) F.R.C.P. 12(b)(6)
) Doc. # 8

This is an action for damages and injunctive relief by plaintiff Edwin Pattison (“Plaintiff”) against defendants Calaveras County Water District (“District”) and Joone Lopez (“Lopez”) (collectively, “Defendants”). Plaintiffs claims for relief arise out of his termination from the position of Water Resources Manager on or about March 9, 2012. This action was originally filed in the Superior Court of Calaveras County and was removed to this court on the basis of federal subject matter jurisdiction. Currently before the court is Defendants’ motion to dismiss all claims alleged in Plaintiff’s First Amended Complaint (“FAC”) as to Lopez and to dismiss all claims as to District except Plaintiff’s fifth claim for relief for discrimination in violation of California’s Fair Employment and Housing Act (“FEHA”). Subject matter jurisdiction exists pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331. Venue is proper in this court.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Prior to the termination of his employment at District on March 9, 2012, Plaintiff had been employed as a Water Resources Manager for approximately 7 years. Plaintiff alleges his job performance met or exceeded all requirements and expectations of his employment. Plaintiff was placed on “administrative leave” on February 28, 2012, without any explanation of the action. The FAC alleges that on March 5, 2012, “a ‘Board Workshop’ was held which eliminated [P]laintiff’s position with no pre or post termination due process.” Doc. # 1-1 at ¶7. On March 6, 2012, Plaintiff was notified by mail that his last day of employment was to be March 9, 2012. In paragraph 8 of the FAC, Plaintiff alleges that “[o]n March 8, 2012, [he] responded through counsel and requested, among other things, a due process hearing.” Plaintiff alleges that District responded through counsel on March 16, 2012, stating that it had no plans to reconsider the elimination of the Resource Manager’s position previously held by Plaintiff. In the prior paragraph of the FAC, Plaintiff references a “claim” that was rejected by District. The reference to a “claim” is ambiguous, but the court presumes for purposes of this discussion that the “claim” referenced in paragraph 7 is the same as the request for a due process hearing referenced in paragraph 8. The court notes that the “claim” referenced in paragraph 7 is not the same as the claim filed with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (“DFEH”) in connection with Plaintiff’s discrimination claim under FEHA.

Several facts are conspicuous by their absence from Plaintiff's FAC, but they are suggested by the parties' arguments and appear not to be disputed. Plaintiff alleges without opposition that District is a public agency and, although not directly alleged, it appears undisputed that District is governed by an elected Board which possesses legislative or quasi-legislative authority over such District matters as budgeting and position allocation. The FAC alleges that the action taken at the "Board Workshop" resulted in the elimination of a number of positions, but that the position occupied by Plaintiff was the only currently filled position that was eliminated. Plaintiff's fifth claim for relief alleges there was a discriminatory motive behind the selection of his position, but Plaintiff appears to concede

1 that, at least formally, Plaintiff was not terminated for cause. Finally, although Plaintiff 2 alleges he was give to believe through conversations with Lopez that he would not be 3 terminated except for cause, Plaintiff does not allege that there existed any formal 4 employment contract between Plaintiff and District and does not allege that Plaintiff was 5 represented through any formal agreement by a union or other bargaining group.

6 The action was removed to this court on January 9, 2013. The instant motion to 7 dismiss was filed on January 29, 2013. After a stipulated continuance of the filing deadline, 8 Plaintiff's opposition was filed on March 8, 2013, and Defendants' reply was filed on March 9 13, 2013. The hearing on the motion to dismiss and the matter was taken under submission 10 as of March 20, 2013.

11 LEGAL STANDARD

12 A motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 13 can be based on the failure to allege a cognizable legal theory or the failure to allege 14 sufficient facts under a cognizable legal theory. Robertson v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 15 749 F.2d 530, 533-34 (9th Cir.1984). To withstand a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 16 12(b)(6), a complaint must set forth factual allegations sufficient “to raise a right to relief 17 above the speculative level.” Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007) 18 (“Twombly”). While a court considering a motion to dismiss must accept as true the 19 allegations of the complaint in question, Hospital Bldg. Co. v. Rex Hospital Trustees, 425
20 U.S. 738, 740 (1976), and must construe the pleading in the light most favorable to the party 21 opposing the motion, and resolve factual disputes in the pleader's favor, Jenkins v.
22 McKeithen, 395 U.S. 411, 421, reh'g denied, 396 U.S. 869 (1969), the allegations must be 23 factual in nature. See Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (“a plaintiff's obligation to provide the 24 ‘grounds’ of his ‘entitlement to relief’ requires more than labels and conclusions, and a 25 formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do”). The pleading standard 26 set by Rule 8 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure “does not require ‘detailed factual 27 allegations,’ but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me 28 accusation.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) (“Iqbal”).

1 The Ninth Circuit follows the methodological approach set forth in Iqbal for the 2 assessment of a plaintiff's complaint:

3 "[A] court considering a motion to dismiss can choose to begin by identifying 4 pleadings that, because they are no more than conclusions, are not entitled to 5 the assumption of truth. While legal conclusions can provide the framework 6 of a complaint, they must be supported by factual allegations. When there are 7 well-pleaded factual allegations, a court should assume their veracity and then 8 determine whether they plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief."

9 Moss v. U.S. Secret Service, 572 F.3d 962, 970 (9th Cir. 2009) (quoting Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 10 1950).

11 "If a complaint is dismissed for failure to state a claim, leave to amend should be 12 granted unless the court determines that the allegation of other facts consistent with the 13 challenged pleading could not possibly cure the deficiency." Schreiber Distributing Co. v.
14 Serv-Well Furniture Co., Inc., 806 F.2d 1393, 1401 (9th Cir. 1986).

15 DISCUSSION

16 Plaintiff's FAC alleges six claims for relief. Except for Plaintiff's fifth claim for 17 relief for discrimination based on gender in violation of FEHA, which is not being directly 18 challenged by Defendants' motion, Plaintiff's claims allege the depravation of a proprietary 19 right in his employment with District. Plaintiff's FAC alleges two theories by which these 20 proprietary rights arise. Plaintiff's first and second claims for relief are based in the 21 contention that an employee has a property right in his employment as a matter of law and 22 that due process rights under the Fourteenth Amendment and the California constitution, 23 respectively, are violated if employment is terminated without a proper hearing. Plaintiff's 24 third, fourth and sixth claims for relief allege that, in plaintiff's case, a property right in 25 Plaintiff's employment arose as a result of verbal assurances given to Plaintiff by Defendant 26 Lopez. Plaintiff contends that termination without cause violated the terms of that oral 27 contract.

28 I. Contractually Established Rights in Employment

29 A government employee has a constitutionally protected property 30 interest in continued when the employee has a legitimate claim of entitlement 31 to the job. Board of Regents v. Roth, 408 U.S. 564, 577 (1972) [. . .] Laws, 32 rules or understandings derived from independent sources such as state law

1 create such claims of entitlement. Id. However, a mere expectation that 2 employment will continue does not create a property interest. Id. If, under 3 state law, employment is at-will, then the claimant has not property interest in the job. Id.

4 Portman v. County of Santa Clara, 995 F.2d 898, 904 (9th Cir. 1993).

5 In the abstract, a constitutionally protected property interest can be created “not only 6 by statute , but also by contracts,” including oral or implied-in-fact contracts. Hoesterey v.
7 City of Cathedral City, 64 F.3d 666, 1995 WL 496796 (C.A.9 (Cal.)) at *2. However, the 8 existence of a contractual agreement creating a constitutionally protected property interest 9 must be determined in light of the state’s laws concerning contractual modification of rights 10 created by statute. See id. at *3.

11 “Public employment in California is, in general, regulated by statute, the rights of a 12 public employee are statutory, and ‘no employee has a vested contractual right to continue in 13 employment beyond the time or contrary to the terms and conditions fixed by law.’” 14 Bernstein v. Lopez, 321 F.3d 903, 905 (9th Cir.2003) (emphasis added) (quoting Miller v.

15 State, 18 Cal.3d 808, 813 (1977)). The Ninth Circuit, recognizing this “longstanding 16 principle of California law,” has held that “neither an express nor an implied contract can 17 restrict the reasons for, or the manner of, termination of public employment provided by 18 California statute.” Id. (emphasis added) (citing Portman v. County of Santa Clara, 995 F.2d 19 898, 905 (9th Cir.1993)). To the extent state or local governing bodies can enter into 20 contracts establishing contractual rights to employment, the authority to enter into such 21 agreements is conferred by statute. See, e.g., Jones v. Palm Springs Unified School Dist., 22 170 Cal.App.3d 518 (1985) (school administrator hired under contract pursuant to Education
23 Code § 35031 may claim due process rights to position during the 4-year term of the contract 24 authorized by the statute). Thus, in California “as a matter of law, there can be no express or 25 implied-in-fact contract between [a plaintiff and a public entity] which restricts the manner or 26 reasons for termination of his employment.” Summers v. City of Cathedral City, 225 27 Cal.App.3d 1047, 1065 (4th Dist. 1990).

28 Plaintiff alleges no statutory basis for District’s authority to contractually modify

1 Plaintiff's at-will employment status so as to create a property right in Plaintiff's continuing 2 employment. The court therefore finds that District was without authority to create such a 3 contractual property right and any assurances that Plaintiff may have received to that effect 4 were merely that – reassurances that did not rise to the level of contract. Since there can be 5 no implied-in-fact contract between Plaintiff and District, there can be no cause of action for 6 breach. Plaintiff's third claim for relief consequently fails. Likewise, Plaintiff's fourth claim 7 for relief for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing must fail. A claim for 8 breach of an implied covenant "depends upon the existence of a valid contract." Stanley v.
9 Univ. of Southern California, 176 F.3d 1069, 1078 (9th Cir. 1999). A claim for breach of the 10 covenant of good faith and fair dealing must fail where, as here, no valid contract is 11 identified. Plaintiff's sixth claim for relief for specific performance fails for the same reason.

12 The court has no information before it at this point to determine that Plaintiff is not a 13 member of a collective bargaining unit or, for some other reason, he is the beneficiary of 14 some other form of contractual agreement that would provide a contractual right to continued 15 employment under the facts of this case. The court will therefore grant leave to amend 16 Plaintiff's claims based on a contractual right to continued employment.

17 II. Constitutional Due Process Rights

18 "The Fourteenth Amendment's guarantee of due process applies when a 19 constitutionally protected liberty or property interest is at stake. [Citation.]" Matthews v.
20 Harney County, Oregon, School Dist. No. 4, 819 F.2d 889, 891 (9 Cir 1987) (citing Board of 21 Regents v. Roth, 408 U.S. 564, 569 (1972) ("Roth")). Plaintiff's central contention with 22 regard to the first and second claims for relief is that Plaintiff had a property interest in his 23 job that was abridged when he was terminated without a hearing. Thus, it is Plaintiff's 24 implied contention that the interest protected by the hearing is a property interest protected by 25 the Fourteenth Amendment.

26 "Property interests, of course, are not created by the Constitution. Rather, they are 27 created and their dimensions are defined by existing rules or understandings that stem from 28

1 an independent source such as state law-rules or understandings that secure certain benefits 2 and that support claims of entitlement to those benefits.” Roth, 408 U.S. at 577. “Whether 3 an expectation of entitlement is sufficient to create a property interest ‘will depend largely 4 upon the extent to which the statute contains mandatory language that restricts the discretion
5 of the [decisionmaker].’ [Citation].” Allen v. City of Beverly Hills, 911 F.2d 367, 370 (9th
6 Cir. 1990) (quoting Jacobson v. Hannifin, 627 F.2d 177, 180 (9th Cir. 1980)). Plaintiff’s 7 opposition to Defendants’ motion to dismiss advances what appear to be two lines of 8 reasoning to support the contention that Plaintiff had a property interest in the continuation of 9 his employment. First, Plaintiff cites Cleveland Board of Education v. Lauderhill, 470 U.S.
10 532 (1985) (“Lauderhill”) for the proposition that Plaintiff was entitled to a hearing prior to 11 his termination. Lauderhill is unavailing to Plaintiff’s cause because the fact of entitlement 12 to continuing employment except for cause was provided in that case by the Ohio statute 13 under which the plaintiff in that case was employed. In other words, the facts of that case 14 established that the plaintiff had a property interest in the continuation of employment 15 because the statute under which the plaintiff was employed sharply restricted the discretion of 16 the school district so that termination was only permitted for cause. No such statutory 17 provision has been put forward by Plaintiff in this case.

18 Plaintiff also contends that he has a property interest in the continuation of his 19 employment through the California’s Civil Service Act, Gov’t Code § 18500. There are 20 several problems with Plaintiff’s contention. First, there is no indication that Plaintiff’s 21 employment is governed in any respect by the Civil Service Act. Depending on how District 22 is organized, Plaintiff is either an employee of the County of Calaveras or the District is an 23 independently governed district within the county. Even if District or the County adopted the 24 Civil Service System, it does not follow that Plaintiff had a property right in his continuing 25 employment. See Placer County Employees Ass’n v. Board of Supervisors, 233 Cal.App.2d 26 555, 559 (1965) (“the adoption of a civil service system does not restrict the governing 27 body’s power to effect structural reorganizations in the interests of economy and 28

1 efficiency”).

2 Plaintiff’s FAC fails to set forth any statute or provision pertaining to District that 3 restricts in any way the District’s right to hire and terminate employment at will. To state a 4 claim for relief on the basis of denial of due process Plaintiff’s FAC must allege some basis
5 for the assertion of a right that is protected under the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth 6 Amendment or under the California Constitution. The mere assertion that such a right exists 7 is not enough. The right to a pre- or post-termination hearing is not free-standing; a hearing 8 need not be provided if due process rights are not implicated. In the context of employment, 9 the interests that can legitimately arise are property interests secured to the employee through 10 identifiable statutes or agreements or the employee’s liberty interest which is implicated 11 when termination impairs the employee’s reputation for honesty or morality. Matthews v.
12 Harney County, Or. School Dist. No. 4, 819 F.2d 889, 891 (1987). In either context, 13 however, the protected interest is an element of the constitutional claim and must be alleged 14 in the complaint. Because Plaintiff has failed to allege a property or liberty interest 15 cognizable under the Fourteenth Amendment or under the California Constitution, Plaintiff’s 16 first and second claims for relief must fail.

17 Plaintiff does not allege in his FAC that there was any allegation of moral mis-18 conduct that would give rise to a constitutionally protected liberty interest that would require 19 vindication by way of a hearing. As above, the absence of alleged facts does not necessarily 20 mean no such facts exist. The court will therefore permit amendment of Plaintiff’s claims 21 based on a constitutionally protected right in a post-discharge hearing.

22 III. Motion to Dismiss Lopez in Her Individual Capacity

23 Defendants move to dismiss Defendant Lopez who is sued in her individual capacity 24 in Plaintiff’s fifth claim for relief for discrimination under FEHA. Defendants rely on Reno 25 v. Baird, 18 Cal.4th 640 (1998) for the proposition that those actions that are integral to 26 personnel management – hiring, firing, promotion, demotion, training, etc. – are the actions 27 which, if taken for discriminatory purposes, constitute a violation of FEHA prohibitions

1 against discrimination. The Reno court differentiates discrimination from harassment noting
2 that the two are treated differently under FEHA. Id. at 645-646 (discrimination emanates 3 from conduct inherently necessary to performance of a supervisor's job while discrimination 4 is conduct outside the scope of necessity for performance of a supervisor's job). The Reno
5 court, after a lengthy analysis of the decision in Janken v. G.M Hughes Electronics, 46 6 Cal.App.4th 55 (1996), came to the conclusion "that individuals who do not themselves 7 qualify as employers may not be sued under the FEHA for alleged discriminatory acts." Id. at 8 663.

9 Plaintiff does not dispute Defendants' contention. The court will therefore dismiss 10 Plaintiff's claim under FEHA against Lopez as an individual. The dismissal will be with 11 prejudice.

12 IV. Punitive Damages

13 Defendants contend that, pursuant to Cal. Gov't Code § 818 "' public entity is not 14 liable for damages under Section 3294 of the Civil Code or other damages imposed primarily 15 for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.'" Doc. # 8-1 at 17:6-7.
16 Plaintiff does not dispute that his prayer for punitive damages is for the "for the sake of 17 example and by way of punishing the defendant" but contends that such damages are 18 permissible to the extent the prayer for punitive damages is against Lopez as an individual.

19 Since Plaintiff's argument tacitly agrees that punitive damages are not available 20 against District, the court will grant the motion to strike the punitive damages claims as to 21 District. Plaintiff's punitive damages claim against Lopez fails for another compelling 22 reason; Plaintiff has failed to allege conduct by Lopez that is oppressive, fraudulent, 23 despicable or otherwise "outrageous conduct beyond the bounds of human decency." 24 Janken, 46 Cal.App.4th at 80. The fact that Plaintiff's FAC describes Lopez's conduct as 25 "outrageous, despicable," and the like does not make it so. Supervisory acts, even if taken for 26 improper purposes are never sufficient to describe conduct subject to punitive damages. Id.
27 Plaintiff alleges nothing more than that he personally experienced termination by Lopez and 28

1 that the termination was the result of her discriminatory attitude toward men. While that may 2 certainly be offensive to Plaintiff it is still conduct within the scope of personnel supervision
3 and therefore cannot be, without more, conduct that warrants punitive damages. The court 4 also notes that no viable claims remain against Lopez in Plaintiff's FAC. For that reason, 5 Defendants' motion to dismiss (or strike) Plaintiff's prayer for punitive damages as to Lopez 6 is moot.

8 THEREFORE, for the reasons discussed, the court hereby ORDERS as follows:

- 9 1. Defendants' motion to dismiss Plaintiff's first, second, third, fourth and sixth claims 10 for relief is GRANTED as to all Defendants without prejudice.
- 11 2. Defendants' Motion to strike Plaintiff's prayer for punitive damages against 12 Defendant District is GRANTED. Plaintiff's prayer for punitive damages against 13 District is hereby STRICKEN with prejudice. Defendants' motion to strike Plaintiff's 14 prayer for punitive damages as to individual Defendant Lopez is DENIED as moot.
- 15 3. Defendant's motion to dismiss individual Defendant Lopez as to Plaintiff's fifth claim 16 for relief is hereby GRANTED. Lopez is hereby DISMISSED with prejudice as to 17 Plaintiff's fifth claim for relief.
- 18 4. Any amended complaint shall be filed and served not later than twenty-eight (28) days 19 from the date of service of this order.

20 IT IS SO ORDERED.
