1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT 9 CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA 10 DAVID UPTON, CASE NO. ED CV 10-253-ABC (PJW) 11 Petitioner, ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY PETITION 12 SHOULD NOT BE DISMISSED v. 13 DIRECTOR OF CORRECTIONS, 14 Respondent. 15 On February 19, 2010, Petitioner filed a Petition for Writ of 16 17 Habeas Corpus, seeking to challenge the lawfulness of a parole revocation proceeding. According to the Petition, he was convicted of 18 19 being a felon in possession of a loaded firearm in January 2006 and sentenced to four years in custody. (Petition at 2.) Thereafter, he 20 21 was released on parole. In January 2010, his parole was revoked, resulting in an eight-month sentence, which he is currently serving. 22 23 (Petition, Exh. D.) In the Petition, he claims that constitutional 24 rights were violated in the January 2010 revocation proceedings. (Petition at 3-14.) 25 26 27 28

As a matter of comity between state and federal courts, a federal court generally will not address the merits of a habeas corpus petition unless the petitioner has first exhausted his state remedies, i.e., sought state court review of every ground presented in the petition by presenting it to the highest state court. Rose v. Lundy, 455 U.S. 509, 518-22 (1982). Indeed, the law governing habeas petitions provides that a habeas petition brought by a person in state custody cannot be granted "unless it appears that -- (A) the applicant has exhausted the remedies available in the courts of the State; or (B)(I) there is an absence of available State corrective process; or (ii) circumstances exist that render such process ineffective to protect the rights of the applicant." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(1). exhaust state remedies, a petitioner must fairly present his contentions to the state courts, and the highest court of the state must dispose of them on the merits. O'Sullivan v. Boerckel, 526 U.S. 838, 842, 844-45 (1999). A district court may raise a failure to exhaust sua sponte. Stone v. San Francisco, 968 F.2d 850, 856 (9th Cir. 1992.)

In his Petition, Petitioner does not allege that he has presented any of his grounds for relief to the California Supreme Court.

Further, a check of the California Appellate Courts' website does not show any filings since the date Petitioner's parole was revoked.

Thus, it appears that the Petition is completely unexhausted and is subject to dismissal on that basis. See Rasberry v. Garcia, 448 F.3d 1150, 1154 (9th Cir. 2006).

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that, no later than March 19, 2010, Petitioner shall inform the Court in writing why this case should not be dismissed for failure to exhaust. Failure to timely file a response will result in a recommendation that this case be dismissed.

DATED: February 23, 2010.
