Respondent.)

Petitioner, a federal prisoner proceeding pro se, has filed an application for a petition for writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

BACKGROUND¹

Petitioner is currently in custody of the Bureau of Prisons (“BOP”) at Taft Correctional Institution located in Taft, California, pursuant to a judgment of the United States District Court. Petitioner was sentenced to serve thirty-six (36) months in federal prison on May 23, 2005; he has a projected release date of November 5, 2007.

On March 22, 2007, Petitioner filed the instant federal petition for writ of habeas corpus in this Court. Petitioner claims the BOP is unlawfully denying him consideration for placement into a Residential Re-entry Center (“RRC”) for the last six months of his thirty-six month sentence.

¹This information was derived from the petition for writ of habeas corpus.

1 DISCUSSION

2 A. Standard of Review

3 Writ of habeas corpus relief extends to a person in custody under the authority of the United 4 States. See 28 U.S.C. § 2241. Writ of habeas corpus relief is available if a federal prisoner can show 5 he is “in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States.” 28 U.S.C.
6 § 2241(c)(3). Petitioner’s claims are proper under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 and not 28 U.S.C. § 2255
7 because they concern the manner, location, or conditions of the execution of petitioner’s sentence 8 and not the fact of petitioner’s conviction or sentence. Tucker v. Carlson, 925 F.2d 330, 331 (9th 9 Cir.1990) (stating that a challenge to the execution of a sentence is "maintainable only in a petition 10 for habeas corpus filed pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241"); Montano-Figueroa v. Crabtree, 162 F.3d 11 548, 549 (9th Cir.1998) (per curiam) (allowing a federal prisoner to use § 2241 to challenge the 12 BOP's restitution policies).

13 Further, Petitioner is challenging the execution of his sentence at TCI which is within the 14 Fresno Division of the Eastern District of California; therefore, the Court has jurisdiction over this 15 petition. See Brown v. United States, 610 F.2d 672, 677 (9th Cir. 1990).

16 B. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

17 A petitioner who is in federal custody and wishes to seek habeas relief pursuant to 28 U.S.C.
18 § 2241 must first exhaust available administrative and judicial remedies. Brown v. Rison, 895 F.2d 19 533, 535 (9th Cir.1990); Chua Han Mow v. United States, 730 F.2d 1308, 1313 (9th Cir.1984). It is 20 only after a petitioner has fully exhausted his administrative remedies that he becomes entitled to 21 present his claims to the federal court. See United States v. Mathis, 689 F.2d 1364, 1365 (11th 22 Cir.1982). In Ruviwat v. Smith, 701 F.2d 844, 845 (9th Cir.1983) (per curiam), the Ninth Circuit 23 explained why a petitioner must first exhaust his administrative remedies before filing for habeas 24 relief: "The requirement of exhaustion of remedies will aid judicial review by allowing the 25 appropriate development of a factual record in an expert forum; conserve the court's time because of 26 the possibility that the relief applied for may be granted at the administrative level; and allow the 27 administrative agency an opportunity to correct errors occurring in the course of administrative 28 proceedings. See also Chua Han Mow, 730 F.2d at 1313.

1 However, the exhaustion requirement was judicially created; it is not a statutory requirement.
2 Chua Han Mow, 730 F.2d at 1313; Montgomery v. Rumsfeld, 572 F.2d 250, 252 (9th Cir.1978).
3 Because exhaustion is not required by statute, it is not jurisdictional. Morrison Knudsen Co., Inc. v.
4 CHG Int'l, Inc., 811 F.2d 1209, 1223 (9th Cir.1987), cert. dismissed, 488 U.S. 935 (1988);
5 Montgomery, 572 F.2d at 252. "Where exhaustion of administrative remedies is not jurisdictional, 6 the district court must determine whether to excuse the faulty exhaustion and reach the merits, or 7 require the petitioner to exhaust his administrative remedies before proceeding in court." Brown, 895 8 F.2d at 535.

9 The Bureau of Prisons has established an administrative remedy procedure governing 10 prisoner complaints. The procedure is set forth at 28 C.F.R. § 542.10 et. seq. First, an inmate must 11 attempt to resolve the issue informally by presenting it to staff before submitting a Request for 12 Administrative Remedy. 28 C.F.R. § 542.13 (1999). If dissatisfied with the response, the prisoner 13 may proceed with the formal filing of an Administrative Remedy Request. 28 C.F.R. § 542.14
14 (1999). Upon denial by the institution, the prisoner may appeal the decision by filing a complaint 15 with the Regional Director of the Bureau of Prisons. 28 C.F.R. § 542.15 (1999). The Regional 16 Director's decision may be appealed to the General Counsel in Washington, D.C. Id. Appeal to the 17 General Counsel is the final step in the administrative remedy process. Id.

18 Petitioner does not state whether he has exhausted the administrative remedies with respect 19 to the claims raised in the instant petition. Even if Petitioner has not exhausted the administrative 20 remedies with respect to the claims in the instant petition, exhaustion in this instance would 21 nonetheless be futile. Futility is an exception to the exhaustion requirement. Laing v. Ashcroft, 370 22 F.3d 994, 1000-01 (9th Cir. 2004), citing S.E.C. v. G.C. George Sec., Inc., 637 F.2d 685, 688 n.4 (9th 23 Cir. 1981) ("exceptions to the general rule requiring exhaustion cover situations such as where 24 administrative remedies are inadequate or not efficacious, pursuit of administrative remedies would 25 be a futile gesture, irreparable injury will result, or the administrative proceedings would be void.") 26 Even had Petitioner filed a grievance at every level of the administrative review process, they would 27 most likely have been rejected based upon the official BOP policy which prohibits consideration of 28 any inmate release to an RRC until the inmate has served at least 90% of his sentence. As such,

1 exhaustion of such a claim would be futile. Further, due to the time sensitivity of Petitioner's claim 2 and the fact that he is scheduled to be released to an RRC in the near future, he would likely be 3 released prior to the finality of the administrative process. Thus, the Court will excuse exhaustion 4 and reach the merits of the petition.

5 C. BOP Regulations Contradict United States Code Statutes

6 As previously stated, Petitioner contends that BOP regulations which prevent him from being 7 considering for release to RRC until after he has served nine-tenths of his sentence violate Title 18, 8 Section 3621(b), of the United States Code. See Petition at 1-2. Petitioner states that pursuant to the 9 BOP regulations, he has received only 90 days of placement in an RRC even though an assessment 10 under § 3621(b) would allow for up to six months placement. Id. at 2.

11 Title 18, of the United States Code, Section 3621(b) states:

12 (b) Place of imprisonment - - The Bureau of Prisons shall designate the place of the 13 prisoner's imprisonment. The Bureau may designate any available penal or correctional 14 facility that meets minimum standards of health and habitability established by the Bureau, 15 whether maintained by the Federal Government or otherwise and whether within or without 16 the judicial district in which the person was convicted, that the Bureau determines to be 17 appropriate and suitable, considering --

- 15 (1) the resources of the facility contemplated;
16 (2) the nature and circumstances of the offense;
17 (3) the history and characteristics of the prisoner;
18 (4) any statement by the court that imposed the sentence - - 19 (A) concerning the purposes for which the sentence to imprisonment was 20 determined to be warranted; or 21 (B) recommending a type of penal or correctional facility as appropriate; and 22 (5) any pertinent policy statement issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to 23 section 994(a)(2) of title 28.

20 In designating the place of imprisonment or making transfers under this subsection, 21 there shall be no favoritism given to prisoners of high social or economic status. The Bureau 22 may at any time, having regard for the same matters, direct the transfer of a prisoner from one 23 penal or correctional facility to another. The Bureau shall make available appropriate 24 substance abuse treatment for each prisoner the Bureau determines has a treatable condition 25 of substance addiction or abuse.

23 Section 3624(c) states:

24 (c) Pre-release custody - - the Bureau of Prisons shall, to the extent practicable, assure 25 that a prisoner serving a term of imprisonment spends a reasonable part, not to exceed six 26 months, of the last 10 per centum of the term to be served under conditions that will afford 27 the prisoner a reasonable opportunity to adjust to and prepare for the prisoner's re-entry into 28 the community. The authority provided by this subsection may be used to place a prisoner in home confinement. The United States Probation System shall, to the extent practicable, offer assistance to a prisoner during such pre-release custody.

1 The relevant BOP regulations state the following:

2 (a) This subpart provides the Bureau of Prisons' (Bureau) categorical exercise of 3 discretion for designating inmates to community confinement. The Bureau designates 4 inmates to community confinement only as part of pre-release custody and programming which will afford the prisoner a reasonable opportunity to adjust to and prepare for re-entry into the community.

5 See 28 C.F.R. § 570.20(a).

6 Section 570.21 states:

7 (a) The Bureau will designate inmates to community confinement only as part of 8 pre-release custody and programming, during the last ten percent of the prison sentence being served, not to exceed six months.

9 (b) We may exceed these time-frames only when specific Bureau programs allow 10 greater periods of community confinement, as provided by separate statutory authority (for 11 example, residential substance abuse treatment program (18 U.S.C. 3621(e)(2)(A)), or shock incarceration program (18 U.S.C. 4046(c)).

12 Prior to December 13, 2002, the BOP would occasionally allow prisoners to serve all or part 13 of their imprisonment in an RRC.² Then, on December 13, 2002, the Office of Legal Counsel of the 14 Department of Justice ("OLC") issued a legal opinion interpreting the interplay between §§ 3621(b) 15 and 3624(c) of Title 18. The opinion held that § 3621(b) did not authorize the BOP to place an 16 inmate in an RRC for the entire term of his sentence because community confinement did not 17 constitute imprisonment. Id. The BOP consequently changed its procedure and limited RRC 18 placements for prisoners to the final 10% of their sentences or six months, whichever was shorter.
19 However, in 2004, two Circuit Court of Appeals held that the 2002 BOP policy change was unlawful 20 given that the plain language of § 3621(b) gave the BOP discretion to transfer an inmate to an RRC 21 at any time. Elwood v. Jeter, 386 F.3d 842 (8th Cir. 2004); Goldings v. Winn, 383 F.3d 17 (1st Cir.
22 2004). In light of the opinions of Elwood and Goldings, on August 18, 2004, the BOP proposed new 23 regulations "announcing its categorical exercise of discretion for designating inmates to community 24 confinement when serving terms of imprisonment." 69 Fed. Reg. 51, 213 (Aug. 18, 2004). Although

25
26 ²The Court hereby takes judicial notice of Arcediano v. Wrigley, Case No. 1:06-CV-00780 AWI DLB HC. This 27 Court "may take notice of proceedings in other courts, both within and without the federal judicial system, if those 28 proceedings have a direct relation to matters at issue." U.S. ex rel. Robinson Rancheria Citizens Council v. Borneo, Inc., 971
F.2d 244 (9th Cir.1992); see also MGIC Indem. Co. v. Weisman, 803 F.2d 500, 505 (9th Cir. 1986); United States v. Wilson, 631 F.2d 118, 119 (9th cir. 1980) Arcediano is factually congruent with the instant case. Therefore, the Court's opinion in this case will be derived from the record developed in Arcediano.

1 the 2005 regulations acknowledged the BOP's general discretion to place an inmate at an RRC at 2 any time, it limited such placement to the lesser of 10% of a prisoner's total sentence or six months, 3 absent application of special statutory circumstances. 28 C.F.R. §§ 570.20, 570.21. The final rules 4 were published on January 10, 2005, and became effective on February 14, 2005.

5 The question to be resolved here is whether the BOP's 2005 regulations are contrary to, or a 6 permissible construction of, Section 3621(b).

7 Three Circuit Court of Appeals and several District Courts, including this Court, have found 8 the 2005 regulations to be contrary to Section 3621(b). Woodall v. Federal Bureau of Prisons, 432
9 F.3d 235, (3rd Cir. 2005); Fults v. Sanders, 442 F.3d 1088 (8th Cir. 2006); Levine v. Apker, 455 F.3d 10 71 (2d Cir. 2006); Horn v. Ellis, No. 06 CV-F-0006 OWW TAG HC; 2006 WL 1071959 (E.D. Cal.
11 April 21, 2006); Baker v. Willingham, No. 3:04cv1923, 2005 WL 2276040 (D.Conn. Sept. 16, 12 2005); Wiederhorn v. Gonzales, No. 05-360-TC, 2005 WL 1113833 (D.Or. May 9, 2005); United 13 States v. Paige, 369 F.Supp.2d 1257 (D. Mont. 2005); Drew v. Menifee, No. 04 Civ. 9944, 2005 WL
14 525449 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 4, 2005); Pimentel v. Gonzales, 367 F.Supp.2d 365 (E.D.N.Y. 2005); Cook 15 v. Gonzales, No. 05-09-AS, 2005 WL 773956 (D.Or. Apr. 5, 2005); Crowley v. Fed. Bureau of 16 Prisons, 312 F.Supp.2d 453 (S.D.N.Y. 2004). The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has not addressed 17 the issue.

18 In reviewing an agency's construction of a statute, courts apply the test set forth in Chevron 19 U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837 (1984). The Court looks first 20 to the text of the statute to determine whether Congress has spoken directly on the issue. Contract 21 Management, Inc. v. Rumsfeld, 434 F.3d 1145, 1146-47 & n.2 (9th Cir. 2006). If the intent of 22 Congress is clear from the text of the statute, that is the end of the inquiry, the Court must follow the 23 expressed intent of Congress. Id. at 1146-47, citing Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Res. Def.
24 Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 842-43, 104 S.Ct. 2778, 81 L.Ed.2d 694 (1984). If, however, the statute 25 is silent or ambiguous on the specific issue, the Court must determine whether the agency's 26 interpretation is based on a permissible construction of the statute. Id. at 1147. If so, the Court defers 27 to the agency's determination. Id.

28 As found by the Second, Third, and Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, this Court finds that the

1 plain text of the statute, as well as the legislative history do not support the BOP's regulations to 2 limit RRC placement to only those inmates serving the last 10% of their sentence. As stated in 3 § 3624(c), Congress's intent to release prisoners to an RRC is to facilitate their re-entry into the 4 community. Congress has unambiguously set forth five factors for the BOP to consider when 5 making its determination to release a prisoner. 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b). Specifically, Section 3621(b) 6 distinguishes between the BOP's duty to designate a place of imprisonment ("shall designate") and 7 its broad discretion in determining the specific place of imprisonment ("may designate any available 8 penal or correctional facility"). Levine, 455 F.3d at 80. The statute not only provides discretion to 9 the BOP for placement, but provides a specific list of five factors the BOP must consider prior to 10 placement. Id. Given the clear text of the statute and Congress's unequivocal intent for the BOP to 11 consider all five factors, the current BOP regulation is invalid because "these factors cannot be fully 12 considered because the amount of time an inmate may spend in a CCC is categorically limited to the 13 lesser of six months or ten percent of a sentence without regard to individualized circumstances." 14 Woodall, 432 F.3d 235, 245; Levine, 455 F.3d at 80-82; Fults, 442 F.3d at 1091. Further, the 15 legislative history supports the finding that consideration of the five factors are mandatory, although 16 non-exclusive. As set forth in Levine v. Apker, 455 F.3d 71, the Second Circuit stated:

17 Accompanying § 3621(b), the Senate Judiciary Committee issued a report speaking 18 directly to the nature of the statutory factors. . . . The report stated that '[i]n 19 determining the availability or suitability of the facility selected, the Bureau [is] 20 specifically required to consider such factors as [those listed in § 3621(b)],' and that 21 '[a]fter considering these factors,' the BOP may designate a place of imprisonment or 22 enact an inmate transfer. S.Rep. No. 98-225 (1983), reprinted in 1984 U.S.C.C.A.N.
23 3182, 3324-25; see also Woodall, 432 F.3d at 245-46 (quoting same). The report disavows any restriction on the BOP's exercise of discretion, but rather states that it
'intends simply to set forth the appropriate factors that the Bureau should consider in making the designations.' Id. By 'specifically requir[ing]' the BOP to consider the listed factors before it makes placements and expressing intent to 'set forth the appropriate factors' to be considered, the report underscores what the textual language itself makes clear: that the enumerated factors are mandatory. (footnote omitted).

24 Levine, at 82.

25 Thus, although the BOP has discretion to refuse to place an inmate in a correctional facility, 26 the exercise of discretion must be based at least in part on the specific factors outlined in § 3621(b), 27 and the BOP regulations set forth in §§ 570.20 and 570.21 simply ignore those factors. As such, the 28 regulations contradict, rather than interpret, § 3621(b), and no deference is owed.

1 In Arcediano, Respondent argued that the language of § 3624(c) states “unambiguously that 2 prisoners have no right to be considered for an RRC placement until they have finished 90% of their 3 sentence.” See Arcediano v. Wrigley, Case No. 1:06-CV-00780 AWI DLB HC. However, 4 Respondent fails to recognize that by creating a blanket rule against transfer until the inmate has 5 served 10% of his sentence, the BOP has failed to consider the mandatory factors set forth in 6 § 3621(b). Woodall, 432 F.3d at 250. As stated in Woodall, “§ 3624 does not determine when the 7 BOP should consider CCC placement, but when it must provide it.” Id. (Emphasis in original.) 8 “The statute requires the BOP not just to consider, but to actually place an inmate in a CCC or like 9 facility, during the last ten percent or six months of the sentence, when that is possible.” Id.
(Emphasis in original.)

10 Three of the five factors set forth in § 3621(b)- the nature and circumstances of a prisoner’s 11 offense, the history and characteristics of the prisoner, and any statement by the court that imposed 12 the sentence, require specific analysis to each individual prisoner. Levine, 455 F.3d at 86; Woodall, 13 432 F.3d at 247; Fults, 442 F.3d at 1091. Yet, under the 2005 regulations, these considerations 14 cannot be fully considered. As illustrated by the Court in Woodall, which stated:

15 Worthy of special mention is the recommendation of the sentencing judge. United 16 States District Judges take their sentencing responsibilities very seriously and are familiar 17 with the various BOP institutions and programs. Their recommendations as to the execution 18 of sentences are carefully thought out and are important to them. The significance of this 19 aspect of the sentencing process is highlighted by the acknowledgment of the regional 20 counsel of the BOP at oral argument that the BOP follows judicial recommendations in 21 approximately 85-90 percent of all cases. Here, however, the requirement that the BOP 22 consider a sentencing judge’s recommendation cannot be satisfied without an individualized, 23 case-by-case inquiry that is impossible under the regulations.

24 Woodall, 432 F.3d at 247. In Woodall, the Court recognized that the sentencing court had 25 recommended the petitioner spend six months at a halfway house placement, but under the current 26 regulations, that recommendation could not be fully considered. Id. at 248. “In fact, no 27 recommendation of a CCC placement exceeding six months or ten percent of a sentence can be 28 considered.” Id. Although the BOP can consider the amount of time the prisoner has actually served in making placements, that factor cannot be the single consideration, which is precisely what the 2005 regulations have done.

26 In Arcediano, Respondent alleged his view is supported by the Ninth Circuit’s decision in 27 United States v. Latimer, 991 F.2d 1509, 1514-15 (9th Cir. 1993). In Latimer, the Ninth Circuit held 28 that the language of the Sentencing Guidelines, specifically section 4A1.2(e)(1), did not define

1 incarceration to include detention solely in a community treatment center or halfway house. Latimer, 2 991 F.2d at 1514. Respondent argued that the Office of Legal Counsel’s December 13, 2002, 3 opinion used similar reasoning in determining that the guidelines did not permit the BOP to 4 substitute confinement in an RRC for a term of imprisonment. In Arcediano, this Court did not find 5 Respondent’s argument persuasive. As Respondent acknowledged, the case does not involve a 6 prisoner who was directly placed into an RRC at the outset of his sentence. Thus, this Court 7 determined it need not reach Respondent’s argument.

8 Respondent further argued that the case is similar to Lopez v. Davis, 531 U.S. 230 (2001), 9 which addressed § 3621(e)(2)(B), a different subsection. In Lopez, the Supreme Court analyzed and 10 upheld a BOP regulation that categorically denied early release to certain inmates after completion of 11 a drug rehabilitation program, who would have otherwise been released under the terms of the 12 statute. Lopez, 531 U.S. at 238. The statute at issue there, 18 U.S.C. § 3621(e)(2)(B), stated that the 13 BOP may reduce the prison term of an inmate who was convicted of a “nonviolent offense” and had 14 successfully completed a substance abuse program. Id. at 232. The BOP’s regulation interpreting 15 that statute categorically denied early release to prisoners who had been convicted of a felony 16 involving “the carrying, possession, or use of a firearm.” Id., quoting 28 C.F.R. § 17 550.58(a)(1)(vi)(B)). The Supreme Court held that the BOP had properly exercised its discretion by 18 furthering Congress’s intent to exclude certain violent inmates from consideration for pre-release. Id.

19 Respondent reasoned that “[j]ust as § 3621(e)(2)(B) vests broad discretion in the BOP to 20 determine which individuals are candidates for early release, so too § 3621(b) gives the BOP broad 21 discretion in deciding where to designate inmates. The BOP’s decision to restrict RRC placements 22 to prisoners serving the last 10% of their sentences is a categorical expression of the BOP’s 23 discretion that does not differ fundamentally from the BOP’s exercise of the same discretion under 24 § 3621(e)(2)(B).” See Arcediano, 1:06-CV-00780 AWI DLB HC. The BOP undoubtedly may 25 exercise discretion under § 3621(b), however, it is not free to disregard the specific factors set forth 26 by Congress when doing so. Although Respondent argued that “the categorical exercise of 27 discretion in Lopez used factors such as sentencing enhancements which were not determinative of 28 being ‘violent’ under some circuits” and therefore broadened the definition, this argument overlooks

1 the fact that the statute at issue there did not specifically include a set of factors to be considered by 2 the BOP in making its determination of whether an offense could be classified as “violent.” In 3 Lopez, the BOP had simply filled in a statutory gap, whereas here, no such claim can be made 4 because the BOP has specifically excluded from consideration the very factors that Congress 5 outlined for consideration.

6 Based on the foregoing, the Court finds that the BOP regulations contradict, rather than 7 interpret, Congress’s intent in enacting 18 U.S.C. §§ 3621(b) and 3624(c).

8 RECOMMENDATION

9 Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that the petition for writ of habeas corpus 10 be GRANTED, and Respondent be ORDERED to consider the appropriateness of transferring 11 Petitioner to an RRC in light of the factors set forth in § 3621(b), not excluding any other factors 12 deemed appropriate by the BOP, without reference to the BOP policy promulgated in December 13 2002 and without reference to the BOP’s February 14, 2005, amendment to 28 C.F.R. § 570.21. It is 14 further RECOMMENDED that Respondent be ORDERED to make this determination promptly, 15 not to exceed 14 days from the date of the District Court’s Order.

16 This Findings and Recommendation is submitted to the assigned District Judge, pursuant to 17 the provisions of Title 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). Within thirty days after being served with the 18 Findings and Recommendation, any party may file written objections with the Court and serve a 19 copy on all parties. Such a document should be captioned "Objections to Magistrate Judge's 20 Findings and Recommendation." Any reply to the objections shall be served and filed within ten 21 days after service of the objections. The parties are advised that failure to file objections within the 22 specified time may waive the right to appeal the District Court's order. Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 23 1153 (9th Cir. 1991).
