United States District Court
Central District of California

STACI CHESTER; DANIEL
FRIEDMAN; ROBIN BERKOFF; and THERESA METOYER, individually and o/b/o those similarly situated,
Plaintiffs,

v.

THE TJX COMPANIES, INC.; TJ MAXX
OF CA, LLC; MARSHALLS OF CA,
LLC; HOMEGOODS, INC; and DOES 1– 100, inclusive,
Defendants.

Case № 5:15-cv-01437-ODW (DTB)

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANTS’
MOTION TO DISMISS [36]

1 one of its retailer stores. (Id. ¶ 85; TJX “Compare At” Definition Signs (hereinafter 2 “Definition Signs”), Def. Req. for Judicial Not., Exs. C–D, ECF No. 37.) The 3 “compare at pricing” link on the TJ Maxx website is found amongst the fine print, on 4 the bottom-left of the page, alongside links to the stores’ privacy policies, terms of 5 use, and a site map. (Id. ¶ 60.) Only after clicking on this link would a consumer find 6 a definition:

7 What do we mean by “compare at”? The “compare at” price is our 8 buying staff’s estimate of the regular, retail price at which a comparable 9 item in finer catalogs, specialty or department stores may have been sold.
10 We buy products from thousands of vendors worldwide, so the item may 11 not be offered by other retailers at the “compare at” price at any 12 particular time or location. We encourage you to do your own 13 comparison shopping as another way to see what great value we offer.

14 (Id. ¶ 61 (emphasis added).)

15 Plaintiffs contend that they, like other reasonable consumers, “do not interpret a 16 ‘Compare At’ reference price to be merely an ‘estimate’ of what a ‘comparable’ 17 product ‘may’ have sold for.” (Id. ¶ 82.) Instead, they assume that the “Compare At” 18 tags list “prices at which the ‘principal retail outlets’ in California have sold, or are 19 selling, those products in any ‘substantial volume.’” (Id. ¶ 52.) Because Defendants 20 reach their “Compare At” pricing by relying on unverified comparative prices that are 21 mere “estimates” of prices that retailers “may” have sold a similar item, and where “as 22 here, the retailer and the consumer do not share the same meaning of the semantic cue 23 (‘compare at’), [] the phrase is open to more than one interpretation, [and] the use of 24 that phrase is misleading and deceptive,” Plaintiffs argue that Defendants are in 25 violation of Federal Trade Commission (“FTC”) Guidelines.² (Id. ¶¶ 37–53, 86.)

26 ² The FTC Pricing Guides provide rules for merchants that claim to “offer goods at prices lower than 27 those being charged by others for the same merchandise in the advertiser’s trade area.” 16 C.F.R. § 28 233.2(a). The FTC requires that, when merchants use advertisements that compare prices, “the advertised higher price must be based upon fact, and not be fictitious and misleading.” Id.
Furthermore, when an advertiser “represents that he is selling below the prices being charged in his area for a particular article,” that advertiser must be “reasonably certain that the higher price he advertises does not appreciably exceed the price at which substantial sales of the article are being

1 B. Plaintiff-Specific Allegations

2 Plaintiffs bring this action against Defendants on behalf of themselves and all 3 other consumers who have purchased items at a TJX Companies store in California 4 between July 17, 2011, and present day. (Compl. ¶ 7.) Plaintiffs allege that:

5 [They] reasonably believed, like all reasonable consumers, that the 6 “Compare At” prices represented the prices that they would expect to 7 play for those same products at other retailers in their general area. In 8 other words, Plaintiffs reasonably believed that the “Compare At” prices 9 referred to the then prevailing retail prices for those same items—that if 10 they left Defendants’ stores and shopped around for those same products, they would likely find them elsewhere at the higher “Compare At” prices provided by Defendants.

11 (Id. ¶ 58.) Each Plaintiff also alleges that, but for the perceived bargain implied by the 12 “Compare At” pricing, they would not have purchased the items. (Id. ¶¶ 146, 155, 13 165, 175, 184.)

14 Plaintiff Staci Chester is a resident of Riverside County, California and alleges 15 that, on at least two occasions, she purchased products from the Palm Desert, 16 California TJ Maxx store. (Id. ¶ 8.) In June 2015, Plaintiff Chester “purchased 2 17 Jessica Simpson handbags . . . for $24.99 each, for a total payment, including sales 18 tax, of $53.98.” (Id. ¶ 139.) Each bag was advertised with two prices on the tag: a 19 sale price of $24.99 and a “Compare At” reference price of “$48.00+UP.” (Id. ¶ 140.)
20 Each bag also included the purported original price tag, which listed an MSRP of 21 $68.00. As such, Chester alleges that the “Compare At” price and the MSRP price 22 were not accurate representations of the prices at which a “substantial volume of 23 sales” of the Jessica Simpson handbag were made in principal retail outlets in 24 California in June 2015. (Id. ¶¶ 141–42.)

26 made in the area.” Id. At the core of this FTC guideline is the notion that consumers should be able 27 to “consider a reduction from the price to represent a genuine bargain or saving” when they 28 encounter a comparative reference price. Even where merchants compare not the same merchandise, but rather comparable merchandise, the advertised price cannot “exceed the price at which such merchandise is being offered by representative retail outlets in the area.” 16 C.F.R. § 233.2(c).

1 Plaintiff Daniel Friedman is a resident of Los Angeles County, California who, 2 at least ten times during the class period, purchased items from a TJ Maxx store in 3 Westlake Village, California. (Id. ¶ 9.) On October 18, 2014, Friedman purchased 4 men’s clothing items; the prices of these items ranged from $5.99 to $49.99. (Id. ¶ 5 147.) One item listed a selling price of $5.99 alongside a “Compare At” price of 6 $10.00. (Id. ¶ 147.) Similarly, on July 3, 2015, Friedman purchased a clothing item at 7 Defendants’ Westlake Village store that sold for $6.99 but offered a “Compare At” 8 price of $14.00. (Id. ¶ 149.)

9 Plaintiff Robin Berkoff is a resident of Riverside County, California. She 10 alleges that she purchased items from a Palm Desert, California Marshalls store at 11 least five times and, at least ten times, made purchases at HomeGoods stores in Palm 12 Desert and Bermuda Dunes. (Id. ¶ 10.) She purchased tee-shirts and other items from 13 Marshalls and home décor, storage items, and candles from HomeGoods. (Id. ¶¶ 19– 14 20.) On May 28, 2015, Berkoff purchased a “Missy” tee shirt from a Marshalls store 15 that advertised a selling price of $12.99 alongside a “Compare At” price that, as she 16 alleges, was a deceptive, untrue, and misleading price representation. (Id. ¶ 157.) On 17 May 3, 2015, Berkoff purchased several items at a HomeGoods store, and these items 18 ranged in price from $9.99 to $24.99. (Id. ¶ 167.) One such item listed a selling price 19 of $24.99 as well as a “Compare At” price of $40.00. (Id.)

20 Plaintiff Theresa Metoyer is a resident of Riverside County, California who, on 21 over ten occasions, purchased products from a Mira Loma, California HomeGoods 22 store. (Id. ¶ 11.) She purchased bath rugs, lamps, and dinnerware. (Id. ¶ 21.) On 23 April 11, 2015, she spent $99.33 on HomeGoods items. (Id. ¶ 177.) One such item 24 listed a selling price of $29.99 and a “Compare At” reference price of $75.00. (Id.)

25 26 III. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

27 Plaintiffs Staci Chester and Daniel Friedman filed their original Complaint on 28 July 17, 2015. (ECF No. 1.) Chester, Friedman, and the Plaintiffs in two related

1 actions (Robin Berkoff and Theresa Metoyer), along with Defendants, then stipulated 2 to consolidate all three actions. (ECF No. 23.) After the Court granted the 3 consolidation, Plaintiffs filed their Consolidated Complaint with this Court on 4 September 3, 2015. (ECF Nos. 23, 28.) Defendants then moved to dismiss the 5 Consolidated Complaint on October 19, 2015. (ECF No. 36.) Plaintiffs filed a timely 6 opposition, and Defendants tendered a timely reply. (ECF Nos. 38, 40.) The Court
7 held a hearing on the matter on January 11, 2016. (ECF No. 54.) The matter is now 8 before the Court for decision.

9 10 IV. REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL NOTICE

11 Both Plaintiffs and Defendants filed Requests for Judicial Notice in conjunction 12 with the motion at bar. (ECF Nos. 37, 39.) Both parties also filed several Notices of 13 Recent Authority. (ECF Nos. 42, 59–61.) The Court GRANTS the parties’ requests 14 and hereby takes judicial notice of the recent, applicable case law, administrative 15 opinions, and photographic evidence.

16 When considering a motion to dismiss, courts typically do not look beyond the 17 complaint so as to avoid converting a motion to dismiss into a motion for summary 18 judgment. See Mack v. S. Bay Beer Distribs., Inc., 798 F.2d 1279, 1282 (9th Cir.
19 1986), overruled on other grounds by Astoria Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass’n v. Solimino, 501 20 U.S. 104 (1991). Notwithstanding this principle, a court may properly take judicial 21 notice of (1) material which is included as part of the complaint or relied upon by the 22 complaint and (2) matters in the public record. See Marder v. Lopez, 450 F.3d 445, 23 448 (9th Cir. 2006); Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 688–89 (9th Cir. 2001).
24 A court may also take judicial notice pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 201(b).
25 Under the rule, a judicially noticed fact must be one that is “not subject to reasonable 26 dispute because it: (1) is generally known within the trial court’s jurisdiction; or (2) 27 can be accurately and readily determined from sources whose accuracy cannot 28 reasonably be questioned.” Fed. R. Evid. 201(b). A court “must take judicial notice if 1 a party requests it and the court is supplied with the necessary information.” Fed. R.

2 Evid. 201(c)(2); see also In re Icenhower, 755 F.3d 1130, 1142 (9th Cir. 2014).
3 Courts regularly take judicial notice of filings in other proceedings. See Trigueros v.
4 Adams, 658 F.3d 983, 987 (9th Cir. 2011) (“In particular, we ‘may take notice of 5 proceedings in other courts, both within and without the federal judicial system, if 6 those proceedings have direct relation to matters at issue.”) (quoting United States ex 7 rel. Robinson Rancheria Citizens Council v. Boreno, Inc., 971 F.2d 244, 248 (9th Cir.
8 1992))) (emphasis added).

9 The parties request that the Court take notice of conflicting recent authority 10 concerning the issues at bar. Accordingly, the Court judicially notices Sperling v.
11 Stein Mart, Inc., 5:15-cv-01441-BRO-KKx (C.D. Cal. March 15, 2016); Sperling v.
12 DSW Inc., 5:15-cv-01366-JGB-SP (C.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2016); Sperling v. Stein Mart,
13 Inc., 5:15-cv-01441-BRO-KKx (C.D. Cal. Jan. 26, 2016); Sperling v. DSW Inc., 5:15-14 cv-01366-JGB-SP (C.D. Cal. Nov. 19, 2015); Rubenstein v. The Neiman Marcus Grp.
15 LLC, No. 2:14-cv-07155 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2014); Rubenstein v. The Neiman
16 Marcus Grp. LLC, No. 2:14-cv-07155 (C.D. Cal. May 12, 2015); Russell v. Kohl’s
17 Dept. Stores, Inc., 5:15-cv-01143-RGK-SP (C.D. Cal. Oct. 6, 2015); Branca v.
18 Nordstrom, Inc., 14-cv-02062-MMA (JMA) (S.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2015); and Horosny v.
19 Burlington Coat Factory of CA, LLC, 15-cv-05005-SJO (MRWx) (C.D. Cal. Oct. 26, 20 2015). The Court also takes notice of state court decision People of the State of 21 California v. Overstock.com, Inc., No. RG10-546833 (Alameda Super. Ct. Feb. 5, 22 2014).

23 Defendants also request judicial notice of an Opinion of the California Attorney 24 General and a compilation of photographs of the “Compare At” signs posted in TJ 25 Maxx and HomeGoods stores in Palm Desert, California and in a Marshalls store in 26 La Quinta, California. (See Definition Signs.) Opinions of the California Attorney 27 General are judicially noticeable public documents, and thus the Court will accept this 28 Opinion for purposes of the instant motion. See Cent. Delta Water Agency v. U.S.

1 Fish & Wildlife Serv., 653 F. Supp. 2d 1066, 1079 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (where publicly 2 available, Opinions of the California Attorney General are judicially noticeable). The 3 Court will likewise take notice of the photograph compilation, as they are not subject 4 to reasonable dispute and “can be accurately and readily determined from sources 5 whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.” Fed. R. Evid. 201(b)(2).

6 7 V. LEGAL STANDARD

8 A. Rule 12(b)(1)

9 A party may, at any time, move to dismiss a complaint for lack of subject 10 matter jurisdiction. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1), h(3). “A Rule 12(b)(1) jurisdictional 11 attack may be facial or factual.” Safe Air for Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 12 (9th Cir. 2004). “In a facial attack, the challenger asserts that the allegations 13 contained in a complaint are insufficient on their face to invoke federal jurisdiction.
14 By contrast, in a factual attack, the challenger disputes the truth of the allegations that, 15 by themselves, would otherwise invoke federal jurisdiction.” Id.

16 “In resolving a factual attack on jurisdiction, the district court may review 17 evidence beyond the complaint without converting the motion to dismiss into a 18 motion for summary judgment.” Id. The court “need not presume the truthfulness of 19 the plaintiffs’ allegations,” White v. Lee, 227 F.3d 1214, 1242 (9th Cir. 2000), and 20 may generally “resolve factual disputes concerning the existence of jurisdiction.”
21 McCarthy v. United States, 850 F.2d 558, 560 (9th Cir. 1988). “Once the moving 22 party has converted the motion to dismiss into a factual motion by presenting 23 affidavits or other evidence properly brought before the court, the party opposing the 24 motion must furnish affidavits or other evidence necessary to satisfy its burden of 25 establishing subject matter jurisdiction.” Savage v. Glendale Union High Sch., Dist.
26 No. 205, Maricopa Cnty., 343 F.3d 1036, 1040 (9th Cir. 2003). “Where jurisdiction is 27 intertwined with the merits,” the Court must “assume the truth of the allegations in a 28 complaint . . . unless controverted by undisputed facts in the record.” Warren. v. Fox

1 Family Worldwide, Inc., 328 F.3d 1136, 1139 (9th Cir. 2003) (internal citation and 2 quotation marks omitted).

3 B. Rule 12(b)(6)

4 A court may dismiss a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) for lack of a cognizable 5 legal theory or insufficient facts pleaded to support an otherwise cognizable legal 6 theory. Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990). To 7 survive a dismissal motion, a complaint need only satisfy the minimal notice pleading 8 requirements of Rule 8(a)(2)—a short and plain statement of the claim showing that 9 the plaintiff is entitled to relief. Porter v. Jones, 319 F.3d 483, 494 (9th Cir. 2003).
10 The factual “allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative 11 level.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). That is, the complaint 12 must “contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that 13 is plausible on its face.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). A claim is 14 plausible on its face “when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to 15 draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.”
16 Id.

17 The determination whether a complaint satisfies the plausibility standard is a 18 “context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial 19 experience and common sense.” Id. at 679. A court is generally limited to the 20 pleadings and must construe all “factual allegations set forth in the complaint . . . as 21 true and . . . in the light most favorable” to the plaintiff. Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 22 250 F.3d 668, 688 (9th Cir. 2001). But a court need not blindly accept conclusory 23 allegations, unwarranted deductions of fact, and unreasonable inferences. Sprewell v.
24 Golden State Warriors, 266 F.3d 979, 988 (9th Cir. 2001).

25 As a general rule, a court should freely give leave to amend a complaint that has 26 been dismissed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a). But a court may deny leave to amend when 27 “the court determines that the allegation of other facts consistent with the challenged 28 pleading could not possibly cure the deficiency.” Schreiber Distrib. Co. v. Serv-Well

1 Furniture Co., 806 F.2d 1393, 1401 (9th Cir.1986); see Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 2 1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2000).

3 C. Rule 9(b)

4 Rule 9(b) requires a party alleging fraud to “state with particularity the 5 circumstances constituting fraud.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). To plead fraud with 6 particularity, the pleader must state the time, place, and specific content of the false 7 representations. Odom v. Microsoft Corp., 486 F.3d 541, 553 (9th Cir. 2007). The 8 allegations “must set forth more than the neutral facts necessary to identify the 9 transaction. The plaintiff must set forth what is false or misleading about a statement, 10 and why it is false.” Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 1097, 1106 (9th Cir.
11 2003) (internal quotation marks omitted). In essence, the defendant must be able to 12 prepare an adequate answer to the allegations of fraud. Odom, 486 F.3d at 553.
13 Although conclusory allegations of the circumstances constituting the alleged fraud 14 are insufficient, see Moore v. Kayport Package Express, Inc., 885 F.2d 531, 540 (9th 15 Cir. 1989), a party is not required to plead with specificity the alleged wrongdoer’s 16 state of mind, see Concha v. London, 62 F.3d 1493, 1503 (9th Cir. 1995).

17 Where a district court grants a motion to dismiss, it should provide leave to 18 amend unless it is clear that the complaint could not be saved by any amendment.
19 Manzarek v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 519 F.3d 1025, 1031 (9th Cir. 2008)
20 (“Dismissal without leave to amend is improper unless it is clear, upon de novo 21 review, that the complaint could not be saved by any amendment.”). Leave to amend, 22 however, “is properly denied . . . if amendment would be futile.” Carrico v. City &
23 Cnty. of San Francisco, 656 F.3d 1002, 1008 (9th Cir. 2011).

25 VI. DISCUSSION

26 Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiffs’ Consolidated Complaint based on two, 27 separate overarching arguments that Plaintiffs (1) lack standing to pursue their claims 28

1 and (2) have failed to state a claim. The Court addresses each argument, and their 2 subsets, in turn.

3 A. Rule 12(b)(1): Standing

4 Defendants contend that Plaintiffs lack the requisite standing to even bring their 5 claims. (Mot. 19–24, ECF No. 36.) However, because a 12(b)(1) motion cannot rely 6 on factual issues that go to the merits of the case, the Court will not dismiss this case 7 on standing grounds.

8 1. Injury in Fact

9 Article III, Section 2, of the United States Constitution restricts the federal 10 “judicial Power” to the resolution of “Cases” and “Controversies,” and this case-or-11 controversy requirement is met where the plaintiff has standing to bring his or her suit.
12 Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 559–60 (1992); see also Cetacean Cmty.
13 v. Bush, 386 F.3d 1169, 1174 (9th Cir. 2004). To satisfy Article III standing, a 14 plaintiff must show that (1) he has suffered an “injury in fact” that is concrete and 15 particularized and actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical; (2) the injury is 16 fairly traceable to the challenged actions of the defendant; and (3) it is likely, as 17 opposed to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable 18 decision. Bernhardt v. Cnty. of Los Angeles, 279 F.3d 862, 868–69 (9th Cir. 2002)
19 (citing Friends of the Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Envtl. Servs., Inc., 528 U.S. 167, 180–81 20 (2000)). The plaintiff bears the burden of establishing these elements, and standing 21 must be present at the time the action is brought. Lujan, 504 U.S. at 561, 570 n.5.

22 Furthermore, the UCL, FAL, and CLRA have their own statutory requirements 23 beyond the constitutional minimums. “Under California’s UCL and FAL, a private 24 person has standing only if he or she ‘has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or 25 property as a result of the unfair competition.’” Bruton v. Gerber Prods. Co., 961 F.
26 Supp. 2d 1062, 1087 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (quoting Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204). A 27 plaintiff must: “(1) establish a loss or deprivation of money or property sufficient to 28 qualify as injury in fact, i.e., economic injury, and (2) show that that economic injury

1 was the result of, i.e., caused by, the unfair business practice or false advertising that 2 is the gravamen of the claim.” Kwikset Corp. v. Super. Ct., 51 Cal.4th 310, 322
3 (2011) (emphasis in original); see also Branca v. Nordstrom, Inc., No. 14CV2062-4 MMA JMA, 2015 WL 1841231, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2015) (“Branca I”).
5 Similarly, under CLRA, the plaintiff “must not only be exposed to an unlawful 6 practice but also have suffered some kind of damage.” Bower v. AT & T Mobility, 7 LLC, 196 Cal. App. 4th 1545, 1556 (2011) (internal quotation marks omitted). In 8 sum, to have standing to sue under the FAL, UCL, or CLRA, the plaintiff must allege 9 (1) that he suffered an economic injury, and (2) that he actually relied on the purported 10 material misrepresentation. See In re Ferrero Litig., 794 F. Supp. 2d 1107, 1111–12 11 (S.D. Cal. 2011) (citing Kwikset, 51 Cal.4th at 326–27).

12 Defendants maintain that Plaintiffs’ failure to “identify the products they 13 purchased, specify the corresponding selling and ‘Compare At’ prices, and allege 14 what the ‘Compare At’ prices should have been” leaves them without standing, both 15 constitutional and statutory, in this Court. (Mot. 21; Reply 18, ECF No. 40.) They 16 claim that, without a showing that the “Compare At” prices “were not a reasonable 17 indicator of prevailing market prices,” Plaintiffs have failed show that they were 18 injured. (Reply 18.)

19 Yet at the crux of Defendants’ jurisdictional argument sits the merits of this 20 case. An assessment of the merits informs whether the purportedly necessary facts 21 are, in fact, necessary. Whether the “Compare At” price was or was not an accurate 22 reflection of prevailing prices for the advertised item, or whether the difference 23 between the selling price and the reference price was large enough to be material, are 24 questions this litigation was designed to answer—and where standing requires factual 25 determinations on the merits, courts must refrain from deciding such issues on a 26 motion to dismiss.

27 The Ninth Circuit has explained that, in the context of false advertising claims 28 under California law, consumers suffer an “injury-in-fact” for Article III purposes

1 when, as a result of false advertising, they purchase a product “when they otherwise 2 would not have done so.” Hinojos v. Kohl’s Corp., 718 F.3d 1098, 1104 n.3 (9th Cir.
3 2013), as amended on denial of reh’g and reh’g en banc (July 8, 2013); see also Mazza
4 v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 666 F.3d 581, 595 (9th Cir. 2012) (“To the extent that class 5 members were relieved of their money by [defendant’s] deceptive conduct—as 6 Plaintiffs allege—they have suffered an ‘injury in fact.’” (quoting Stearns v.
7 Ticketmaster Corp., 655 F.3d 1013, 1021 (9th Cir. 2011))); Maya v. Centex Corp., 8 658 F.3d 1060, 1069 (9th Cir. 2011) (explaining that plaintiffs’ “claim that, as a result 9 of defendants’ actions, they paid more for their homes than the homes were worth at 10 the time of sale,” and “claim that they would not have purchased their homes had 11 defendants made the disclosures allegedly required by law” constituted “a 12 quintessential injury-in-fact”).

13 However, this Court “may not resolve genuinely disputed facts where ‘the 14 question of jurisdiction is dependent on the resolution of factual issues going to the 15 merits.’” Roberts v. Corrothers, 812 F.2d 1173, 1177 (9th Cir. 1987) (quoting 16 Augustine v. United States, 704 F.2d 1074, 1077 (9th Cir. 1983)). The question of 17 whether Plaintiffs have standing in this case is dependent on the resolution of factual 18 issues going to the merits—namely whether Defendants’ conduct was deceptive 19 and/or misleading, and thus the cause of an economy injury. This Court in Sperling v.
20 Stein Mart, Inc., 15-cv-1411-BRO-KK, ECF No. 41 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2016)
21 (“Sperling II”) (Not. of Decision, ECF No. 61), likewise refrained from hearing 22 defendant’s standing arguments at the motion to dismiss stage. Id. at 9. While the 23 Sperling II defendant did not argue that a lack of specificity in the complaint 24 warranted dismissal under 12(b)(1)—but rather that plaintiff quite simply could not be 25 injured by a “Compare At” price tag—the difference is immaterial. See id. Whether a 26 plaintiff would need certain facts in her complaint to prove a false advertising claim, 27 or whether the lack of those facts prove the veracity of those same ads, asks questions 28 at the heart of the merits inquiry. Moreover, with Defendants already challenging the

1 factual support, or lack thereof, in Plaintiffs’ Consolidated Complaint in their Rule 2 12(b)(6) arguments, see infra, the Court has a more appropriate avenue to consider the 3 sufficiency of Plaintiffs’ pleadings. Accordingly, the Court DENIES Defendants’ 4 standing challenge at this stage of the litigation.

5 2. Standing to Bring Claims for Items Purchased by Others

6 Defendants next challenge Plaintiffs’ abilities to bring claims on behalf of other 7 consumers who may have purchased items at a TJX Companies retail store. (Mot.
8 22.) Because the Court recognizes that standing is to be a jurisdictional benchmark 9 and not a bludgeon with which to bat litigants out of the courthouse, the Court 10 DENIES Defendants’ 12(b)(1) motion on such grounds.

11 Without a limit on what “items” may fall within Plaintiffs’ putative claims, 12 Defendants argue that Plaintiffs’ class action now falls outside the scope of the UCL 13 and FAL. (Id.) Plaintiffs counter and argue that litigants “may have standing to assert 14 claims for unnamed class members based on products he or she did not purchase so 15 long as the products and alleged misrepresentations are substantially similar.” Dorsey
16 v. Rockhard Labs., LLC, No. CV 13-07557 DDP RZX, 2014 WL 4678969, at *3 17 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 19, 2014) (citing Miller v. Ghiradelli Chocolate Co., 912 F. Supp. 2d 18 861, 869 (N.D. Cal. 2012)). Because the Court does not undertake the selective 19 reading of case law that Defendants request, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have 20 standing to raise claims for items purchased by unnamed class members.

21 The Court’s decision in Branca v. Nordstrom, Inc., No. 14CV2062-MMA 22 (JMA), 2015 WL 10436858 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2015) (“Branca II”), is illustrative. Just 23 like Plaintiffs at bar, Branca claimed that Nordstrom Rack’s “Compare At” pricing 24 scheme violated the UCL, FAL, and CLRA. Id. at *5. After a detailed tour through 25 the applicable precedent (or lack thereof), the Court determined that the level of 26 similarity between the items purchased by unnamed class members and those 27 purchased by the named plaintiff informs the standing inquiry. Id. at *4–5. The Court 28 then found that, while a careful look at the type of consumer targeted and the

1 similarities in usage of the products can help the Court, id. at *5, sufficient similarities 2 in the misrepresentations may afford a litigant standing to sue on behalf of the 3 unnamed class where the composition of the products themselves are of lesser 4 importance to the litigant’s claims. Id. (citing Miller, 912 F. Supp. 2d at 869). The 5 Branca II Court then found that a challenge to reference pricing is more analogous to 6 cases challenging labeling practices, not the products themselves, and thus the 7 variance in product is of little importance in comparison to the misrepresentation 8 scheme. Branca II, 2015 WL 10436858, at *5. The Court further held that “[t]he 9 ‘Compare At’ tags are substantially similar because the characteristics and format that 10 Plaintiff complains of remain consistent across such tags,” and thus the plaintiff had 11 standing to sue on behalf of purchasers of other Nordstrom Rack items with the 12 “Compare At” tags. Id.

13 The Court sees no reason to depart from its sister court’s thorough and informed 14 analysis. Plaintiffs here challenge the “Compare At” price labeling, which remains 15 consistent across items in each of Defendants’ stores, regardless of its placement in 16 the home goods, shoe, or men’s clothing departments. To say that Plaintiff Chester 17 only has standing to sue on behalf others who purchased a Jessica Simpson handbag 18 in a TJ Maxx store—and only a Jessica Simpson handbag—is to make a mockery of 19 the false advertising class action itself and, based on such logic, a clear way to burden 20 an already overburdened judicial system. No court wishes to become a pit of despair, 21 whereby it must adjudicate a claim for each individual item on a TJ Maxx shelf in 22 order to rectify an alleged UCL, FAL, or CLRA violation.

23 3. Prospective Injunctive Relief

24 Finally, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs cannot establish standing for 25 prospective relief. (Mot. 23.) Without an allegation in the Consolidated Complaint 26 that these Plaintiffs intend to purchase any items from its retailers in the future, 27 Defendants argue, Plaintiffs have no likelihood of again suffering a similar injury and 28 thus lack standing to seek prospective relief. (Id. 23–24.)

1 To establish Article III standing for injunctive relief, in addition to the 2 constitutional standing elements described above, plaintiffs must show “a very 3 significant possibility of future harm; it is insufficient for them to demonstrate only a 4 past injury.” San Diego Cnty. Gun Rights Comm. v. Reno, 98 F.3d 1121, 1126 (9th 5 Cir. 1996). Furthermore, in the context of a class action, “[u]nless the named 6 plaintiffs are themselves entitled to seek injunctive relief, they may not represent a 7 class seeking that relief.” Hodgers–Durgin v. de la Vina, 199 F.3d 1037, 1045 (9th 8 Cir. 1999).

9 It is inconceivable to think prospective relief in the false advertising context is 10 bound by the rules of “fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice shame on me.”
11 The Court is unwilling to play Defendants’ game, and refuses to find that, once a 12 plaintiff has alleged that she was deceived, she likely will not voluntarily be deceived
13 again—and thus no court can enjoin deceptive practices without ignoring Article III’s 14 standing requirements. Instead, the Court looks to the reasoning of our sister courts, 15 which have held that California’s consumer laws are designed “to protect both 16 consumers and competitors by promoting fair competition in commercial markets for 17 goods and services.” Kwikset, 51 Cal.4th at 320. To follow Defendants’ arguments 18 would “eviscerate the intent of the California legislature in creating consumer 19 protection statutes because it would effectively bar any consumer who avoids the 20 offending product from seeking injunctive relief.” Koehler v. Litehouse, Inc., No. CV 21 12-04055 SI, 2012 WL 6217635, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 13, 2012); see also Lanovaz v.
22 Twinings N. Am., Inc., No. C-12-02646-RMW, 2014 WL 46822, at *10 (N.D. Cal.
23 Jan. 6, 2014). This Court will not, as Defendants wish, sound the death knell over 24 California’s consumer protection scheme. Defendants’ motion to dismiss the 25 injunctive relief claim is denied.

26 B. Rule 12(b)(6): Plaintiffs’ FAL, UCL, and CLRA Claims

27 Plaintiffs allege that Defendants’ “Compare At” price tags violate the FAL, 28 UCL, and CLRA because they are interpreted as listing actual retail prices at which

1 consumers have purchased the item—not, as Defendants argue, “comparable value 2 comparisons.” (Opp’n 1, ECF No. 38.) Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiffs’ FAL, 3 UCL, and CLRA claims under Rules 12(b)(6) and 9(b) on the grounds that Plaintiffs 4 have failed to provide (1) factual support for their argument that the “Compare At” 5 prices are inflated or unverified; (2) proper identification of the products they 6 allegedly purchased, their selling prices, and the “Compare At” prices on which they 7 relied; and (3) any basis for concluding that a “reasonable” consumer would be duped
8 by Defendants’ reference pricing scheme. (Mot. 2.)

9 1. California’s FAL, UCL, and CLRA

10 California’s FAL prohibits any “unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading 11 advertising.” Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500. Under the FAL, “it is unlawful for a 12 business to disseminate any statement ‘which is untrue or misleading, and which is 13 known, or which by the exercise of reasonable care should be known, to be untrue or 14 misleading[.]’” Arevalo v. Bank of Am. Corp., 850 F. Supp. 2d 1008, 1023–24 (N.D.
15 Cal. 2011) (internal citation omitted). Furthermore,

16 [t]he statute has been interpreted broadly to encompass not only 17 advertising which is false, but also advertising which, although true, is 18 either actually misleading or which has a capacity, likelihood or tendency 19 to deceive or confuse the public. . . . Consequently, even a perfectly true 20 statement couched in such a manner that it is likely to mislead or deceive the consumer, such as by failure to disclose other relevant information, is actionable under this section.

21 Davis v. HSBC Bank Nevada, N.A., 691 F.3d 1152, 1162 (9th Cir. 2012) (internal 22 citations, quotations, and alterations omitted); see also Colgan v. Leatherman Tool 23 Grp., Inc., 135 Cal. App. 4th 663, 679 (2006) (quoting Kasky v. Nike, Inc., 27 Cal. 4th 24 939, 951 (2002)).

25 California’s UCL prohibits “any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or 26 practice and unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising.” Cal. Bus. & Prof.
27 Code § 17200. The UCL provides a separate theory of liability under each of the 28 three prongs: “unlawful,” “unfair,” and “fraudulent.” Stanwood v. Mary Kay, Inc.,

1 941 F. Supp. 2d 1212, 1222 (C.D. Cal. 2012) (citing Lozano v. AT & T Wireless 2 Servs., Inc., 504 F.3d 718, 731 (9th Cir. 2007)). “The UCL expressly incorporates the 3 FAL’s prohibition on unfair advertising as one form of unfair competition.” Hinojos, 4 718 F.3d at 1103. Accordingly, any violation of the FAL also violates the UCL. L v.
5 Gerber Prods. Co., 552 F.3d 934, 938 (9th Cir. 2008) (citing Kasky v. Nike, Inc., 27 6 Cal.4th 939, 950 (2002)).

7 Finally, California’s CLRA prohibits “unfair methods of competition and unfair 8 or deceptive acts or practices.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1770. Specifically, the law makes 9 illegal various “unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or practices 10 undertaken by any person in a transaction intended to result or which results in the 11 sale or lease of goods or services to any consumer.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a).
12 Conduct that is “likely to mislead a reasonable consumer” violates the CLRA.
13 Colgan, 135 Cal. App. 4th at 680 (quoting Nagel v. Twin Labs., Inc., 109 Cal. App.
14 4th 39, 54 (2003)).

15 2. The Reasonable Consumer Test

16 To state a claim under the FAL, UCL, or the CLRA, the plaintiff must allege 17 that the defendant’s purported misrepresentations are likely to deceive a reasonable 18 consumer. See Williams, 552 F.3d at 938 (explaining that unless the advertisement at 19 issue targets a particularly vulnerable group, courts must evaluate claims for false or 20 misleading advertising from the perspective of a reasonable consumer); see also Reid 21 v. Johnson & Johnson, 780 F.3d 952, 958 (9th Cir. 2015) (“It is true that violations of 22 the UCL, FAL, and CLRA are evaluated from the vantage point of a ‘reasonable 23 consumer.’”); In re Sony Gaming Networks & Customer Data Sec. Breach Litig., 903 24 F. Supp. 2d 942, 967 (S.D. Cal. 2012) (“To state a claim under the [UCL and FAL]
25 one need not plead and prove the elements of a tort. Instead, one need only show that 26 ‘members of the public are likely to be deceived.’”) (citations omitted). “A 27 reasonable consumer is ‘the ordinary consumer acting reasonably under the 28 circumstances.’” Davis, 691 F.3d at 1161–62 (quoting Colgan, 135 Cal. App. 4th at

1 682). “Likely to deceive implies more than a mere possibility that the advertisement 2 might conceivably be misunderstood by some few consumers viewing it in an 3 unreasonable manner.” In re Sony, 903 F. Supp. 2d at 967 (citing Lavie v. Procter & 4 Gamble Co., 105 Cal. App. 4th 496, 508 (2003)). Instead, “the phrase indicates that 5 the ad is such that it is probable that a significant portion of the general consuming 6 public or of targeted consumers, acting reasonably in the circumstances, could be 7 mislead [sic].” Id. “In determining whether a statement is misleading under the 8 statute, the primary evidence in a false advertising case is the advertising itself.”
9 Bruton v. Gerber Prods. Co., 961 F. Supp. 2d 1062, 1092 n.20 (N.D. Cal. 2013)
10 (quoting Colgan, 135 Cal. App. 4th at 679) (internal quotation marks omitted).

11 Finally, courts have recognized that “[w]hether a practice is deceptive, 12 fraudulent, or unfair is generally a question of fact which requires consideration and 13 weighing of evidence from both sides and which usually cannot be made on [a motion 14 to dismiss].” Williams, 552 F.3d at 939 (internal quotations removed) (citing Linear 15 Technology Corp. v. Applied Materials, Inc., 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 221, 237 (2007)).

16 3. Analysis

17 i. Consolidated Complaint Adequately States a Claim

18 Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiffs’ Consolidated Complaint on the grounds 19 that the pleading is conclusory and devoid of supporting facts, and thus insufficient 20 under Rule 8. (Mot. 9.) The retailers contend that Plaintiffs must offer “actual facts 21 explaining how and why the claims about the product were false or misleading.” (Id.
22 10.) Plaintiffs, in turn, remind the Court that all allegations must be taken as true at 23 the pleading stage, and argue that it is only in the “rare situation” where an 24 advertisement itself “ma[kes] it impossible for the plaintiff to prove that a reasonable 25 consumer [could be] deceived” should a court dismiss a false advertising claim at the 26 pleading stage. Williams, 552 F.3d at 939. (Opp’n 6–7.) The Court agrees with 27 Plaintiffs.

28

1 At the heart of parties' battle of wits is whether a consumer would "reasonably" 2 find Defendants' reference prices to be misleading or deceptive. See Reid, 780 F.3d at 3 958. The advertising itself, and not any additional facts designed to prove the 4 effectivity of the ad, serves as the "primary evidence" in a false advertising action.
5 Williams, 522 F.3d at 938. Plaintiffs argue that Defendants cannot claim with a 6 straight face that consumers assume a comparison price refers to a "value estimate." 7 (See Compl. ¶¶ 62–65, 76, 79; Opp'n 10.) Instead, a reasonable consumer would 8 assume that the "Compare At" price has some basis in reality, and that consumers are 9 at least being asked to compare current or recent sales of the item at other similar 10 stores. (Id.) Defendants counter and claim that advertisers are fully within their rights 11 under the FTC Guidelines to offer price comparisons between one item and another of 12 comparable value, and that those comparisons can be based on good faith estimates.
13 (Mot. 13–14.)

14 What Defendants do not address is that, while the FTC does allow for 15 comparisons between items, those comparison prices cannot "appreciably exceed the 16 price at which substantial sales of the article are being made in the area." 16 C.F.R. § 17 2332(a). The FTC Guidelines clearly state that comparisons must be based on actual 18 prices, not "estimates" of prices at which "a comparable item" in another store or 19 catalog "may" have been sold. (Compl. ¶ 61.) Moreover, Defendants' full definition 20 of its "Compare At" pricing scheme even says that the item "may not be offered by 21 other retailers at the 'compare at' price at any particular time or location." (Id.) If 22 Defendants believe that "estimates" are the same as "comparisons with actual 23 merchandise," then the Court is here to say that this word does not mean what you 24 think it means. In fact, the FTC guidelines clearly outline that reference prices meant 25 to reflect comparable values must be actual "prices being charged" by other, similar 26 retailers in the geographical region at that point in time, and not "estimates" of what a 27 fictitious retailer may charge. 16 C.F.R. § 233.2(c).

1 Moreover, even if the “Compare At” tags are proper comparisons of like-2 valued items, the Federal Trade Commission sets a further limitation on how far 3 retailers may stretch their price representations before crossing the line into the fire
4 swamp of misrepresentation and deceit. The Guidelines require retailers who use 5 reference pricing to make “clear to the consumer that a comparison is being made with 6 other merchandise.” Id. Defendants have failed to communicate their definition of 7 “Compare At” to their customers, and a link at the bottom of a webpage and a sign 8 near the return counter, not the sales counter, will not suffice. Defendants use the 9 “Compare At” pricing for every item in each of their stores, and consumers are 10 confronted with those advertisements when they make their decision to purchase an 11 item. Yet nowhere on the tag is there even an asterisk or hint that the comparison 12 price is not comparing the same item, or may not be based on real sales. The more 13 precise definition of the “Compare At” price is kin to the ever-elusive six-fingered 14 man, and it is unrealistic for Defendants to expect consumers to pull out their smart 15 phones and search the retailer’s website³ for a definition of the seemingly clear phrase, 16 or chance that they see a sign offering insight before they reach the check-out counter.
17 See Williams, 522 F.3d at 939 (reasonable consumers should not “be expected to look 18 beyond misleading representations . . . to discover the truth” beyond an advertiser’s 19 claims). The advertisements, therefore, are not clearly communicating that the 20 comparison is not between the same item, but like items.

21 Defendants, however, ask this Court to look to Sperling v. Stein Mart, Inc., 15-22 cv-1411, ECF No. 35 (Jan. 26, 2016 C.D. Cal.) (“Sperling I”). (Not. of Recent 23 Authority, ECF No. 59.) The facts between Sperling and the case at bar are strikingly 24 similar, with Stein Mart using “Compare At” pricing, just like Defendants, but with an 25 added asterisk after the reference price. Sperling I at 13. In Judge Beverly Reid 26 O’Connell’s first order granting defendant Stein Mart’s Motion to Dismiss, the Court

27
28 ³ This assumes the consumer is shopping at TJ Maxx, the only TJX Companies retailer that lists the “Compare At” definition online. (Mot. 17 n.12.)

1 found plaintiffs’ lack of detail concerning the “Compare At” pricing scheme to be 2 “unqualified,” and thus insufficient to properly allege that the reference pricing was 3 “misleading.” Id. However, this order was not the last in Sperling v. Stein Mart; less 4 than three months later, the same court denied defendant’s next Motion to Dismiss, 5 finding Plaintiff Sperling’s minor adjustments in her Third Amended Complaint to be 6 sufficient to allege misrepresentation. Sperling v. Stein Mart, Inc., 15-cv-1411, ECF
7 No. 41 (Mar. 15, 2016 C.D. Cal.) (“Sperling II”). Where Sperling’s first complaint
8 did not address the asterisk after Stein Mart’s “Compare At” pricing label, her 9 amended pleading noted that, even with an asterisk to potentially direct consumers to 10 seek out a proper definition of the phrase, the asterisk did not “serve to adequately 11 disclose to consumers that comparisons are being made to non-identical items,” and 12 that consumers would reasonably believe the “Compare At” price would denote 13 comparisons to the same item. Id. at 7.

14 The Court finds Sperling II to be the more persuasive of the series, and more 15 applicable to the instant case. Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged that the price tag 16 could mislead a reasonable consumer, and that a reasonable consumer does not 17 believe that “Compare At” refers to an estimated value instead of an actual item in a 18 competitor’s store. (Compl. ¶¶ 62–65, 76, 79.) What is more, the plaintiff in Sperling
19 II satisfied Rule 9’s heightened pleading standard even where Stein Mart’s asterisk 20 begged consumers to dig deeper into their suggested definition of the reference price.
21 Defendants here offer no such asterisk, that little grammatical wink to imply that there 22 is more for the consumer to know and understand—such as the side effects of a 23 miracle drug, the vast limitations of an insurance plan provision, or the “real” meaning 24 behind the wording in an advertisement.

25 Finally, there is a reason Defendants, just like Stein Mart and others, use 26 reference pricing: it makes consumers think they are getting a deal. If the phrasing did 27 not work just so, retailers would find another way to get consumers in the door and its 28 merchandise in people’s shopping carts. Consumers are easily wooed by “Compare

1 At” pricing advertisements because they believe that they are not only getting a deal, 2 but also a high-quality item at a wallet-friendly price. When these reference prices are 3 misleading, the consumer suffers an “obvious economic injury as a result of false 4 advertising . . . because the bargain hunter’s expectations about the product he just 5 purchased is precisely that it has a higher perceived value and therefore has a higher 6 resale value.” Hinojos, 718 F.3d at 1106. Defendants’ game of relying on the plain 7 meaning of the “Compare At” phrase to get people to shop at its stores while also 8 claiming that the phrase’s definition is, in fact, qualified beyond recognition is not 9 very sportsmanlike. Anyone who says differently is selling something.

10 In sum, because the question of whether an advertiser’s actions are deceptive is 11 not usually proper for decision at the pleading stage, Williams, 552 F.3d at 938–39, 12 and because Defendants’ “Compare At” price tag is not so wholly clear that any 13 misconception as to its meaning is, ipso facto, unreasonable, the Court denies 14 Defendants’ claim.

15 ii. Additional Pleading Requirements under FAL, UCL, and 16 CLRA

17 Similarly, Defendants contend that Plaintiffs’ pleading falls short of Rule 9(b)’s 18 heightened pleading standards. (Mot. 8.) They assert that, without alleging (1) the 19 item each Plaintiff purchased; (2) the selling price for that item; (3) the advertised 20 “Compare At” price for that item; and (4) what the “Compare At” price should have 21 been and why, Plaintiffs have failed to plead their fraud claims with sufficient 22 particularity. (Id. (emphasis added).)

23 Claims made under the UCL, FAL, and CLRA must also meet the heightened 24 pleading standards required by Rule 9. See Kearns v. Ford Motor Co., 567 F.3d 1120, 25 1125 (9th Cir. 2009). Rule 9 adds additional heft to Rule 8’s pleading standards, and 26 mandates that litigants bringing deceptive practices claims allege “the who, what, 27 when, where, and how” of the supposedly fraudulent conduct. Cooper v. Pickett, 137 28 F.3d 616, 627 (9th Cir. 1997). “It is well settled that fraud [a]llegations based on

1 ‘information and belief’ do not satisfy the particularity requirement of Rule 9(b) 2 unless the complaint sets forth the facts on which the belief is founded.” Comwest, 3 Inc. v. Am. Operator Servs., Inc., 765 F. Supp. 1467, 1471 (C.D. Cal. 1991) (alteration 4 in original).

5 The Court does not agree with Defendants’ interpretation of Rule 9’s strictures.
6 Plaintiffs are not required to list the selling price, “Compare At” price, and what the 7 reference price should have been in order to survive a Motion to Dismiss. (See Mot.
8 8.) Contrary to Defendants’ wishes, litigants do not need to plead the “who, what, 9 when, where, and how” when access to answers for those questions is in Defendants’ 10 control. Instead, a plaintiff must “plead[] with particularity how and why he was 11 personally deceived by the ‘Compare At’ tags.” Branca II, 2015 WL 10436858, at *7.
12 The focus is on whether enough facts support a reasonable consumer’s reaction to an 13 allegedly deceptive advertisement—not whether enough facts can definitively prove 14 fraud at the pleading stage.

15 Defendants turn to Kearns v. Ford Motor Co., 567 F.3d 1120 (9th Cir. 2009) for 16 support, yet the pleading at issue in Kearns is inapposite. (See Mot. 8–9.) In Kearns, 17 the Ninth Circuit found that the plaintiff’s pleading did not “articulate the who, what, 18 when, where, and how of the misconduct alleged” where he offered no facts 19 concerning (1) the material statements in the allegedly deceptive advertisements; (2) 20 when he saw these advertisements; (3) which materials he relied on when making his 21 purchasing decision; (4) who told him that certified pre-owned vehicles were “the best 22 used vehicles available”; or (5) when this alleged statement was made. Id. at 1126.
23 Such is not the case here. Plaintiffs have clearly plead that Defendants (the “who”), 24 with their use of “Compare At” pricing tags (“what”)⁴, mislead consumers into

25 _____
26 ⁴ With every item in Defendants’ stores sold with a “Compare At” pricing label, the exact identity of 27 each item is immaterial. Plaintiffs’ claims are rooted in the misrepresentations that the labels 28 provide, and how they induce consumers to purchase Defendants’ items under the veil of a perceived bargain. These claims are not item-specific, and as such the “what” in the Rule 9 calculus must properly refer to the label, not the item itself. However, even if the items themselves are material to the analysis, plaintiffs in similar actions who merely allege that they purchased “one pair of pants,”

1 believing that the reference price reflected the selling prices offered at other similar 2 retailers in the region. (Compl. ¶¶ 146, 155, 165, 175, 184.) Each named Plaintiff 3 also pleads “when” he or she purchased an item with the suspect price reference tag: 4 Chester in June 2015; Friedman on October 18, 2014 and July 3, 2015; Berkoff on 5 May 3, 2015 and May 28, 2015; and Metoyer on April 11, 2015. (Id. ¶¶ 139, 147, 6 149, 157, 167, 177.) Each Plaintiff also notes the store “where” he or she shopped.
7 (Id. ¶¶ 8–11.)

8 As for the “how,” Defendants misrepresent this final Rule 9 hurdle. Defendants 9 argue that, without noting what the “Compare At” price should have been and why, 10 Plaintiffs cannot establish whether they received the benefit of their bargain and were, 11 therefore, harmed (and if not, then the reference price could not be misleading). (Mot.
12 8.) Yet Plaintiffs do not need to allege that the deal they received on their purchases 13 was subpar, or even that the items were unfairly priced—such allegations are not 14 required to state a UCL, FAL, or CLRA claim. See Branca II, 2015 WL 10436858, at 15 *8. These statutes aim to curb deceptive or false price reductions, and where a 16 litigant, as here, pleads that the “Compare At” price tag would deceive a reasonable 17 consumer, then Rule 9(b) is satisfied.

18 However, even if the extent of Plaintiffs’ bargain was relevant, this Court 19 refuses to require Plaintiffs to know what the reference price “should have been,” as 20 “facts supporting allegations of fraud that are exclusively within the defendant’s 21 possession and of which a plaintiff cannot be expected to have personal knowledge 22 prior to discovery” are not held to Rule 9’s heightened strictures. Id. (citing Estate of 28 the attached price tags have survived motions to dismiss. Branca II, 2015 WL 10436858, at *1; Horosny v. Burlington Coat Factory of CA, LLC, 15-cv-05005-SJO (MRWx), ECF No. 30 at 3 (C.D.

Cal. Oct. 26, 2015). Plaintiffs’ lack of perceived specificity here likewise will not doom their case.

1 exacting level of specificity is akin to requiring the consumer to tell the merchant what 2 price it is allowed to fetch without running afoul of FTC Guidelines or state law.
3 Such an absurd requirement would leave every litigant outside the courthouse gate and 4 the UCL, FAL, and CLRA unused and useless. Instead, simply meeting the 5 “reasonable consumer test” will suffice to meet the “how” prong, and Plaintiffs here 6 have properly alleged that the “Compare At” price can deceive a reasonable consumer 7 into assuming that the price is comparing the selling prices of like items in like stores.
8 (Compl. ¶¶ 62–65, 76, 79.)

9 Accordingly, and swearing it will be done, the Court DENIES Defendants’ 10 Motion and holds that Plaintiffs have sufficiently plead their UCL, FAL, and CLRA 11 claims.

13 VII. CONCLUSION

14 For the reasons discussed above, the Court DENIES Defendants’ Motion to 15 Dismiss in its entirety. (ECF No. 36.)
