29 Plaintiff Penske Media Corporation, doing business as PMC ("PMC") 30 (formerly known as Mail.com Media Corporation), the parent company and owner

35 and Breakthrough of the Year Awards, alleges as follows:

Dockets.Justia.com

INTRODUCTION

1
2
3 1. As most businesses or individuals who operate within the industry 4 of online publishing and digital media understand, copying, mimicking, and/or 5 altering of others' content and design unfortunately occurs intermittently within 6 that industry. However, The Hollywood Reporter ("THR") has differentiated 7 itself from other companies within the media industry by not only carrying out 8 this unethical practice with alarming regularity, indeed on an almost daily basis, 9 but also by resorting to the outright theft of intellectual property, including but 10 not limited to whole articles, content, software, source code and designs.

11 2. In an industry where a company's brand is largely defined and 12 dictated by the value of its originally created intellectual property, it is absolutely 13 essential that intellectual property rights and assets be mightily protected from 14 thievery, such as that exhibited by THR. This is evident through the billions of 15 dollars that are spent on an annual basis by movie studios, TV networks, record 16 labels, and media companies, as well as the U.S. government and other countries 17 around the world, for the purpose of protecting and defending ownership of 18 copyrighted original material and content from piracy.

19 3. This is the same publishing and media industry in which PMC 20 operates. Over many years, PMC has distinguished itself as a leader in 21 entertainment and technology-related digital media by investing in its personnel, 22 by researching and investigating, and by obtaining exclusive original content and 23 time-sensitive breaking news stories about all facets of the entertainment and 24 technology industries. Which is why THR's theft and piracy of PMC's content 25 and intellectual property, as documented in this Complaint, is so significantly 26 damaging to PMC, its brands, and its value and position in the marketplace.

27 4. Among other reasons, PMC is filing this lawsuit to protect its 28 content creation and development, and to finally put an end to THR and other

1 websites' misappropriation of PMC's hard-earned product and intellectual 2 property. Enough is enough.

3 5. PMC is taking a stand against desperate and copycat news
4 organizations and media outlets such as THR that constantly monitor PMC's 5 websites for the sole purpose of copying and imitating PMC websites' news 6 stories and original content within minutes after online publication. These 7 copycat media outlets such as THR, rather than conducting their own independent 8 reporting and investigation, developing their own sources and insiders, and 9 generating their own leads and stories, simply steal PMC's content and pawn it 10 off as their own.

11 6. In truth, THR, faced with the harsh reality that it had become a 12 second-rate entertainment industry news source unable to attract insiders' 13 attention anymore, changed ownership and re-launched its website. At first it 14 hoped to create a competitive online presence by going after a broader consumer-15 focused audience with celebrity news and gossip. When consumer, retail and 16 other related advertising failed to appear, THR began trying attracting Hollywood 17 trade advertising again. It has become abundantly clear that part of THR's 18 turnaround strategy was to engage in an unprecedented campaign of theft and 19 misappropriation of PMC's intellectual property and content to accomplish that.

20 7. First, THR attempted to poach PMC's key employees, by urging 21 each employee to breach their existing and exclusive contractual obligations to 22 PMC. When that strategy failed, THR's owners and managers pretended to 23 negotiate with PMC for PMC's www.deadline.com ("Deadline") to provide trade 24 news for the relaunched THR website. When that strategy also failed, THR then 25 began its incessant campaign of misappropriating wholesale content from 26 Deadline's website. As if that were not bad enough, THR then egregiously and 27 flagrantly stole integral source code and intellectual property from PMC's 28 www.tvline.com ("TVLine") website in a blatant act of copyright infringement.

1 8. In fact, THR was so incompetent and careless in its theft, that it 2 actually copied the original source code labels exactly as they existed on TVLine, 3 and did not even attempt to rename them. Many of TVLine's source code labels, 4 which are created for organizational purposes, contain the initials MMC, the 5 acronym for PMC's former name Mail.com Media Corporation (MMC). THR, in 6 copying and pasting PMC's TVLine source code, are still utilizing the "MMC" 7 initials within their labels. These initials act as a clear set of digital fingerprints 8 that further demonstrate the glaringness of THR's theft. THR did not even make 9 an effort to correct typographical errors contained in PMC's source code. As of 10 the date of this Complaint's filing, any individual can go to THR's website and, 11 with the simple click of a mouse, discover THR's blatant infringement.

12 9. Accordingly, PMC seeks to recover for the substantial damages it 13 has suffered because of THR's actions and to enjoin THR from continuing to steal 14 PMC's property. Additionally, this action shall serve as notice to all those with 15 similarly unethical and nefarious intentions that PMC shall not stand by idly and 16 allow such injurious conduct. To the contrary, PMC will vigorously protect its 17 rights and prosecute all those who aim to steal its original ideas, designs, and 18 content.

19 20 JURISDICTION AND VENUE

21 10. At all times mentioned herein, PMC, was and is a corporation duly 22 organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal 23 place of business in Los Angeles, California.

24 11. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that, at all 25 times mentioned herein, defendant Prometheus Global Media, LLC 26 ("Prometheus") was and is a limited liability company duly organized and existing 27 under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business in the 28 State of New York. Prometheus owns and operates THR. THR operates out of 1 offices located in Los Angeles, California.

2 12. The true names and capacities of defendants named herein as Does 1 3 though 10, inclusive are unknown to PMC, and therefore, PMC sues these 4 defendants by such fictitious names. PMC will seek leave of Court to amend this 5 Complaint to show their true names and capacities when the same has been 6 ascertained. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that Does 1 7 through 10, inclusive, were responsible for the acts and transactions alleged herein 8 and are liable to PMC therefor. Prometheus and Does 1-10 are referred to herein 9 as “Defendants.”

10 13. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that at all 11 times mentioned herein each of the Defendants was the agent, employee, or co-12 conspirator of the other Defendants, and was at all times mentioned herein, acting 13 within the scope of such agency, employment, or conspiracy.

14 14. This action asserts claims for copyright infringement under the 15 Copyright Act of 1976, 17 U.S.C. § 101 et seq. (the “Copyright Act”). This Court 16 has original jurisdiction over this action under the Copyright Act.

17 15. The matter in controversy exceeds the minimum for diversity 18 jurisdiction, exclusive of interest and costs.

19 16. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Defendants in that 20 Defendants conducted, and continue to conduct, business in this District, 21 Defendants intentionally direct activities to this District, and the infringing acts 22 alleged in this Complaint occurred in this District.

23 17. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) in that a 24 substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claims alleged herein 25 occurred in this District.

1 DEFENDANTS’ INTENT TO CAPITALIZE ON PMC’S WEBSITES

2
3 18. PMC is a leading digital media company that owns a unique portfolio 4 of entertainment, business, technology, and lifestyle brands including Deadline and 5 TVLine.

6 19. Deadline (aka Deadline Hollywood, Deadline New York, Deadline 7 London) is the “must read” source for breaking news and original content relating 8 to the business of the entertainment and media industries. Deadline’s articles 9 provide an inside look at the biggest players and deals and events in Hollywood, 10 New York, London where the entertainment and big media industries are located.
11 The articles also provide breaking news and original content and commentary and 12 analysis.

13 20. Deadline is tracked daily among the highest ranks of executives. It 14 reaches into the boardrooms, production offices, and agencies inside Hollywood 15 and New York, as well as into Wall Street, Madison Avenue, and Main Street – 16 across North And South Americas, Europe, Asia, and Australia. Deadline receives 17 millions of online visits per week and was recording traffic that was twice than that 18 of its closest competitors, Variety and THR, combined.

19 21. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that 20 Defendants own, operate, and control the Hollywood Reporter’s websites, 21 www.thr.com or www.hollywoodreporter.com (the “THR Websites”).

22 22. Formerly a daily trade magazine, THR’s aged brand had lost so many 23 readers to Deadline to the point that its very existence was threatened, forcing 24 THR’s sale. Defendants attempted to relaunch THR as a competitor in the fast-25 paced Internet entertainment news business. It specifically sought to compete with 26 Deadline, the unquestioned leader in this marketplace, for entertainment business 27 news.

28 23. Defendants relaunched the THR Websites as hybrid publications

1 serving the entertainment industry and a broader consumer-focused audience. In 2 connection with its relaunch, the THR's Websites were completely redesigned and 3 included content focused on the celebrity lifestyle and the business side of the 4 entertainment industry in an effort to widen its web presence.

5 24. Given PMC's dominance over online entertainment news, 6 Defendants, in "reinventing" themselves, have engaged in a strategic and 7 systematic campaign to emulate PMC's brands through unlawful means.

8 25. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that since the 9 sale and relaunch of the THR Websites, Defendants have directly attempted to 10 lure away PMC's, and specifically Deadline's, key employees in THR's effort to 11 compete with Deadline. When those attempts failed, Defendants sought the 12 pretense of negotiations with PMC for PMC's Deadline.com to provide trade 13 news for the relaunched THR. When that strategy failed, THR decided to take 14 Deadline's time-sensitive news stories and original content, gathered at a 15 substantial cost and through considerable work and time and sources by Deadline 16 staff, and used the information to create THR's own identical stories, free-riding 17 on Deadline's efforts by developing THR product instantly and at virtually no 18 cost. THR then passed off this content as its own.

19 26. As if that were not enough, Defendants then stole integral source 20 code and intellectual property from the TVLine. By doing so, Defendants have 21 admittedly generated internet traffic, earned advertising revenue, improved 22 homepage functionality and design, and capitalized as they otherwise would not 23 have but for their theft.

24
25 THR ATTEMPTS TO LURE AWAY KEY DEADLINE EMPLOYEES

26
27 27. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that on 28 numerous occasions THR attempted to hire Deadline's Founder, General

1 Manager/President and Editor in Chief, Nikki Finke (during multiple phone calls 2 and emails and attempts to meet her in Los Angeles and New York), and attempted 3 to convince her to breach her multi-year exclusive employment agreement, breach 4 her noncompete, breach her asset purchase covenants, leave her position, and 5 abandon her obligations to PMC and Deadline to join THR. On multiple 6 occasions, Ms. Finke was contacted by Todd Boehly, Managing Partner of 7 Guggenheim, the investment and private equity firm that led the purchase of THR 8 from Nielsen Business Media in December 2009. Ms. Finke, however, never met 9 with Boehly.

10 28. Then, on the evening of January 13, 2010, Mr. Boehly by phone made 11 his first formal job offer to Ms. Finke to become THR's editor-in-chief. Ms. Finke 12 was offered $450,000 base salary, plus a $1 million Malibu home ("which you can 13 keep whether you stay 5 minutes or 5 years"), plus a percentage of the cable TV 14 revenue THR was expecting (which Mr. Boehly specifically estimated at $650,000 15 annually), plus Mr. Boehly agreed to pay back PMC what they paid Ms. Finke. Mr.
16 Boehly later tried to arrange for a breakfast meeting with Ms. Finke at Park Grill in 17 Los Angeles on January 20, 2010. Ms. Finke again didn't meet him.

18 29. During this time, Richard Beckman (Prometheus' Chief Executive 19 Officer) and Jimmy Finkelstein (Prometheus' Chairman) made repeated efforts to 20 schedule meetings with Jay Penske, the Founder, Chairman and Chief Executive 21 Officer of PMC, under the pretense of proposing terms whereby Deadline (and 22 other PMC properties) would provide THR with trade and other entertainment 23 related content.

24 30. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that on or 25 about January 12, 2011, THR contacted Deadline's Television Editor, Nellie 26 Andreeva, by email, attempting to convince her to breach her multi-year exclusive 27 employment contract with PMC, leave her position, abandon her obligations to 28 Deadline and PMC, and join THR.

1 31. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that on or 2 about March 11, 2011, THR attempted to hire PMC's Senior Director of 3 Entertainment Sales, Nic Paul, even though he was under a multi-year exclusive 4 employment contract to PMC. In fact, Lori Burgess of THR contacted Mr. Paul 5 directly asking if he wanted to have lunch and discuss leaving PMC to review 6 opportunities over at THR. Ms. Burgess stated that everyone had told her she 7 needed to talk to Mr. Paul. Mr. Paul responded that he was not interested, and she 8 said, "You won't even have lunch with me?" to which he replied, "No."

9 32. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that in or 10 around early 2011, THR approached PMC's Publisher Lynne Segall attempting to 11 convince her to breach her consulting contract with PMC, leave her position, 12 abandon her obligations to PMC and join THR. In fact, on or about June 14, 2011, 13 THR successfully lured away Ms. Segall who became THR's senior vice president 14 and publisher. In doing so, PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges 15 that as a direct result of THR's actions, Ms. Segall breached her contractual 16 obligations to PMC, through her failure to provide PMC with the requisite notice 17 required under her consulting agreement with PMC.

18 33. Defendants' attempts to poach Deadline's and PMC's employees were 19 just the first of its systematic campaigns to emulate PMC's websites.

20
21 THR STEALS DEADLINE'S ORIGINAL NEWS STORIES

22
23 34. PMC is informed and believes and on that basis alleges that 24 Defendants have engaged and continue to engage in a practice of closely 25 monitoring Deadline's website minute-by-minute for the specific purpose of 26 spotting key news stories and original content and reproducing them for 27 Defendants. Defendants regularly take Deadline's time-sensitive news stories 28 and original content (gathered at a substantial cost and through considerable

1 work, time and sources by Deadline staff) and use the information to create their 2 own identical stories. Defendants free-ride on Deadline's efforts by developing 3 Defendants' product instantly and at virtually no cost. THR then passes off this 4 Deadline-owned content as its content. The following is just a small sampling of 5 recently stolen content, where Deadline's stories were posted on THR's website, 6 sometime within minutes:

24 35. As the sheer breadth of the foregoing demonstrates, rather than 25 engage in true journalism, Defendants have instead monitored, copied and 26 regurgitated PMC's hard-earned and created content.

27 37. In truth, THR shamelessly steals PMC's content no matter the 28 story's size, and no matter how unique the posting. In one recent instance,

1 Deadline TV Editor Nellie Andreeva happened to have two completely unrelated 2 small TV script sales stories which she had already reported and was waiting to 3 write. Ms. Andreeva chose to randomly combine the unrelated stories into a 4 single post. The two sales had nothing in common to warrant their merger; it was 5 just her intellectual decision to do so. Then, minutes later, THR posted the story 6 in the same manner, combining the same two stories in the same way with the 7 same information.

8 38. As yet another recent example, ABC provided a story to both 9 Deadline and THR, asking them to post the story concurrently. Initially, Deadline 10 and THR agreed to post at 8:45 p.m. on September 13, 2011, however because 11 THR could not obtain a logline, THR requested (and Deadline agreed) to post the 12 story at 9:30 p.m. instead. Both parties posted the story at approximately 9:30 13 p.m. THR's story was bare-bones, did not contain a logline and did not discuss 14 the project's details. Approximately 15 minutes later (after THR had the 15 opportunity to review Deadline's post), THR modified its story taking Deadline's 16 logline as its own, and adding the details existing in Deadline's posting.

17
18 THR Stole the Source Codes and Web Design of PMC's TVLine.com

19
20 39. PMC owns and operates the business of TVLine. Since its launch, 21 TVLine has quickly become a household name in trusted television content.
22 TVLine is a website that has become a "must visit" site for television enthusiasts 23 looking to find news and updates from exclusive breaking television news to 24 spoilers and deep-dives, about their favorite television shows.

25 40. As part of creating and developing a website, the owner creates a 26 unique and original featured module comprised of source code that produces the 27 website's distinctive homepage that enables users to navigate to the most important 28 content articles and sections of the site, effectively the web's version of a

1 'newspaper's Front Page'. . Just as writers place letters and words in a unique and 2 original order so as to create paragraphs which are the framework for writing in 3 books and publications, so too do web designers place letters, words and symbols 4 in a unique and original order so as to create a module with source code that 5 provides the framework of every homepage's design and originality.

6 41. The featured module at issue on TVLine's website was created to 7 highlight the most current, engaging and interesting content for users on entry to 8 the website. TVLine's featured module was deliberately placed at the top of the 9 homepage, right below the navigation tabs to ensure that the content and any 10 advertising featured and displayed within the module was immediately presented 11 to the user before they interact with the other parts and content of the website.

12 42. After expending numerous months and substantial resources in 13 researching and developing the most optimized, intuitive, and user-friendly 14 featured module, PMC developed and launched TVLine.com's interactive and 15 easy-to-use interface.

16 43. The featured module was created using unique and original source 17 code divided into four parts: Module Markup, Module CSS, Module JavaScript, 18 and Initializing Code Module. The four parts provide the module's original 19 framework.

20 44. Among other things, the Module Markup provides the structure to the 21 article data such that the data is organized correctly on the page, and such that it 22 can be cleanly interacted with by the CSS and JavaScript modules. Essentially, 23 Module Markup is the website's blueprint.

24 45. Module CSS produces the look and feel of the website. Among other 25 things, the CSS interacts with the Markup to control and set its arrangement on 26 screen, as well as its color, font, dimensions, background, and other such visual 27 elements in a particular and unique way.

28 46. The Module JavaScript provides the "human computer interaction"

1 facet of the module. It interacts with, and manipulates the Markup and the CSS to 2 provide:

- 3 a. Animations - such as when the active story selector cycles 4 between the small images on the right hand side of the primary 5 image.
- 6 b. Slideshow Effects - such as when the page initially loads and 7 the active story automatically cycles between the four featured 8 stories.
- 9 c. Interactivity - such as when a primary story is selected by left 10 clicking using a mouse on one of the small images on the right 11 hand side, or a circle on the translucent bar along the bottom is 12 clicked.

13 47. The final module, Initializing Code Module, exists to jumpstart the 14 featured module's JavaScript code and provide it with the appropriate settings to 15 use for animations (such as moving animations quickly or slowly, or how long to 16 pause on each featured story when automatically cycling between stories on initial 17 page load). It also describes functionality behavior for the featured story module.

18 48. The four modules described above contain the source code that 19 produces www.tvline.com's creative, unique and interactive featured module.

20 49. Upon information and belief, in or around August 2011, THR copied 21 and stole PMC's source code for its featured module, and as a result THR's 22 homepage featured module is nearly identical to that of TVLine. Since THR's 23 redesign and re-launch of HollywoodReporter.com in or around October 2010, the 24 website HollywoodReporter.com did not utilize a featured module on its 25 homepage, which remained accurate up until the theft of TVLine's featured 26 module source code in or around August 2011.

27 50. Specifically, to describe just a few of the copied aspects of TVLine's 28 design and functionality, the following functionality was built into TVLine's

1 featured module:

- 2 a. A primary image area associated with the story, with a 3 translucent bar along the bottom that displays the headline of 4 the story along with a short caption.
- 5 b. Four small images on the right hand side of the primary image 6 area, organized in a vertical line. One image for each story 7 being featured.
- 8 c. The featured module automatically and continuously cycles 9 through the four featured stories without any user interaction.
- 10 d. The featured module stops the automatic and continuous 11 cycling through of the four featured stories after the first user 12 interaction with the featured module (such as clicking on one of 13 the small image representing one of the four stories).
- 14 e. The user can select or activate one of the four featured stories 15 by either clicking on one of the four small images on the right 16 hand side of the primary image area, or by clicking the small 17 hollow circles placed on the translucent bar along the bottom of 18 the primary image.
- 19 f. The user can manually cycle through each story by clicking the 20 small arrows on either side of the 4 circles on the translucent 21 bar along the bottom of the primary image.

22 51. Even if the stark similarities between the two websites was not 23 evidence enough, the source code comprising the featured module on THR's 24 website is alarming evidence of THR's egregious infringement.

25 52. Once a website is published, any individual who visits the site has 26 access to that website's source code with a click of the mouse. That is the method 27 by which THR had access to, copied and stole TVLine's source code. Embedded in 28 TVLine's source code and featured module are certain labels. The source code is 1 identified with labels that have original names, and are used for organizational, 2 identification, and coding standard purposes. Those names and labels are input by 3 the individual who creates the initial source code.

4 53. The names and labels of THR's source code is identical to TVLine's.
5 For example, TVLine's Markup Module contain the following original labels:
6 "MMCFeaturedCarosel," "MMC FCList," "MMC FCSelector," "MMC
7 FCSSStage," "MMC FCSecNav," and "MMC FCInfo."

8 54. To put the labels into context, PMC was formerly known as Mail.com 9 Media Corporation, commonly referred to under the acronym MMC. For that 10 reason, the initials "MMC" appear in each of the labels.

11 55. Egregiously, THR's source code and module still contains the 12 initials "MMC" in its labels. THR's source code also flagrantly contains the 13 same inadvertent misspelling of the word "Carosel."

14 56. Attached as Exhibits "1" – "7" are various screenshots that portray the 15 stark similarities between TVLine and THR's source code and module.

1 Code almost verbatim.

2 61. Defendants have utilized the copyrighted PMC Source Code as the 3 framework for a virtually identical homepage module on THR's website.

4 62. Defendants' actions were willful, intentional, and purposeful in 5 disregard of PMC's Copyrights.

6 63. As a direct and proximate cause of Defendants' infringement of 7 PMC's Copyrights and exclusive rights under the Copyright Act, PMC is entitled 8 to damages and disgorgement of Defendants' profits pursuant to 17 U.S.C. §

15 5. For disgorgement by Defendants to Plaintiff of all profits derived by 16 Defendants from their acts of copyright infringement and misappropriation and to 17 reimburse Plaintiff for all damages suffered by Plaintiff by reason of Defendants 18 acts, pursuant to 17 U.S.C. § 504(a)(1) & (b);

Exhibit “1”

Displayed are homepage screenshots of TVLine.com and HollywoodReporter.com showing a virtually identical copy of the "Featured Stories Module" side by side.

Exhibit 1

Exhibit 2

Displayed are homepage screenshots of TVLine.com and HollywoodReporter.com illustrating how the module on HollywoodReporter.com has been copied almost verbatim with only minor variations to size, color, font and text. The HollywoodReporter has not only imitated the style of the active featured story highlighter, but also stolen the alternate circle based navigation interface. Conclusively, all HollywoodReporter.com interactions with the module including auto cycling between stories on page load, number of featured stories shown, selection of active story, translucent bar displaying the title of the featured story, and the story selection animations, are stolen and misappropriated from TVLine.

Exhibit 3

Displayed are screenshots of TVLine.com's and HollywoodReporter.com's "Featured Stories Module" and the underlying JavaScript code. It is evident that The HollywoodReporter has egregiously copied the TVLine code line-by-line, letter-by-letter, and maybe most surprisingly when stealing the code—somehow forgot to delete the use of "MMC" prefixes throughout their code. (MMC is the acronym for PMC's former designation: Mail.com Media Corporation, which owns TVLine.com)

Exhibit 6

Displayed are screenshots of TVLine.com's and HollywoodReporter.com's "Featured Stories Module" and the underlying initialization code. Once again the code has been lifted from the TVLine site with insignificant configuration differences. Further proof of the HollywoodReporter's flagrant and unprincipled theft of PMC source code is evidenced by the misspelling of the word ("Caraousel" vs "Carousel") that appears in both sites' code (TVLine & HollywoodReporter).

Exhibit 7

Displayed are side by side screenshots of the CSS code applied to the "Featured Stories Module" on TVLine.com and HollywoodReporter.com. One can lucidly see that the HollywoodReporter's CSS is merely a slight revision of the TVLine.com original CSS code. The HollywoodReporter's unashamed use of "MMC"* prefixed CSS Classnames and CSS techniques, coupled with several CSS classes that remain unchanged from the original TVLine code implementation further confirms this theft of copyright. (*MMC is the acronym for PMC's former designation: Mail.com Media Corporation, which owns TVLine.com)
