Presently before the court is Plaintiff Celestial, Inc.'s Motion for Leave to Take Discovery Prior to Rule 26 Conference ("Motion"). Having reviewed Plaintiff's moving papers, the court denies the Motion, orders Plaintiff to show cause why this matter should not be dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction, and adopts the following Order.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Celestial, Inc. ("Celestial") is a California corporation that produces, markets, and distributes adult films. Celestial has filed multiple actions in this court, each alleging

1 that two or more Defendant "Does" reproduced and distributed 2 infringing copies of Celestial's copyrighted film "Moms Pimp Their 3 Daughters No. 3," using BitTorrent technology.<sup>1</sup> (Mot. at 2-3.)
4 According to Celestial, "BitTorrent is a peer-to-peer file sharing 5 protocol for distributing and sharing data on the Internet."
6 Instead of "downloading a file from a single source, the BitTorrent 7 protocol allows users to join a group of hosts (or 'swarm') to 8 download and upload from each other simultaneously." (Compl. ¶
9 29.)

10 Here, Celestial hired IPP International UG ("IPP") to "locate 11 and document infringing copies of its copyright protected works on 12 bit torrent networks." (Mot. at 3.) IPP then used an unspecified
13 "proprietary technology" to identify the IP addresses of devices 14 involved in the downloading and uploading of the film at issue, at 15 a particular date and time. (Decl. of Tobias Fieser in Supp. of 16 Mot. ¶¶ 11-14.) Celestial now seeks the court's permission to 17 serve subpoenas on relevant Internet service providers ("ISPs"), to 18 obtain the names, addresses, and other identifying information of 19 the subscribers associated with the IP addresses - currently named 20 as the Defendant "Does."

21 II. DISCUSSION

22 Generally, a party may not conduct discovery before the 23 parties have met and conferred pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil 24 Procedure ("Rule") 26(f). See SBO Pictures, Inc. v. Does 1-3036, 25 No. 11-4220, 2011 WL 6002620, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2011).
26 However, a court may authorize early discovery "for the parties'

27 _____

28 <sup>1</sup> Each action alleges contributory infringement and negligence as well.

1 and witnesses' convenience and in the interests of justice." Fed.
2 R. Civ. P. 26(d)(2). The moving party must show good cause for the 3 early discovery. See Semitoool, Inc. v. Tokyo Electron Am., Inc., 4 208 F.R.D. 273, 276 (N.D. Cal. 2002). "Good cause may be found 5 where the need for expedited discovery, in consideration of the 6 administration of justice, outweighs the prejudice to the 7 responding party." Id.

8 Other concerns are also at issue in actions like these, "where 9 the identity of alleged defendants will not be known prior to the 10 filing of a complaint." Gillespie v. Civiletti, 629 F.2d 637, 642
11 (9th Cir. 1980). As the Ninth Circuit has held, "the plaintiff 12 should be given an opportunity through discovery to identify the 13 unknown defendants, unless it is clear that discovery would not 14 uncover the identities, or that the complaint would be dismissed on 15 other grounds." Id.

16 District courts have further developed this standard where the 17 unknown defendants are anonymous internet users, taking into 18 account the First Amendment concerns involved. See SaleHoo Group,
19 Ltd. v. ABC Co., 722 F. Supp. 2d 1210, 1213-17 (W.D. Wash. 2010)
20 (discussing the relevant decisions and requirements imposed); Sony
21 Music Entm't, Inc. v. Does 1-40, 326 F. Supp. 2d 556, 558, 564-65 22 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (holding that "a person who uses the Internet to 23 download or distribute copyrighted music without permission is 24 engaging in the exercise of speech, albeit to a limited extent.").

25 Celestial asks the court to follow the majority of district
26 courts in this Circuit and apply the standard set forth in Columbia
27 Ins. Co. v. Seescandy.com, 185 F.R.D. 573, 578-79 (N.D. Cal. 1999).
28 Under Columbia, the moving party must: "(1) identify the defendant

1 with enough specificity to allow the Court to determine whether the 2 defendant is a real person or entity who could be sued in federal 3 court; (2) recount the steps taken to locate the defendant; (3)
4 show that its action could survive a motion to dismiss; and (4)
5 file a request for discovery with the Court identifying the persons 6 or entities on whom discovery process might be served and for which 7 there is a reasonable likelihood that the discovery process will 8 lead to identifying information." SBO Pictures, 2011 WL 6002620,
9 at *2. Other courts, however, have imposed a more stringent third 10 requirement - that the plaintiff "submit evidence sufficient to 11 defeat summary judgment" or "make a prima facie evidentiary 12 showing." SaleHoo Group, 722 F. Supp. 2d at 1216 (finding the 13 prima facie standard appropriate); see also Brief of Amicus Curiae
14 Electronic Frontier Foundation in Support of Motion to Quash
15 Subpoena, First Time Videos, LLC v. Does 1-500, 276 F.R.D. 241
16 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (No. 1:10-cv-06254), at 19-20 (arguing in favor of 17 the summary judgment standard).

18       The court need not decide among these variations here, as 19 Celestial's discovery request fails even under Columbia's more-
20 lenient "motion to dismiss" standard. In particular, the court 21 finds that Celestial's Complaint would not survive a motion to 22 dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. Celestial does not 23 address jurisdiction at all in its Motion. In its Complaint, 24 however, Celestial alleges that Defendants "reside in, solicit, 25 transact, or are doing business within the jurisdiction," because 26 "[g]eo locating tools" have placed the IP addresses of the Doe
27 Defendants in California. But Celestial also states that it "does 28 not make any representations as to the reliability or level of

1 accuracy of IP address geo-location tools." (Compl. ¶¶ 2-3 & n.1)
2 Nor does Celestial provide any details regarding the tools used or 3 the results.

4 Celestial also alleges in its Complaint that its film displays
5 "the title of the work, the name of the producer, and the Woodland 6 Hills, California address of the producer." Contrary to 7 Celestial's suggestion, this allegation alone is insufficient to 8 support a finding that "Defendants expressly aimed their tortious 9 acts against" a California company, as required for specific 10 jurisdiction. See Liberty Media Holding, LLC v. Tabora, No. 11-cv-11 651, 2012 WL 28788, at *2-7 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 4, 2012) (granting 12 defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, 13 after explaining in detail the insufficiency of similar 14 allegations).<sup>2</sup>

15 Accordingly, because Celestial's Complaint would not survive a 16 motion to dismiss, the court denies Celestial's Motion without 17 prejudice. Celestial can move again for early discovery if it is 18 able to adequately address personal jurisdiction, as well as the 19 other significant issues raised by courts in similar actions - most

23 <sup>2</sup> Cf. On The Cheap, LLC v. Does 1-5011, --- F.R.D. ----, 2011
24 WL 4018258, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 6, 2011) ("Plaintiff also 25 asserted that by virtue of their 'swarming' activity, the 26 out-of-state defendants have engaged in concerted activity with the 27 California defendants. The problem with this theory is that since 28 plaintiff could have filed this lawsuit in any state, the logical extension would be that everybody who used P2P software such as BitTorrent would subject themselves to jurisdiction in every state.
This is a far cry from the requirement that 'there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum State,' which is the hallmark of specific jurisdiction." (footnote omitted)).

1 notably, with regard to joinder.<sup>3</sup> Further, in light of the 2 jurisdictional issue, the court hereby orders Celestial to show
3 cause why the matter should be not dismissed on this ground.

4 III. CONCLUSION

5 For all of these reasons, the court hereby DENIES Celestial's
6 Motion for early discovery. Additionally, the court orders
7 Celestial to file a brief, not to exceed ten pages, by March 30, 8 2012, to show cause why this matter should not be dismissed for 9 lack of personal jurisdiction.
