a complaint need not contain 4 detailed factual allegations . . . it must plead ‘enough facts to state a claim to relief that is 5 plausible on its face.’ ” Clemens v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 534 F.3d 1017, 1022 (9th Cir.
6 2008) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). The plausibility standard “asks for more than 7 a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Where a complaint pleads facts 8 that are merely consistent with a defendant's liability, it stops short of the line between 9 possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief.” Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 10 555) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

11 When analyzing a complaint for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), “[a]ll 12 allegations of material fact are taken as true and construed in the light most favorable to 13 the nonmoving party.” Smith v. Jackson, 84 F.3d 1213, 1217 (9th Cir. 1996). However, 14 legal conclusions couched as factual allegations are not given a presumption of 15 truthfulness, and “conclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences are not 16 sufficient to defeat a motion to dismiss.” Pareto v. FDIC, 139 F.3d 696, 699 (9th Cir.
17 1998). “Dismissal without leave to amend is improper unless it is clear, upon de novo 18 review, that the complaint could not be saved by any amendment.” Polich v. Burlington 19 N., Inc., 942 F.2d 1467, 1472 (9th Cir. 1991). When exercising its discretion to deny 20 leave to amend, “a court must be guided by the underlying purpose of Rule 15 to 21 facilitate decisions on the merits, rather than on the pleadings or technicalities.” United 22 States v. Webb, 655 F.2d 977, 979 (9th Cir. 1981).

23 III. DISCUSSION

24 A. Plaintiff’s Claims for Denial of Due Process (Claim 2), Illegal Search and 25 Seizure (Claim 3), and Cruel and Unusual Punishment (Claim 4).

26 The Court will first deal with Plaintiff’s claims 2, 3, and 4. Plaintiff brings these 27 claims pursuant to Bivens v. Six Unknown Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388 (1971), 28 alleging that she was denied due process (claim 2), illegally searched and seized (claim

1 3), and subject to cruel and unusual punishment (claim 4). (Doc. 1.) Bivens allows 2 plaintiffs to bring private causes of action against the federal government for damages 3 when there has been a violation of the U.S. Constitution by federal officers acting under 4 the color of federal authority. See Id. Plaintiff’s Complaint is unclear as to whether she 5 meant for claims 2, 3, and 4 to be filed against the United States, the individual officer 6 defendants, or both. In her response to the United States’ motion to dismiss, Plaintiff 7 clarifies that she did not intend to bring these Bivens claims against the United States 8 (Doc. 20 at 1.) Rather, Plaintiff intended for the Bivens claims to be brought against 9 Defendants Ashley, Williams, and Greyeyes, and only claims 1, 5, and 6, to be brought 10 against the United States. (Id.) Therefore, the Court finds that claims 2, 3, and 4 do not 11 apply to the United States and therefore will be dismissed with prejudice as to the United 12 States.

13 B. Plaintiff’s Claims for Battery (Claim 5) and Assault (Claim 6).

14 Plaintiff alleges that the United States, acting vicariously through the actions of 15 the other individual Defendants, is liable for both battery and assault. (Doc. 1 at 6.) In 16 response, the United States facially attacks these assertions and argues that the Court does 17 not have subject matter jurisdiction over the claims because it is protected under the 18 doctrine of sovereign immunity. (Doc. 12 at 5.)

19 As a sovereign, the United States is generally immune from suit except to the 20 extent that it consents to be sued. “The party who sues the United States bears the burden 21 of pointing to . . . an unequivocal waiver of immunity.” Prescott v. United States, 973 22 F.2d 696, 701 (9th Cir. 1993) (quoting Holloman v. Watt, 708 F.2d 1399, 1401 (9th Cir.
23 1983)). “Only Congress enjoys the power to waive the United States’ sovereign 24 immunity.” Dunn & Black, P.S. v. United States, 492 F.3d 1084, 1090 (9th Cir. 2007).
25 “Sovereign immunity is not merely a defense to an action against the United States, but a 26 jurisdictional bar.” Powelson v. United States, 150 F.3d 1103, 1104 (9th Cir. 1998).

27 With regards to tort liability, however, under the FTCA the United States has 28 waived its sovereign immunity “under circumstances where the United States, if a private 1 person, would be liable to the claimant in accordance with the law of the place where the 2 act or omission occurred.” 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b)(1). There is an exception to this general 3 provision, though, wherein the United States maintains its sovereign immunity for “[a]ny 4 claim arising out of assault, battery, false imprisonment, false arrest, malicious 5 prosecution, abuse of process” and other enumerated intentional torts. Id. § 2680(h). This 6 exception is also subject to its own exception, which waives the United States’ sovereign 7 immunity with respect to intentional torts committed by federal law enforcement officers.

8 Id. The FTCA defines a federal law enforcement officer as “any officer of the United 9 States who is empowered by law to execute searches, to seize evidence, or to make arrest 10 for violations of Federal law.” Id.

11 In 1990, Congress extended the FTCA’s waiver of sovereign immunity to claims 12 “resulting from the performance of functions . . . under a contract, grant agreement, or 13 cooperative agreement authorized by the [ISDEAA] of 1975.” 25 U.S.C. § 450(f); see 14 Shirk, 773 F.3d at 1003. Tribal officers are deemed employees of the BIA for the limited 15 purpose of FTCA coverage, subject to their actions falling “within the scope of their 16 employment in carrying out the contract or agreement.” Department of the Interior and 17 Related Agencies Appropriation Act, Pub.L. 101-512, § 314, 104 Stat. 1915 (1990).<sup>1</sup> 18 However, “[t]ribal law enforcement officers operating under a BIA contract or compact 19 are not automatically commissioned as federal officers” within the meaning of § 2680(h).
20 25 C.F.R. § 12.21(b). Rather, a tribal officer requires a special law enforcement 21 commission (“SLEC”) issued by the BIA before qualifying as a federal law enforcement 22 officer under § 2680(h). See Id. Therefore, the FTCA federal law enforcement officer 23 exception to the intentional tort exception does not apply to tribal officers not in 24 possession of an SLEC, meaning sovereign immunity is not waived and subject matter 25 jurisdiction does not exist. See Trujillo v. United States, 313 F. Supp. 2d 1146, 1151
26 (D.N.M. 2003); Henin v. Cancel, 708 F. Supp. 2d 1315, 1319 (S.D. Fla. 2010); Williams 27 v. Naswood, No. CV-10-8080-PCT-FJM, 2011 WL 867520, at *1 (D. Ariz. Mar. 14,

---

28 <sup>1</sup> Often referred to as “§ 314 claims.” See Shirk, 773 F.3d at 1003.

1 2011).

2
3 The acrobatic legal analysis required by these statutes leads the Court to the 4 conclusion that it does not have subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiff's claims for 5 assault and battery against the United States. Typically, under the statutory regime, 6 intentional torts committed by federal law enforcement officers are not barred by 7 sovereign immunity. However, here, the federal employees performing law enforcement 8 functions, did not have SLEC's. (Doc. 12-1 ¶ 4.) In his declaration, Assistant Special 9 Agent John R. Burge states that "at no time has the BIA issued a SLEC to Corrections 10 Officer April Ashley or Correction Officer Eric Williams." (Id.) Accordingly, the 11 individual Defendants did not qualify as federal law enforcement officers under section 12 2680(h) and the United States does not waive its sovereign immunity. Therefore, the 13 Court does not have subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiff's claims for assault and 14 battery, as alleged against the United States, and must dismiss them.

15 C. Plaintiff's Claim for Negligence (Claim 1).

16 The exceptions discussed above are not triggered by non-intentional torts, such as 17 negligence, however. In such situations, where sovereign immunity does not act as a 18 jurisdictional bar to tort liability under § 314, further analysis is required. District courts 19 are directed to perform a two-part analysis in determining whether a tribal officer's 20 actions fall within the purview of § 314, thereby subjecting the United States to tort 21 liability. Shirk, 773 F.3d at 1006.

22 At the first step of the § 314 inquiry, courts must determine whether the 23 alleged activity is, in fact, encompassed by the relevant federal contract or 24 agreement. The scope of the agreement defines the relevant "employment" 25 for purposes of the scope of employment analysis at step two. Second, 26 courts must decide whether the allegedly tortious action falls within the 27 scope of the tortfeasor's employment under state law.<sup>2</sup> If both of these

28 <sup>2</sup> To determine scope of employment, Arizona courts consider the extent to which the employee was subject to the employer's control. See, e.g., Consol. Motors, Inc. v. Ketcham, 49 Ariz. 295, 305, 66 P.2d 246, 256 (1937); Engler v. Gulf Interstate Eng'g, Inc., 230 Ariz. 55, 58, 280 P.3d 599, 602 (2012). Additionally, Arizona courts look to the 1 prongs are met, the employee's actions are covered by the FTCA.

2 Id. “A plaintiff’s failure at either step is sufficient to defeat subject matter jurisdiction”
3 and a “court may choose to decide the case at either step of the inquiry.” Id.

4 Here, both parties agree that at the time of the alleged incident, Defendants were 5 engaged in performing functions encompassed by the federal contract and that the 6 Defendants were acting within the scope of their employment, thus satisfying both § 314 7 prongs. (Docs. 1 ¶ 5; 18 ¶¶ 5, 7.) The Court also agrees with these conclusions. First, the 8 Navajo Nation had a contract to provide adult correction services; accordingly, 9 Defendants’ actions fell within the purview of the contract. Second, following Arizona 10 standards, the Court finds that Defendants were acting within the scope of their 11 employment. They were performing duties that they were hired to perform, during 12 working hours, which furthered the “enterprise” of adult correctional services. Therefore, 13 the Court has subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiff’s negligence claim as alleged 14 against the United States.

15 The question remains, however, whether Plaintiff adequately stated a claim for 16 negligent supervision pursuant to 12(b)(6). The United States argues Plaintiff has only 17 made insufficient conclusory allegations that are threadbare of any factual content. (Doc.
18 12 at 8.) “For an employer to be held liable for the negligent hiring, retention, or

---

19 Restatement of Agency, which provides numerous relevant factors for determining 20 whether an employer exercised actual control or retained the right to control the 21 employee’s conduct when the negligent act occurred. See Restatement (Second) of 22 Agency §§ 219, 220, 228, 229; see, e.g., Engler, 230 Ariz. at 58, 280 P.3d at 602; 23 Santiago v. Phx. Newspapers, Inc., 164 Ariz. 505, 508–09, 794 P.2d 138, 141-42 (1990).
24 These include whether the act (a) was the kind the employee was hired to perform, (b) 25 was commonly done by the employee, (c) occurred within the employee's working hours, 26 and (d) furthered the employer's purposes or fell outside the employer's “enterprise.”
27 Engler, 230 Ariz. at 58, 280 P.3d at 602 (2012); see Higgins v. Assmann Elec., Inc., 217
28 Ariz. 289, 297, 173 P.3d 453, 461 (App. 2007) (citing Restatement (Second) of Agency § 229 (Am. Law Inst. 1958)); Anderson v. Gobea, 18 Ariz.App. 277, 280, 501 P.2d 453, 456 (1972) (citing Restatement (Second) of Agency § 228 (Am. Law Inst. 1958)).

1 supervision of an employee, a court must first find that the employee committed a tort.”
2 Kuehn v. Stanley, 208 Ariz. 124, 130 (App.2004) (“If the theory of the employee’s 3 underlying tort fails, an employer cannot be negligent as a matter of law for hiring or 4 retaining the employee.”). The Court, in viewing the complaint in a light most favorable 5 to Plaintiff, finds that it alleges “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on 6 its face.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570. Plaintiff provides sufficient factual allegations to 7 indicate that the individual Defendants Ashley, Williams, and Greyeyes plausibly 8 committed torts while employed by the United States, which in turn would make the 9 United States liable for negligent supervision. For these reasons, the Court will not 10 dismiss the negligence claim as alleged against the United States.

11 IV. CONCLUSION

12 Accordingly, for the foregoing reasons,

13 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED granting in part Defendant the United States of 14 America’s Motion to Dismiss. (Doc. 12.) Plaintiff Ruby Gatling’s claims 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 15 as alleged against the United States shall be dismissed with prejudice.

16 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED denying in part Defendant the United States of 17 America’s Motion to Dismiss. (Doc. 12.) Plaintiff’s claim 1 for negligence shall not be 18 dismissed as alleged against the United States.

19 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED setting this matter for Rule 16 Preliminary Pretrial
20 Conference for February 29, 2016 at 2:30 pm in Courtroom 401, 401 West Washington 21 Street, Phoenix, AZ 85003.

22 Dated this 12th day of January, 2016.

23
24
25
26 Honorable Stephen M. McNamee
27 Senior United States District Judge 28