

1 with a deadly weapon, Petitioner was released on parole in Los Angeles.

2 In March of the following year, Petitioner moved from Los Angeles to Sacramento, in 3 violation of the terms of his parole. There, he lived with Leslie Colyer and Neetelfer Hawkins, 4 off and on, and spent the majority of his time seeking and using drugs and alcohol.

5 On the evening of May 12, 1987, Petitioner was socializing outside an apartment building 6 on Boxwood Avenue near El Camino Avenue and Del Paso Boulevard in Sacramento where 7 Sandra S. lived with her boyfriend and her 11-year-old son. At the time, Sandra worked as a 8 prostitute. Petitioner “came on to” Sandra, but he was refused. He was drunk and weaving, and 9 had thrown up at one point. Sandra eventually returned to her apartment at about 4:00 a.m., and 10 went to bed. Her boyfriend, son and others were also sleeping inside.

11 At about noon the following day, Sandra woke up alone in the apartment. She had a “real 12 bad feeling.” Looking toward the foot of the bed as she began to get up, Sandra saw Petitioner.
13 His fly was down and he was masturbating. She loudly said, “Oh, God, no.” Petitioner 14 responded firmly, “Oh, God, yes.” After telling Sandra there was no one to hear or help her, 15 Petitioner pinned her down and began to rape her. One of Sandra’s friends walked in during that 16 time and asked whether she was “having a date?” She yelled, “No, no[,] no, no, it’s not,” but 17 Petitioner claimed that it was. Sandra repeated several times that there was no date. As he ran 18 out of the room, her friend said to Petitioner, “Oh, man, don’t be doing that.”

19 Afterward, Petitioner kept Sandra in the bathroom until they could hear people coming 20 into the apartment. Sandra then ran toward her friend Tony Simpkins, telling him Petitioner had 21 raped her, and was standing with him in the kitchen when she saw Petitioner taking out and 22 putting into his pants what looked like a large knife. Petitioner then ran out of the apartment.

23 Nearby, Edwin Glidewell had parked his 1975 Chevrolet Camaro outside his brother’s 24 home on Boxwood Avenue. He stood at the front door of the house, trying to hurry his wife 25 along because he was late for a medical appointment. He saw Petitioner walking toward El 26 Camino Avenue. Glidewell was familiar with Petitioner because Glidewell had previously stayed 27 with his brother for about two months and would see Petitioner walking in the area. On this 28 occasion, as Petitioner passed Glidewell’s brother’s house and the Camaro, Glidewell saw

1 Petitioner jump into the driver’s seat of his car. Petitioner started the car with the keys Glidewell
2 had left in the ignition. Glidewell jumped the fence and ran toward Petitioner once he realized 3 what was happening, but he was unable to open the passenger side door of the then-moving 4 vehicle. Glidewell yelled to the others in the house to call 911 and ran after Petitioner who had 5 turned right onto El Camino toward Arden Way. Glidewell missed another opportunity to open 6 the passenger door after seeing Petitioner stopped the wrong way on a one-way street; seeing 7 Glidewell, Petitioner drove over the concrete median and headed west on El Camino.

8 Eventually, Glidewell recovered the vehicle at the police impound lot. Although his 9 luggage was still in the vehicle, the clothing inside his luggage belonged to Petitioner.

10 A few days later, on May 15, Petitioner met Ross. She was cashing a welfare check.
11 Thereafter, the two began a days-long binge of using drugs and alcohol. During the course of that 12 binge, they visited Petitioner’s friend Neetelfer Hawkins and Ross’s friend Gail Patton.

13 Petitioner asked Ross to drive the Camaro late on the morning of May 17. The two 14 entered a shopping center, and Petitioner directed Ross to the Golden 1 Credit Union. She 15 parked, and he got out of the car. At 11:28 a.m., Allen Birkman, a civilian identification 16 technician for the Sacramento Police Department, withdrew $60 from an account at the credit 17 union’s automatic teller machine. Petitioner confronted Birkman and a struggle ensued, wherein 18 Petitioner stabbed Birkman in the heart. Ross and Petitioner then escaped in the Camaro.

19 Meanwhile, Birkman called for help. Within seconds, a passerby named Charles Kosobud 20 came to his aid. Birkman was holding his right hand to his chest, and blood was flowing through 21 his fingers. He held a wallet in his left hand. Steadying Birkman, Kosobud asked if they had 22 robbed him; Birkman responded, “No, but they tried.” Kosobud asked after the robber’s 23 identities, and Birkman responded, “Two blacks.” (Ross is an African–American. Defendant is, 24 in his own words, “Spanish and Islander,” meaning “[a] native [Cuban].”) Birkman soon 25 collapsed.

26 When Officer Calvin Lim of the Sacramento Police Department arrived at the scene, 27 Birkman was receiving emergency medical aid. Within several minutes, he was placed in an 28 ambulance for transport to a hospital and Lim rode along. Birkman had difficulty breathing, and

1 appeared to be in pain; he said he felt numbness or tingling in his body. When Lim asked 2 Birkman if he knew who had attacked him, he responded, “[a] male black, approximately six foot 3 tall” who escaped in “a Camaro.”

4 Sometime before noon, Ross and Petitioner arrived at Gail Patton’s apartment, located not 5 far from the Golden 1 Credit Union. Ross parked the Camaro nearby. When Ross entered the 6 apartment with a long knife in a sheath, Ross appeared frightened. Ross went into the kitchen 7 with the knife, and returned, telling Patton to give it to Petitioner. Petitioner then entered a few 8 minutes later, appearing normal. Patton gave him the long knife and the sheath. When police 9 officers approached Patton’s apartment shortly thereafter, either petitioner or Ross, maybe both, 10 directed Patton not to say anything. At the door to the apartment, the officers told Patton that 11 they were investigating the incident at the Golden 1 Credit Union. They asked whether she knew 12 anything about the Camaro parked nearby and she said she did not. When the officers left, Patton 13 told Petitioner to leave and he did so, leaving behind the long knife and sheath and some clothing, 14 as well as the Camaro.

15 On that same date, at about 1:30 p.m., 78-year-old Greta Slatten drove her new 1987 Ford 16 Taurus to a convenience store located about two-thirds of a mile from Patton’s apartment. No 17 other vehicles were in the lot at the time. Slatten saw Petitioner, the only other person present, 18 walking across the parking lot. She stayed in her vehicle for a few minutes, and when Petitioner 19 crossed to use a nearby public telephone, Slatten exited with her purse and keys, entering the 20 store. After leaving the store to return to her vehicle, and having passed Petitioner who was still 21 using the phone, the next thing Slatten recalled was being in the hospital. She suffered an injury 22 that required 20 stitches on her face that prevented her from opening her mouth, and dark bruising 23 on the left side of her face from her hairline down through her neck and jaw. Slatten learned later 24 that Petitioner had taken her purse, keys and car.

25 Allen Birkman died on May 18, 1987, as a result of the stab wound to his heart. The 26 wound could have been inflicted by the long knife that Petitioner left at Patton’s apartment.
27 That day or soon thereafter, Leslie Colyer spoke with Petitioner over the telephone after Colyer 28 was approached by police. The officers had inquired into Petitioner’s whereabouts and advised

1 Colyer they were seeking him in connection with a homicide. When speaking with Petitioner, 2 Colyer told him that the victim was a police officer.

3 On May 27, 1987, Petitioner was arrested in Mississippi and jailed, having been 4 apprehended behind the wheel of Slatten's Taurus. A second long knife in a sheath was found in 5 the car. The next day, Charles Robinson – Petitioner's passenger and a hitchhiker - was also 6 arrested and jailed. While the two shared a cell, Petitioner told Robinson that "he had killed a 7 police officer in California."

8 Petitioner told another story. Testifying on his own behalf and introducing other 9 evidence, Petitioner denied raping Sandra S. He said she had consented, at least in part in order 10 to obtain some cocaine he offered. He denied stealing Glidewell's Camaro, indicating Glidewell 11 had given it to him as security for a drug debt. Petitioner also denied robbing or murdering 12 Birkman, claiming he was elsewhere at the time of the attack, and was instead the victim of 13 mistaken identity. Further, Petitioner denied robbing Slatten, again asserting an alibi and 14 misidentification. In acknowledging possession of Slatten's Taurus, Petitioner claimed to have 15 traded cocaine for the vehicle with a young man who called himself "J.R." He generally denied 16 ever possessing a knife.

17 Ross told yet another story. Testifying on her own behalf and introducing other evidence, 18 she did not deny that Petitioner robbed or murdered Birkman. Instead, Ross claimed she did not 19 have the requisite mental state — she said she did not even suspect what Petitioner had evidently 20 intended – but had accompanied him out of fear.

21 B. Penalty Phase

22 For the penalty of death, the People relied on the evidence introduced at the guilt phase 23 relevant to the circumstances of the capital offense, including the attempted robbery and murder 24 of Birkman, the rape of Sandra S., and the robbery of Slatten.

25 Moreover, the People presented evidence of three prior felony convictions. First, in 1982, 26 in the Los Angeles Superior Court, Petitioner was convicted of voluntary manslaughter with 27 personal use of a deadly weapon. Second, at the same time and in the same court, he was 28 convicted of assault with a deadly weapon. Lastly, in 1983, in the San Luis Obispo Superior

1 Court, Petitioner was convicted of escape from prison without force or violence.

2 The People also presented evidence of four instances of criminal activity, beyond the 3 circumstances of the capital offense, involving the use or attempted use of force or violence or the 4 express or implied threat to use force or violence. The first and second instances involved the 5 circumstances surrounding the convictions for voluntary manslaughter and assault with a deadly 6 weapon.

7 More particularly, late one night in 1981, an unarmed man ran into a small liquor store in 8 Hollywood with Petitioner in pursuit. Petitioner was brandishing a long knife in his right hand.
9 When the man stopped and brought his hands up for protection, Petitioner pulled the man's hands 10 down with his left hand, said, "Chinga su madre," stabbing the man in the throat. Withdrawing 11 the blade and turning toward one of the store's clerks, Petitioner was stopped and fled when 12 another clerk pulled out a shotgun. The third and fourth instances consisted of separate attacks on 13 fellow jail inmates during the pendency of the Sacramento trial proceedings, one in 1987 and the 14 other in 1988. On each occasion, Petitioner punched an individual unable to defend himself.

15 Arguing for life imprisonment without possibility of parole, Petitioner presented evidence 16 relevant to his background and character. He was born in Cuba around 1960, and was raised 17 there. As a young child, he suffered a significant injury to his head, potentially resulting in 18 epilepsy. He also lost his mother. Thereafter, he lived an unstable life, having been subjected to 19 abuse and neglect, particularly from a woman with whom his father lived. As a result, Petitioner 20 exhibited problem behavior. He came to the United States in the so-called "Mariel Boatlift" of 21 1980. Following detention in camps, for about six weeks, Petitioner lived in Richmond, Virginia 22 in 1981, under the sponsorship of a married couple with small children. He displayed kindness 23 and generosity, but also anger and immaturity. Petitioner made his way to California later that 24 year. For social and personal reasons, Petitioner did not successfully assimilate into American 25 society. It was opined that he suffered from conditions including "profound emotional 26 immaturity" and "extreme culture shock." Despite these issues, Petitioner was capable of love 27 and helpfulness. For example, he displayed those qualities when dealing with Neetelfer Hawkins 28 and her disabled son, as well as with her mother.

1 at death. (6 CT 1405-06.)

2 On September 14, 1989, Petitioner was sentenced to death for the murder of Allen 3 Birkman, and a total determinate sentence of 17 years and 8 months for the remaining crimes of 4 which he was convicted. (6 CT 1488-98.)

5 Petitioner filed the Appellant's Opening brief in his direct appeal to the California 6 Supreme Court on November 3, 1994, case number S012261, following the appointment of 7 counsel and record correction proceedings. (ECF No. 13 at A.) Respondent's Brief and 8 Appellant's Reply Brief were filed on October 10, 1995, and March 26, 1996, respectively. (ECF 9 No. 13 at B & C.)

10 The California Supreme Court issued its opinion, affirming the judgment in full, on 11 December 5, 1996. (ECF No. 13 at D.) A petition for rehearing was filed and denied before a 12 remittitur issued on February 19, 1997. (ECF No. 13 at E-G.)

13 A petition for writ of certiorari was filed in the United States Supreme Court on May 16, 14 1997, case number 96-9028; certiorari was denied on October 6, 1997.

15 On October 8, 1997, Petitioner filed an application to proceed in forma pauperis, a request 16 for the appointment of counsel, and for a stay of execution. (ECF Nos. 1-3.) On October 10, 17 1997, this court denied the stay, but granted the in forma pauperis application and appointed 18 counsel. (ECF No. 4.)

19 The initial petition for writ of habeas corpus was filed September 15, 1998. (ECF No. 7.)
20 A motion to hold the petition in abeyance followed on October 1, 1998. (ECF Nos. 10 & 12.)

21 On September 23, 1998, a petition for writ of habeas corpus was filed in the California 22 Supreme Court, case number S073670; the petition was denied on October 28, 1998. (ECF Nos.
23 13 at H & 285.)

24 On November 2, 1998, the abeyance motion was withdrawn by Petitioner and an amended 25 petition for writ of habeas corpus was filed. (ECF Nos. 21 & 22.)

26 Respondent filed an answer to the petition on September 30, 1999. (ECF No. 45.)

27 On June 5, 2000, the court issued its order regarding discovery requests and set a briefing 28 schedule regarding Respondent's assertions of procedural default as to certain claims. (ECF No.

2 Briefing was completed by the parties on August 17, 2000. (ECF Nos. 66, 68 & 73.)

3 On November 8, 2000, findings and recommendations were issued, holding Petitioner's 4 claims were not procedurally barred for purposes of federal review. (ECF No. 74.)

5 On December 22, 2000, the court issued its order adopting the findings and 6 recommendations in part. More particularly, the court sustained Respondent's objections 7 pertaining to the contemporaneous objection rule and procedural bar concerning certain claims 8 asserted by Petitioner. (ECF No. 82.)

9 Numerous discovery and discovery-related motions were filed and resolved during the 10 period between January 2001 and March 2004. (ECF Nos. 84, 86, 95, 96, 105, 115, 121, 122, 11 125, 130, 131, 133, 134, 137, 146, 155, 156, 161, 163, 167, 168, 173, 178, 179, 182, 186, 191, 12 199, 207, 210-211, 213.)

13 Petitioner filed a motion for evidentiary hearing on November 9, 2004. (ECF No. 222.)

14 On April 3, 2006, Petitioner filed a motion for leave to file a second amended petition for 15 writ of habeas corpus. (ECF Nos. 280 & 281.) Respondent filed its opposition to the motion on 16 May 10, 2006, and Petitioner replied on May 17, 2006. (ECF Nos. 284 & 285.)

17 On June 16, 2006, the court issued an order (1) requiring Petitioner to withdraw claim 18 DDD from the second amended petition or file a statement of reasons why it should remain; (2) 19 requiring Respondent to file a memorandum of points and authorities specifically identifying each 20 claim he alleges to be unexhausted and any argument concerning the applicability of the stay and 21 abeyance procedure, and setting forth a briefing schedule; and (3) relieving Respondent of the 22 need to file an opposition to Petitioner's then-pending motion for evidentiary hearing due to the 23 possibility of a stay pending exhaustion. The court indicated it would rule on Petitioner's motion 24 to file a second amended petition following submission of the aforementioned briefing. (ECF No.
25 292.) That same date, Petitioner withdrew claim DDD from the proposed second amended 26 petition. (ECF No. 293.)

27 Respondent's memorandum of points and authorities regarding exhaustion of claims 28 asserted in the second amended petition was filed July 5, 2006. (ECF No. 294.) Petitioner

1 responded July 24, 2006, and Respondent replied to the response on August 14, 2006. (ECF Nos.
2 296 & 298.)

3 On September 11, 2006, Petitioner filed a second petition for writ of habeas corpus with 4 the California Supreme Court, case number S146501. (ECF No. 301.)

5 On December 7, 2006, this court determined the claims at issue were exhausted, except 6 for a portion of the claim designated “UU” as it concerned Quivican Prison in Cuba. It granted 7 Petitioner’s motion to file a second amended petition, agreed with the parties that four additional 8 claims were unexhausted (FF, II, JJ & RR), and granted a stay and abeyance of the proceedings 9 pending exhaustion of those claims. (ECF No. 305.)

10 On or about December 12, 2007, Respondent filed an Informal Response to the second 11 state habeas petition filed with the California Supreme Court. (ECF No. 308.) Petitioner filed a 12 reply to the informal response on or about April 30, 2009.

13 On July 13, 2011, the California Supreme Court issued its order denying Petitioner’s 14 second habeas petition. (ECF No. 314.)

15 On August 4, 2011, the stay was lifted by order of this court. (ECF No. 315.)

16 The parties filed a joint statement regarding the effects of Cullen v. Pinholster<sup>3</sup> and the 17 scheduling of further proceedings on September 22, 2011. (ECF No. 318.)

18 On July 23, 2012, Petitioner filed his memorandum of points and authorities in support of 19 the second amended petition. (ECF No. 330.)

20 Respondent filed its opposition brief on September 16, 2013. (ECF No. 345.)

21 A reply to the opposition was filed by Petitioner on March 13, 2015. (ECF No. 361.)

22 APPLICATION OF 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)

23 I. Legal Standards

24 Title 28 U.S.C. § 2254 confers upon a federal district court the jurisdiction to consider a 25 petition for writ of habeas corpus challenging a state court conviction. A writ of habeas corpus is 26 available under section 2254 only on the basis of some transgression of federal law binding on the 27

28 <sup>3</sup> Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170 (2011).

1 state courts. See Peltier v. Wright, 15 F.3d 860, 861 (9th Cir. 1994); Middleton v. Cupp, 768 2 F.2d 1083, 1085 (9th Cir. 1985). A federal writ is not available for alleged error in the 3 interpretation or application of state law. See Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 (1991); 4 Park v. California, 202 F.3d 1146, 1149 (9th Cir. 2000); Middleton, 768 F.2d at 1085.

5 Where a state court resolves a federal constitutional claim on the merits, the petitioner in 6 federal court may not succeed on that claim absent a showing that the state court resolution of the 7 claim was contrary to law or unreasonable. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Congress adopted this standard 8 when it revised the habeas statutes in 1996 as part of the Anti-terrorism and Effective Death 9 Penalty Act (the “AEDPA”). To meet the standards, a petitioner must establish that the state 10 court’s adjudication of the claim

11 (1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an 12 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or 13 (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable 14 determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

15 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Section 2254(d) is a gateway. If a petitioner satisfies either subsection (1) 16 or (2) for a claim, then the federal court considers that claim de novo. See Panetti v. Quarterman, 17 551 U.S. 930, 953 (2007) (when section 2254(d) is satisfied, “[a] federal court must then resolve 18 the claim without the deference AEDPA otherwise requires”); Frantz v. Hazey, 533 F.3d 724, 737
19 (9th Cir. 2008).

20 In 2011, the Supreme Court elucidated the section 2254(d) standards. First, the Court 21 made clear that when making the determination that a state court decision was contrary to law or 22 unreasonable, a federal court may not consider evidence that was not before the state court.
23 Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 180-82. Second, the Court “tightened” section 2254(d)’s rule of 24 deference:

25 As a condition for obtaining habeas corpus from a federal court, a 26 state prisoner must show that the state court’s ruling on the claim 27 being presented in federal court was so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.

28 Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 103 (2011); see also Amado v. Gonzalez, 758 F.3d 1119, 1 1131-32 (9th Cir. 2014). Thus, federal habeas relief is precluded if “‘fairminded jurists could 2 disagree’ on the correctness of the state court’s decision.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 101 (quoting 3 Yarborough v. Alvarado, 541 U.S. 652, 664 (2004)). This objective standard of reasonableness 4 applies to review under both subsections of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). See Hibbler v. Benedetti, 693 5 F.3d 1140, 1146-47 (9th Cir. 2012). The federal court must engage in the deferential review even 6 where the state court has not provided a reasoned decision. Richter, 562 U.S. at 99-100.

7 In the present case, some of Petitioner’s claims were raised, and rejected, in the California 8 Supreme Court’s reasoned decision on appeal. However, some were raised in his state habeas 9 petitions, which were summarily denied. A summary denial is presumed to be a denial on the 10 merits of the petitioner’s claims. Stancle v. Clay, 692 F.3d 948, 957 & n.3 (9th Cir. 2012) (the 11 presumption that the denial is based on the merits, rather than on procedural grounds, may be 12 overcome if it is not “plausible”). While the federal court cannot analyze just what the state court 13 did when it issued a summary denial, the federal court must review the state court record to 14 determine whether there was any “reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief.” Richter, 15 562 U.S. at 98. The federal court “must determine what arguments or theories . . . could have 16 supported . . . the state court’s decision; and then it must ask whether it is possible fairminded 17 jurists could disagree that those arguments or theories are inconsistent with the holding in a prior 18 decision of [the Supreme] Court.” Id. at 102. The petitioner bears “the burden to demonstrate 19 that ‘there was no reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief.’” Walker v. Martel, 709 F.3d 20 925, 939 (9th Cir. 2013) (quoting Richter, 562 U.S. at 98).

21 When reviewing the California Supreme Court’s summary denial of a petition, this court 22 must consider that

23 the California Supreme Court’s summary denial of a habeas petition 24 on the merits reflects that court’s determination that “the claims 25 made in th[e] petition do not state a prima facie case entitling the 26 petitioner to relief.” It appears that the court generally assumes the allegations in the petition to be true, but does not accept wholly conclusory allegations, and will also “review the record of the trial
... to assess the merits of the petitioner’s claims.”

27 Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 188 n.12 (quoting In re Clark, 5 Cal. 4th 750, 770 (1993), and citing 28 People v. Duvall, 9 Cal. 4th 464, 474 (1995)). Accordingly, the absence of a prima facie case is

1 the determination that this court must review under section 2254(d). See Nunes v. Mueller, 350 2 F.3d 1045, 1054-55 (9th Cir. 2003). The Pinholster Court considered the reasonableness of the 3 California Supreme Court’s summary denial of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in terms 4 of the petitioner’s failure to make a prima facie showing of ineffective assistance of counsel. The 5 Court held that petitioner Pinholster “has not shown that the California Supreme Court’s decision 6 that he could not demonstrate deficient performance by his trial counsel necessarily involved an 7 unreasonable application of federal law.” Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 190. It is quite clear that the 8 Court was considering what the state court in fact decided—that petitioner had failed to establish 9 that “he could” prove his claim, in other words, that petitioner had failed to make a prima facie 10 showing that he was entitled to relief.

11 A petitioner establishes a prima facie case of a constitutional violation if his assertions are 12 sufficient to support the claim. Nunes, 350 F.3d at 1054-55. The question is whether the 13 petitioner has demonstrated that “he ha[s] sufficient evidence for a reasonable fact finder to 14 conclude” that he has proved his claim. Id. In other words, a holding that petitioner has not made 15 out a prima facie case amounts to a holding that no reasonable factfinder could find in petitioner’s 16 favor. Id. at 1055. If this court finds petitioner has unarguably presented a prima facie case for 17 relief on a claim, the state court’s summary rejection of that claim would be unreasonable. Id.
18 Under subsection (d)(1), a state court decision is “contrary to . . . clearly established Federal law” 19 if it applies a rule contradicting a holding of the Supreme Court or reaches a result different from 20 Supreme Court precedent on “materially indistinguishable” facts. Price v. Vincent, 538 U.S. 634, 21 640 (2003). A state court decision is an “unreasonable application” of clearly established federal 22 law if “the state court correctly identifies the governing legal principle . . . but unreasonably 23 applies it to the facts of the particular case.” Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. 685, 694 (2002) (citing 24 Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 407-08 (2000)). “Clearly established Federal law” is found in 25 the United States Supreme Court’s “applicable holdings.” Carey v. Musladin, 549 U.S. 70, 74 26 (2006). It refers to “‘holdings, as opposed to the dicta, of [the Supreme Court’s] decisions’ at the 27 time the state court decides the matter.” Cannedy v. Adams, 706 F.3d 1148, 1157 (9th Cir. 2013) 28 (quoting Stanley v. Schriro, 598 F.3d 612, 617 (9th Cir. 2010)), amended on other grounds, 733

1 F.3d 794 (9th Cir. 2013). “[C]ircuit court precedent may be persuasive in determining what law 2 is clearly established and whether a state court applied that law unreasonably.” Stanley v.
3 Cullen, 633 F.3d 852, 859 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Maxwell v. Roe, 606 F.3d 561, 567 (9th Cir.
4 2010)). However, circuit precedent may not be “used to refine or sharpen a general principle of 5 Supreme Court jurisprudence into a specific legal rule that th[e] [Supreme] Court has not 6 announced.” Marshall v. Rodgers, 569 U.S. 58, 64 (2013) (citing Parker v. Matthews, 567 U.S.
7 37, 48-49 (2012) (per curiam)). Nor may it be used to “determine whether a particular rule of law 8 is so widely accepted among the Federal Circuits that it would, if presented to th[e] [Supreme] 9 Court, be accepted as correct.” Id. Further, where courts of appeals have diverged in their 10 treatment of an issue, it cannot be said that there is “clearly established Federal law” governing 11 that issue. Carey, 549 U.S. at 77.

12         There are two ways a petitioner may satisfy subsection (d)(2). Hibbler, 693 F.3d at 1146.
13 He may show the state court’s findings of fact “were not supported by substantial evidence in the 14 state court record” or he may “challenge the fact-finding process itself on the ground it was 15 deficient in some material way.” Id. (citing Taylor v. Maddox, 366 F.3d 992, 999-1001 (9th Cir.
16 2004), abrogated on other grounds by Murray v. Schriro, 745 F.3d 984, 1000 (9th Cir. 2014)); see 17 also Hurles v. Ryan, 752 F.3d 768, 790-91 (9th Cir. 2014) (if a state court makes factual findings 18 without an opportunity for the petitioner to present evidence, the fact-finding process is deficient 19 and the state court opinion is not entitled to deference), cert. denied, 135 S. Ct. 710 (2014). The 20 standard for determining whether the state court’s fact-finding process is insufficient requires the 21 federal court to “be satisfied that any appellate court to whom the defect [in the state court’s fact-22 finding process] is pointed out would be unreasonable in holding that the state court’s fact-finding 23 process was adequate.” Hibbler, 693 F.3d at 1146-47 (quoting Lambert v. Blodgett, 393 F.3d 24 943, 972 (9th Cir. 2004)). The state court’s failure to hold an evidentiary hearing does not 25 automatically render its fact-finding process unreasonable. Id. at 1147. Further, a state court may 26 make factual findings without an evidentiary hearing if “the record conclusively establishes a fact 27 or where petitioner’s factual allegations are entirely without credibility.” Perez v. Rosario, 459 28 F.3d 943, 951 (9th Cir. 2006) (citing Nunes, 350 F.3d at 1055).

1           The Ninth Circuit explained in Hibbler that federal standards for determining when an 2 evidentiary hearing is mandatory are a useful guide to determining the reasonableness of the state 3 court's refusal to hold a hearing:

4           A state court's decision not to hold an evidentiary hearing does 5 not render its fact-finding process unreasonable so long as the state 6 court could have reasonably concluded that the evidence already 7 adduced was sufficient to resolve the factual question. See Earp, 8 431 F.3d at 1170 (noting that a state court is not required to hold an 9 evidentiary hearing when it is possible to resolve the factual 10 question "based on 'documentary testimony and evidence in the 11 record'" (citation omitted)); Perez v. Rosario, 459 F.3d 943, 950 12 (9th Cir. 2006) (holding that it is reasonable for a state court to 13 resolve a disputed factual question without an evidentiary hearing 14 when the petitioner's allegations are "incredible in light of the 15 record, or . . . when the record already before the court is said to 16 establish a fact conclusively"). The ultimate issue is whether the 17 state's factfinding procedures were reasonable; this is a fact-bound 18 and case-specific inquiry.

19           Because AEDPA does not provide any specific guidance on what 20 sort of procedural deficiencies will render a state court's fact-21 finding unreasonable, we have sometimes turned for guidance to 22 cases considering a similar issue in a different context: when a 23 federal district court considering a habeas petition must or should 24 conduct an evidentiary hearing. See Earp, 431 F.3d at 1166-67, 25 1169-70 (looking to Townsend v. Sain, 372 U.S. 293, 313 (1963), 26 which governs when a federal district court reviewing a habeas 27 petition de novo must grant an evidentiary hearing, in determining 28 whether the state court decision was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts). In this context, the Supreme Court has recently clarified that, "[i]n deciding whether to grant an evidentiary hearing, a federal court must consider whether such a hearing could enable an applicant to prove the petition's factual allegations, which, if true, would entitle the applicant to federal habeas relief." Landrigan, 550 U.S. at 474. More specifically, "[i]f the record refutes the applicant's factual allegations or otherwise precludes habeas relief, a district court is not required to hold an evidentiary hearing." Id. "[A]n evidentiary hearing is not required on issues that can be resolved by reference to the state court record." Id. (quoting Totten v. Merkle, 137 F.3d 1172, 1176 (9th Cir. 1998)).

          While this framework for determining when a district court errs in failing to conduct an evidentiary hearing provides useful guidance, it is useful only by analogy and does not answer conclusively whether the state court's adjudication "resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding." § 2254(d)(2) . . . Unlike our review of a district court's determination that an evidentiary hearing is unnecessary, which is for abuse of discretion, see Landrigan, 550 U.S. at 474-75, we may not "second-guess a state court's fact-finding process"

1 unless we determine “that the state court was not merely wrong, but 2 actually unreasonable.” Taylor, 366 F.3d at 999. Nevertheless, the 3 rules governing when a district court must grant an evidentiary 4 hearing are informative: if a district court would be within its 5 discretion in denying an evidentiary hearing, a state court’s similar 6 decision is probably not objectively unreasonable.

7 Accordingly, in considering a petitioner’s argument that the state 8 court’s failure to hold an evidentiary hearing rendered its factual 9 findings unreasonable, we may first consider whether a similarly 10 situated district court would have been required to hold an 11 evidentiary hearing. See Earp, 431 F.3d at 1167. We begin with 12 the rule that no such hearing is required “[i]f the record refutes the 13 applicant’s factual allegations or otherwise precludes habeas relief.”
14 Landrigan, 550 U.S. at 474; see also Perez, 459 F.3d at 950; see 15 also Lambert, 393 F.3d at 965-66 (holding that an evidentiary 16 hearing is not a prerequisite to an adjudication on the merits 17 triggering AEDPA deference). The ultimate question, however, is 18 whether an appellate court would be unreasonable in holding that 19 an evidentiary hearing was not necessary in light of the state court 20 record. Taylor, 366 F.3d at 1000.

21 693 F.3d at 1147-48.

22 If a petitioner overcomes one of the hurdles posed by section 2254(d), this court may 23 review the merits of the claim de novo. See Frantz, 533 F.3d at 737. For the claims upon which 24 petitioner seeks to present evidence, petitioner must meet the standards of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(2) 25 by showing that he has not “failed to develop the factual basis of [the] claim in State court 26 proceedings” and by meeting the federal case law standards for the presentation of evidence in a 27 federal habeas proceeding. See Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 185-86.

28 For the reasons set forth below, the undersigned finds that none of Petitioner’s claims survive review.

29 II. Petitioner’s Challenges to the Applicability of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)

30 Petitioner makes several broad challenges to the application of § 2254(d). Some involve 31 vague arguments that capital habeas proceedings before the California Supreme Court, and in 32 particular that court’s summary decision process, are dysfunctional, and that political and 33 economic pressures cause that court to perform arbitrary and bias reviews of capital cases. He 34 cites various studies of California’s capital case procedures, provides numerous appendices, and 35 selectively cites statements from California Supreme Court decisions to demonstrate 36 inconsistencies in that court’s review of capital habeas cases. Despite the lengthy documentation

1 offered in support of his challenges, Petitioner has not shown that at the time it considered his 2 claims the California Supreme Court had such a regular practice of requiring petitioners to meet a 3 higher pleading standard than that required under federal law, of inappropriately considering the 4 prejudicial effect of errors, or of giving capital habeas claims inappropriately limited review, such 5 that this court should presume the California Supreme Court committed those alleged misdeeds 6 here.

7 Petitioner does advance several more specific constitutional challenges to California's 8 capital case procedures. Each is addressed and rejected by the undersigned below.

9 A. Supremacy Clause

10 Petitioner argues that a California rule requiring a petitioner to make a higher showing in 11 his pleadings than that required by federal law frustrates the enforcement of federal law, violating 12 the Supremacy Clause. (ECF No. 330 at 70.) Petitioner relies primarily on the Supreme Court's 13 statement that a "federal right cannot be defeated by the forms of local practice." Brown v.
14 Western Ry. of Alabama, 338 U.S. 294, 296 (1949). In Brown, the Supreme Court examined a 15 Georgia law that required a state court considering a demurrer to construe the complaint's 16 allegations "most strongly against the pleader." Id. at 295. The Supreme Court held that it would 17 not defer to this state court practice when considering whether the complainant in that case had 18 made a prima facie showing of the violation of a federal law, stating that "we cannot accept as 19 final a state court's interpretation of allegations in a complaint asserting it." Id. at 296.

20 Petitioner contends that in a California habeas proceeding, California law recognizes a 21 presumption that the state court conviction is accurate. Petitioner relies in this regard upon 22 statements by the California Supreme Court that "all presumptions favor the truth, accuracy, and 23 fairness of the conviction and sentence; defendant thus must undertake the burden of overturning 24 them." People v. Duvall, 9 Cal.4th 464, 474 (1995), quoting People v. Gonzalez, 51 Cal.3d 1179, 25 1260 (1990) (emphasis in original). According to Petitioner, the state court's reliance upon this 26 presumption of the accuracy of criminal convictions creates a burden upon the consideration of 27 his federal habeas claims that runs afoul of the Supreme Court's expressed concern in Brown that 28 federal right cannot be defeated by a state's practice.

1           Petitioner’s Supremacy Clause argument is without merit. First, the argument ignores the 2 nature of collateral review. Petitioner’s argument that state law burdens the consideration of his 3 federal claims ignores the fact that, had he raised those claims in federal collateral proceedings, 4 they would have been subject to a similar presumption in favor of preserving the finality of the 5 judgment. In United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152 (1982), the Supreme Court considered 6 whether the “plain error” standard applicable on direct appeal to excuse a procedural default 7 should be applied to consideration of a claim for relief brought under 28 U.S.C. § 2255. In 8 recognizing “the existence of a final judgment perfected by appeal,” the Court held that once a 9 defendant’s direct review proceedings have concluded, “we are entitled to presume he stands 10 fairly and finally convicted.” Frady, 456 U.S. at 164. The Court in Frady “reaffirm[ed] the well-11 settled principle that to obtain collateral relief a prisoner must clear a significantly higher hurdle 12 than would exist on direct appeal.” 456 U.S. at 166; see also Barefoot v. Estelle, 463 U.S. 880, 13 887-88 (1983); United States v. Johnson, 988 F.2d 941, 945 (9th Cir. 1993).

14           The Supreme Court recognized “the distinction between direct and collateral review,” in 15 Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619 (1993). In Brecht, the Court commented on the 16 “extraordinary remedy” of habeas corpus and concluded that the beyond-a-reasonable-doubt 17 harmless error standard applied on direct review should not be applied when determining the 18 impact of a constitutional error raised in a federal habeas proceeding. 507 U.S. at 633–39. While 19 Brecht involved claims raised under 28 U.S.C. § 2254, the Brecht harmless error standard has 20 been applied to claims raised under § 2255 as well. See United States v. Montalvo, 331 F.3d 21 1052, 1058 (9th Cir. 2003); Griffin v. United States, 330 F.3d 733, 736 (6th Cir. 2003). The 22 Brecht Court’s incentive involved “‘considerations underlying our habeas jurisprudence’ that 23 apply equally to collateral attacks on both federal and state convictions – considerations such as 24 the different purposes of direct and collateral review and the importance of finality in criminal 25 convictions.” Montalvo, 331 F.3d at 1058, quoting Brecht, 507 U.S. at 633.

26           Because federal law similarly views habeas corpus as a challenge to a presumptively final 27 and correct judgment, it cannot be said that the California Supreme Court’s application of the 28 presumption in favor of the truth, accuracy, and fairness of a conviction and sentence under state

1 law amounted to a state-created impingement on a federal right.

2         Additionally, Petitioner’s challenges in this regard are not supported by the authority he 3 cites. In Brown, the Supreme Court held it would not defer to state court rules in construing the 4 pleadings. This court is not being asked to construe Petitioner’s claims under any standard 5 announced under California law. Rather, this court looks to federal, not state law, to determine 6 whether Petitioner has established a prima facie case for relief. If he has done so, this court looks 7 again to only federal law to determine whether there were any reasonable bases for the California 8 Supreme Court’s denial of his claims. Therefore, the concerns at issue in Brown are inapplicable.

9         B. Article III

10         Petitioner also argues that if the AEDPA requires deference to “novel state court rules for 11 applying the Constitution,” then it violates Article III of the United States Constitution by 12 encroaching upon the role of the federal courts as the final arbiters of federal law. (ECF No. 330 13 at 70.) But, this argument relies upon the same false distinction between state and federal 14 collateral review discussed above. It fails for the same reasons.

15         C. Suspension Clause

16         As with his Article III challenge, Petitioner’s argument that the Suspension Clause is 17 violated by § 2254(d) (ECF No. 330 at 72) rests on the same incorrect underpinning.

18         A law acts to suspend the writ of habeas corpus in violation of the Constitution only 19 where it explicitly bars habeas review. Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 517 (2003). In fact, the 20 Ninth Circuit has considered, and rejected, the Suspension Clause argument Petitioner makes 21 here. In Crater v. Galaza, 491 F.3d 1119 (9th Cir. 2007), the court considered whether the 22 deference due a state court under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1) constituted a suspension of the writ.
23 That court held it did not. First, a suspension of the writ of habeas corpus occurs only when 24 Congress “clearly and unambiguously” removes all federal habeas corpus jurisdiction. Crater, 25 491 F.3d at 1124 n.5. The AEDPA does not repeal federal habeas jurisdiction. The court in 26 Crater also rejected an argument that § 2254(d)(1) “effectively suspends the writ.” Id. at 1124– 27 25. The court pointed out that altering the standards for granting habeas relief is not the same as 28 suspending the privilege of the writ. Id. at 1125–26, citing Felker v. Turpin, 518 U.S. 651 (1996).

1 Petitioner’s reliance on Boumediene v. Bush, 553 U.S. 723 (2008), where the Court struck down 2 a statute denying some aliens access to the habeas remedy, is misplaced. Petitioner makes no 3 comprehensible argument that the AEDPA has suspended the writ of habeas corpus in violation 4 of the Suspension Clause.

5 D. Liberty Interest

6 Under California law, if a habeas petitioner pleads “sufficient facts that, if true, would 7 entitle him to relief,” then the state court will issue an order to show cause requiring a response 8 from the state. People v. Duvall, 9 Cal.4th at 475. Issuance of an order to show cause triggers 9 rights to conduct fact-finding in support of claims set out in the petition. Id. at 475–77. Here, 10 Petitioner asserts that this rule creates a liberty interest in the state habeas procedures. (ECF No.
11 330 at 92.) His assertion in this regard, however, cannot form the basis of a due process 12 argument. “[A]n expectation of receiving process is not, without more, a liberty interest protected 13 by the Due Process Clause.” Olim v. Wakinekona, 461 U.S. 238, 250 n.12 (1983); see also 14 Elliott v. Martinez, 675 F.3d 1241, 1245–46 (10th Cir. 2012)

15 III. Application of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d) to Petitioner’s Claims

16 The court addresses Petitioner’s claims in the order in which they have been briefed by the 17 parties in their most recent substantive filings (ECF Nos. 330 & 345).

18 Claim D: The Propriety of the Prosecution’s Use of Peremptory Challenges

19 In this lengthy claim, Petitioner complains the prosecutor systematically excluded several 20 African-American and Hispanic venirepersons in violation of his constitutional rights and that the 21 California Supreme Court’s denial of his claim amounted to an unreasonable application of 22 Supreme Court precedent or an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence 23 presented. (ECF No. 330 at 100-209.)

24 Respondent maintains Petitioner’s claim lacks merit, and a review of the record supports a 25 finding that the California Supreme Court’s determination was not contrary to nor did it involve 26 an unreasonable application of federal law, and neither did that determination involve an 27 unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the state court. (ECF 28 No. 345 at 53-95.)

1                    The Applicable Legal Standards.

2                    In Batson, the United States Supreme Court held that the Equal Protection Clause 3 prohibits a prosecutor from exercising peremptory challenges to strike a venire person on the 4 basis of race. Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 89 (1986). Wheeler is the California state 5 counterpart to Batson. People v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 3d 258, 272 (1978) (overruled in part on 6 another ground in Johnson v. California, 545 U.S. 162 (2005)); Yee v. Duncan, 463 F.3d 893, 896 7 (9th Cir. 2006). However, it is the standards of Batson that control the disposition of a 8 petitioner’s claim on federal habeas corpus review. See Lewis v. Lewis, 321 F.3d 824, 827 (9th 9 Cir. 2003).

10                    In order to prevail on a Batson claim, a defendant must first establish a prima facie case of 11 purposeful discrimination. Batson, 476 U.S. at 96-97; Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830; United States v.
12 DeGross, 960 F.2d 1433, 1442 (9th Cir. 1992). “To establish a prima facie case, the defendant 13 must show that ‘he is a member of a cognizable racial group,’ Batson, 476 U.S. at 96, and that 14 ‘the facts and circumstances of the case raise an inference’ that the prosecution has excluded 15 venire members from the petit jury on account of their race.” McClain v. Prunty, 217 F.3d 1209, 16 1219-20 (9th Cir. 2000) (quoting Wade v. Terhune, 202 F.3d 1190, 1195 (9th Cir. 2000)). In 17 deciding whether a defendant has made the requisite showing, the trial court should consider all 18 relevant circumstances. Batson, 476 U.S. at 96.

19                    If a prima facie case is made out, “the burden shifts to the State to come forward with a 20 neutral explanation for challenging” the jurors in question. Batson, 476 U.S. at 97; DeGross, 960 21 F.2d at 1442; Stubbs v. Gomez, 189 F.3d 1099, 1104 (9th Cir. 1999). “The prosecutor’s 22 challenges need not rise to a level justifying use of a challenge for cause.” United States v.
23 Power, 881 F.2d 733, 740 (9th Cir. 1989) (citing Batson, 476 U.S. at 87-88). Indeed, for the 24 purposes of this step, the prosecutor’s explanation need not be “persuasive or even plausible.”
25 Purkett v. Elem, 514 U.S. 765, 768 (1995). Rather, a neutral explanation in this context “means 26 an explanation based on something other than the race of the juror.” McClain, 217 F.3d at 1220 27 (quoting Hernandez v. New York, 500 U.S. 352, 360 (1991)). “At this step of the inquiry, the 28 issue is the facial validity of the prosecutor’s explanation. Unless a discriminatory intent is 1 inherent in the prosecutor’s explanation, the reason offered will be deemed race-neutral.”

2 McClain, 217 F.3d at 1220 (quoting Stubbs, 189 F.3d at 1105). As with any credibility 3 determination, the trial court’s own observations are of significant importance. Batson, 476 U.S.
4 at 98 n.21. See also Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830.

5 At the final step of this inquiry, “the trial court must determine whether the defendant has 6 carried the burden of proving purposeful discrimination.” McClain, 217 F.3d at 1220 (quoting 7 Hernandez, 500 U.S. at 359). See also Batson, 476 U.S. at 98. The court must evaluate the 8 prosecutor’s reasons and make a credibility determination. Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830. A 9 comparative analysis of the struck juror with empaneled jurors “is a well-established tool for 10 exploring the possibility that facially race-neutral reasons are a pretext for discrimination.” Id. If 11 a review of the record undermines the prosecutor’s stated reasons, or many of the stated reasons, 12 then the explanation may be deemed a pretext. Id. The proffer of various faulty reasons and only 13 one or two otherwise adequate reasons may undermine the prosecutor’s credibility to such an 14 extent that a court should sustain a Batson challenge. Id. at 831.

15 On the other hand, “[t]he fact that a prosecutor’s reasons may be ‘founded on nothing 16 more than a trial lawyer’s instincts about a prospective juror’ does not diminish the scope of 17 acceptable invocation of peremptory challenges, so long as they are the actual reasons for the 18 prosecutor’s actions.” United States v. Power, 881 F.2d at 740 (quoting United States v.
19 Chinchilla, 874 F.2d 695, 699 (9th Cir. 1989)). “Evidence in the record of objective reasons to 20 strike a juror implies that racial bias did not motivate the prosecutor.” Boyd v. Newland, 393 21 F.3d 1008, 1013 (9th Cir. 1987), amended by 467 F.3d 1139, 1148 (9th Cir. 2006).

22 Petitioner bears the burden of demonstrating the existence of unlawful discrimination, 23 Batson, 476 U.S. at 93, as this burden of persuasion “rests with, and never shifts from, the 24 opponent of the strike.” Purkett, 514 U.S. at 768. However, petitioner “is entitled to rely on the 25 fact, as to which there can be no dispute, that peremptory challenges constitute a jury selection 26 practice that permits ‘those to discriminate who are of a mind to discriminate.’” Batson, 476 U.S.
27 at 96 (quoting Avery v. Georgia, 345 U.S. 559, 662 (1953)).

28 “Because ‘it is widely acknowledged that the trial judge is in the best position to evaluate

1 the credibility of the prosecutor’s proffered justifications,’ due deference must be accorded to the 2 trial judge’s determination.” Jamerson v. Runnels, 713 F.3d 1218, 1224 (9th Cir. 2013) (quoting 3 Briggs v. Grounds, 682 F.3d 1165, 1171 (9th Cir. 2012)); see also Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S.
4 322, 339 (2003) (a “state court’s finding of the absence of discriminatory intent is ‘a pure issue of 5 fact’ accorded significant deference”); Sifuentes v. Brazelton, 825 F.3d 506, 515 (9th Cir. 2016) 6 (the “credibility determination relies on the trial court’s ‘evaluation of the prosecutor’s state of 7 mind based on demeanor and credibility,’ and is a ‘pure issue of fact’ that lies ‘peculiarly within a 8 trial judge’s province’” [citation omitted]), cert denied, 137 S. Ct. 486 (2016). “Deference is 9 necessary because a reviewing court, which analyzes only the transcripts from voir dire, is not as 10 well positioned as the trial court is to make credibility determinations.” Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 11 339. “The upshot is that even if ‘[r]easonable minds reviewing the record might disagree about 12 the prosecutor’s credibility, ... on habeas review that does not suffice to supersede the trial 13 court’s credibility determination.’” Davis v. Ayala, 135 S. Ct. 2187, 2201 (2015) (quoting Rice 14 v. Collins, 546 U.S. 333, 341-42 (2006)).

15 The Standard of Review

16 This claim involves two different Batson/Wheeler motions made during trial. Notably, 17 the parties and the court refer to the motions as Wheeler motions and reference the California 18 Supreme Court case almost exclusively during oral argument.<sup>4</sup> In the first motion, made during 19 the exercise of peremptory challenges involving the first or original panel of prospective jurors, 20 defense counsel approached the bench, indicating he wished to make a Wheeler motion after the 21 prosecutor had exercised his fifth challenge. Ultimately, that motion involved seven prospective 22 jurors of African-American, Hispanic or mixed race. The second or “renewed” motion involved 23 the second panel of prospective jurors and defense counsel again asked to approach, this time 24 after the prosecutor had exercised his fifth challenge as to the second panel (his 17th overall 25 challenge) of an African-American juror.

27 <sup>4</sup> An objection at trial under People v. Wheeler, 22 Cal.3d 258 (1978), is the equivalent of an 28 objection under Batson and is sufficient to preserve the federal constitutional claim. Boyd v.
Newland, 467 F.3d 1139, 1142, n.2 (9th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 550 U.S. 933 (2007).

1           With regard to the first motion, the trial court found a prima facie case as to the first step 2 required of Wheeler and asked the prosecutor to state his reasons for exercising challenges 3 against the prospective jurors identified by defense counsel. The prosecutor did so, completing 4 the required second step. After argument by the parties, the trial court ultimately denied the 5 motion following its review of the voir dire transcript, juror questionnaires, and relevant legal 6 authority; thus, it completed the third step of the required inquiry.

7           The second motion concerned the excusal of a single prospective juror; it was styled as a 8 “renewed” Wheeler motion. Defense counsel argued that, with the juror’s excusal, there existed a 9 pattern of improper racial bias. The trial court denied the motion, finding no pattern. Hence, as 10 to this second motion, the inquiry stopped at step one because the court found Petitioner has 11 failed to make a prima facie case of discriminatory motive.

12           Typically, a deferential standard of review would be applied to the trial court’s ruling 13 following the three-step analysis to be considered in a Batson/Wheeler challenge. To wit, 14 reviewing the California Supreme Court’s holding for a finding contrary to, or involving any 15 unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law; or where the decision was based on 16 an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the state court 17 proceeding. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1) & (2). However, given the decision rendered by the United 18 States Supreme Court in Johnson v. California, 545 U.S. 162 (2005), such deference cannot be 19 accorded here.

20           Briefly, California’s Wheeler decision called for the defendant to “show a strong 21 likelihood” of impermissible bias at the first step of the relevant analysis. Batson called for 22 raising a mere inference of that bias. As a result of this discrepancy, in 2000 the Ninth Circuit 23 Court of Appeals held that because California courts employed the Wheeler procedure rather than 24 that called for in Batson, the courts had not applied clearly established federal law and a federal 25 habeas court need not defer to the California court’s findings. See Wade v. Terhune, 202 F.3d 26 1190, 1197 (9th Cir. 2000). In response thereto, the California Supreme Court then held that 27 “‘strong likelihood’ and ‘reasonable inference’ state[d] the same standard” and thus its “strong 28 likelihood” language was consistent with Batson. See People v. Johnson, 30 Cal.4th 1302, 1313

2 Despite so holding, the United States Supreme Court disagreed with the court. It held 3 California’s requirement that the party alleging improper bias must show (at the first step) that it 4 was “more likely than not” that the other party’s peremptory challenges, if unexplained, were 5 based on impermissible group bias was an inappropriate measure. Johnson v. California, 545 U.S 6 at 168. More specifically, the high court stated: “The facts of this case well illustrate that 7 California’s ‘more likely than not’ standard is at odds with the prima facie inquiry mandated by 8 Batson.” Johnson, at 173.

9 Here, because the trial court’s two rulings occurred in 1989, and the California Supreme 10 Court issued its decision in this case in 1996, that determination is at odds with clearly established 11 federal law. Hence, de novo review appears to be the proper standard for this court’s review, at 12 least as to the second motion.

13 The court acknowledges that subsequent authority has emphasized that Johnson v.
14 California concerned the inquiry to be made at step one, versus step three, and therefore, where 15 the court conducts the entire three-step Batson analysis, de novo review is not required. See 16 Aleman v. Uribe, 723 F.3d 976, 981, n.4 (9th Cir. 2013). Thus, reasoning that such a finding can 17 be accorded AEDPA deference because the language found to be improper at step one was 18 obviously not an issue where the trial court found an appearance of impropriety at step one and 19 proceeded to require the challenged party to state its reasons at step two, and then made the 20 required determination at step three. Id. at 981, n.4 (addressing Aleman’s assertion de novo 21 review applies: “This case concerns the California Court of Appeal’s application of Batson’s 22 third step. Whether Aleman established a prima facie case of discrimination is not an issue. And 23 even if the Court of Appeal considered the erroneous prima facie standard in its review of 24 Aleman’s claim, any error would be harmless because application of the heightened ‘strong 25 likelihood’ standard at step one would only strengthen Aleman’s claim of purposeful 26 discrimination at step three”).

27 Incomparably however, Petitioner’s claim involves two separate Batson challenges rather 28 than one. A three-step analysis occurred after the first motion was considered, and a finding that

1 Petitioner did not meet his burden at step one occurred following the second or “renewed” 2 motion. Arguably then, the findings regarding the first motion could still be afforded deference, 3 whereas the findings of the second motion are subject to de novo review. But by virtue of the 4 matters to be considered at step one of the second or “renewed” motion – where Petitioner 5 correctly argues the consideration of all relevant circumstances involves the information at issue 6 in the first motion – the court has determined de novo review of both motions is appropriate.
7 Otherwise, in considering all relevant circumstances at issue in the renewed motion, where those 8 circumstances involve the circumstances of the earlier motion, absent a de novo review 9 concerning the circumstances involved in the first motion, review of the second would not truly 10 be anew.

11 The Exercise of Peremptory Challenges

12 Peremptory challenges as to the first group of prospective jurors occurred on the afternoon 13 of March 20, 1989. (8 RT 1408.) Specifically, in order, the People excused the following 14 prospective jurors: Maximina Troyer, Thomas Harris, Eleanor Zeboskey, Sheila Canepa, Charso 15 Elliott, Tim Lacy, Rachel Klose, Clair Allen, Albert Davidson, Sylvia Gonzalez, James Del 16 Rosario and Leon Soto. (8 RT 1408-18; 4 CT 983.) The defendant jointly exercised peremptory 17 challenges as to the following group of prospective jurors: Tracy Jackson, Margaret Tutt, Bradley 18 Payne, Sandra Roth, Herman Floyd, Regina Aguilera, Kenneth Boyce, Richard Carpenter, Nancy 19 Yost, Henry Eisenbeisz, Joyce Wondra, Gene Carroll, Dale Norling, Raymond Schriefer, Linda 20 Elliott and Marc Beauchamp. (8 RT 1409-17; 4 CT 983.) At the conclusion of the first exercise 21 of peremptory challenges by all parties to the original group of prospective jurors, eleven 22 prospective jurors remained and were directed to telephone the court at a later time to learn the 23 date upon which they would be required to return for further jury selection proceedings. (8 RT 24 1418-21; 4 CT 983.)

25 The second series of peremptory challenges were exercised on the afternoon of April 4, 26 1989. (11 RT 2190; 5 CT 1066.) The defendants began and exercised their four remaining joint 27 challenges as to prospective jurors Andrew Townsend, Susan Parsons, Scott Gear and Leo 28 Esparza. (11 RT 2193-95; 5 CT 1066.) The People excused three prospective jurors – Erin

1 Franchino, Elizabeth Garland and Laura Easton – before passing on the panel as then comprised 2 after the joint challenge to Esparza. (11 RT 2194-96; 5 CT 1066<sup>5</sup>.) Petitioner then excused Stella 3 Carr, the prosecution excused Richard Ringo, and codefendant Ross excused Charles Gailey; then 4 with Gailey’s excusal, Katrina George entered the box. (11 RT 2197.) The People then excused 5 George. (11 RT 2197.) Thereafter, Petitioner and codefendant Ross each exercised three 6 separate and alternating peremptory challenges as follows: David Shaw, Pamela Steiner, Jeanne 7 Theobald, Russell Tweedy, James Estes and Glenda Barry. During this same period, the 8 prosecutor exercised five peremptory challenges – Bonnie Daniels, Linda Ruys, Jeanette 9 Harrison, Judy Candlish and Christine Greene – before passing on the panel as comprised. (11 10 RT 2197-200.) When Petitioner next excused prospective juror Jennifer Karsikas, the People 11 excused Judith McLaughlin. (11 RT 2200.) Codefendant Ross then passed, the People excused 12 Suzanne Bragdon, and Petitioner elected to pass. (11 RT 2200-01.) Next, the People excused 13 Agnes Packard and codefendant Ross excused Ruth Bartlett; after the People excused Scott 14 Kollman, Petitioner excused Anthony Fanfan. (11 RT 2201-03.)

15 Finally, on April 6, 1989, the third and final series of peremptory challenges were 16 exercised. (4 CT 1073.) During the morning proceedings, the prosecutor thanked and excused 17 the following prospective jurors: Don Morehouse, Harold Kaden, Virginia Breault, Irene 18 Stebbins, Raymond Hummer, Constance Cummings and Jamie Silva. (12 RT 2416-17.) Both 19 Petitioner and codefendant Ross passed during the morning session, neither excusing any 20 prospective juror as the panels were then comprised. (12 RT 2416-17.) That afternoon, when 21 peremptory challenges resumed, codefendant Ross initially passed and the People excused Jesus 22 Hernandez; when Petitioner passed thereafter, the prosecutor did as well. (12 RT 2485.)
23 Codefendant Ross then excused Heather Salzman, the prosecutor passed, and Petitioner excused

25 <sup>5</sup> The Clerk’s Transcript on Appeal, Volume 5, contains a clerical error where the minute order 26 for the proceedings of April 4, 1989, mistakenly reads that “Constance Cummings” was excused 27 by the People after Erin Franchino and before Laura Eaton. However, while the corresponding 28 Reporter’s Transcript on Appeal clearly indicates that Constance Cummings entered the box before the People exercised its next challenge, the challenge itself was directed to Elizabeth Garland. (Cf. 5 CT 1066 to 11 RT 2194-95.)

1 Dunn. (12 RT 2486; 5 CT 1073<sup>6</sup>.) Following further voir dire proceedings, when peremptory 2 challenges were again exercised, the prosecution passed on its next challenge and codefendant 3 Ross excused Donna Garcia. (12 RT 2532.) There followed three consecutive passes by all 4 parties in succession, leaving fifteen (15) persons to be empaneled to try the case. The parties
5 were to return the following Monday to select three alternate jurors. (12 RT 2532-34; 5 CT 6 1073.)

7 The First Defense Motion & The Reasons Proffered

8 On the afternoon of Monday, March 20, 1989, the first peremptory challenges were to be 9 exercised as to the 39 venirepersons that remained from the first jury panel called. (8 RT 1406.)
10 After explaining the process to the prospective jurors and confirming the number of joint and 11 separate peremptory challenges with defense counsel, with the first 12 of those 39 venirepersons 12 seated in the box, the trial court began by asking the People to exercise the first peremptory 13 challenge. (8 RT 1408.)

14 The prosecutor excused Troyer first. (8 RT 1408-09.) After the defense's first joint 15 challenge, the court began to call forward random individuals to replace those who had been 16 excused. (8 RT 1409.) The prosecutor's second challenge excused Harris. (8 RT 1410.) Next, 17 the prosecutor excused prospective juror Zeboskey as his third selection, and Canepa as his 18 fourth. (8 RT 1411.) Elliott was his fifth peremptory challenge. (8 RT 1412.) At that point, 19 defense counsel asked to approach the bench and an unreported discussion occurred. (8 RT 20 1412.)

21 After excusing prospective juror Lacy as his sixth peremptory, the prosecutor thereafter 22 passed on the panel as it was then comprised. (8 RT 1413.) When the defense exercised its next 23 joint challenge as to prospective juror Boyce, the prosecutor then chose to excuse Klose as his 24 seventh peremptory challenge. (8 RT 1413-14.) Thereafter, after exercising his eighth

25 <sup>6</sup> Two clerical errors appear in Volume 5 of the Clerk's Transcript on Appeal, concerning the 26 minute order dated April 6, 1989. First, prospective juror Barbara Bass is identified as both 27 having been excused by Petitioner and having been selected to serve. (See 5 CT 1073.) The 28 latter is the accurate entry; Barbara Bass served on the jury. Second, Donna Garcia was excused by codefendant Ross on this date; however, her name is not recorded in the minutes as one of the two challenges exercised by Ross. (Cf. 5 CT 1073 to 12 RT 2531-32.)

1 peremptory challenge as to prospective juror Allen, the prosecutor passed as to the panel on four 2 more occasions as the defense continued to exercise its joint challenges. (8 RT 1414-16.)

3 After the defense exercised its joint peremptory as to prospective juror Norling, the 4 prosecutor excused prospective juror Davidson. (8 RT 1416.) The prosecutor's tenth, eleventh 5 and twelfth peremptory challenges were exercised as to Gonzalez, Del Rosario and Soto, 6 respectively. (8 RT 1416-17.) Eleven persons remained of the original 39 – a total of 28 7 challenges having been exercised by the parties. (8 RT 1418.) Jury selection was to continue the 8 following day with a second panel consisting of 70 venirepersons. (8 RT 1422-27.) Before 9 concluding for the day, defense counsel reminded the trial court it had "a motion." (8 RT 1427.)
10 Counsel for co-defendant Ross joined. (8 RT 1427.)

11 More specifically, counsel for Petitioner indicated the motion was made during the 12 peremptory challenge proceedings when counsel asked to approach and a discussion occurred off 13 the record, following the prosecutor's challenge as to Elliott, having previously excused Harris.
14 (8 RT 1427.) He noted the prosecutor had thus excused a black female and black male, the "only 15 two blacks on the entire panel, at least the panel that got through challenges for cause." (8 RT 16 1427-28.) Defense counsel further noted the prosecutor went on to exclude venirepersons of 17 Puerto Rican, Filipino, American Indian and "Spanish" descent. (8 RT 1428.) Petitioner 18 identified himself as "Spanish and Islander," "native." (8 RT 1428.) The prosecutor pointed out 19 that he believed another venireperson, a young woman excused by the defense, was black. (8 RT 20 1429.) After consulting the prospective juror's questionnaire, it was agreed prospective juror 21 Jackson was of mixed ancestry: "Japanese/black." (8 RT 1429-30.)

22 Asked to identify the individuals defense counsel believed had been excused by the 23 improper exercise of peremptory challenges by the prosecution, Mr. Gable identified: Troyer, 24 Harris, Elliott, Klose, Gonzalez, Del Rosario and Soto. (8 RT 1430-31.) In response to an 25 inquiry from the trial court, defense counsel believed one minority remained on the panel 26 following the exercise of peremptory challenges: Garcia. (8 RT 1431.)

27 The trial court recalled the prosecution had exercised 12 peremptory challenges, 7 of 28 which included either "Hispanic or black" persons. (8 RT 1432.) Noting "the appearance of the 1 use of the peremptory challenges to exclude one or both of those groups,” the trial court asked the 2 prosecutor to state his reasons for excluding each individual. (8 RT 1432.) The prosecutor 3 replied he did not have the questionnaires with him at that time and that those contained his 4 reasons. (8 RT 1432.) It was agreed the prosecutor would bring the questionnaires to court the 5 following morning and the motion proceedings would continue at that time. (8 RT 1434; see also 6 4 CT 984.)

7 The following morning, Tuesday, March 21st, the prosecutor provided his reasons, as 8 excerpted here:

10 MR. MARLETTE: You mentioned a number of names yesterday. Just to begin 11 with, I'd like to mention that all I had yesterday was my scoring sheet; I did not actually 12 have the questionnaires with me.

13 The first was Miss Klose, and in going back over my notes, I found the reasons 14 why I had rated her the way I did.

15 It seemed to me that a number of factors made me feel she would be sympathetic 16 to the defendants.

17 One was that in the questionnaire, she said that she felt, or she said that she would 18 not feel comfortable as a defendant on the stand.

19 She also said in the questionnaire that she felt a rapist needed therapy, in response 20 to a question about the death penalty for somebody who rapes and who kills.

21 Also in the oral voir dire, she was the one who mentioned that her mother-in-law 22 had just died the previous Sunday and, in fact, was crying in the box while she was being 23 questioned.

24 All those things taken together made me feel that she would be too sympathetic, 25 and particularly on the question of the death penalty, that I could not count on her as a 26 juror.

27 That, along with, at the time I exercised Miss Klose, there appeared to me to be 28 other jurors who were much higher rated.

I had her rated approximately a three, on a scale of one to five, ones that I like, fives I need to have gone. And at the time I exercised that challenge, there were a number of ones and twos that were just coming up.

Secondly with Miss Troyer, and with Miss Troyer, it was not a matter of comparison with other jurors; I just plain wanted her gone.

She mentioned in voir dire that she had strong feelings against the death penalty, that it had no effect. In fact, she mentioned that she had to speak with her priest after filling out the questionnaire about the death penalty situation.

Further, and primarily, she - - her son had been to trial for a - - apparently a murder charge and was acquitted.

I felt that I could not count on her as, to be fair and impartial, particularly on the death penalty question, but also on the guilt question, given the experience with her son.

The other was Mr. Thomas Harris. Again, it was not a matter of comparison with Mr. Harris. I just rated him immediately that I needed him gone.

1 In going through - - first of all, it appeared he had no family ties, all his time was 2 taken with work or else relaxing with friends.

3 It particularly struck me that he had lost contact with brothers and sisters who 4 lived in the area for just kind of out of not trying, not for any reason or any rift.

5 Further, on the death penalty questions, Mr. Harris continually looked for excuses 6 to avoid the death penalty, talking about drugs and rehabilitation, talking about that he 7 favored a long appeal period, so that other evidence could come forward.

8 In response to question 55 on the questionnaire, he said, "Before a defendant is 9 brought to trial, anything could be brought forward could either invalidate or somewhat 10 prove reasonable cause for doubting guilt," and number 56, he said, "Defendant should 11 project all they know of their innocence to their attorneys 'cause they're the main hope of 12 release."

13 On number 58, about whether a defendant should take the stand he said, "They 14 might accidentally incriminate themselves," and number 59, he felt that "The burden on 15 the prosecution should be greater for greater crimes."

16 He said that, further, "There can be no doubt or question left to prove a crime was 17 in fact committed and the party involved did in fact commit it."

18 On page[s] 17 and 18 of the questionnaire, in the death-penalty sections, he had 19 said that his general feelings about the death penalty were that if a person is totally and 20 irrevers[i]bly in any type of rehabilitation in which to function in society then death is the 21 only outlet besides no parole."

22 Number 97, he said, "The death penalty was one of the few alternatives was to 23 remove them from productive people."

24 And on number 98, he felt the purpose of the death penalty "Would protect society 25 and enable them to feel free from escapees and mistakenly released convicts or not quite 26 rehabilitated individuals."

27 Also No. 1 on five, the question of, "How do you feel about this person getting the 28 death penalty?"

"Any person who kills another," he said, "There's usually certain circumstances in which the murder was on the spur of the moment or unavoidable."

Number 16, he said maybe the crime was done on a diminished capacity, and i[f] so, maybe the person would be able to readjust and get rehabilitated.

It seemed Mr. Harris kept focusing on the possibility of rehabilitation for somebody, which to me, precluded a death-penalty vote from him.

Miss Sylvia Gonzalez, she mentioned on the questionnaire that she would vote for the death penalty for serial killers, mass killers, baby killers, mutilations, and when victims were beheaded.

Question 98, she mentioned "The death penalty might be appropriate for those people who are extremely demented," and it struck me that her mind set as to the appropriateness of the death penalty depended on very brutal - - in fact, she used the word
"brutal" in her questioning by me, in oral voir dire, and I felt that in a case that was less than brutal or bloody that she would not vote for the death penalty.

Miss Charso Elliott - - also at the time that I excused Miss Gonzalez, again, she was about a three on my scale, and we were in a section down towards, from about juror number 30, to juror number 37, who with to my rating scale, much better jurors for me.

In regards to Miss Charso Elliott, she said on the questionnaire that she felt the death penalty actually served no purpose; she felt the death penalty might be appropriate for serial murders and mass murders.

1           There was quite a bit of confusion with Miss Elliott in trying to explain to her the 2 life without possibility of parole, and it appeared to me that her questions, or her responses 3 on the questionnaire had to do with feeling that an L-WOP could be released at sometime, 4 and Mr. Gable took a stab at it and the Court went through [it with] Miss Elliott.

5           Once she finally understood that L-WOP meant no release, it appeared to me that 6 she very much favored that.

7           She also mentioned in her questionnaire, question number 109, that not all people 8 who were sentenced to the death penalty are guilty. And on question 43, she believed that 9 the burden, she would have to be convinced beyond any shade of doubt.

10           It appeared to me that I could not count on Miss Elliott for a death-penalty vote in 11 these circumstances, and, again, Miss Elliott, there were other jurors who I felt would be 12 better for me.

13           With Mr. Delrosario, Mr. Delrosario was not a matter of comparison.

14           I wanted him gone from the responses on the questionnaire, although he did say 15 that he felt he could be fair on the death penalty, depending on how the crime was 16 committed.

17           He also indicated that very clearly, that he felt the death penalty would be 18 appropriate for premeditated murder, but that he would vote for life in prison without 19 possibility of parole on felony murders without premeditation. Of course, that is our case 20 here, is a felony murder.

21           With Mr. Delrosario as well, some for the reasons he gave for the ways that crime 22 problem may be solved was proper education and jobs.

23           It seemed to me that those were social as opposed to personal responsibility, 24 responses.

25           Also, on the questions on the questionnaire about who should get the death 26 penalty, the thing about rapists, murderers and people who kill more than once, he 27 disagreed with all of those questions.

28           I felt that Mr. Delrosario leaned strongly and in fact expressly towards life without possibility of parole for felony murder.

          Mr. Soto was a matter of comparison.

          I felt there were other jurors on the new panel, and also in the jurors that I already selected who were better oriented to the prosecution.

          Mr. Soto seemed to, in his responses to the Court and also on the questionnaire, his attitude was that he would go along with the law.

          He said that he would support the death penalty if the Court decides it's proper.

          On all the questions about who gets the death penalty, he would in certain, that he disagreed unless a person were proven guilty. At one point in the questionnaire, he mentioned, I forget the exact context, but he said that the defendant was the victim of the death penalty.

          Mr. Soto also had a, apparently a situation where he was accused of kissing a 15 year-old girl in the Air Force and was found innocent.

          Given the responses in the questionnaire where Mr. Soto was saying that the records were available, if necessary, and he underlined that he was accused of kissing only, this girl; it appeared to me that he had been through at least quasi-criminal proceeding and had been found innocent, and for that reason, would tend to identify with the defense, but primarily for the reason that it appeared to me Mr. Soto avoided personal responsibility, and I felt that he could not personally bring himself to vote for the death penalty in this case. (8 RT 1436-1443; see also 4 CT 985.)

1 In response, defense counsel asked the trial court to allow the submission of points and authorities 2 analyzing the proffered reasons;<sup>7</sup> it was understood a resolution of the motion would not then 3 occur. (8 RT 1443-44; see also 4 CT 985.)

4 Oral Argument on the First Motion

5 On March 30, 1989, the trial court heard argument from the parties. More particularly, the 6 prosecutor Mr. Marlette commented on points raised in the defense's written points and 7 authorities, and defense counsel responded thereto:

9 MR. MARLETTE: Regarding Miss Klose - - Counsel stated that my reason that 10 she seemed to identify with the defense, because of her statement she would feel 11 uncomfortable on the stand, is not valid.

12 It's doubtful anyone would feel comfortable. It was important to me because she 13 chose to identify her feelings with the defendant in that case.

14 That, together with the other matters, that made me feel she might be sympathetic, 15 including the fact that her mother-in-law had just died and her emotional reaction on the 16 stand made me feel that she was not a juror that I wanted, and had nothing at all to do with 17 her race.

18 Regarding Miss Troyer, Counsel stated that I wanted her excused because of her 19 strong feelings against the death penalty and the fact her son had been accused of murder, 20 the charges that were later dropped.

21 I don't believe they were dropped. I believe he had actually be[en] acquitted after 22 a trial.

23 I think clearly, she would tend to identify more with the defense having lived 24 through an experience with somebody very close to her, and I'm sure all through that 25 experience, hoping with all her might that in fact her son would be acquitted.

26 Regarding Mr. Harris, the defense brings up, with regard to Mr. Harris, and with 27 regard to other jurors, as well, that I did not voir dire on a subject that I based my 28 justification on, and I will submit to the Court that it is not necessary that I voir dire and try to rehabilitate somebody who has given an answer that makes me uncomfortable with them in the questionnaire.

We've all seen that, particularly in the Hovey<sup>8</sup> area, that jurors are anxious to give an acceptable answer, generally to the Court, but even in many instances to the attorney who's asking the question, and the fact that I did not further voir dire with Mr.
Harris, I don't think that is a requirement, I don't think it is entitled to any weight.

His answers on the questionnaire consistently looked for excuse - - excuse is really kind of a perjorative word, looked for alternatives to the imposition of the death penalty, he would bring up on his own, well, if there were drugs involved, or if the guy was amenable to rehabilitation, then I wouldn't believe in the death penalty.

These were things that he inserted on his own, which indicated to me a tendency to look for those kind of things.

It made me feel that he would most likely be a life without parole vote.

Again, with Miss Gonzalez, Counsel seemed to feel that the fact that I had not bothered to ask her questions on the matter which I deemed important, was somehow dispositive, and I would simply indicate to the Court that it is not even probative in that area.

Mr. Delrosario, he had very clearly stated that he would lean towards life imprisonment in the case of an unpremeditated murder.

In fact, we differentiated with him, planned murder as opposed to felony murder, and he indicated that he would, while he might tend to vote for the death penalty in a premeditated murder, that he would tend to vote for the other penalty in a felony murder without premeditation, which I expect will be the case here.

He also in his answers - - Counsel took exception to my putting weight on the fact that Mr. Delrosario felt the crime problem might be solved with better education and jobs, and I believe this was raised in response to other jurors as well, and I put quite a bit of weight on those questions on page nine, "What do you think of the crime causes and what do you think of the crime solutions," and if somebody tells me on that questionnaire that they think the causes of crime are basically social in nature, that there's lack of opportunity, that it's a poor family background, that it's peer pressure, and that the solutions are better opportunities for people, more equal distribution of wealth, for instance, if they give reasons that are based in social responsibility for crime, that is almost a litmus test, for me.

I believe that anyone who is going to be asked to impose the death penalty or even seriously consider the death penalty, must be at least amenable to the idea that a person is personally responsible for his own actions particular in this case, where I believe that much of the mitigation evidence in the penalty phase will have to do with Mr. Alvarez's upbringing, as opposed to, on the other hand, any good acts that he has done.

Also, with Mr. Delrosario, on all the, what I call the who-gets questions, "Do you think somebody who kills anybody should get the death penalty," "If they kill them twice, if they rape and mutilate."

All his answers there were strongly that he strongly disagreed with the proposition, except regarding drug dealers, I believe his answer was, that he agreed somewhat.

Regarding Mr. Soto he, again, I had stated that I felt he avoided personal responsibility, could not bring himself to vote for the death penalty, on all the what I've called the who-gets questions.

Mr. Soto strongly disagreed, he had different causes on each.

He would say, "Well, not without a hearing, found guilty without doubts, on the rape only," and although, as Counsel points out, those may be correct answers, I think the justifications that a juror summons up from himself in answering those questions, gives me an idea of where that juror's tendencies lie, and in those questions about imposing the death penalty, when a juror consistently summons up from himself reasons why the death penalty may not be appropriate, I put great weight on that.

Again, with Mr. Soto, Counsel said that - - I inquired into an incident where he was accused of kissing a 15 year-old girl.

On voir dire, again, I thought that his answers on the questionnaire were extremely telling, and I didn't have any desire to get less candid responses, simply so that he might fit in.

On the questionnaire, he said that he was - - in fact I should read it - - the question about whether he'd ever been accused of a crime, or, were you every involved in any way with military law enforcement, court martials or investigation, and he checked yes, and gave, he said, "Investigation only of kissing, parenthesis, only, close parenthesis, a 15 year-old girl, found innocent and officially so stated by the staff judge advocate, parenthesis, 1984, close parenthesis, records available."

This was obviously a very important matter with Mr. Soto, and in much the same way as the woman whose son had been tried and acquitted for murder, I think Mr. Soto had been through a quasi criminal investigation and acquittal, and I think that with all his might, he was hoping through all of that, that he would be acquitted.

Those kinds of incidents cannot be ignored, and I don't think my failure to inquire further of it orally is probative.

[DEFENSE COUNSEL]: As the Court knows, I did not argue the fact that it was inappropriate for Mr. Marlette to make any observations he did, and I did that with full recognition of the holding in Johnson, which expressly overruled the holding in People versus Trevino, to the extent that it said that the court in ruling on a Wheeler motion, could not take into consideration the subjective reasons advanced by the prosecutor for dismissing the jurors, so I have not undertaken to quarrel with the subjective reasons, other than to the extent that those reasons do not find support in the transcript, in fact, to the extent that in some cases, I find that the contrary is found in the transcript.

Now, as far as how the Court is supposed to review the reasons advanced by the prosecutor for his peremptory challenges, think that the language as I quoted, from People versus Snow, written by Chief Justice Lucas, at 44 Cal. 3d 222, is extremely pertinent and appropriate, even in light of the Johnson case, and that says that once a prima face case has been shown and an explanation tendered, the trial Court must make a sincere and reasoned attempt to evaluate the explanation, in light of the circumstances of the case as then known, his knowledge of trial techniques and his observations of the matter in which the Counsel asserting the peremptory challenges has examined members of the venire and has exercised challenges for cause or peremptorily, and that is why I call to the Court's attention the fact that in many of these situations, Mr. Marlette did not avail himself of the ability to ask questions which would clarify somewhat ambiguous or amorphous answers supplied on the questionnaire.

To my way of thinking of it, that's the time when you should ask these questions, if you have any doubts as to what these folks were talking about, what they meant, what their true feelings are.

Instead what we end up with are reasons which are premised on speculation, based upon a failure to inquire.

Now, there may be strategic purposes for not doing that, and they may very well be such that under normal circumstances, it might be appropriate; however, if - - what it amounts to a wholesale exclusion of minorities by the Prosecutor by virtue of the use of his peremptory challenges.

I think that there's a lot more scrutiny has to be accorded those kinds of explanations, where there has not been any attempt made to voir dire in those areas, and that's why I call the Court's attention to those cases where there was no general voir dire or no death penalty voir dire conducted in the areas that has ultimately led to the Prosecutor exercising peremptory challenges, and indeed, with regard to Miss Troyer, I

1 think that the record, complete record will disclose that apparently, the charges were 2 dropped after an investigation into the death of an individual, and it was ruled self-defense.

3 That was my understanding, after reading the transcript, where someone did in fact 4 voir dire on that, and also, with regard to whether or not a specific answer is correct or, 5 quote, correct, end quote, or not, and what litmus test that provides for counsel, I would 6 just point out that I think that most minority people who have attempted to get jobs and 7 been unable to or who live in an area where jobs are not quite as plentiful as they are in other segments of society, that you're gonna get a response like you got from Mr.
8 Delrosario, that maybe jobs and better education would go a long ways towards clearing 9 up the crime problem, and I don't see how in the world that can furnish a basis for an 10 excusal for even peremptorily when you're dealing with minorities.

11 I mean, that is the type of thing that led to the Wheeler decision to begin with, and 12 in closing, I just want to make one further point, and that is that even if the Court finds 13 that one of these six were excused inappropriately, then the motion has to be granted, 14 because the defendant is entitled to a cross section of - - representative cross section of the 15 community, based upon a random drawing of the entire venire, and that is true, even if 16 there's one.

18 THE COURT: Yes.

19 MR. MARLETTE: I've been paying attention to those page nine questions about 20 crime causes and solutions, and they do not break down on a racial basis by any means.

21 I would question what I might - - whether all people who feel that crime causes are 22 social, would be a cognizable class, at any rate, and I think it's - - I won't say offensive, 23 but entirely incorrect to say that that is, to equate that in any way with a racial 24 characteristic.

25 As I go through these questionnaires, I find that people with high levels of 26 education, whether black or white or whatever race, perhaps depending on what their job 27 is, will state that they feel crime causes are social.

28 That's all I have.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you, gentlemen.

I'm going to review the transcript of the voir dire of that first panel, at least the individuals excused and perhaps others.

Now, start off - - both sides talking about a fact that six of nine blacks were excused by the prosecution, and then I think - -

MR. MARLETTE: No, sir, Counsel did group blacks and Hispanics together.

THE COURT: That's what I want to clarify.

MR. MARLETTE: I have a list for the Court the breakdowns racially of what we're talking about here.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MARLETTE: Thomas Harris is black, was excused by me.

Charso Elliott was black, was excused by me.

Tracy Jackson was black and Japanese, and was excused by the defense.

The Hispanic jurors included Klose, who said she was Spanish and Indian and was excused by me; Troyer, who said she was American Indian, Mexican and Spanish, who was excused by me; Aguilera, who is Mexican, was excused by the defense; Gonzales, who listed herself as Hispanic was excused by me, and Mr. Soto, who listed himself as Caucasian slash Puerto Rican, was excused by me.

1 And then Asians - - well, again, there was Miss Jackson, who said she was black 2 and Japanese, excused by the defense; Donna Garcia, who listed herself as, she was a 3 Filipino and remains on the panel, and Mr. Delrosario, who is Filipino and was excused 4 by me.

I believe the remaining jurors said they were white. There may have been some 5 who said they were white and then listed a European heritage.

6 THE COURT: Are there other minorities of black and Hispanic background that 7 are still on the panel, besides Garcia?

MR. MARLETTE: No, sir.

[DEFENSE COUNSEL]: Not to my knowledge, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Okay, the prosecution excused Elliott, Troyer, Harris, Gonzales, 9 Delrosario and Soto and [K]lose; is that correct, seven?

MR. MARLETTE: Yes, sir.

11 The Trial Court's Ruling

12 The trial court issued its ruling, after the matter was deemed submitted by the parties, on 13 April 4, 1989. It ruled as follows:

14 Okay, that has just been a tremendous joy. I have spent about five or six hours on 15 that motion, I'm prepared to rule on it at this time.

16 I went back, reviewed the transcript of the voir dire of each of the seven 17 individuals in question. I reviewed their questionnaires, plus I reviewed the 18 questionnaires of several others, of the other - - I reviewed all of the questionnaires briefly 19 of the other individuals that were excused by the prosecution.

20 I've read the points and authorities submitted, I reread the Johnson case. Wheeler 21 and others I've read in the past, and did not reread them, but I'm satisfied that, of several 22 things; number one, that it does create a suspicious situation that those particular 23 individuals were excused, and were excused quite early in the process; however, I have, in 24 reviewing the manner in which the prosecution examined the members of this panel, left 25 me with no real clue one way or another, not though I personally may not have excused 26 certain individuals if I were in the prosecution's position.

27 That's not the criteria that the Court has to use in this type of motion, and 28 particularly in the case of Miss Klose and Miss Gonzales, it didn't appear to be strong reason for dismissing those two individuals; however, after that, and just this morning, I went back and reviewed the transcript of the actual exercises of the challenges, and recreated that process and found that the Wheeler motion was made after the prosecution exercised their fifth peremptory challenge, and - - the prosecution exercised challenges on Troyer first, then Harris, and then Zebosky, who's not one of the alleged group, and then Canepa, which is also not one of the group, and then Elliott, so - - at that point in time, counsel approached the bench and made a Wheeler motion at the side bar.

After that, so at that time, Klose and Gonzales were still on the panel, and the prosecution passed after the next defense challenge, so the prosecution passed while Klose and Gonzalez were still on the panel, then after the next defense challenge, excused Klose,

1 excuse me - - I believe the prosecution then passed three more - - no, the prosecution then 2 excused Klose and then passed four consecutive times, at least four times, may not have 3 been exactly consecutive - - the prosecution passed four or five times with Gonzales on 4 the panel and ultimately excused Gonzales on the tenth peremptory challenge, that in itself 5 does not conclusively prove anything, other than if the prosecution was trying to exclude 6 members of that group, he was at least willing to take the chance that the defense wasn't 7 going to pass so again, it doesn't conclusively prove anything; however, I am satisfied that 8 in reviewing the manner in which the prosecution examined the members of the panel and 9 exercised challenges, that certainly it does not prove that he was trying to exclude a 10 cognizable group, and when the Court made the initial determination that there was, it 11 appeared that this was happening, the prosecution was able to put forth neutral 12 explanations related to each individual and related directly to this case, and in the time 13 that I spent on this motion in reviewing the transcripts and the proceedings and the 14 questionnaires, I'm satisfied that these are neutral explanations and they're not just sham 15 excuses that were contrived to avoid admitting acts of group discrimination, and so I'm 16 denying the motion on that ground.

17 Because of that, I didn't even reach the issue of whether or not all of these 18 individuals are in a cognizable group, Delrosario was Filipino, Soto was Puerto Rican, and 19 the other individuals appear to be black and/or Hispanic, so whether Filipinos and Puerto 20 Ricans should be included, if there's a cognizable group that were Hispanic, Filipinos and 21 Puerto Rican, I'm not sure, but I don't find it necessary to reach that point, so the motion 22 pursuant to the Wheeler case is denied.

23 (11 RT 2178-80; see also 5 CT 1066.)

24 Allegations of an Unreasonable Determination of the Facts

25 Petitioner complains the trial court's finding that a pattern of discrimination did not exist 26 because the prosecutor passed with a minority in the jury box "is based on an erroneous reading 27 of the facts." (ECF No. 330 at 140.) More particularly, he claims the trial court "made several 28 unreasonable factual errors" concerning the pattern of strikes by the prosecutor, and that these mistakes amount to clear and convincing evidence entitling him to relief because the prosecutor did not pass with both Klose and Gonzalez in the jury box as stated by the trial court. (ECF No.
330 at 141-42.)

While not a model of clarity, the trial court's recitation, even while not accurate, does not amount to clear and convincing evidence that it was an unreasonable determination of the facts.
Before the first exercise of peremptory challenges began, a number of venirepersons were seated in the jury box. Included among those first twelve persons seated were prospective jurors Klose, Troyer and Harris. (4 CT 982; 8 RT 1407-08.) The prosecutor's first challenge excused Troyer;

1 Klose and Harris thus remained in the jury box. (8 RT 1409.) Very shortly thereafter, Gonzalez 2 was seated in the jury box as another vacancy occurred following an excusal. (8 RT 1409.) 3 Harris was next excused by the prosecutor. (8 RT 1410.) Klose and Gonzalez remained on the 4 panel through the prosecutor's subsequent two challenges. (8 RT 1410-11 [Zeboskey & 5 Canepa].) With the prosecutor's fifth challenge, he excused prospective juror Elliott who had 6 recently entered the jury box to fill a vacancy (left by Zeboskey's excusal). (8 RT 1412.) At that 7 point, defense counsel asked to approach the bench to make his motion, as the record later 8 reveals. (8 RT 1412.) The prosecutor had not yet passed on the panel but did so following his 9 sixth challenge and before exercising his seventh against Klose. (8 RT 1413.) Thus, on the first 10 occasion when the prosecutor elected to pass on the exercise of a peremptory challenge, both 11 Klose and Gonzalez were in the jury box. (8 RT 1413.)

12 After excusing Klose, Gonzalez remained in the jury box on four more occasions wherein 13 the prosecutor elected to pass on the exercise of a peremptory challenge. (8 RT 1415-16.) The 14 prosecutor passed on a total of five occasions where Gonzalez was seated in the jury box. (8 RT 15 1413-16.) He passed only once while Klose was in the jury box. (8 RT 1413.)

16 It appears the trial court began to recite these events correctly in order (11 RT 2179 ["so 17 the prosecution passed while Klose and Gonzalez were still on the panel"]), then became 18 confused slightly itself:

20 then after the next defense challenge, excused Klose, excuse me - - I believe the 21 prosecution then passed three more, no, the prosecution then excused Klose and then 22 passed four consecutive times, at least four times, may not have been exactly consecutive
- - the prosecution passed four or five times with Gonzalez on the panel and ultimately excused Gonzale[z] on their tenth peremptory challenge ... (11 RT 2179.)

23 While the trial court may have recited the order of the prosecutor's challenges and elections to 24 pass somewhat inaccurately, these slight inaccuracies do not change the ultimate facts: that the 25 prosecutor did elect to pass on the panel when it was comprised of both Klose and Gonzalez, and 26 then again four more times when Gonzalez remained in the jury box. Hence, the slight 27 inaccuracies in the trial court's retelling do not amount to clear and convincing evidence that the 28 trial court made an unreasonable determination of the facts.

1 Analysis & Discussion

2 The Relevant Questionnaire Responses, Voir Dire & De Novo Review<sup>9</sup>

3 James Del Rosario

4 James Del Rosario's questionnaire indicated he identified his race and ethnic origin as 5 "Filipino." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 5 at 88.<sup>10</sup>)

6 Under the heading entitled "Criminal Justice Experience" and in response to the question, 7 "Have you or any member of your family or friend[s] ever been accused of, or arrested for a 8 crime?" Del Rosario replied in the affirmative and when asked to describe the affirmative 9 response, wrote "misdemeanor." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 5 at 95.) In response to an inquiry 10 about his opinion concerning the cause of crime, Del Rosario wrote: "Drugs dependency 11 supporting drug habits." (Id. at 96[.]) Further, asked about what "should or could be done about 12 the crime problem," he responded: "Proper education and putting the prospective criminals to 13 work so they can feel responsible and proud of themselves." (Id. at 96.)

14 In the portion of the questionnaire specifically seeking responses related to a respondent's 15 feelings regarding the death penalty, when asked to provide his "general feelings regarding the 16 death penalty," Del Rosario replied, "For heinous crime, premeditated murder of an individual 17 and peace officers." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 5 at 105.) Asked how his views of the death 18 penalty had changed over the years, Del Rosario simply wrote, "Yes." (Id. at 105.) In response 19 to a question asking what purpose the death penalty serves, he replied, "I think that the individual 20 on death penalty will not have a chance to kill again and ruin other peoples lives." (Id. at 105[.])
21 Asked to provide his impressions of the penalty of life without the possibility of parole, Del 22 Rosario wrote it was "an excellent alternative to death penalty, however there's always a chance 23 the individual can be rehabilitated and release on parole." (Id. at 105.) He indicated the death 24 penalty was not used often enough "for heinous crime, pre-meditated murder killing of a peace

25 <sup>9</sup> The court will address the voir dire material in chronological fashion as it occurred and appears

1 officers death penalty should be impose[d].” (Id. at 106.) Question number 104 asked “In what 2 types of cases/offenses do you feel the death penalty should be imposed;” Del Rosario responded, 3 “For heinous crime, pre-meditated murder. Killing of peace officers.” (Id. at 106.)

4 In response to the statement, “Any person who kills another should get the death penalty,” 5 Del Rosario “strongly disagree[d]” and explained: “Circumstances and reasons for killing another 6 human being, sanity should be considered.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 5 at 106.) In response to 7 the statement, “Anyone who rapes and mutilates should get the death penalty,” he again strongly 8 disagreed with the statement, and explained as follows: “Again the sanity and condition of the 9 criminal when the offense occurred.” (Id. at 106[.]) Another statement posited: “Anyone who 10 kills more than once should automatically get the death penalty.” Del Rosario strongly disagreed, 11 explaining, “Again evidence and sanity of an individual should be proven beyond a reasonable 12 doubt.” (Id. at 107[.])

13 During voir dire, Del Rosario responded to the court’s general inquiry about whether he 14 had any strong feeling concerning the death penalty by stating, “It depends, your Honor. Worry 15 about how the crime is committed.” (4 RT 683.)

16 Defense counsel asked Del Rosario a series of questions concerning his responses in the 17 questionnaire. (4 RT 684-87.) He was asked to identify what types of crimes he would consider 18 to be heinous, as he referenced on the questionnaire; Del Rosario replied, “Probably a person that 19 didn’t have any regards for life and things and just wanted to just go around and kill other people 20 without regards for their being.” (4 RT 684.) Asked whether a premeditated killing would 21 warrant the death penalty, Del Rosario responded: “Well, when I say there for premeditated 22 murder, this is a planned murder, that the person knows the other person and planned this. That 23 would be the criminal case.” (4 RT 684-85.) Asked how he felt about a murder that occurred 24 during the commission of another crime, Del Rosario stated as follows: “I would way [sic: weigh] 25 the situation, I would say perhaps life imprisonment, possibility without parole. Depending on 26 the situation.” (4 RT 685.) Asked what he meant by stating on the questionnaire that life without 27 the possibility of parole was “an excellent alternative to the death penalty, however, there’s 28 always the chance that the individual could be rehabilitated and released on parole,” Del Rosario

1 clarified:

2 Well, when they say life without parole, and something else always come up about 3 the situation. And there's always a chance that the accused could be - - The defense could 4 get something that the accused could be released because of the evidence that was brought out - - A little later in the day.

5 (4 RT 685.) Asked whether he had any doubts that imposition of a sentence of life without the 6 possibility of parole meant the individual would never be released from prison, Del Rosario 7 replied, "The - - It shouldn't be any doubt. If that's what the defense determine the jury, you 8 know, without the possibility of parole - - That determine, there shouldn't be any doubt." (4 RT 9 686.) When he was asked whether he had a strong preference for either penalty over the other,

10 Del Rosario stated:

12 If it's beyond a reasonable doubt and still, it got away on the evidence and the 13 outcome of the trial - - Because this is a serious matter, and you just don't - - You know - 14 - Make any decision based on what's before you; therefore, it - - I guess it's a serious 15 matter, and then people should judge right away of whether this is going to be death or life in prison without the possibility of parole.

16 (4 RT 687.)

17 Del Rosario was also questioned on the subject by the prosecutor. (4 RT 687-94.) Asked 18 about whether he had any feelings about his ability to impose the death penalty where 19 premeditation was not involved, Del Rosario replied as follows:

20 Well, like I've stated about the planning and things like that, I just indicated that it 21 is - - Still a serious matter here, and I would not - - Well, like I say, if it was intentional 22 and things like that, I would lean towards, you know, the - - If it's intentional and premeditated and planned and everything like that, I would lean toward the death penalty as I've, you've know, indicated by the questionnaire.

23 Whereas if the evidence were there and there was a chance it wasn't premeditated 24 and things, I think the alternative is the life imprisonment without the possibility of parole.

25 (4 RT 688.)

26 Later, when advised the law provides for the punishment of death or life without the 27 possibility of parole for a crime that did not involve premeditation and instead involved the felony 28 murder rule, Del Rosario indicated he "would still lean towards the life imprisonment." (4 RT

1 689.) He further stated under such a circumstance, he “would not vote for the death penalty, at 2 this time.” (4 RT 690.) Next, asked by the prosecutor whether premeditation and planning were 3 requirements before he could impose the death penalty, Del Rosario replied no. Seeking to 4 clarify Del Rosario’s position, the prosecutor stated, “So we’re just talking about leaning a little 5 bit this way, but something could lean you on back - -”and Del Rosario responded to that 6 statement as follows:

8 Well, you know, probably in any trial, you could say that, well, he did murder this 9 person, but, then again, depending on his capacity - - Although he meant to go ahead and 10 murder this person, his mental capacity is not really to murder. So there could be a cloud 11 in there and be confusing for the jury - - To really depict the person, see whether he’s 12 really mentally unstable. You say he did in his mind that he wanted to - - There again, it’s 13 hard to determine.

14 (4 RT 690.) Asked about his questionnaire response about changed feelings over the past few 15 years where the death penalty is concerned, Del Rosario explained as follows:

16 Changed in a way where, you know - - In a way like where I said, the ability - - 17 The mental stability of a person in committing this crime, whereas before, you know, they 18 just go ahead and do this thing. But in - - If the defense weren’t actually providing a good 19 defense for this people, meaning that they were convicted of this crime and should they go 20 to prison or to the death penalty - - Whereas now, with the defense, that, well, will provide 21 the evidence, like mental instability and things like that - - it - - That has a lot do with it.

22 (4 RT 690-91.) Del Rosario agreed his personal feelings and leanings fall toward the imposition 23 of a sentence involving life imprisonment without the possibility of parole versus imposition of 24 the death penalty. (4 RT 691-92.)

25 This Court’s De Novo Review

26 The prosecutor exercised a peremptory challenge against Del Rosario because of his 27 responses on the questionnaire concerning his views on the death penalty, as well as his 28 preference for the penalty of life without the possibility of parole. Additionally, the prosecutor pointed to Del Rosario’s responses regarding crime and personal responsibility as a basis for excusing him. (8 RT 1441-42.)

First, Petitioner complains the prosecutor “failed to mention Mr. Del Rosario’s answers

1 that showed his favorable views of the death penalty.” (ECF No. 330 at 180.) That may be so, but 2 it certainly does not negate the fact the prosecutor’s concerns about Del Rosario’s views on the 3 death penalty, where he leaned in favor of the death penalty but indicated a preference for a life 4 without possibility of parole sentence in a felony-murder scenario, are supported by the record.
5 Giving more weight to responses provided in the questionnaire is an acceptable practice. Cook v.
6 LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.

7 Petitioner asserts that the prosecutor’s reference to Del Rosario’s feeling about the death 8 penalty, expressly his “answers on the questionnaire to questions 105-109” were “exactly what 9 makes a juror death-qualified - - the ability to listen to the evidence before deciding on a penalty 10 and not automatically voting one way or the other.” (ECF No. 330 at 181.) A review of those 11 responses on the questionnaire, however, reveals a reasonable interpretation to be one 12 unfavorable toward imposition of the death penalty. More particularly, four of the five responses 13 indicated strong disagreement with statements concerning Del Rosario’s personal beliefs 14 regarding the death penalty, and, for example, provided explanations that can be interpreted as 15 seeking to avoid imposing the death penalty by referencing “sanity.” The prosecutor’s concern 16 that Del Rosario’s responses to the death penalty focused questions indicated he would not, or be 17 hesitant to, impose the death penalty in a felony murder case such as this was not “implausible or 18 fantastic.” Purkett v. Elem, 514 U.S. at 768.

19 As the record demonstrates, both the responses to the questionnaire and Del Rosario’s voir 20 dire testimony plainly support the prosecutor’s belief that the prospective juror leaned strongly in 21 favor of life without the possibility of parole where there is a lack of premeditation, or “planning” 22 in Del Rosario’s words, or where the felony murder rule applies. (4 RT 687-92.)

23 As to the third reason – that Del Rosario seemed to oppose personal versus social 24 responsibility when asked about the crime problem – Petitioner argues the reason is “a surrogate 25 for racial stereotypes,” relying on United States v. Bishop, 959 F.2d 820 (9th Cir. 1992) 26 (overruled on other grounds in U.S. v. Nevils, 598 F.3d 1158 (9th Cir. 2010)). (ECF No. 330 at 27 184.) That case, however, is distinguishable.

28 In Bishop, a black eligibility worker from Compton was excused by the prosecutor

1 because he believed the juror was “likely to take the side of those who are having a tough time, 2 aren’t upper middle class, and probably believes that police in Compton in South Central L.A.
3 pick on black people.” Bishop, 959 F.2d at 822. The Ninth Circuit noted that the prosecutor’s 4 explanation relied on a “group-based presupposition[] applicable in all criminal trials to residents 5 of poor, predominantly black neighborhoods” and “both reflected and conveyed deeply ingrained 6 and pernicious stereotypes.” Id. at 825. There, it held, the prosecutor used residence “as a 7 surrogate for racial stereotypes.” Id. at 826.

8 Unlike Bishop, in this case, the prosecutor’s comment that some of Del Rosario’s 9 responses referencing education and employment as solutions to solve the problem of crime 10 seemed to reflect an assignation of social versus personal responsibility do not rely on any group-11 based supposition. No mention was made of race by the prosecutor, nor did he draw on any racial 12 stereotype. Nothing in this record suggests that the prosecutor’s comment about Del Rosario’s 13 responses differentiating social from personal responsibility were tied to race. There is no 14 “discriminatory intent . . . inherent in the prosecutor’s explanation.” Purkett v. Elem, 514 U.S. at 15 767. Also unlike Bishop, the prosecutor did not use residence as a surrogate for racial stereotypes 16 – there was no mention of residence whatsoever. Therefore, the prosecutor’s reason on this basis 17 is race-neutral.

18 Next, Petitioner complains the record does not support the “prosecutor’s inference that 19 Mr. Del Rosario was not ‘at least amendable to the idea that a person is personally responsible for 20 his actions.’” (ECF No. 330 at 185-86.) That argument is not accurate. This record supports the 21 prosecutor’s concern or belief that “some of” Del Rosario’s responses tended to avoid the 22 imposition of personal responsibility.

23 Del Rosario responded with “proper education and putting the prospective criminals to 24 work” “so they can feel responsible and proud of themselves,” in reply to an inquiry asking what 25 could or should be done about crime. (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 5 at 96, italics added.) Use of 26 the word “prospective” reasonably infers Del Rosario’s opinion on the crime problem is forward 27 looking without addressing those who may have already committed crimes. Further, it can be 28 reasonably inferred that Del Rosario’s use of the word “feel” in the context of responsibility – or

1 that responsibility felt by those who commit crimes - lessens the importance of responsibility 2 overall. The response does not read “so they can be responsible . . .”. The prosecutor’s concern 3 with responsibility in this context is plainly directed to, or concerned with, a juror’s ability to 4 assign responsibility to an individual for committing a crime as it relates to consequences for that 5 crime, rather than any notion of personal responsibility Del Rosario expressed for his own 6 actions.

7 Because the prosecutor’s three reasons for excusing Del Rosario are in fact supported by 8 the record, Petitioner’s recitation of “attributes that would make” the prospective juror attractive 9 to the prosecution (ECF No. 330 at 186) is of no moment.

10 Petitioner next complains that the trial court did not specifically discuss any of the 11 prosecutor’s reasons for striking Mr. Del Rosario. (ECF No. 330 at 186-87.) But specifics are 12 not required of the trial court. Rather, “a court must undertake a sensitive inquiry into such 13 circumstantial and direct evidence as may be available.” Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. at 93. A 14 trial court’s succinct ruling can constitute a step three finding that no purposeful racial 15 discrimination was shown. See McDaniels v. Kirkland, 813 F.3d 770, 777-78 (9th Cir. 2015) (en 16 banc) (“The fairest reading of the state court’s ruling is . . . that the court did find that the 17 prosecution’s proffered race-neutral justifications were genuine, even if its finding was terse”).
18 Here, the trial court prefaced its ruling by indicating it had spent “five or six hours” on the 19 motion, reviewing the questionnaires of the prospective jurors in question, as well as the 20 “questionnaires of several others,” the voir dire transcripts, and the legal authorities submitted.
21 (11 RT 2178-80.) A fair reading of the trial court’s ruling reveals it to be a sensitive one.

22 Further, explicit or express findings regarding the prosecutor’s credibility are not required 23 where the record establishes the trial court implicitly accepted the prosecutor’s reasons. Cf. Rice 24 v. Collins, 546 U.S. 333, 341-42 (2006) (“Reasonable minds reviewing the record might disagree 25 about the prosecutor’s credibility, but on habeas review that does not suffice to supersede the trial 26 court’s credibility determination”). This record establishes the trial court tacitly accepted the 27 prosecutor’s reasons. It indicated after its review that it was “satisfied” that the prosecutor was 28 not seeking to exclude a cognizable group and it was further “satisfied that [the proffered reasons]

1 are neutral explanations and they're not just sham excuses that were construed to avoid admitting 2 acts of group discrimination.” (11 RT 2179-80.)

3 Charso Elliott

4 Charso Elliott's questionnaire indicates she identified her race and ethnic origin as “Black 5 American.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 4 at 66.) The following information was gleaned from that 6 same questionnaire and is relevant to Petitioner's argument here.

7 Elliott's responses in the section entitled “Criminal Justice Attitudes” included the 8 following: In response to number 55, asking the respondent to rate his or her feelings to the 9 statement “If the prosecutor goes to the trouble of bringing someone to trial, the person is 10 probably guilty,” Elliott “strongly disagree[d],” and explained, “Innocent, until proven guilty, 11 without a shade of doubt in my mind.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 4 at 75.)

12 In the section entitled “Specific Questionnaire” wherein the respondents are asked a series 13 of questions concerning their feelings about the death penalty, and in response to a question 14 inquiring into her general feelings regarding the death penalty, Elliott wrote, “I believe in the 15 death penalty within reasoning. Reasoning is if it was planned or not an accident, a person intend 16 to hurt some one else.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 4 at 83.) Asked how her views had changed in 17 the last few years, Elliott replied, “See Reasoning.” (Id. at 83.) In response to number 98, “What 18 purpose do you feel the death penalty serves,” she replied, “Well actual none, but I hope it would 19 serve as a detour for others.” (Id. at 83.) Next, Elliott was asked about her “impressions about 20 the penalty of life without the possibility of parole,” and she indicated, “Not too good.” (Id. at 21 83.) Elliott believed the death penalty was not used often enough, but did not explain her 22 response. (Id. at 84.) Number 104 asked the respondent to indicate the “types of cases/offenses” 23 that she felt the death penalty should be imposed in; Elliott indicated the following: “Children 24 murder (abuse cases) and planned murder.” (Id. at 84.) Asked whether any person who kills 25 another person should receive the death penalty, Elliott “disagree[d] somewhat” and wrote “See 26 #96” as an explanation for her response. (Id. at 84.) In response to the question of whether an 27 individual who had killed before and kills again should automatically get the death penalty, Elliott 28 agreed strongly with the statement and wrote, “Like the person who commits serial killings,

1 killings at elementary school and college campus, and like at McDonald's in South Calif." (Id. at 2 85].) Elliott somewhat agreed with the statement "Persons sentenced to the death penalty should 3 be swiftly executed," and indicated, "Not all people sentenced to death is guilty." (Id. at 85.)

4 During voir dire, Elliott was asked whether she had any strong feelings about the death
5 penalty in general and she replied, "No." (4 RT 732.)

6 In response to a question by defense attorney Gable about what Elliott meant by "Not too 7 good," in reply to an inquiry about her impressions of life without the possibility of parole, she 8 said "people are sentenced to life imprisonment, and then after so long they let them out, and I 9 don't understand that. I'm not quite sure as to why they do this." (4 RT 734.) When advised that 10 if the jury were to "vote life without possibility of parole," it meant the individual would be 11 imprisoned for the rest of his life, and asked how she felt about that, Elliott repeated, on more 12 than one occasion, she did not understand the concept. (4 RT 734-36.) Eventually she indicated 13 whether life imprisonment involved parole or no parole, she would not "feel different."

14 Thereafter, she again indicated she did not understand and the court intervened to further explain 15 the concept of a sentence involving life without the possibility of parole. (4 RT 736-37.)

16 Ultimately, in response Gable's question about whether she would consider life without the 17 possibility of parole as an alternative to the death penalty, Elliott replied, "Yes, yes, okay, yes.
18 Then I would." (4 RT 737-38.)

19 The prosecutor made immediate note of Elliott's confusion concerning the possibility of 20 parole and asked her whether she could vote for either penalty; Elliott replied she would be able 21 to do so. (4 RT 738-39.) Elliott was then asked about a response on the questionnaire wherein 22 she indicated a belief that a person was "innocent until proven guilty without a shade of doubt."
23 (4 RT 739-40.) Advised the burden is "not beyond all possible doubt, and it's not beyond all 24 shade of doubt," and that the judge will instruct the jury regarding the correct legal standard, 25 Elliott indicated she would be able to follow the judge's instruction. (4 RT 740.) Later, Elliott 26 replied in the affirmative when she was asked if she had the ability to decide based only on the 27 evidence presented despite indicating on the questionnaire that "not all people sentenced to death 28 are guilty." (4 RT 743.)

1                                    This Court's De Novo Review

2                    The prosecutor's reasons for exercising a peremptory challenge against Elliott include 3 responses on her questionnaire indicating she believed the death penalty served no purpose, and 4 that the penalty might be appropriate for serial murderers and mass murderers. Additionally, the 5 prosecutor noted "quite a bit of confusion" concerning Elliott's understanding of the life without 6 the possibility of parole penalty, and that once Elliott's grasped the meaning she favored that 7 sentence over the death penalty. Further, after pointing to two specific responses in Elliott's 8 questionnaire, the prosecutor believed he "could not count on Miss Elliott for a death-penalty 9 vote" and that there were other, better prospective jurors from his perspective. (8 RT 1441.)

10                    A review of the record finds more than ample support for the prosecutor's proffered race-11 neutral reasons for exercising a peremptory challenge against Elliott.

12                    The prosecutor's reliance upon Elliott having indicated on her questionnaire that the death 13 penalty serves no purpose is well taken. Elliott replied to the inquiry about what purpose she felt 14 the death penalty served with, "Well actual[ly] none, but I hope it would serve as a detour for 15 others." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 4 at 83.) It is an acceptable practice to give more weight to 16 responses in the questionnaire. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.

17                    In response to the inquiry asking for the types of cases to which the death penalty might 18 apply, Elliott wrote "Children murder (abuse cases) & planned murder." In response to a 19 statement that an individual who kills more than once should be automatically sentenced to the 20 death penalty, Elliott indicated she strongly agreed with the statement and analogized it to persons 21 who commit "serial killings, killings at elementary school and college campus, and like at 22 McDonald's in South Calif." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 4 at 84-85.) None of Elliott's responses 23 addressing situations wherein she may find a sentence of death to be appropriate were similarly 24 situated to the case against Petitioner. He was not accused of killing a child during an abusive 25 act, or of planning the murder, nor did it relate to a serial, mass or execution-style murder.
26 Petitioner complains the prosecutor did not ask Elliott "any questions about the purpose of the 27 death penalty" nor did he ask her about her feelings that the penalty as appropriate in serial or 28 mass murders. (ECF No. 330 at 173.) Both statements are accurate but do not negate the fact of 1 Elliott’s written questionnaire responses and support of the prosecutor’s proffered reasoning.

2 Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820 (crediting prosecutor giving more weight to initial 3 questionnaire answers than voir dire answers when exercising challenges). Notably too, the court 4 notes that Petitioner’s argument lacks any reference to legal authority. U.S. v. Karl, 264 5 Fed.Appx. 550, 553 (9th Cir. 2008) (“Failure to cite valid legal authority waives claim”); Heft v.
6 Moore, 351 F.3d 278, 285 (7th Cir. 2003) (“The failure to cite cases in support of an argument 7 waives the issue”).

8 The prosecutor also referred specifically to questionnaire numbers 43 and 109 when 9 articulating a basis for excusing Elliott. With specific regard to the prosecutor’s references to 10 question number “43” and Elliott’s need “to be convinced beyond any shade of doubt,” Petitioner 11 argues the explanation is “contradicted by the record” because that question has “nothing to do 12 with burden of proof.” (ECF No. 330 at 176.) While number “43” does not reference the burden 13 of proof, other questions did address the subject. Elliott strongly agreed with the statement in 14 questionnaire number 54 that a “defendant in a criminal case is innocent until proven guilty 15 beyond a reasonable doubt” and explained her personal belief: “Because a person is charge[d] 16 with a crime, it does not mean they [are] guilty.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 4 at 74.) Elliott 17 strongly disagreed with the statement in number 55: “If the prosecutor goes to the trouble of 18 bringing someone to trial, the person is probably guilty.” She explained her personal belief as 19 follows: “Innocent, until proven guilty, without a shade of doubt in my mind.” (Id. at 75.)
20 Hence, there exists support in the record for the prosecutor’s proffered reason.

21 During voir dire, the prosecutor asked Elliott about the burden of proof, referencing her 22 belief that “someone is innocent until proven guilty without a shade of doubt.” (4 RT 739-40.)
23 He explained the judge would instruct the jury “that a person is presumed innocent until they’re 24 proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt” and that beyond a reasonable doubt does not mean 25 “beyond all possible doubt” or “beyond any shade of doubt.” (4 RT 740.) The record does 26 reflect that Elliott replied “yes” to the prosecutor’s inquiry about whether she would be able to 27 follow the judge’s instruction as to the burden of proof (4 RT 740), yet Petitioner argues the 28 exchange that occurred during voir dire “belies the prosecutor’s explanation and shows it to be

1 pretextual.” (ECF No. 330 at 177.) Nevertheless, the court finds otherwise.

2 Elliott’s own words support the prosecutor’s belief that Elliott “would have to be 3 convinced beyond any shade of doubt.” See People v. Watson, 43 Cal.4th 652, 679 (2008) 4 (finding the prosecutor’s concern the juror may hold him to a stricter standard of proof” was 5 supported by the record where juror indicated on questionnaire that the death penalty is 6 appropriate where “a defendant has been found guilty ‘without a shadow of a doubt’”). Certainly, 7 the prosecutor is not legally required to accept Elliott’s answer at face value that she would 8 follow the court’s instruction in light of her written response. Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. at 341 9 (“That the prosecutor claimed to hold concerns despite Juror 16’s voir dire averments does not 10 establish that she offered pretext”); Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.

11 And, misidentifying a question or accidentally referencing the incorrect, specific number 12 of the questionnaire response that gave him pause does not establish the prosecutor acted with 13 pretext. See Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. at 340-41 (“prosecutor simply misspoke with respect to 14 juror’s numerical designation . . . It is a tenuous inference to say that an accidental reference” 15 makes for a lack of credibility nor does it establish a pretext). The Ninth Circuit has explained 16 “there is a ‘fine distinction between a prosecutor’s false statement that creates a new basis for a 17 strike that otherwise would not exist and a prosecutor’s inaccurate statement that does nothing to 18 change the basis for the strike.’” Aleman v. Uribe, 723 F.3d 976, 982 (9th Cir. 2013). This is a 19 situation wherein the prosecutor merely misspoke when attempting to specifically identify or 20 reference a response in the questionnaire, misidentifying number 43 when he meant number 55.

21 The prosecutor was also concerned that Elliott’s confusion surrounding the penalty of life 22 without the possibility of parole, coupled with her responses to the relevant questionnaire 23 inquiries on the subject, meant “she very much favored” a life without possibility of parole 24 sentence. (8 RT 1441.) Petitioner’s argument that there “is absolutely no support” in the record 25 for the prosecutor’s statement that “she very much favored” the penalty is not accurate. (ECF No.
26 330 at 177.) Elliott indicated on her questionnaire that she did not have a good impression of the 27 penalty of life without possibility of parole, and the record reveals that that less than favorable 28 impression plainly came from a misunderstanding of the penalty itself. In other words, Elliott’s

1 confusion that “without the possibility of parole” was directly related to her mistaken belief that 2 those sentenced to life without the possibility of parole remained eligible for parole or release 3 from prison.

4 Evidence of the confusion began during defense counsel Gable’s questioning of Elliott, 5 and required the trial court’s intervention. (4 RT 734-37.) A fair reading of the exchange reveals 6 Elliott’s responses during voir dire, coupled with some of her answers to the questions posed in 7 the questionnaire, support the prosecutor’s proffered race neutral reason for exercising a 8 peremptory strike. Elliott’s initial dislike of a penalty she believed allowed underserving 9 individuals to be paroled or released, coupled with her eventual understanding that a defendant 10 sentenced to life without the possibility of parole meant the individual would never be released, 11 and her responses in the questionnaire indicating the death penalty is a punishment reserved for 12 those who abuse and murder children, or those who plan and premeditate a murder as well as 13 those who commit serial or mass murder, reasonably infers Elliott was predisposed to favor a 14 sentence of life without the possibility of parole in a case like this.

15 Simply put, all of the prosecutor’s reasons for excusing Elliott are supported by the 16 record. As to Petitioner’s argument that the trial court did not discuss the prosecutor’s reasons for 17 excusing Elliott, as previously held, no particular format is required for the trial court’s ruling.
18 Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. at 93; Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. at 341-42; McDaniels v. Kirkland, 19 813 F.3d at 777-78. Moreover, the trial court found the prosecutor to be credible and this court 20 will not supersede that determination. Rice, at 341-42.

21 Sylvia Gonzalez

22 Sylvia Gonzalez’s questionnaire indicates she identified her race and ethnic origin as 23 Hispanic. (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 3 at 44.) The following information is taken from that same 24 questionnaire and is relevant to Petitioner’s argument.

25 In the section entitled, “Specific Questionnaire,” Gonzalez indicated her general feelings 26 about the death penalty: “I feel some known criminals deserved it.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 3 27 at 61.) Asked how her views of the death penalty had changed over the last few years, Gonzalez 28 wrote: “I agree more and more. The crimes today are absolutely horrible and the criminals are 1 being released.” (Id. at 61.) She believed the purpose behind the death penalty was to “rids the 2 extremely demented from killing again.” (Id. at 61.) Number 99 inquired into the respondent’s 3 impressions of the penalty imposing life imprisonment without the possibility of parole; Gonzalez 4 responded, “Why issue 3 lifes without parole. Just never let him out. Make convict earn his 5 keep.” (Id. at 61.) Asked whether the death penalty was used too often or not often enough, she 6 wrote: “I don’t have an opinion on this.” (Id. at 62.) Number 104 asks what types of cases or 7 offenses warrant imposition of the death penalty; Gonzalez indicated, “When people are badly 8 mutilated, beheaded, mass or serial murderers, baby killers.” (Id. at 62.) She disagreed strongly 9 with the statement that all persons who kill another should get the death penalty, explaining 10 “Some murders are purely self-defense” and also disagreed strongly with the statement that a 11 person who “rapes and mutilates should get the death penalty,” indicating she “would need to 12 hear the whole story.” (Id. at 62.) In response to a statement that a person who kills more than 13 once should automatically receive a death sentence, Gonzalez “strongly disagree[d]” and wrote, 14 “I would need to hear circumstances.” (Id. at 63.) She “strongly agree[d]” with the statement 15 that persons sentenced to death “should be swiftly executed,” explaining, “Why let them sit and 16 think about. It must be terrifying.” (Id. at 63.)

17 During voir dire and in response to the court’s general inquiry about whether she had 18 strong feelings about the death penalty, Gonzalez stated she did not “have any thoughts for or 19 against it.” (5 RT 841.)

20 Defense counsel asked Gonzalez what she meant by her response on the questionnaire 21 when asked about her impressions of life without the possibility of parole, particularly where she 22 wrote ““Why issue three lives without parole; just never let them out.”” Gonzales explained as 23 follows: “I didn’t realize, cases where people that do these brutal deaths, they kill someone, and 24 they go to prison, and within, you know, a year down the line, they’re back out. I don’t 25 understand why they let him back out.” (5 RT 842-43.) Defense attorney Gable attempted to 26 explain that life without the possibility of parole means that the individual would never be 27 released, but Gonzalez was initially confused by the question “what are your impressions of that 28 type of penalty?” (5 RT 843.) Ultimately, Gonzalez indicated she would “be satisfied” and

1 “endorse” such a penalty. (5 RT 843.) Asked to compare a life sentence without the possibility 2 of parole to the death penalty, Gonzalez replied, “I feel that people are always on death penalty, 3 and they, they’re never put to death; I mean, I think that’s a long time to spend in jail, or prison
4 and never - - I mean, they never put them to death anyway. I never read about it or hear about it.”
5 (5 RT 843-44.) The court intervened to advise Gonzalez that if she were to serve as a juror she 6 would have to assume an individual sentenced to death would be put to death and that an 7 individual sentenced to life without the possibility of parole would be kept in prison for the rest of 8 his or her life; she replied, “I have no problem with that.” (5 RT 844.) Asked to clarify what she 9 did not have a problem with by Gable, Gonzalez said: “I believe in the death penalty. I mean, if 10 they’re gonna be put to death, I believe in that. [¶] If they say life in prison without parole, I also 11 believe in that.” (5 RT 844.) Gonzalez believed both penalties were serious but did not consider 12 them to be equal to one another. (5 RT 844-45.)

13 The prosecutor confirmed Gonzalez’s testimony that the death penalty was the more 14 severe of the two alternatives, and asked her what purpose she felt the death penalty served; 15 Gonzalez replied “I feel that if, for instance, after hearing the story that this man was brutal, I 16 mean, no mercy, I mean, there is something” and “I mean, if I hear the story that this man is 17 extremely, extremely brutal without mercy, I mean the death penalty does have some cause.” (5

19 This Court’s De Novo Review

20 The prosecutor offered the following reasons for exercising a peremptory challenge 21 against Gonzalez: (1) her questionnaire involved a response identifying “serial killers mass 22 killers, baby killers mutilations, and when victims are beheaded” as those crimes for which she 23 would vote in favor of the death penalty; (2) her response to another question concerning her 24 feelings about the death penalty indicated the penalty “might be appropriate for those who are 25 extremely demented,” signifying a “mind set” that the death penalty was to be reserved for “very 26 brutal” or bloody crimes; and (3) there were other prospective jurors better suited from his 27 perspective. (8 RT 1440.) A review of this record finds support for the prosecutor’s proffered 28 reasons.

1 First, in response to a question asking the respondent to identify the purpose served by the 2 death penalty, Gonzalez “[it] rids the extremely dements from killing again.” (ECF No. 302, Vol.
3 I, Ex. at 61.) In response to number 104 on the questionnaire, asking “In what types of 4 cases/offenses do you feel the death penalty should be imposed,” she wrote “when people are 5 badly mutilated, beheaded, mass or serial murderers, baby killers.” (Id. at 62.) Gonzalez’s 6 responses are neither “ambiguous” nor “amorphous” as characterized by defense counsel. A 7 prosecutor may accord responses provided in the questionnaire a greater weight than those 8 offered in oral voir dire. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.

9 Petitioner argues that because the prosecutor did not ask Gonzalez specifically about her 10 responses to numbers 98 and 104 on the questionnaire, his reason for striking Gonzalez on this 11 basis is pretextual. The court acknowledges the United States Supreme Court has noted that a 12 party's failure to engage in meaningful voir dire on a topic the party says is important can suggest 13 the stated reason is pretextual. Miller–El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 231, 246, 250, n.8 (2005). However, 14 while the prosecutor may not have expressly asked Gonzalez about her numbered responses to 15 specific questions on the questionnaire, her feelings about the death penalty were explored by the 16 prosecutor during voir dire.

17 Asked what she felt was the purpose of the death penalty – a question that does in fact 18 relate to number 98 on the questionnaire - Gonzalez replied, “I feel that if, for instance, after 19 hearing the story that this man was brutal, I mean, no mercy, I mean, there is something” and “I 20 mean, if I hear the story that this man is extremely, extremely brutal without mercy, I mean the 21 death penalty does have some cause.” (5 RT 846.) Given her reply during voir dire, coupled with 22 the written questionnaire responses, it was not unreasonable for the prosecutor to be concerned 23 that the facts of the case did not rise to the level of brutality by which Gonzalez would justify 24 imposition of the death penalty to be appropriate. It is also worth noting that by the time the 25 prosecutor conducted his voir dire of Gonzalez, she had already been questioned by defense 26 attorney Gable about her feeling concerning the death penalty. (5 RT 842-45.) During that 27 exchange, Gonzalez used the word “brutal,” echoing language she employed in the questionnaire.
28 Simply put, the record supports the prosecutor’s expressed, race-neutral concern.

1 With regard to the fact the prosecutor believed better suited jurors were to follow, he 2 specifically stated, “also, at that time that I excused Miss Gonzalez, again, she was a three on my 3 scale, and we were in a section down towards, from about juror number 30, to juror number 37.”
4 (8 RT 1440.)

5 The prospective jurors comprising jury panel number 497 were randomly assigned 6 numbers 1 through 42; the list appears in Volume 4 of the Clerk’s Transcript on Appeal at page 7 982. Jurors number 30 through 37<sup>11</sup> include Nancy Yost, Henry Eisenbeisz, Joyce Wondra, 8 David Shaw, Dale Norling, Albert Davidson and Susan Parsons. (4 CT 982.) Of those seven 9 jurors, the defendants jointly excused six, to wit: Eisenbeisz, Yost, Wondra, Norling, Parsons and 10 Shaw. (8 RT 1414-16; 11 RT 2194.) The prosecutor excused only one of those seven:
11 Davidson. (8 RT 1416.)

12 More specifically, at the time the prosecutor excused Gonzalez, he had just exercised the 13 challenge against Davidson immediately prior to that against Gonzalez. (8 RT 1416.) And Yost, 14 Eisenbeisz, Wondra, and Norling were excused jointly by the defendants just prior to that. (8 RT 15 1414-16.) Therefore, of the prospective jurors expressly identified as those between “juror 16 number 30, to juror number 37,” Parsons and Shaw remained. Both were later excused when the 17 second round of peremptory challenges were exercised. Parsons was jointly excused by the 18 defendants and Shaw was then excused by Petitioner. (11 RT 2194, 2197.) Notably too, the 19 remaining five names on the list subsequent to number 37, included Fred Trimble who ultimately 20 served on the jury (4 CT 982), and Linda Elliott and Marc Beauchamp who were jointly excused 21 by the defendants (4 CT 982; 8 RT 1417), in addition to Del Rosario and Soto (4 CT 982; 8 RT 22 1417-18), the subjects of Petitioner’s argument. Thus, the record supports the prosecutor’s belief 23 that at the time, there were other jurors better suited from his perspective.

24 Significantly too, Gonzalez entered the box during the first set of peremptory challenges 25 exercised. (8 RT 1409:17-20.) Thereafter, the prosecutor passed on panels of prospective jurors 26

27 <sup>11</sup> Prospective juror number 34, Warren Weikel, was excused for cause and a line appears through 28 his name on the random selection list. (4 CT 982; 7 RT 1307.) Hence, the random list includes seven, rather than eight, prospective jurors for purposes of the exercise of peremptory challenges.

1 that included Gonzalez a total of five times (8 RT 1413: 15-19 [1st pass], 1415:3-5 [2nd pass], 2 1415:13-14 [3rd pass], 1415:21-22 [4th pass] and 1416:3-4 [5th pass]) before eventually excusing 3 her (8 RT 1416-17). “Weighing against a finding of discriminatory intent . . . is the fact that the 4 prosecutor passed on challenges” five times while Gonzalez remained on the panel. People v.
5 Gutierrez, 2 Cal.5th 1150, 1170 (2017); People v. Kelly, 42 Cal.4th 763, 780 (2007); People v.
6 Cornwell, 37 Cal.4th 50, 69-70 (2005); see also U.S. v. Vasquez-Lopez, 22 F.3d 900, 902 (9th Cir.
7 1994); Palmer v. Estelle, 985 F.2d 456, 458 (9th Cir. 1993); U.S. v. Bishop, 959 F.2d at 827.

8 To sum it up, the prosecutor’s proffered, race-neutral reasons for excusing Gonzalez are 9 supported by this record.

10 Next, with regard to Petitioner’s argument referencing the trial court’s comment that it did 11 not see a strong reason to dismiss Gonzalez, the comment does not evidence a pretext on the part 12 of the prosecutor. Purkett v. Elem, 514 U.S. at 767–68 (“The second step of this process does not 13 demand an explanation that is persuasive, or even plausible”). Moreover, the trial court itself 14 acknowledged that was not the test before it. (See 11 RT 2178-79 [“I personally may not have 15 excused certain individuals, if I were in the prosecution’s position” but “[t]hat’s not the criteria
16 that the Court has to use”].) Indeed, “to accept a prosecutor’s stated nonracial reasons, the court 17 need not agree with them.” Kesser v. Cambra, 465 F.3d 351, 359 (9th Cir. 2006).

18 Lastly, and as previously noted, despite Petitioner’s inference to the contrary, a trial 19 court’s ruling need not include express findings regarding the prosecutor’s credibility where the 20 record establishes the trial court implicitly accepted those reasons. See Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S.
21 at 341-42; McDaniels v. Kirkland, 813 F.3d at 777-78.

22 Thomas Harris

23 Although the record does not include a questionnaire completed by Thomas Harris 24 wherein he identifies his race and ethnicity, the record makes clear Harris is African-American.
25 And, because Harris’s specific responses to the inquiries posed by the questionnaire are not 26 available, they are not summarized here.

27 During voir dire proceedings, and in response to the court’s general inquiry about whether 28 he had any strong feelings about the death penalty, Harris replied, “No.” (5 RT 855.)

1           Asked by defense attorney Gable how he would characterize his feelings about the death 2 penalty, Harris replied, "Middle of the road," and indicated he believed a sentence of life without 3 the possibility of parole was a viable alternative to the death penalty. (5 RT 855.) Harris felt life 4 without the possibility of parole was both a "serious" and "severe" penalty. (5 RT 857.) Asked 5 to elaborate on his questionnaire comment that the death penalty is not used often enough, Harris 6 stated as follows: "Well, I just see and read so much about people being on death row, when 7 there's not enough room for other people to get locked up and they're releasing criminals, so 8 obviously something's wrong." (5 RT 857.)

9           After agreeing with the prosecutor that both sentences serve to protect society from further 10 harm, Harris was asked what other purpose the death penalty serves; Harris explained:

11                               I would say, with the death sentence, well, they both have the - - with the death 12 sentence he could never be put to death, probably, always be on death row, whereas if he 13 does be put to death, as an alternative being sent up for life, he can always find out later 14 on some new evidence would put him in a position for an appeal or something.

15 (5 RT 858-59.) Asked what purpose a life without the possibility of parole serves over a sentence 16 imposing death, Harris replied, "It makes sure he'll never been able to, able to kill anybody inside 17 or outside." (5 RT 859.) Next, the prosecutor inquired about several answers Harris provided in 18 his questionnaire:

19                               MR. MARLETTE: I'm going to be very frank with you. I noticed in your answers 20 that a lot of times you would say, "Well, unless there were drugs involved or unless he 21 wasn't in his right mind or unless it was spur of the moment" or something like that. Do 22 you remember those answers?

23                               A. Yes.

24                               Q. Okay. I kind of got the impression that you would vote for life in prison 25 without possibility - - that you would always look for reasons not to vote for the death 26 penalty?

27                               A. I didn't mean it to project that way, but I always look at all alternatives on both 28 sides. I don't automatically jump into what I'm feeling, one way, I just have strong feelings toward it.

(5 RT 859-60.)

1           A. I know a sister does for sure. I've seen her off and on, and I know a brother, he 2 lives in Colorado. But my older brother, I have no idea where he's at 'cause I haven't 3 seen, spoken or heard since then.

4           Q. You just look at this as sort of a mystery to you as far as why it occurred?

5           A. Yes.

6 (5 RT 865-66.)

7           The inquiry referred to in the foregoing exchange relates to question number 11 on page 2 8 of the questionnaire; it reads: "Brother's and sister's occupation(s), and where do they or did they 9 work, if known?" The question itself does not expressly concern any relationship the respondent 10 may or may not have with his or her sibling or siblings. And while Harris's response indicating 11 he had not seen or spoken with his brothers and sisters following the passing of his mother in 12 1981 does relate to a lack of relationship, the reason for the lack of relationship was the issue 13 raised by the prosecutor. And that specific information was only revealed upon questioning by 14 defense attorney Holmes, after the prosecutor had concluded his voir dire. Assuming Holmes' 15 recitation of Harris's questionnaire answer is accurate, standing alone, the response may not have 16 been particularly troubling. But when expounded upon in subsequent questioning by Holmes, the 17 information provided by Harris in response became troubling for the prosecutor: "for just kind of 18 out of not trying, not for any reason or any rift." That concern and interpretation is supported by 19 the record; a record that also establishes the concern arose not from Harris's written response to 20 the inquiry posed by the questionnaire itself, but rather his voir dire testimony given during 21 questioning by defense attorney Holmes. Therefore, to the degree Petitioner argues the 22 prosecutor's reason is implausible because he did not ask any questions of Harris on this subject, 23 that assertion is misleading.

24           Moreover, the Ninth Circuit has noted that a concern about a prospective juror not 25 knowing the ages or whereabouts of his children – reflecting poorly on his personal relationships 26 and connection to the community - was relevant to the prosecutor's overall impression of the 27 juror. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820-21; see also U.S. v. Daly, 974 F.2d 1215, 1219 (9th 28 Cir. 1992) (prosecutor challenged juror because he appeared to be a "loner," a plausible, neutral reason). Here then, the prosecutor's concern that Harris "had no family ties" and had lost contact

1 with his siblings due to a lack of effort to remain close in the absence of “any reason or any rift” 2 was relevant to his overall impression of Harris.

3 As for the prosecutor’s second reason – that Harris “continually looked for excuses to 4 avoid the death penalty” (5 RT 1438) – the prosecutor expressly referred to more than a half-5 dozen responses by Harris to inquiries posed by the questionnaire, to wit: numbers 55, 56, 58, 59, 6 97 and 98, and more generally to the inquiries on pages 17 and 18 of the questionnaire (5 RT 7 1439), in the section entitled “Specific Questionnaire” that seeks to learn the respondent’s 8 feelings about the death penalty; the section includes questions 96 through 112. When giving the 9 basis for his second reason for exercising a peremptory challenge against Harris, the prosecutor 10 explained:

12 In response to question 55 . . . he said, “Before a defendant is brought to trial, 13 anything could be brought forward could either invalidate or somewhat prove reasonable 14 cause for doubting guilt,” and number 56, he said, “Defendant should project all they 15 know of their innocence to their attorneys ‘cause they’re the main hope of release.”

16 (5 RT 1439.) Those references are to two statements appearing in the questionnaire’s section 17 entitled “Criminal Justice Attitudes.” The statements read: “If the prosecutor goes to the trouble 18 of bringing someone to trial, the person is probably guilty” and, “A defendant i[n] a criminal trial 19 should be required to prove his or her innocence.” The respondents were asked to indicate 20 whether they strongly agreed or disagreed, or somewhat agreed or disagreed, with both 21 statements. (4 CT 933, 947.) While we do not know what box Harris checked relative to each 22 statement, the prosecutor read the explanations Harris provided into the record and those could 23 reasonably be understood to infer avoidance of the death penalty. And again, according the 24 written responses in the questionnaire greater weight is permissible and race-neutral. Cook v.
25 LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.

26
27 Further, when asked the main difference between the death penalty and life in prison 28 without the possibility of parole, Harris replied as follows:

1 I would say, with the death sentence, well, they both have the - - with the death 2 sentence he could never be put to death, probably, always be on death row, whereas if he 3 does be put to death, as an alternative being sent up for life, he can always find out later on some new evidence would put him in a position for an appeal or something.

4 (5 RT 858-59.) The prosecutor specifically referred to Harris's questionnaire responses during 5 voir dire, acknowledging he had concerns: "I'm going to be very frank with you. I noticed in 6 your answers that a lot of times you would say, 'Well, unless there were drugs involved or unless 7 he wasn't in his right mind or unless it was spur of the moment' or something like that," and "I 8 kind of got the impression that you would vote for life in prison without possibility - - that you 9 would always look for reasons not to vote for the death penalty." (5 RT 859-60.) Harris did 10 indicate he "didn't mean it to project that way" (5 RT 860), but the prosecutor is not required to 11 ignore the written responses. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.

13 In sum, a thorough review of the record supports the prosecutor's race neutral reasons for 14 exercising a peremptory challenge against prospective juror Harris.

15 Finally, a trial court's ruling need not include express findings regarding the prosecutor's 16 credibility where the record establishes the trial court implicitly accepted those reasons. See Rice 17 v. Collins, 546 U.S. at 341-42; McDaniels v. Kirkland, 813 F.3d at 777-78. Such is the case here.
18 (11 RT 2178-80.)

20 Rachel Klose

21 Rachel Klose's questionnaire indicates she identified her race and ethnic origin as 22 "Spanish/Indian." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 1 at 1.) Klose's questionnaire includes the 23 information that follows and is pertinent to the argument asserted.

24 Concerning "Criminal Justice Attitudes," asked whether she agreed in principle with the 25 criminal justice system and trial by jury, Klose responded "No." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 1 at 26 11.)

27 In the "Specific Questionnaire" portion seeking information regarding the respondent's 28

1 feelings regarding the death penalty, Klose wrote that she agreed with the death penalty generally 2 and that her feelings about it had not changed. (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 1 at 18.) Asked what 3 purpose the death penalty serves, Klose replied, “I think victims go through so much when 4 someone commits a violent crime only to have the person released to be threatened again.” (Id. at 5 18.) Asked what her impressions of a life without the possibility of parole sentence were, she 6 wrote: “I’m not sure what purpose it serves.” (Id. at 18.) Klose indicated she was “[n]ot sure” 7 whether the death penalty was imposed too often or not often enough. (Id. at 19.) Asked to 8 identify the types of crimes or cases wherein the death penalty should be imposed, Klose wrote 9 “Crimes against children like molestation and intent to kill someone.” (Id. at 19.) She “strongly 10 disagree[d]” with the statement that anyone who kills another should “get the death penalty,” and 11 explained, “Every case and situation is different. I don’t think it should always apply.” (Id. at 12 19.) In response to the statement, “Anyone who rapes and mutilates should get the death 13 penalty,” Klose “strongly disagree[d],” indicating as follows: “I think someone who rapes needs 14 professional help not necessarily death.” (Id. at 19.) In response to the question of whether she 15 could put aside her “personal feelings regarding what the law ought to be and follow the law as 16 the court explains it,” Klose selected “Not sure.” (Id. at 20.)

17 During voir dire proceedings, and in response to the trial court’s general inquiry regarding 18 whether she had any strong feelings about the death penalty, Klose replied, “I am for it.” (5 RT 19 935.)

20 During questioning by defense attorney Gable, when asked what purpose the death 21 penalty serves, Klose responded, “It’s a punishment for a severe crime.” She agreed with Gable 22 that both the death penalty and life without the possibility of parole were “severe” and indicated 23 she could vote for either penalty, not favoring one over the other, after considering all of the 24 evidence presented. (5 RT 937-39.)

25 Klose assured the prosecutor she understood the applicable burdens, and that if faced with 26 the reality of imposing a sentence of death or life imprisonment without the possibility of parole, 27 she would be able to do so. (5 RT 940-42.) Klose was then asked about a response given on the 28 questionnaire she completed:

1 MR. MARLETTE: And you also said - - Now here it comes - - In response to one 2 of the questions, that you did not agree with the criminal justice system and the system of 3 trial by jury . . . You said there are some things - - 4 A. That I don't agree with.
5 .....
6 Q. What kind of things do you disagree with?
7 A. Mostly punishments for crimes that are - - that end up going back and doing 8 them again, that kind of thing.
9 Q. Okay. And what would you change if you had the power to change?
10 A. Um, I don't know. It's hard to say.
11 Q. Okay. When you say punishments for crimes, do you mean like if somebody's 12 a repeat offender, they should get a harsher sentence?
13 A. Right, right. Exactly.
14 Q. In the disagreement with the basic concept where the defendant's presumed 15 innocent, then I'm the one who has the proof - - 16 A. Oh, yes, I understand that.
17 Q. That's okay?
18 A. Yeah.
19 Q. Anything else on our questionnaire or your answers to our questions, anything 20 else that - - The reason I'm asking you is, you're the one who best knows.
21 A. Right. [¶] No. I did just have a death in the family. But I don't know - - 22 Q. All right. And who was that?
23 .....
24 A. My mother-in-law.
25 Q. And how did she die?
26 A. Heart attack.
27 Q. Do you think that that situation - - It's obviously a lot of concern to you right 28 now?
A. Um-hum.
Q. Do you think that will keep you from paying attention to the evidence that is presented in this?
A. I don't think it should. It's just real new right now. It was Sunday.

21 This Court's De Novo Review

22 The prosecutor identified a few reasons he exercised a peremptory challenge against 23 Klose: (1) sympathy for Petitioner, including a comment that she would not feel comfortable as a 24 defendant on the stand and in response to a question about the death penalty "for somebody who 25 rapes and who kills" that "a rapist needed therapy;" in combination with the fact she mentioned 26 her mother-in-law had just died and she was "crying in the box while she was being questioned;"
27 and (2) the prosecutor believed at that point "there were a number of" better rated prospective 28

1 jurors “coming up.” (8 RT 1437.)

2           Petitioner argues the questionnaire responses identified by the prosecutor do not support 3 his position and/or are “invalid,” and that the loss of her mother-in-law “is related to” Klose, “but 4 is wholly unrelated to the case,” and further, that there is no indication in the record that Klose 5 was crying. (ECF No. 330 at 148-49.)

6           Sympathy for or identifying with a defendant, regardless of whether the identifying 7 feature relates to the merits of the case, is relevant to a Batson challenge. Jamerson v. Runnels, 8 713 F.3d at 1229; see also Ngo v. Giurbino, 651 F.3d 1112, 1116-17 (9th Cir. 2011). In response 9 to number 58 on the questionnaire – asking the respondent to strongly agree or disagree or to 10 somewhat agree or disagree – Klose strongly disagreed with the following statement: “If the 11 defendant accused of a crime does not take the stand to tell the jury his side of the story, it 12 probably means he is guilty.” Asked to briefly explain, Klose wrote: “I don’t think it means he’s 13 guilty only because I wouldn’t feel comfortable as the defendant on the stand.” (ECF 302, Vol. I, 14 Ex. 1 at 10.) It is a reasonable inference by the prosecutor to conclude Klose may be sympathetic 15 to or identifying with Petitioner based upon her written response. The prosecutor may properly 16 accord more weight to Klose’s written questionnaire response. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 17 820. Nevertheless, that response was not the only questionnaire response identified by the 18 prosecutor as giving rise to a concern that Klose would sympathize with the defendant.

19           Klose’s response to number 106 on the questionnaire was also a factor. The prosecutor 20 stated “[s]he also said in the questionnaire that she felt a rapist needed therapy, in response to a 21 question about the death penalty for somebody who rapes and who kills.” (8 RT 1437.) While 22 the prosecutor either misunderstood the question posed, or misstated it, the record does support 23 the notion Klose believed a “rapist needed therapy,” which can be reasonably inferred as potential 24 sympathy for a defendant.

25           More particularly, the statement on the questionnaire reads: “Anyone who rapes and 26 mutilates should get the death penalty.” Klose strongly disagreed with the statement and 27 provided an explanation: “I think someone who rapes needs professional help not necessarily 28 death.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 1 at 19.) Transposing words in the questionnaire (rapes and

1 mutilates) when proffering a reason based upon a prospective juror’s response to that particular 2 inquiry and inaccurately recapping its subject matter (rapes and kills) does not negate the fact of 3 Klose’s written explanation. It still remains – regardless of the prosecutor’s incorrect synopsis – 4 that Klose believes an individual who commits rape should receive therapy.

5 For the prosecutor to infer from Klose’s responses above that she may harbor sympathy 6 for such a defendant is not unreasonable, nor does it make his reason “invalid.” Cf. Rice v.
7 Collins, 546 U.S. at 340 (“Seizing on what can plausibly be viewed as an innocent transposition 8 makes little headway toward the conclusion that the prosecutor’s explanation was clearly not 9 credible”); Aleman v. Uribe, 723 F.3d at 982 (“if a prosecutor makes a mistake in good faith, 10 such as an innocent transposition of juror information, then that mistake does not support the 11 conclusion that the prosecutor’s explanation is clearly not credible”). “One of the most regular 12 uses of peremptory strikes is to eliminate from the final venire persons whom either side believes 13 will be too sympathetic to his opponent.” [Citation.].” People v. Dunn, 40 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1054 14 (1995).

15 Additionally, as previously noted in the court’s analysis concerning prospective juror 16 Gonzalez, the trial court’s comment that it would not have exercised a challenge against Klose 17 were it selecting a jury is not indicative of pretext by the prosecutor. Purkett v. Elem, 514 U.S. at 18 767–68 (an explanation need not be persuasive or even plausible). The trial court itself 19 acknowledged that was not the test before it. (See 11 RT 2178-79 [“I personally may not have 20 excused certain individuals, if I were in the prosecution’s position” but “[t]hat’s not the criteria
21 that the Court has to use”].)

22 Considered together, Klose’s aforementioned responses to the two questions reveal 23 sympathy, or potential sympathy, for the defendant. “The very purpose of peremptory strikes is 24 to allow parties to remove potential jurors who they suspect, but cannot prove, may exhibit a 25 particular bias.” Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. at 292-93.

26 Next, Petitioner complains that the death of Klose’s mother-in-law may be related to the 27 individual, but is not related to the case to be tried. Petitioner also complains there is no evidence 28 Klose was crying, and that she “assured the prosecutor” her mother-in-law’s recent death would

1 not interfere with her ability to sit as a juror. (ECF No. 330 at 150.)

2 Starting with the latter premise, Petitioner mischaracterizes the record by asserting the 3 “record indicates that Mrs. Klose assured the prosecutor” her relative’s death would not interfere 4 with her abilities. The following exchange occurred shortly after Klose was asked whether there 5 was “[a]nything else” they might need to know and she responded that she’d just had “a death in 6 the family. But I don’t know - -”:

8 MR. MARLETTE: Do you think that that situation - - It’s obviously a lot of concern to you right now?

9 a. Um-hum.

10 Q. Do you think that that will keep you from paying attention to the evidence that is presented in this?

11 A. I don’t think it should. It’s just real new right now. It was Sunday.

12 Q. All right. I’m sorry that you’re going through that. [¶] But as far as this case, you don’t think it would be something that would be on your mind so much that you couldn’t pay attention?

13 A. No, I don’t think so.

14
15 (5 RT 945-46 (italics added).) The record reveals Klose’s responses are somewhat equivocal 16 rather than the “assured” asserted by Petitioner. And, indecisiveness is a legitimate reason to 17 exercise a peremptory challenge. See Brown v. Lambert, 451 F.3d 946, 958 (9th Cir. 2005) 18 (reversed on other grounds by Uttecht v. Brown, 551 U.S. 1 (2007)).

19 In any event, on its face, the recent death of a prospective juror’s family member is a race-20 neutral reason. In this case, the record reveals that on Tuesday, March 14, Klose advised that her 21 mother-in-law had passed away the previous Sunday when asked by the prosecutor whether there 22 was anything else the attorneys might like to know in considering her for jury service. (5 RT 23 [3/14/1989] 945-46.) Petitioner’s assertion that Klose’s mother-in-law’s death, while relating to 24 Klose, is unrelated to the case to be tried, is not well taken. Where in the abstract the death of a 25 prospective juror’s relative is not related to the case to be tried, the fact the death occurred so 26 close in time could certainly impact the prospective juror’s ability to participate and remain
28

1 focused on the jury’s task.

3 The prosecutor challenged Klose in part because she “was crying in the box while she was 4 being questioned.” (8 RT 1437.) Crying is an outward behavior, or demeanor. Demeanor is a 5 race-neutral reason to exercise a peremptory challenge against a prospective juror. Snyder v.
6 Louisiana, 552 U.S. 472, 477 (2008) (“race-neutral reasons for peremptory challenges often 7 invoke a juror’s demeanor”). See also, e.g., Stubbs v. Gomez, 189 F.3d at 1105 (demeanor and 8 lack of eye contact are race-neutral reasons for exercising a peremptory challenge); United States 9 v. Mallett, 751 F.3d 907, 915 (8th Cir. 2014) (juror who appeared to be sleeping or nodding off is 10 a legitimate race-neutral reason for exercising peremptory challenge); United States v. Maseratti, 11 1 F.3d 330, 335-36 (5th Cir. 1993) (prosecutor gave race-neutral reason for striking African-12 American juror who “appeared to be sleeping during part of the voir dire”).

13 During oral argument on the motion, the prosecutor again referred to Klose’s demeanor:

14 MR. MARLETTE: Regarding Miss Klose - - Counsel stated that my reason that 15 she seemed to identify with the defense, because of her statement she would feel 16 uncomfortable on the stand, is not valid.

17 It’s doubtful anyone would feel comfortable. It was important to me because she 18 chose to identify her feelings with the defendant in that case.

19 That, together with the other matters, that made me feel she might be sympathetic, 20 including the fact that her mother-in-law had just died and her emotional reaction on the 21 stand made me feel that she was not a juror that I wanted....

22 (10 RT 1964 (italics added).) Significantly, defense counsel did not argue that Klose was not 23 crying, nor did he make any comment in response to the prosecutor’s assertion she was 24 emotional. (10 RT 1971-74.) A “prosecutor’s demeanor observations, even if not explicitly 25 confirmed by the record, are a permissible race-neutral ground for peremptory excusal, especially 26 when they were not disputed in the trial court. [Citations.]” People v. Mai, 57 Cal.4th 986, 1052 27 (2013). And, a lack of objection from defense counsel supports a trial court’s acceptance of the 28 prosecutor’s race-neutral reason. See Hugueley v. Westbrooks, 2017 WL 3325008 (W.D. Tenn.
Aug. 3, 2017) *32 (citing State v. Hugueley, 185 S.W.3d 356, 375 (2006)). Therefore, this

1 situation is unlike that present in Snyder v. Louisiana, where the prosecutor argued the 2 prospective juror was “very nervous . . . throughout the questioning,” because in that case defense 3 counsel disputed the proffered explanation. Snyder, 552 U.S. at 477-79. “[T]he manner of the 4 juror while testifying is oftentimes more indicative of the real character of his opinion than his 5 words. That is seen below, but cannot always be spread upon the record.” Reynolds v. United 6 States, 98 U.S. 145, 156-57 (1878). Furthermore, Petitioner has failed to identify any other 7 similarly situated juror, nor has a thorough review of the record revealed any other juror, who 8 cried during voir dire.

10 Moreover, the prosecutor was not required to ignore the fact Klose brought up her mother-11 in-law’s death despite Klose’s indication that she thought she could perform the duties of a juror.
12 Cf. Rice v Collins, 546 U.S. at 341 (“That the prosecutor claimed to hold concerns despite Juror 13 16’s voir dire averments does not establish she offered pretext”). Simply put, “nothing in the 14 record shows that this reason was clearly pretextual.” Briggs v. Grounds, 682 F3d at 1178; 15 Jamerson v. Runnels, 713 F.3d at 1228.

17 In combination with the aforementioned reasons, the prosecutor also indicated he excused 18 Klose because there were better jurors “coming up” at that time. (8 RT 1437.) When the 19 prosecutor excused Klose, she represented his seventh of twelve peremptory challenges exercised 20 on that occasion. (4 CT 983.) Prior to the commencement of the exercise of that first set of 21 peremptory challenges, Klose was seated in the box with others randomly selected as the first 22 twelve prospective jurors. (8 RT 1407.) After the prosecutor excused Klose (8 RT 1414), another 23 fourteen prospective jurors were presented for challenge (8 RT 1414-18), nine of whom were 24 jointly excused by defendants (8 RT 1414-17 [Carpenter, Yost, Eisenbeisz, Wondra, Carroll, 25 Norling, Schriefer, L. Elliott, and Beauchamp]), and could have been preferred by the 26 prosecution. Hence, the record supports the prosecutor’s assertion.
27

1 Under the heading entitled “Criminal Justice Experience” and in response to the question, 2 “In your opinion, what are the most important causes of crime,” Soto replied “Drugs, alcohol, 3 little or no education.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 6 at 118.)

4 Under the heading “Criminal Justice Attitudes” and in response to whether he strongly 5 agreed, agreed somewhat, disagreed somewhat, or strongly disagreed with the statement “[a] 6 defendant in a criminal case is innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt,” Soto 7 indicated he strongly agreed with the statement and explained as follows: “There has been many 8 misunderstandings and many victims of circumstances. Therefore, a defendant should be 9 considered innocent until proven otherwise.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 6 at 118.) In response to 10 an inquiry posed as follows: “[i]f the prosecutor goes to the trouble of bringing someone to trial, 11 the person is probably guilty,” Soto indicated he both agreed and disagreed somewhat, and 12 explained that “[t]he prosecutor, most likely, is complying with rules & regulations, although 13 he/she may be neutral in the case.” (Id. at 119.) Asked whether he believed the prosecutor 14 should have a “lesser or greater” burden of proof depending upon the crime charged, Soto replied 15 affirmatively and wrote: “A line should not be drawn. Flexibility must exist depending on the 16 case.” (Id. at 119.)

17 In response to the section designed to understand the respondent’s “feelings about the 18 death penalty,” and particularly asking about Soto’s “general feelings regarding the death 19 penalty,” he indicated “support for it for specific cases in which a court decides that it is the 20 proper punishment.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 6 at 127.) In response to an inquiry seeking the 21 respondent’s “impressions of the penalty of life without the possibility of parole,” Soto provided 22 the following response: “For the victim himself would be a good choice versus the death penalty.
23 Our society feels safer with criminals behind bars.” (Id. at 127.) Asked what types of cases or 24 offenses warrant the death penalty, Soto indicated “Murder without reasonable doubt” and child 25 rape. (Id. at 128.) Asked whether anyone who rapes and mutilates another should get the death 26 penalty, he wrote: “No[t] without a hearing. Not unless is found guilty without doubt.” (Id. at 27 128.)

28 During voir dire, Soto responded to the court’s general inquiry about whether he had

1 strong feelings concerning the death penalty by indicating the following: “I don’t feel that I’m 2 totally qualified myself, to make such a big determination, so I have confidence on the laws.” (7 3 RT 1202.) The court and defense counsel made efforts to explain to Soto, and ensure he 4 understood, that the decision whether to impose the death penalty or a sentence of life without the 5 possibility of parole is a jury’s decision following a defendant’s conviction, rather than a decision 6 made by the judge or court. (7 RT 1202-04.) In an exchange wherein defense counsel Gable 7 sought to clarify Soto’s responses on the questionnaire, the following occurred:

9 [DEFENSE COUNSEL]: I noticed in your answer to the balance of the questions 10 on the questionnaire, that you, would be willing to look at all the facts in a case before you 11 make up your mind that one punishment or the other is appropriate; is that right?

12 A. Yes, I remember that.

13 Q. From that, I get the feeling that you are not a strong advocate of the death 14 penalty?

15 A. No, I’m not, not without.

16 Q. Pardon me.

17 A. Not without the backing of the statements I made here?

18 Q. So, could you see yourself, even in a case of a first-degree murder with a 19 robbery, where you found that to be true beyond a reasonable doubt, could you see 20 yourself honestly considering the evidence and voting, if you feel that that’s the right 21 decision for life without possibility of parole?

22 A. Yes, I would.

23 (7 RT 1204-05.) The prosecutor asked Soto a series of questions about his feelings regarding the 24 death penalty from a philosophical point of view versus the reality of making such a 25 determination; Soto indicated he could make the choice in reality. (7 RT 1205-06.) Later, during 26 questioning by defense counsel Holmes, Soto indicated a belief that a defendant should be 27 required to prove his innocence. (7 RT 1214.) When asked further about that belief, Soto 28 responded, “Well, I believe just by talking to the group over here, I’ve learned a few things today that I didn’t know at the time I was filling [out] the questionnaire.” He agreed he was “a little lost” and would “really have to re-evaluate my answer, I’m afraid I just come up with the right answer now.” (7 RT 1214-15.)

1                                    This Court's De Novo Review

2                    The prosecutor proffered the following reasons for exercising a peremptory challenge 3 against prospective juror Soto:

4                    Mr. Soto was a matter of comparison. [¶] I felt there were other jurors on the new 5 panel, and also in the jurors that I already selected who were better oriented to the 6 prosecution.

7                    Mr. Soto seemed to, in his responses to the Court and also in the questionnaire, his 8 attitude was that he would go along with the law. [¶] He said that he would support the 9 death penalty if the Court decides it's proper.

10                    On all the questions about who gets the death penalty, he would in certain, that he 11 disagreed unless a person were proven guilty. At one point in the questionnaire, he 12 mentioned, I forget the exact context, but he said that the defendant was the victim of the 13 death penalty.

14                    Mr. Soto also had a, apparently a situation where he was accused of kissing a 15 15 year-old girl in the Air Force and was found innocent. [¶] Given the responses in the 16 questionnaire where Mr. Soto was saying that the records were available, if necessary, and 17 he underlined that he was accused of kissing only, this girl; it appeared to me that he had 18 been through an at least quasi-criminal proceeding and had been found innocent, and for 19 that reason, would tend to identify with the defense, but primarily for the reason that it 20 appeared to me Mr. Soto avoided personal responsibility, and I felt that he could not 21 personally bring himself to vote for the death penalty in this case.

22 (8 RT 1442-43.) Petitioner alleges none of the reasons proffered by the prosecutor are supported 23 by the record.

24                    First, Petitioner claims the prosecutor's purported race-neutral explanation "is belied by 25 the fact Mr. Soto was the last peremptory challenge that the prosecutor exercised in the first 26 group," thus, "there were no venire members from which to choose." (ECF No. 330 at 188.)
27 Petitioner is mistaken.

28                    On the afternoon of March 20, 1989, the first exercise of peremptory challenges began with those prospective jurors comprising the original panel number 497. (4 CT 983.) Soto was among this original panel. (4 CT 962.) And the prosecutor did in fact exercise his twelfth and last challenge of the day against Soto. (8 RT 1417-18.) But, contrary to Petitioner's assertion, more than ten venirepersons from that original panel remained following this initial exercise of 1 peremptory challenges. Immediately after Soto was excused, the trial court read the eleven 2 names of those who remained, and then stated the following: “Counsel, if you’ll take a moment 3 while these 11 people are before you, and consider whether or not you expect to have challenges 4 of these individuals ...” (8 RT 1418.) As a result, the prosecutor’s statement there were “jurors 5 that I already selected who were better oriented to the prosecution” is supported by the record.

6 And the prosecutor’s reference to “other jurors on the new panel” is supported by the record as 7 well where the trial court advised the remaining members of panel 947 that the court and counsel 8 “are going to have to interview more people and go through the process for a few more days ...”
9 (8 RT 1419.) It further advised them that while they were not “definitely on the jury,” they were 10 “definitely down to a more final group.” (8 RT 1421.) Once the prospective jurors were excused 11 for the afternoon, the court ordered a new panel of prospective jurors for the following morning.
12 (8 RT 1421-22; 4 CT 984.) It was reasonable to infer that amongst a new panel of prospective 13 jurors will be those persons better suited from the prosecution perspective, regardless of whether 14 the new panel venirepersons had not yet completed the questionnaire.

17         Second, Petitioner argues the prosecutor’s fears or concerns about Soto’s feelings on the 18 death penalty “should have been allayed” by Soto’s explanation of his written response on the 19 questionnaire. (ECF No. 330 at 188-90.) Petitioner’s argument, however, does nothing more 20 than ask this court to substitute his interpretation of Soto’s questionnaire responses and voir dire 21 testimony for that of the prosecutor. But that is not the court’s task, even if it were so inclined.
22

23         In any event, the record supports the prosecutor’s reason. Soto often gave answers that 24 could reasonably be inferred to indicate a potential hesitancy about voting for the death penalty.
25 Those answers include his questionnaire response: “I support [the death penalty] for specific 26 cases in which a court decides that it is the proper punishment” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 6 at 27 127.) He also used language pertaining to the burden of proof that affected the prosecutor’s 28

1 reference to a potential hesitancy: Soto stated “murder without reasonable doubt” might be an 2 offense wherein the death penalty should be imposed and indicated he strongly disagreed with the 3 death penalty applying where an individual rapes and mutilates, explaining “[n]ot unless is found 4 guilty without doubts.” (Id. at 128 (italics added).) Without doubt is obviously a greater burden 5 than beyond a reasonable doubt. The prosecutor also referenced Soto’s response that “the 6 defendant was the victim of the death penalty” as a factor in his decision. (8 RT 1443.) That is a 7 reference to Soto’s questionnaire. Respondents were asked about their impressions of the penalty 8 life without the possibility of parole; Soto wrote “[f]or the victim himself would be a good choice 9 versus the death penalty.” (ECF 302, Vol. I., Ex. 6 at 127.) It is certainly an awkward statement 10 and one that could reasonably be interpreted to express potential sympathy for an individual 11 facing the death penalty or a sentence of life in prison without the possibility of parole. The 12 question asked for the respondent’s impression of the death penalty, rather than the impression of 13 either the victim or the accused. This court acknowledges that when defense counsel asked Soto 14 about his response during voir dire, Soto corrected himself, stating he meant to refer to the 15 “accused” rather than the victim of the crime. (7 RT 1204.) Again however, a prosecutor can 16 accord more weight to responses given in the questionnaire. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.
17 The prosecutor was not bound to accept Soto’s explanation.

21 To the degree Petitioner argues the prosecutor was obligated to ask Soto questions 22 pertaining to the statement on the questionnaire indicating his support of the death penalty where 23 a court decides it is proper (ECF No. 330 at 191), the fact the prosecutor did not ask a specific 24 question or questions on that subject is not indicative of pretext where he did address the subject 25 of the death penalty more broadly in light of Soto’s responses in the questionnaire. (7 RT 1205-26 06.) Often a prosecutor is required to “make fine judgment calls about which jurors are more or 27 less willing to vote for the ultimate punishment” and those “judgment calls may involve a 28

1 comparison of responses that differ only in nuanced respects, as well as a sensitive assessment of 2 jurors' demeanor." Davis v. Ayala, 135 S. Ct. at 2201. And the undersigned notes that Soto's 3 response is neither "ambiguous" nor "amorphous" and does not otherwise cause speculation.

4 The record reveals other responses offered by Soto could reasonably be inferred to 5 indicate a hesitancy to impose the death penalty. In response to the court's initial inquiry into 6 whether he had any strong feelings about the death penalty, either for or against it, Soto replied: 7 "I think for the most part, I have, I would agree with the laws and go along with the views from 8 the top. I have no question, I have never questioned it - - I don't feel that I'm totally qualified 9 myself, to make such a big determination, so I have confidence in the laws." (7 RT 1201.) He 10 did later indicate he understood the jury made the penalty determination and that he could do so 11 personally. (7 RT 1203-04.)

14 Next, Petitioner complains the prosecutor's credibility is undercut by the fact he did not 15 ask Soto any questions about the Air Force allegations and related proceeding. He claims the 16 prosecutor's credibility is further damaged because other Caucasian jurors had "circumstances in 17 their background that might raise similar concerns." (ECF 330 at 191-93.)

18 Question number 15 on the questionnaire asks whether the respondent served in the 19 military. Soto replied in the affirmative and identified the "United States Air Force." He 20 answered three sub-part questions pertaining to dates of service, rank and station locations, before 21 checking the "Yes" box in response to the last sub-part inquiry: "Were you ever involved in any 22 way with military law enforcement, court martials or investigations?" Explaining his 23 involvement, Soto wrote, "Investigation only of kissing (only) a 15 year old girl. Found innocent 24 and officially so stated by the Staff Judge Advocate (1984) Records available." (ECF No. 302, 25 Vol. I, Ex. 6 at 112.)<sup>12</sup>

1 The prosecutor did not ask Soto about this issue during voir dire. (7 RT 1205-08.)
2 Neither did defense counsel for either party. (7 RT 1203-05, 1208-15.) The court notes that 3 Petitioner has failed to cite to any specific legal authority in support of his position that because 4 the prosecutor did not ask Soto about the Air Force investigation into the kissing incident his 5 “credibility is undercut.” United States v. Karl, 264 Fed.Appx. at 553; Heft v. Moore, 351 F.3d at 6 285.

7 In any event, the undersigned finds the fact the prosecutor did not ask Soto any questions
8 pertaining to this incident does not “undercut” or call into question his credibility. Soto’s 9 questionnaire response was readily understood as written. There is no ambiguity about the 10 incident giving rise to the quasi criminal proceeding as Soto describes having been accused of 11 “kissing (only) a 15 year old girl.” Neither is there any ambiguity about the outcome of the 12 proceeding as Soto indicated the military decisionmaker found him “innocent” in 1984, and that 13 records of the proceeding were available. Written responses such as this may be permissibly 14 accorded greater weight and are race neutral. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820.

15 At oral argument, in response to defense counsel’s comment that he did not inquire into 16 the Air Force incident, the prosecutor noted that “[o]n voir dire, again, I thought that [Soto’s] 17 answers on the questionnaire were extremely telling, and I didn’t have any desire to get less 18 candid responses, simply so that he might fit in.” (10 RT 1968-69.) After reading the content of 19 Soto’s explanation for the incident during oral argument, the prosecutor commented further on 20 the issue:

21 This was obviously a very important matter with Mr. Soto, and in much the same 22 way as the woman whose son had been tried and acquitted for murder, I think Mr. Soto 23 had been through a quasi criminal investigation and acquittal, and I think that with all his 24 might, he was hoping through all of that, that he would be acquitted.

25 Those kinds of incidents cannot be ignored, and I don’t think my failure to inquire 26 further of it orally is probative.

27 (10 RT 1969.) This circumstance is unlike that in Miller-El v. Dretke, upon which Petitioner 28 relies. In that case, the prosecutor either misunderstood or misstated a juror’s comments about crime. He checked the “No” box in his questionnaire. (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 6 at 117.)

1 rehabilitation. When defense counsel pointed out the error, the prosecutor neither defended nor 2 withdrew his strike, and instead suddenly offered a prior conviction of the juror's brother as 3 another reason for exercising a peremptory challenge. Miller-El, 545 U.S. at 247-48. Here, the 4 prosecutor did not misstate any portion of Soto's response concerning the Air Force inquiry.
5 Moreover, the prosecutor did not offer this reason as a basis for excusal only after being 6 challenged by defense counsel.

8 As previously noted, sympathy for or identifying with a defendant, regardless of whether 9 the identifying feature relates to the merits of the case, is relevant to a Batson challenge. Jamerson 10 v. Runnels, 713 F.3d at 1229; Ngo v. Giurbino, 651 F.3d at 1116-17 (not wanting a juror "who 11 felt he had been wrongfully accused of a crime" was an appropriate race-neutral justification for 12 striking a prospective juror). It is reasonable to infer from Soto's questionnaire response that he 13 felt he had been wrongfully accused of kissing an underage girl; the prosecutor's desire to 14 exclude Soto from serving as a juror on this basis is a race-neutral justification supported by the 15 record. And, nothing about the questions the prosecutor asked or failed to ask Soto suggests that 16 he was attempting to manufacture a reason to exclude Soto.

18 Lastly, Petitioner contends there is no support in the record for the prosecutor's assertion 19 that Soto avoided personal responsibility and would not vote for the death penalty. (ECF Doc.

22 In addition to indicating his belief that Soto "avoided personal responsibility" and feeling 23 that Soto could not vote in favor of the death penalty, the prosecutor addressed the issue further at 24 oral argument on the motion:

25 Regarding Mr. Soto [h]e, again, I had stated that I felt he avoided personal 26 responsibility, could not bring himself to vote for the death penalty, on all the what I've called the who-gets questions.

27 Mr. Soto strongly disagreed, he had different causes on each.

28 He would say, "Well, not without a hearing, found guilty without doubts, on the rape only," and although, as Counsel points out, those may be correct answers, I think the 1 justifications that a juror summons up from himself in answering those questions, gives 2 me an idea of where that juror's tendencies lie, and in those questions about imposing the 3 death penalty, when a juror consistently summons up from himself reasons why the death penalty may not be appropriate, I put great weight on that.

4 (10 RT 1968.) Again, a prosecutor can accord more weight to the response in a questionnaire 5 than that offered during voir dire. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 820. Soto did indicate that he 6 strongly disagreed with all but one of the statements in the portion of the questionnaire 7 specifically addressing the death penalty, and the explanations provided as to each can be 8 reasonably inferred to further qualify his response in a manner consistent with a hesitancy to 9 assign responsibility.

11 Reading the entirety of Soto's voir dire testimony, coupled with a review of his completed 12 questionnaire, reveals adequate support for the prosecutor's stated reasons, even where the 13 undersigned acknowledges Soto gave other responses that could be interpreted as "an ideal juror 14 for the prosecutor," to use Petitioner's words.

15 Despite Petitioner's oft-repeated argument, this court finds the trial court's ruling need not 16 include express findings regarding the prosecutor's credibility where the record establishes the 17 trial court implicitly accepted those reasons. Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. at 341-42; McDaniels v.
18 Kirkland, 813 F.3d at 777-78.

20 Maximina Troyer

21 Maximina Troyer's questionnaire indicates she identified her race and ethnic origin as 22 "American Indian-Mexican-Spanish." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 2 at 27.)

23 Under the heading entitled "Criminal Justice Experience" and in response to a question 24 about whether any family members had been victims of crime, Troyer indicated on six occasions 25 her family members had been victims of crime, including "murder kidnapping-assault assault & 26 battery." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 2 at 30.) Number 48 of this section asked whether any family 27 member had been accused or arrested for a crime. Troyer responded in the affirmative and 28

1 explained as follows: “Young man shot – ruled self-defense all charges dropped.” (Id. at 30.)

2 In the section designed to understand the respondent’s “feelings about the death penalty,” 3 and particularly asking about Troyer’s “general feelings regarding the death penalty,” she wrote 4 the following:

5 I myself do not think I would have started a death penalty. But since it is in the 6 law books it must be put into effect if all the facts that come out in trial convince a jury 7 that all that the prosecutor’s charged has been found proven beyond a reasonable doubt to 8 a moral certainty.

9 (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 2 at 40.) Asked what purpose the death penalty serves, Troyer replied, 10 “In some cases it does not seem to serve any.” (Id. at 40.) Also, her impression of life without 11 the possibility of parole was “better than the death penalty.” (Id. at 40.)

12 During voir dire, when the court inquired of Troyer whether she had strong feelings about 13 the death penalty, she replied, “I would say I do.” (7 RT 1220.) She explained she is “against it, 14 because I don’t think that it has that much of an effect on people, they still keep on doing these 15 things.” (7 RT 1220.) After making a brief statement about the jury’s role in a capital case and 16 referencing the applicable burdens of proof, the following exchange occurred between the court 17 and Troyer:

18 [COURT]: If you were put in that situation and if you in your own heart felt that 19 the appropriate penalty was the death penalty, would you be able to vote that way?

20 [PROSPECTIVE JUROR]: Well, I would have to go that way, I would have to, I 21 would feel that I had to vote that way.

22 Q. Okay. And if you in your own heart felt that the appropriate penalty was life in 23 prison, would you be able to vote that way?

24 A. If I felt that life imprisonment was –

25 Q. Was, just –

26 A. A just verdict?

27 A. Well, I would have to go by the evidence, and if it seemed suitable, that the 28 death penalty was necessary, I’d have to vote that way.

Q. Okay. Now, you used the term “have to,” and again, the law –

A. No, no, I would have to, that’s how I would go.

Q. Okay, that’s –

A. Not that the law is making me –

Q. I thought that’s what you meant, ‘cause you understand the law doesn’t direct you one way or the other . . .

1 (7 RT 1221-22.)

2 During questioning by defense counsel Gable, asked if she would “meaningfully 3 consider” the death penalty despite not favoring it, Troyer replied, “That’s what I feel, that I have 4 to consider it, and I have to go with what I feel – After all the facts and everything are in.” (7 RT 5 1223.) When pressed a bit further, Troyer explained that the jury selection process and 6 questionnaire were on her mind. (7 RT 1224.) “I even called the priest and spoke with him, and 7 it’s just like what I thought, it has to be a final on the jury, then I have to make the decision.” (7

10 The prosecutor asked a series of questions concerning Troyer’s feelings about the death 11 penalty. Asked what purpose she believed the death penalty served if both the death penalty and 12 a sentence of life without the possibility of parole removed the convicted individual from society 13 for all time, Troyer replied that she “really didn’t see the purpose.” (7 RT 1224-25.) When 14 asked, “philosophically, can you imagine any purpose that the death penalty would serve,” Troyer 15 stated as follows: “That I feel, no, I don’t feel that,” before indicating she would perform her duty 16 as a juror if selected. (7 RT 1226.) She further indicated, “I’m going to do what I feel I have to 17 do, and if that’s part of what I have to do, I can do it.” (7 RT 1227.)

19 The prosecutor also inquired of Troyer about her reference on the questionnaire to several 20 family members who had been victims of crime. (7 RT 1227-29.)

21 This Court’s De Novo Review

23 Initially, the court acknowledges that Petitioner recites the prosecutor’s first proffered 24 reason as he “just plain wanted her gone,” claiming that reason is “invalid” and “could be a 25 pretext for discrimination.” (ECF No. 330 at 155.) However, a review of the record reveals that, 26 in context, the prosecutor’s statement was not an independent reason for exercising the challenge, 27 but rather an introductory remark:
28

1 . . . with Miss Troyer, and with Miss Troyer, it was not a matter of comparison 2 with other jurors; I just plain wanted her gone.

3 She mentioned in voir dire that she had strong feelings against the death penalty, 4 that it had no effect. In fact, she mentioned she had to speak with her priest after filling 5 out the questionnaire about the death penalty situation.

6 Further, and primarily, she - - her son had been to trial for a - - apparently a 7 murder charge and was acquitted.

8 I felt that I could not count on her as, to be fair and impartial, particularly on the 9 death penalty question, but also on the guilt question, given the experience with her son.

10 (8 RT 1437-38.)

11 The prosecutor proffered two reasons for exercising a peremptory challenge against 12 Troyer: her strong feelings in opposition to the death penalty, and the fact her son had been tried 13 and acquitted of murder, leading the prosecutor to believe she could not be fair and impartial.

14 As to the prosecutor's belief that Troyer had strong feelings against the death penalty, the 15 record supports his statement. In preliminary voir dire by the court, when asked whether she had 16 any strong feeling concerning the death penalty, Troyer replied "I would say I do," explaining she 17 was "against it, because [she didn't] think that it has that much of an effect on people." (7 RT 18 1220.) During questioning by defense counsel Gable, asked whether she could meaningfully 19 consider the death penalty although she did not favor it, Troyer replied, "That's what I feel, that I 20 have to consider it, and I have to go with what I feel - - After all the facts and everything are in."
21 (7 RT 1223.) She then indicated that the jury selection process and the questionnaire had been on 22 her mind, indicating she "even called the priest and spoke with him, and it's just like what I 23 thought, it has to be a final on the jury, then I have to make the decision." (7 RT 1224.) When 24 the prosecutor questioned Troyer about the purpose of the death penalty, she indicated that she 25 really didn't "see the purpose." (7 RT 1224-25.) When the prosecutor further inquired of Troyer 26 whether she could "imagine any purpose of that the death penalty would serve," she stated the 27 following: "that I feel, no, I don't feel that," before indicating she would perform her duty as a 28 juror if selected. (7 RT 1226.) Plainly then, the record supports the prosecutor's stated first 1 reason for exercising a peremptory challenge against Troyer.

2           Petitioner argues Troyer’s responses indicate she was “careful and attentive in completing 3 her questionnaire,” and her answers “unequivocally” indicate she would consider the death 4 penalty. (ECF No. 330 at 156-57.) The undersigned’s review of the record does not support 5 Petitioner’s characterization of Troyer’s responses as unequivocal. A fair reading of the record 6 supports the prosecutor’s belief because Troyer continually used language that could reasonably 7 be inferred to convey a sense of duty in spite of a personal opposition to the death penalty.
8 Troyer’s repeated use of phrases that included the words “have to” or “had to” in response to 9 inquiries by the court, defense counsel and the prosecutor are evident throughout. (E.g., 7 RT 10 1221 [“I would have to go that way, would have to, I would feel that I had to vote that way,” “I’d 11 have to vote that way”], 1224 [“it has to be final on the jury, then I have to make the decision”], 12 1227 [“I’m going to do what I feel I have to do, and if that’s part of what I have to do, I can do 13 it”].) In response to the court asking about her use of “the term ‘have to,” Troyer did indicate that 14 “the law” was not “making” her choose the death penalty, but the prosecutor was not required to 15 accept the statement. The record supports the prosecutor’s stated reason and the trial court found 16 the prosecutor to be credible. While a reasonable inference might also be that Troyer was 17 “careful and attentive,” Petitioner’s interpretation is not the only interpretation supported by the 18 record.
19

21 22           Notably too, Troyer’s questionnaire responses in the portion pertaining specifically to the 23 death penalty, also support the prosecutor’s stated belief that Troyer could not be fair and 24 impartial. Asked her general feelings regarding the death penalty, Troyer began her response by 25 writing, “I myself do not think I would have started a death penalty.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 2 26 at 40.) Troyer’s impression of the penalty of life without the possibility of parole was “better 27 than the death penalty.” (Id. at 40.)
28

1 The prosecutor's second reason for excusing Troyer is also supported by the record. On 2 the questionnaire, pertaining to the respondent's criminal justice experience, Troyer identified a 3 son, daughter and granddaughter as having been victims of crime. Asked what kind of crimes 4 were involved, she wrote: "murder kidnapping-assault assault & battery." (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, 5 Ex. 2 at 30.) In another criminal justice experience inquiry, when asked whether any member of 6 her family or friend had ever been accused of or arrested for a crime, Troyer checked the box 7 "yes." Asked to describe the nature of the accusation or offense, she wrote "Young man shot – 8 ruled self-defen[s]e all charges dropped." (Id. at 30.) These responses are ambiguous as to who 9 was involved in what incident, as well as what role the individual played, to wit: victim or actor.
10

11 During voir dire, the prosecutor asked Troyer about her responses:

12 MR. MARLETTE: Now, you mentioned, I have a couple of questions from your 13 responses on the questionnaire.

14 It appears that somebody was the victim of a crime, and you listed a couple people 15 that, your son, a daughter and some granddaughters were victims of crime, including 16 murder, kidnaping and assault, and assault and battery.

17 A. Uh-huh.

18 Q. Is that all one situation, or different situations?

19 A. No, different situations. But they came to Court, some, you know, like I'm 20 doing now, they got their day in court, like I feel he's going to get, somebody did this job, 21 if I'm picked it will be my job, I'm prepared. Doesn't matter what went on with my 22 family, or didn't go on with my family, it's just something I feel.

23 Q. Can you tell us what each one of those situations was?

24 A. The first one with two sons, there was a shooting and my son was brought to a 25 trial and he was acquitted; it was self-defense.

26 .....
27 Q. In the situation with your son, how, when he was taken to trial, how long ago 28 was that?

A. Eight years ago.

Q. And do you realize that he would have been prosecuted by somebody, was that here in Sacramento?

A. Yes.

Q. He would have been prosecuted by somebody from my office?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Would that have any effect on your feelings about me or your feelings about this trial?

A. No, I don't think so, because the law said he had to go to court on it, he went to court, he was set free, he had his day in court. That's what the system is supposed to be about.

1 Q. And you mentioned a murder, as well?
2 A. It was a murder that he was charged with.
3 Q. Oh, the young man died?
4 A. Uh-huh yes.

4 (7 RT 1227-29.)

5 “A prospective juror’s negative experience with the criminal justice system, including 6 arrest, is a legitimate, race-neutral reason for excusing the juror.” People v. Cowan, 50 Cal.4th 7 401, 450 (2010) (prospective juror arrested for welfare fraud); People v. Lenix, 44 Cal.4th 602, 8 628 (2008) (negative experience concerning traffic ticket received by prospective juror upheld); 9 People v. Wheeler, 22 Cal.3d at 277 & n.18 (relative convicted of crime “give[s] rise to a 10 significant potential for bias against the prosecution”); United States v. Vaccaro, 816 F.2d 443, 11 457 (9th Cir. 1987) (associations by blood or marriage constitute a proper for the potential juror’s 12 exclusion) (overruled on other grounds, Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S. 61 (1988)). This 13 is true whether it is the juror herself or a family member who was involved. People v. Cowan, 50 14 Cal.4th at 450. The record in this case supports the prosecutor’s feeling that he could not count on 15 Troyer being fair and impartial in light of her son having been tried and acquitted of murder and 16 she identified her son as a victim on the questionnaire.

19 Petitioner’s argument that while the record supports “the prosecutor’s explanation that he 20 struck Mrs. Troyer because her son had been charged and acquitted,” it did not support his 21 “assumption that that fact would make Mrs. Troyer biased against the prosecutor.” (ECF No. 330 22 at 158.) This argument, however, ignores the Batson/Wheeler standard which requires the court 23 to consider the subjective genuineness, not the objective reasonableness, of the prosecutor’s 24 nondiscriminatory reasons for excusing prospective jurors. People v. Reynoso, 31 Cal.4th 903, 25 924 (2003) Here, the prosecutor’s belief is neither implausible nor fantastic. Purkett v. Elem, 26 514 U.S. at 768.

28 Lastly, Petitioner complains “the trial court did not analyze any of the prosecutor’s

1 reasons, finding instead that all of his reasons, regarding Mrs. Troyer and the six other jurors, 2 were not ‘sham excuses.’” He claims the finding “did not result from a careful and sensitive 3 inquiry into the prosecutor’s motives.” (ECF No. 330 at 159.) As previously concluded, the 4 record reveals otherwise. Again, the trial court indicated it had spent many hours reviewing the 5 voir dire transcripts, the questionnaires prepared by “the seven individuals in question” as well as 6 the questionnaires of “other individuals that were excused by the prosecution.” (11 RT 2178.)
7 The trial court indicated following that review that it was “satisfied that in reviewing the manner 8 in which the prosecution examined the members of the panel and exercised challenges, that 9 certainly it does not prove that he was trying to exclude a cognizable group” and that the 10 prosecutor “was able to put forth neutral explanations” that it was satisfied were “not just sham 11 excuses that were contrived to avoid admitting acts of group discrimination.” (11 RT 2180.) 12 Again, it is widely acknowledged that the trial judge is in the best position to evaluate the 13 prosecutor’s credibility. Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. at 343; Hernandez v. New York, 500 U.S. 352 14 (1991). The undersigned finds the trial court’s ruling more than sufficient. Batson v. Kentucky, 15 476 U.S. at 93; McDaniels v. Kirkland, 813 F.3d at 777-78.

18 Comparative Analyses

19 Comparative juror analysis bears on the question of the prosecutor’s credibility. Snyder v.
20 Louisiana, 552 U.S. at 482-85.

21 The court must compare the prosecutor’s treatment of challenged jurors with that of any 22 retained jurors who are of a different race but share characteristics identified as objectionable by 23 the prosecutor. Disparate treatment of similarly situated jurors may demonstrate that a 24 prosecutor’s facially race neutral reasons are a pretext for discrimination. See Snyder v.
25 Louisiana, 552 U.S. at 482-83; Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. at 240. If a reason given by a 26 prosecutor as a basis to utilize a peremptory strike against a juror who is a member of a 27 cognizable racial group applies equally to a retained juror not of that race, the reason may be 28

1 considered pretextual. See Miller-El, at 241 (“If a prosecutor’s proffered reason for striking a 2 black panelist applies just as well to an otherwise-similar nonblack who is permitted to serve, that 3 evidence is tending to prove purposeful discrimination to be considered at Batson’s third step”).

4 The ultimate question is whether the exercise of the peremptory challenge was “motivated 5 in substantial part” by race. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 815. If the answer is yes, relief must 6 be granted. The inquiry is limited to whether the prosecutor was motivated in substantial part by 7 a discriminatory intent, not whether the discriminatory motive was the “but for” cause. Id. at 8 814-15. Inconsistent concern about a facially legitimate factor suggests pretext. Lewis v. Lewis, 9 321 F.3d 824, 830-31 (9th Cir. 2003). “Comparative juror analysis involves determining whether 10 non-challenged jurors possess any of the characteristics on which the prosecution challenged 11 jurors in the protected group.” Young v. Gipson, 163 F.Supp.3d 647, 673 (E.D. Cal. 2015).

12 Although all jury questionnaires were not provided as a part of the record, the voir dire 13 transcript may provide a basis for the comparative analysis. Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. at 241, 14 n.2.

15 James Del Rosario

16 As previously noted, the prosecutor indicated he struck Del Rosario due to his feelings 17 about the death penalty and because he favored imposition of a life without the possibility of 18 parole sentence over imposition of the death penalty. The prosecutor also indicated Del Rosario’s 19 statement concerning solving the crime problem was a reason, and because Del Rosario compared 20 unfavorably to other jurors. Petitioner has not argued that a comparison of other empaneled 21 jurors reveals discriminatory motive, nor has he engaged in any such comparison. Nevertheless, 22 the court has engaged in a comparative analysis and finds support for the prosecutor’s dismissal 23 of Del Rosario as a result.

24 Unlike Del Rosario’s response to the court’s inquiry about whether they had strong 25 feelings concerning the death penalty (“it depends,” qualifying he “worr[ies] about how the crime 26 is committed”), jurors Barnes, Bass, King, Lambert, Ralston, Reisinger, Gill, Cox, Atwood, 27 Williams, Wells, Cummings, and Greathouse indicated they had no particularly strong feelings

1 and expressed no anguish or apprehension about it.<sup>13</sup> (3 RT 514, 532; 5 RT 920, 970-971; 6 RT
2 1096; 8 RT 1396; 9 RT 1753, 1857-58; 11 RT 2121; 12 RT 2389, 2460, 2504, 2555.) Even Juror 3 Novak, who originally qualified, “No, not really. It just depends on the particular case and the 4 circumstances,” did not also express apprehension. (12 RT 2487.) Additionally, unlike Del 5 Rosario, the voir dire responses of ultimately-empaneled jurors Barnes, Bass, King, Lambert, 6 Ralston, Trimble, Reisinger, Gill, Cox, Atwood, Wells, Novak, Cummings and Greathouse did 7 not indicate they favored one penalty over another. (3 RT 516-18, 533-35; 5 RT 922-25, 972-78;
8 6 RT 1101; 7 RT 1234-35; 8 RT 1398-400; 9 RT 1756-57, 1859-62; 11 RT 2122-25, 2128; 12 RT 9 2389-401, 2459-76, 2486-502, 2503-15, 2556-59.)

10 Petitioner observed that Del Rosario at one point, despite indicating he would lean 11 towards a sentence of life without the possibility of parole where the felony murder rule was 12 involved (distinguishing the circumstance from those involving premeditation and planning), 13 replied he would not vote for the death penalty “at this time” in response to the prosecutor asking 14 whether he could vote for the death penalty if he felt it was appropriate. (4 RT 690.) Notably, the 15 prosecutor received a similar response from another prospective juror. (10 RT 1932 [Candlish 16 replied “don’t feel that would be a problem” “[a]t this time” in response to prosecutor’s inquiry 17 whether there was “anything in [her] mind that would tell her she “could never vote” for the death 18 penalty].) During the second peremptory challenge series, the prosecutor exercised a challenge 19 against the non-minority juror. (11 RT 2199.)

20 Notably too, the court’s review revealed Del Rosario’s response to the inquiry by the court 21 regarding strong feelings about the death penalty disclosed it to be similar to that offered by two 22 other prospective jurors against whom the prosecutor exercised a challenge, to wit: Leon Soto and 23 Katrina George. When asked whether he had any strong feelings about the death penalty 24 generally, Soto replied, “I think for the most part, I have, I would agree with the laws and go 25 along with the views from the top. I have no question, I have never questioned it - - I don’t feel 26 that I’m totally qualified myself, to make such a big determination, so I have confidence in the

27 <sup>13</sup> Jurors Trimble and Ceaglio indicated they were in favor of the death penalty. (7 RT 1234; 12
28 RT 2402.)

1 laws.” (7 RT 1201.) In response to the same question, George responded, “I’m not for it, but I’m 2 not against it either.” The court replied, “Okay,” and George qualified her response as follows: “I 3 don’t feel like I even want to make that decision if it came to that.” Asked why she felt that way, 4 George continued, “Well, I don’t know. I just feel like the death penalty - - It serves a purpose.
5 I’m not sure what that purpose is. [¶] A person can do so much wrong. There is a way - - There 6 is no way to change it or nothing, but there is a way that we can keep them at a certain state of 7 mind in society without putting him to death. . . . I’m not the one to make that decision.” (9 RT 8 1796.) Both Soto and George, like Del Rosario, qualified their responses to the court’s inquiry.
9 And as to both Soto and George, each expressed obvious reluctance to make a finding that an 10 individual be sentenced to death. Therefore, the record reveals the prosecutor was consistent 11 regarding his concerns, further suggesting a lack of pretext. Lewis v. Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830-31.

12 Moreover, a review of the record reveals the prosecutor exercised peremptory challenges 13 against prospective jurors who did not apparently identify as either African-American, Hispanic 14 or of mixed race, where a similar, qualified response was given to the court’s inquiry about 15 whether the juror had strong feelings about the death penalty. See, for example, the responses 16 given by prospective jurors Allen and Franchino. (3 RT 480; 9 RT 1570.)

17 None of the empaneled jurors can be said to have responded similarly to Del Rosario 18 when asked about their opinion concerning a solution to the crime problem because none were 19 asked that question on voir dire, nor are their questionnaires a part of this record. As a result, 20 comparative analysis is of no help. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 817 (comparison to a juror 21 who is not “otherwise similar” nullifies the comparative value).

22 Charso Elliott

23 As noted previously, the prosecutor’s reasons for striking Elliott include her feelings 24 regarding the death penalty and preference for the life without possibility of parole sentence, a 25 specific response indicating a burden of “beyond any shade of doubt,” and where the prosecutor 26 believed other prospective jurors “would be better” from his point of view.

27 Petitioner argues the prosecutor’s failure to clarify some of Elliott’s answers on the 28 questionnaire regarding her feeling on the death penalty is similar to his approach with 1 prospective juror Gonzales and dissimilar to empaneled jurors King, Cox, Lambert and Reisinger.

2 (ECF No. 330 at 174.) However, a review of the record reveals there were several factors 3 considered by the prosecutor relative to his ultimate determination about Elliott’s feelings about 4 the death penalty and his concern that he could not “count on” her “for a death penalty vote.” It 5 was not merely one answer in either the questionnaire or during her voir dire testimony.

6 In any event, in the case of empaneled juror King, the prosecutor did ask her whether she 7 believed the death penalty should not be an option in cases that are less extreme than those 8 identified in her response, referring to “Ted Bundy and Charles Manson, mass murderers and so 9 on.” (5 RT 924.) Empaneled juror Lambert was asked about his belief “that the death penalty 10 would be appropriate in cases of first-degree murder with premeditation.” (5 RT 975.) In the 11 case of empaneled juror Reisinger, he was asked about his questionnaire response wherein he 12 “felt the death penalty would be appropriate, if there were special circumstances.” (8 RT 1399.) 13 The question was posed to make a distinction between “special circumstances” as a legal term of 14 art versus its meaning to a lay person. (8 RT 1399-400.) Empaneled juror Cox was asked about 15 her questionnaire response “in a couple of places that you felt the death penalty would be 16 appropriate, or might be appropriate in the case of serial killers.” (9 RT 1861.)

17 It is accurate to state that the prosecutor did not ask a clarifying question of Elliott 18 regarding her questionnaire response concerning the type of case where imposition of the death 19 penalty might be appropriate. (4 RT 738-44.) However, the fact he did ask clarifying questions 20 of four other empaneled jurors does not automatically lead to the conclusion his reasons relating 21 to Elliott were a pretext. Briggs v. Grounds, 682 F.3d at 1176 (“The fact that seated jurors shared 22 one of those characteristics does not ineluctably lead to the conclusion that the prosecutor’s 23 concern was pretextual”).

24 Not one of the seat jurors shares all of the troubling characteristics the prosecutor 25 identified as contributing to Elliott’s excusal, to wit: she felt the death penalty served no purpose 26 and that it might be appropriate for serial and mass murders; she exhibited significant confusion 27 regarding an understanding of “life without the possibility of parole,” and that once she 28 understood the penalty she seemed to favor it; she noted in her questionnaire in response to the

1 statement, “[p]ersons sentenced to the death penalty should be swiftly executed” that she 2 somewhat agreed and added “[n]ot all people sentenced to death is guilty;” and “she would have 3 to be convinced beyond any shade of doubt” as to Petitioner’s guilt. Again, sharing one of those 4 characteristics – referencing serial killers, mass murders or the like in response to a question 5 posed in the specific portion of the juror questionnaire pertaining to the prospective jurors’ 6 feelings on the death penalty – does not make the existence of pretext inevitable.

7 Over and above these findings, a review of the record concerning voir dire testimony by 8 other prospective jurors against whom the prosecutor exercised a peremptory challenge reveals 9 favoring a life without the possibility of parole sentence over the death penalty and/or confusion 10 concerning relevant concepts led to the exercise of a peremptory challenge by the prosecutor.
11 (See 2 RT 479-511 [Allen; challenged for cause]; 9 RT 1669-76 [Garland], 1824-38 [Daniels]; 11 12 RT 2056-74 [McLaughlin; challenged for cause], 2078-101 [Bragdon; challenged for cause], 13 2101-12 [Packard].) Further, a review of the voir dire testimony of other prospective jurors 14 reveals the prosecutor excused others who seemed to indicate a greater burden of proof, over and 15 above beyond a reasonable doubt, might be expected in a case such as this. (See 9 RT 1570-83 16 [Franchino] & 1599-610 [Ringo].) The record reveals the prosecutor’s reasons for excusing 17 Elliott were consistently applied. Lewis v. Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830-31.

18 Sylvia Gonzalez

19 Petitioner contends a comparison of the prosecutor’s voir dire of Gonzalez to that of 20 empaneled jurors King, Cox, Lambert and Reisinger establishes that the prosecutor’s first 21 proffered reason for exercising a peremptory challenge against Gonzalez is not supported by the 22 record. (ECF No. 281-1 at 186-187.) The court finds otherwise.

23 Petitioner makes much of the fact that the prosecutor did not ask Gonzalez “what she 24 meant by extremely brutal or without mercy” when responding to questions pertaining to her 25 feelings about the death penalty. Petitioner’s argument assumes such a question was necessary, 26 yet those words and phrases are commonly understood without elaboration. Assuming 27 elaboration was needed, the undersigned finds it relevant to note that Gonzalez was questioned 28 early in the voir dire process. In fact, she was 19th of more than 119 prospective jurors subject to

1 voir dire.<sup>14</sup> By comparison, King was 25th, Lambert was 28th, Reisinger was 56th, and Cox was 2 77th. Jury selection is a fluid process, and it hardly seems unusual that an attorney's technique
3 would develop and change as the process proceeded. See People v. Hartsch, 49 Cal.4th 472, 489, 4 fn.16 (2010); People v. Lenix, 44 Cal.4th at 623. Moreover, the fact that a juror or jurors who 5 ultimately served also shared one of the characteristics with a juror excused by peremptory 6 challenge does not automatically lead to the conclusion that a prosecutor's concern was 7 pretextual. Briggs v. Grounds, 682 F.3d at 1176.

8 With regard to the questions the prosecutor subsequently posed to juror King, the court 9 notes the clarifying questions addressed a very specific response by King on the questionnaire.
10 King identified "Ted Bundy and Charles Manson, mass murderers and so on" as persons who 11 should be subject to the death penalty. (5 RT 924.) That specificity reveals the questionnaire 12 responses of King and Gonzalez to be dissimilar for purposes of a comparison. Gonzalez did not 13 identify particular individuals in response to the question posed by number 104: In what types of 14 cases/offenses do you feel the death penalty should be imposed? Gonzalez responded, "When 15 people are badly mutilated, beheaded, mass or serial murderers, baby killers." (ECF No. 302, 16 Vol. I, Ex. 3 at 62.)

17 With regard to the prosecutor's voir dire of Cox, he did not ask Cox what she meant by 18 her references to "serial killers" when responding to the questionnaire. In other words, the 19 question posed did not seek to clarify the terms or the language employed by Cox; rather, the 20 prosecutor's questions sought to understand what types of crimes or individuals who committed 21 murder in Cox's opinion should potentially be subject to the death penalty. (9 RT 1861-62.)

22 Petitioner next complains that the prosecutor inquired of jurors Lambert and Reisinger 23 regarding their responses concerning the appropriateness of the death penalty. Yet, those 24 inquiries or clarification questions focused on the respondents' use of words particularly 25 associated with legal terms of art. Lambert referred to "premeditation" in his response whereas 26 Reisinger used the phrase "special circumstances." (5 RT 975-77 & 8 RT 1399-400.) Thus, 27

28 <sup>14</sup> This number does not include those prospective jurors who were granted hardship excuses.

1 asking clarifying questions of both Lambert and Reisinger cannot be contrasted with the 2 prosecutor's failure to ask clarifying questions of Gonzalez where her words did not involve legal 3 terms of art.

4 In sum, a comparison of the Gonzalez voir dire conducted by the prosecutor to that 5 conducted with empaneled jurors King, Cox, Lambert and Reisinger does not support a finding 6 that the prosecutor's reason is unsupported by the record, or is otherwise suspect.

7 Further, while an attorney advocate may be concerned about a particular answer, another 8 answer offered by the prospective juror may provide a reason to have greater confidence in the 9 overall thinking and experience of that juror. Attorneys often do not evaluate prospective jurors 10 based upon a single answer. Neither should a reviewing court. Therefore, asking clarifying 11 questions of King and Cox, and even Lambert and Reisinger, but not Gonzalez, may have been 12 due to the prosecutor having a greater confidence in those jurors. Certainly, none of them 13 displayed a similar level of confusion to that of Gonzalez as revealed by a review of the record.

14 The undersigned's own comparison finds dissimilarities between Gonzalez's voir dire 15 testimony and that of the other empaneled jurors. For example, Juror Barnes indicated that he 16 had no particular type in mind when asked what particular type of cases he considered appropriate 17 for the two penalties at issue. (3 RT 516-18.) Juror Atwood indicated he had no particular type 18 of case in mind either when concluding the death penalty is appropriate in some circumstances.
19 (11 RT 2122-24.) Juror Bass's questionnaire apparently did not identify a particular type of 20 crime or crimes that she believed were appropriately punished by a sentence of death. (3 RT 533-21 34.) The same can be inferred from the voir dire of Jurors Ralston, Trimble, Gill, Williams, 22 Ceaglio, Wells and Greathouse. (See 4 RT 1100-02; 7 RT 1234-36; 9 RT 1754-58; 12 RT 2389-23 401, 2401-09, 2462-63 & 2554-61.)

24 The comparison also found a similarity between Gonzalez and other prospective jurors 25 who were dismissed by the prosecutor due to their responses on the questionnaire concerning the 26 types of crimes for which the death penalty may be appropriate. Prospective juror Silva replied, 27 "brutal murders, mass murders and intentional murders." (10 RT 1922-23.) The People excused 28 Silva during the morning session involving the third series of peremptory challenges exercised.

1 (12 RT 2417.) Additionally, prospective juror Garland replied the death penalty would be 2 appropriate “in cases such as Charles Manson and mass murders.” (9 RT 1672.) The People
3 excused Garland during the second series of peremptory challenges exercised. (11 RT 2195.)
4 Hence, in this instance, as in others, the record establishes the prosecutor’s reasons for excusing a 5 juror were consistently applied. Lewis v. Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830-31.

6 Thomas Harris

7 Petitioner did not undertake a comparative analysis of Harris’s responses to those offered 8 by empaneled jurors. A review by the undersigned of the voir dire testimony of all empaneled 9 jurors reveals none of the individuals selected indicated they had lost contact with family; to the 10 extent they were asked questions in this area, all are readily distinguishable from Harris’s 11 response. Nor did the empaneled juror responses during voir dire indicate a significant reluctance 12 to impose the death penalty. (See 3 RT 514-31 [Barnes], 532-45 [Bass]; 5 RT 919-34 [King], 13 970-83 [Lambert]; 6 RT 1095-115 [Ralston]; 7 RT 1231-42 [Trimble]; 8 RT 1395-405
14 [Reisinger]; 9 RT 1752-60 [Gill], 1857-68 [Cox]; 11 RT 2120-31 [Atwood]; 12 RT 2389-401 15 [Williams], 2401-15 [Ceaglio], 2459-78 [Wells], 2486-502 [Novak], 2503-15 [Cummings] & 16 2554-69 [Greathouse].)

17 In fact, that review of the record reveals the prosecutor exercised a peremptory challenge 18 against another prospective (and apparently Caucasian) juror, who also indicated during voir dire, 19 conducted by defense attorney Holmes, that she had lost track of her father where there was no 20 “major problem going on with the family.” (12 RT 2368-70 [Stebbins].) Moreover, the record 21 establishes the prosecutor also exercised peremptory challenges against other jurors who favored 22 a sentence of life without the possibility of parole over the death penalty. (See 2 RT 479-511
23 [Allen; challenged for cause]; 9 RT 1669-76 [Garland], 1824-38 [Daniels]; 11 RT 2056-74
24 [McLaughlin; challenged for cause], 2078-101 [Bragdon; challenged for cause], 2101-12 25 [Packard].) These challenges reveal the prosecutor to be consistent with his concerns. Lewis v.
26 Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830-31.

27 Rachel Klose

28 Petitioner argues that answers provided by empaneled jurists Atwood, Barnes, Bass, King, 1 Ralston, Reisinger, Novak, Greathouse and Cox, reveal that the prosecutor’s first reason for 2 excusing Klose – that he could not count on her for a death penalty verdict – to be a pretext for 3 discrimination. (ECF No. 330 at 151-52.) To recap, the prosecutor gave two reasons for 4 excusing Klose: (1) his belief that she would be sympathetic to the defendants based upon her 5 responses in the questionnaire and her emotional state; and (2) there were other more favorable 6 jurors pursuant to his assessments. (8 RT 1437.)

7         Petitioner points to the responses of the empaneled jurists to the court’s preliminary voir 8 dire inquiry regarding whether the venireperson has any strong feelings one way or another about 9 the death penalty. But this is not an apt comparison. The prosecutor expressly relied on two 10 questionnaire responses by Klose, numbers 58 and 106, not the more general inquiry posed by the 11 court. The only oral voir dire testimony identified by the prosecutor pertained to Klose’s 12 emotional response and the death of her mother-in-law days prior. And while the undersigned 13 does not have the questionnaires from the empaneled jurists available for comparison, a review of 14 their testimony does not reveal any potential response that could be interpreted to evince 15 sympathy for the defendant. (See 3 RT 514-31 [Barnes: prosecutor did not address any particular 16 questionnaire responses pertaining to the death penalty], 532-45 [Bass: prosecutor did not address 17 any particular questionnaire responses pertaining to the death penalty]; 5 RT 919-34 [King:
18 prosecutor asked a series of questions addressing King’s questionnaire response identifying Ted 19 Bundy, Charles Manson & mass murderers as appropriate persons for a sentence of death], 970-20 83 [Lambert: prosecutor inquired into Lambert’s understanding of felony murder rule]; 6 RT 21 1095-115 [Ralston: prosecutor sought to clarify response by Ralston that she “believed the death 22 penalty were appropriate if it were proved that the person was going to kill again”]; 7 RT 1231-42 23 [Trimble: prosecutor did not address any particular questionnaire responses pertaining to the 24 death penalty]; 8 RT 1395-405 [Reisinger: prosecutor addressed Reisinger’s use of “special 25 circumstances” in response to an inquiry about the appropriateness of the death penalty]; 9 RT 26 1752-60 [Gill: prosecutor asked general questions about Gill’s understanding of the two 27 penalties], 1857-68 [Cox: prosecutor asked a series of questions addressing Cox’s questionnaire 28 response identifying serial killers as appropriate persons for a sentence of death]; 11 RT 2120-31

1 [Atwood: prosecutor did not address any particular questionnaire responses pertaining to the 2 death penalty]; 12 RT 2389-401 [Williams: prosecutor addressed Williams’s reply of “whatever 3 types of cases its called for” in response to the specific question asking what types of cases or 4 offenses warrant the death penalty], 2401-15 [Ceaglio: prosecutor did not address any particular 5 questionnaire responses pertaining to the death penalty], 2459-78 [Wells: prosecutor did not 6 address any particular questionnaire responses pertaining to the death penalty], 2486-502 [Novak:
7 prosecutor did not address any particular questionnaire responses pertaining to the death penalty], 8 2503-15 [Cummings: prosecutor did not address any particular questionnaire responses pertaining 9 to the death penalty] & 2554-69 [Greathouse: prosecutor did not address any particular 10 questionnaire responses pertaining to the death penalty].)

11 Maximina Troyer

12 Petitioner compares Troyer’s answers to those of a number of empaneled jurors (ECF No.
13 330 at 157), contending the comparison establishes pretext. But, the strike exercised by the 14 prosecutor was not based on a single subject. The prosecutor claimed two reasons: Troyer’s 15 “strong feeling against the death penalty,” including her belief it had “no effect,” coupled with his 16 primary reason - that her son had been tried for murder.

17 Troyer’s equivocal responses pertaining to her feelings about the death penalty cannot be 18 compared to other juror responses on that subject where those jurors exhibited little or no 19 equivocation and did not express a belief the death penalty had no effect. The undersigned’s 20 review of the voir dire proceedings did not identify another empaneled juror who expressed that 21 same belief. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 817 (comparison to a juror who is not “otherwise 22 similar” nullifies the comparative value).

23 Leon Soto

24 Petitioner contends a comparative analysis of five empaneled jurors’ testimony speaks to 25 the concern expressed by the prosecutor that Soto’s death penalty views were problematic and 26 reveals that reason to be unsupported by the record. He claims “White jurors whom the 27 prosecutor accepted” offered no assurance “that the death penalty should be a possible sentence.” 28 (ECF No. 330 at 190-91.) This purported comparison, however, is no comparison at all and 1 therefore has no value. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d at 817.

2         Petitioner points to a quotation from the prosecutor’s voir dire of Soto wherein he asks 3 Soto if he could be personally responsible for the reality of deciding an individual should be put 4 to death. Soto replied that he could and would make such a personal choice. (7 RT 1206.)
5 Petitioner then claims a comparison of the exchanges between the prosecutor and empaneled 6 jurors Barnes, Bass, Lambert, Ralston, Novak and Cummings, reveals that those jurors “gave no 7 such assurance.” While the latter is true, it is of no consequence whatsoever because none of 8 those jurors was asked a question even remotely similar to that asked of Soto. (See 3 RT 518-24 9 [Barnes], 535-41 [Bass]; 5 RT 975-79 [Lambert]; 6 RT 1102-08 [Ralston]; 12 RT 2492-94 10 [Novak] & 2508-13 [Cummings].) And not one of them expressed any hesitancy in imposing the 11 death penalty.

12         Petitioner also attempts a comparative analysis as it pertains to Soto’s response indicating 13 he was the subject of a military proceeding or investigation, asserting the prosecutor’s credibility 14 is “undercut because other white jurors whom he had accepted had circumstances in their 15 background that might raise similar concerns.” (ECF No. 330 at 192-93.)

16         More specifically, Petitioner identified empaneled jurors Lambert, Bass, Ceaglio, 17 Cummings, King, Trimble and Williams as having indicated prior personal or familial 18 experiences that would affect that juror’s impartiality. But a review of those specific 19 circumstances – ranging from Lambert having gone AWOL while serving in the military decades 20 earlier and Ceaglio’s then-pending speeding ticket case, as well as the various theft and driving 21 while intoxicated offenses suffered by the children of the remaining empaneled jurors identified – 22 reveals they are quite dissimilar to that circumstance experienced by Soto. None involved an 23 allegation of inappropriate, personal contact with a minor. Neither Lambert nor Ceaglio’s 24 personal “past encounters with criminal proceedings” is on par with that facing Soto five years 25 prior. The mere fact Lambert and Ceaglio had experienced a personal circumstance involving a 26 legal type of proceeding does not make that experience similar to Soto’s experience.

27         In light of the foregoing, Petitioner’s comparison has no value. Cook v. LaMarque, 593 F.3d 28 at 817.

1                                    The Second Motion & Ruling

2                    On the afternoon of April 4, 1989, peremptory challenges as to the second venire panel 3 were exercised. The eleven prospective jurors that remained following the initial exercise of 4 peremptory challenges as to the first panel were seated, and then four randomly-selected 5 prospective jurors from the second panel were also seated. (11 RT 2190-93.)

6                    Alvarez and Ross jointly excused four venirepersons and the prosecutor excused three 7 venirepersons before electing to pass on the panel as then comprised. (11 RT 2193-96.) The 8 defendants had then exhausted their joint peremptory challenges and proceeded with their 9 respective separate allotted challenges. (11 RT 2195-96.) Petitioner Alvarez, the People, and 10 codefendant Ross then each exercised a challenge. (11 RT 2196-97.) With the exercise of 11 codefendant Ross's separate challenge, Katrina George entered the jury box. (11 RT 2197.) The 12 prosecutor then exercised his next challenge, thanking and excusing George. (11 RT 2197.)
13 Defense counsel asked to approach and an unreported bench discussion occurred. (11 RT 2197.)
14 Proceedings resumed: Petitioner Alvarez thanked and excused another three venirepersons, 15 codefendant Ross also thanked and excused another three, and the prosecutor thanked and 16 excused another five within that same period, before passing again on the panel as then 17 comprised. (11 RT 2197-200.) Alvarez and the People each excused a prospective juror before 18 codefendant Ross elected to pass. (11 RT 2200-01.) The prosecutor then excused a prospective 19 juror before Petitioner Alvarez passed on the panel as then comprised. (11 RT 2201.)
20 Codefendant Ross and Petitioner each exercised another challenge, and the prosecutor exercised 21 another two, before the Court took a recess. (11 RT 2201-03.)

22                    Outside the presence of the prospective jurors, the following occurred:

23
24                    THE COURT: When I said 15 minutes, I wasn't thinking about the Wheeler 25 motion, but let's hear that first and see if that is resolvable.

26                    For the record, Counsel approached the bench after the prosecution excused juror 27 No. 15 - -

28                    [DEFENSE COUNSEL]: Gill.

                    THE COURT: Who was the last - -

                    [DEFENSE COUNSEL]: George.

                    MR. MARLETTE: It was Katrina George.

1 THE COURT: Okay. So after the People excused Miss George, then counsel 2 approached the bench, indicated they had a renewed Wheeler motion.

3 Go ahead, [defense counsel].

4 [DEFENSE COUNSEL]: Yes, your Honor.

5 The motion is similar to the one previously made, and regarding the first panel.

6 In this panel, I think that it can be agreed that there are two blacks in the group that 7 finally got through hardship and death-qualification, and that's what we have.

8 One of those was Miss George, who was excused by the prosecution. Due to the 9 fact that there were only two blacks on the panel, I chose to make the motion immediately 10 so that you would know that the motion was pending.

11 And the same pattern is emerging. Whenever a black juror comes up, a black juror 12 is excused.

13 Now, I know that there is one black juror remaining on the panel at this time, but I 14 think the - - I think the case law is not a proper determination to determine that the 15 exercise of peremptory challenge is taking place, and People versus Snow indicated that.

16 In any event, the basis for the motion is that it is the defense's position that this is a 17 continuing pattern - - state his reasons for excusing the juror, I think that that would be 18 sufficient to show a prima facie case.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 Okay. I've ruled on the motion previously when it was raised on the basis of the 21 previous excusals. And the prosecution's excusing one additional minority, in this Court's 22 opinion, does not present - - does not reach the level of a prima facie showing that there is 23 a pattern of excusing any cognizable group, and, therefore, I am not going to require a 24 showing by the prosecution.

25 I'm not satisfied that the initial burden has been met by the defense.

26 [DEFENSE COUNSEL]: It may be, your Honor, that this is somewhat premature, 27 inasmuch as there are still peremptories left and what have you, and maybe what we need 28 to do - - I appreciate what the Court is saying at this point, and I would ask to state without prejudice renewal of the motion and renew the matter if it continues.

What we're doing is piecemealing it with one panel and another panel - - The Court may disagree with that, but it seems that that would be possibly the most productive.

I could indicate as we go along my concerns and then talk about it at the end.

THE COURT: I'm not sure what is the appropriate way of doing it.

On the other hand, I don't think we can require the prosecution, every time he exercises a challenge, to justify it, and we do have two separate panels.

We agreed that the last challenge would go only to the last panel, so at this time
I'm denying the motion.

We'll have to wait and make another motion, and we're rule on that one.

[DEFENSE COUNSEL]: Okay.

[COUNSEL FOR CODEFENDANT ROSS]: Your Honor, I just want the record to be clear that I have joined in all these Wheeler motions, that this is something that I am very concerned for about my client too. As much as we hear from the Alvarez team, I also want you to understand that this is a concern of Belinda Ross also.

THE COURT: The record is clear. You did join in the last motion, and you've now joined in this motion.

[DEFENSE COUNSEL]: Thank you.

[COUNSEL FOR CODEFENDANT ROSS]: Thank you, your Honor.

1 MR. MARLETTE: Your Honor, I would like to point out that on this panel, every 2 other minority has been excused by the defense.

3 Mr. Esparza, a Mexican, was excused jointly. Stella Carr, a Hispanic, by the 4 Defendant Alvarez.

5 Mr. Gill is black, he was left on.

6 Jennifer Karsikas is Portuguese and excused by Alvarez, and Mr. Farfan is a 7 Spaniard and was excused by Defendant Alvarez.

8 I go along and make showings when I make them, and I want to make it clear that 9 this is not a pattern by any means that's emerging in my situation.

10 And, just very briefly, I don't even have Katrina George's questionnaire here, but 11 if my memory serves, she's been convicted of a credit card deal where she picked up 12 somebody's purse and gone off and charged up about $400 on the credit cards.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 (11 RT 2203-06; see also 5 CT 1066.)

15 This Court's De Novo Review

16 To satisfy his burden of producing evidence sufficient to permit the court to draw an 17 inference that discrimination occurred under the first step of Batson, a petitioner must establish 18 that the prospective juror who was removed is a member of a cognizable group, that the 19 prosecution exercised a peremptory challenge to remove the juror, and that the circumstances of 20 jury selection raise an inference that the challenge was motivated by race. Cooperwood v.
21 Cambra, 245 F.3d 1042, 1045-46 (9th Cir. 2001).

22 Here, the first two components of a prima facie showing were established where defense 23 counsel proffered the fact that his client is of African-American descent and that the prosecutor 24 exercised a peremptory challenge to excuse an African-American juror. Cooperwood v. Cambra, 25 245 F.3d at 1045-46. Thus, the issue before this court is whether the third component of a prima 26 facie showing was or has been established: whether the circumstances of jury selection raise an 27 inference that the prosecutor's use of the challenge was motivated by race.

28 The Ninth Circuit has expressly held that statistical disparities alone can give rise to an inference of exclusion based on race. See, e.g., Williams v. Runnels, 432 F.3d 1102, 1107 (9th Cir. 2006) (finding a prima facie showing where the prosecution exercised three of its first four peremptory challenges against African-Americans (75%) and three of its total of five peremptory challenges (60%) against African-Americans where African-Americans constituted 8% of the 1 venire); Fernandez v. Roe, 286 F.3d 1073, 1078 (9th Cir. 2002) (finding a prima facie showing 2 where the prosecution struck four out of a possible seven Hispanics (57%) and at the time of the 3 motion, had used four of its fourteen peremptory challenges against Hispanics (29%) where 4 Hispanics constituted only 12% of the venire); Turner v. Marshall, 63 F.3d 807, 811-12 (9th Cir.

5 1995) (finding a prima facie showing where the prosecution struck five out of a possible nine 6 African American jurors (56%) and used five of its nine peremptory challenges against African-7 American jurors (56%) where only 30% of those called for voir dire were African-American) 8 (overruled on other grounds by Tolbert v. Page, 182 F.3d 677 (9th Cir. 1999)).

9         However, “[t]here is no magic number of challenged jurors” that automatically establishes 10 a prima facie case of discrimination. United States v. Chinchilla, 874 F.2d 695, 698 (9th Cir.
11 1989). Additionally, “[a]lthough a pattern of strikes against African-Americans provides support 12 for an inference of discrimination,” a defendant “must point to more facts than the number of 13 African-Americans struck to establish such a pattern.” Williams v. Woodford, 384 F.3d 567, 584 14 (9th Cir. 2004). For example, in Woodford, the petitioner failed to create an inference of 15 discrimination when he alleged that the prosecutor used two of 19 challenges to remove the only 16 two African-American females on the jury, and one of three challenges to remove a male African-17 American alternate juror. Id. at 583-84. “[B]ecause Williams failed to allege, and the record 18 does not disclose, facts like how many African-Americans ... sat on the jury, how many African-19 Americans were in the venire, and how large the venire was, it is impossible to say whether any 20 statistical disparity existed that might support an inference of discrimination.” Id. at 584. Cf.
21 Johnson v. California, 545 U.S. at 164, 173 (finding a prima facie case when the prosecutor used 22 three of 12 peremptory challenges against the only three African-Americans in the jury pool); 23 Williams v. Runnels, 432 F.3d at 1107 (finding a prima facie case when only four of the first 49 24 prospective jurors were African-American and the prosecutor used three of his first four 25 challenges against African-Americans).

26         A petitioner can also satisfy the third component of a prima facie showing by pointing to 27 other relevant circumstances surrounding the strikes. For example, historical evidence of racial 28 discrimination by the District Attorney’s Office and the practice of jury shuffling may support a

1 prima facie case. Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. at 346-47; see United States v. Esparza-2 Gonzalez, 422 F.3d 897, 903 (9th Cir. 2005) (“jury selection procedures may give rise to an 3 inference of discriminatory intent”). The Ninth Circuit has also held that the prosecutor’s 4 questions and statements during voir dire examination may support or refute an inference of 5 discriminatory motive (Tolbert v. Gomez, 190 F.3d 985, 988 (9th Cir. 1999)); the attitude and 6 behavior of the challenging attorney and the prospective jurors can support or refute a prima facie
7 showing (Tolbert v. Page, 182 F.3d at 683); and the prosecutor’s behavior striking venirepersons 8 of another minority may support an inference of discrimination (Fernandez v. Roe, 286 F.3d 9 1073, 1079 (9th Cir. 2002)).

10 Here, Petitioner asserts there was a pattern of strikes against racial minorities. More 11 specifically, he claims that prior to striking George, the prosecutor exercised “seven of twelve 12 strikes against minorities, or 58%.” (ECF No. 330 at 202.) As to the African-American 13 prospective jurors, the prosecutor struck two of the three persons included in the first panel, or 66 14 percent of African-Americans. (ECF No. 330 at 203.) As to the Hispanic prospective jurors, the 15 prosecutor struck five out of seven persons included in the first panel, or 71 percent of Hispanics.
16 (ECF No. 330 at 203.)

17 Even assuming arguendo there was a pattern of strikes against African-American and 18 Hispanic jurors supporting an inference of discrimination, Petitioner ““must point to more facts 19 than the number”” of minorities “struck to establish such a pattern.” Williams v. Woodford, 384 20 F.3d at 584. This is true because a prima facie showing based on statistical disparity may be 21 dispelled by other relevant circumstances during the voir dire process. United States v. Collins, 22 551 F.3d 914, 921 (9th Cir. 2009). Here, because the trial court had already considered the 23 circumstances surrounding the prosecutor’s exercise of peremptory challenges as it concerned the 24 first panel, determining at Batson’s third step that there was no purposeful discrimination, its 25 finding is a relevant circumstance that works to dispel any statistical disparity inference asserted 26 by Petitioner. After defense counsel argued, “this is a continuing pattern,” the trial court stated, 27 “I’ve ruled on the motion previously when it was raised on the basis of the previous excusals.
28 And the prosecution’s excusing one additional minority ... does not reach the level of a prima

1 facie showing that there is a pattern of excusing any cognizable group.” (11 RT 2204.)

2 Petitioner asserts that the “prosecutor’s strike of Ms. George must be considered with ‘all 3 the relevant circumstances.’” (ECF No. 33 at 204.) Yet, it has been so considered. The trial 4 court was familiar with all of the relevant circumstances, and a review of the record establishes 5 the prosecutor did not discriminate against any of the individuals at issue in the first venire panel 6 on the basis of race. The trial court did not ignore, despite Petitioner’s assertions to the contrary, 7 any pattern of strikes against minorities. It simply concluded that it had not found a pattern 8 earlier – a relevant circumstance to be considered on this occasion.

9 As Respondent points out, although the trial court did not find that a prima facie case had 10 been established, a review of the record supports the prosecutor’s statement following the trial 11 court’s ruling on the second motion: that he excused George because she had “been convicted of 12 a credit card deal where she picked up somebody’s purse and gone off and charged up about $400 13 on [that person’s] credit cards.” (11 RT 2206.) The prosecutor’s recollection is accurate. During 14 voir dire, the prosecutor asked George about a response on her questionnaire that involved 15 someone “arrested for fraudulent documents;” she indicated she was the person arrested. She 16 explained, “I found a . . . young lady’s purse in a restaurant in one of the downtown restaurants, 17 and I used her identification - - My identification and her credit cards.” (9 RT 1807.) She was 18 charged with felony fraud and forgery, but pled no contest to a misdemeanor and served her time.
19 (9 RT 1807-08.)

20 In this case, there is no historical evidence of racial discrimination by the District 21 Attorney’s Office, nor is there evidence of the practice of jury shuffling to support a prima facie 22 case. Miller-el v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. at 346-47; United States v. Esparza-Gonzalez, 422 F.3d at 23 903. The prosecutor’s questions and statement during voir dire examination did not support an 24 inference of discriminatory motive. Batson, 476 U.S. at 97; Tolbert v. Gomez, 190 F.3d at 988.
25 Nor did the prosecutor’s behavior in exercising peremptory strikes support an inference of 26 discrimination. Fernandez v. Roe, 286 F.3d at 1079.

27 Lastly, the undersigned notes that the prosecutor exercised peremptory challenges against 28 other prospective jurors who admitted a personal criminal conviction. Boyd v. Newland, 467

1 F.3d at 1149-50 (comparative juror analysis may be necessary at the first or third step of the 2 Batson analysis). Those included prospective jurors Lacy (5 CT 959-60 [prior burglary
3 conviction], 8 RT 1414 [excused]); Kollman (9 RT 1768-69 [DUI two years prior], 11 RT 2202
4 [excused]); and Hummer (11 RT 2157 [marijuana possession/diversion program], 12 RT 2417 5 [excused].)

6 Given the circumstances then known to the trial court – where it had previously conducted 7 a thorough analysis of seven peremptory challenges exercised by the prosecutor – Petitioner’s 8 argument that the prosecutor acted with discriminatory purpose in excusing George failed to raise 9 an inference of discrimination. More particularly, the trial court already had evaluated the jury 10 voir dire transcript and juror questionnaires in order to conduct an analysis of the jurors who were 11 previously stricken against those who were allowed to remain, concluding that the prosecutor did 12 not act with purposeful discrimination in excusing prospective jurors Del Rosario, Elliott, Harris, 13 Gonzalez, Klose, Troyer or Soto.

14 If a “wide variety of evidence” can support an inference of discrimination (Johnson v.
15 California, 545 U.S. at 169), the trial court’s consideration of its previous ruling finding no 16 purposeful discrimination at step three can likewise support a finding that Petitioner did not 17 establish a prima facie case at step one following the prosecutor’s subsequent excusal of George.

18 As set forth above, this record simply is not sufficient to raise an inference that the 19 prosecutor used a peremptory challenge to exclude George, an African-American prospective 20 juror, because of her race.

21 Conclusion

22 As explained in detail above, an independent review of the record reveals that Petitioner 23 failed to establish purposeful discrimination by the prosecutor in the exercise of peremptory 24 challenges. The prosecutor’s reasons for striking the jurors at issue shared a logical nexus to the 25 concerns expressed and his efforts to obtain a favorable jury for the prosecution, and those 26 reasons are supported by the record. Nor does a comparative juror analysis undermine this 27 holding. Finally, it is worth noting that a review of the entire record revealed no other evidence 28 that the prosecutor’s peremptory challenges were based on race. Unlike the situation in Miller-El

1 II, this record does not include evidence of the prosecutor or his office's reliance on racial factors 2 in the exercise of such challenges, nor does it include evidence of procedural manipulation or 3 deceptive questioning, nor any other sign of a constitutional violation. Because the prosecutor's 4 race-neutral reasons for excusing the jurors at issue are supported by the record, it is hereby 5 RECOMMENDED the claim be DENIED in its entirety.

6 Claim GG: Right to Appeal and Loss of Juror Questionnaires

7 Petitioner contends that he was deprived of his right to appeal by the trial court's failure to 8 preserve, or loss of, the juror questionnaires. He claims he is unable to attack the trial court's 9 finding that there was no purposeful discrimination by the prosecutor during jury selection, and 10 that he is foreclosed from a comparison between the venirepersons who were stricken and those 11 persons the prosecutor found acceptable. As a result, he asserts the California Supreme Court 12 was unable to conduct a meaningful review of his Batson claims, and that this court is likewise 13 unable to conduct a meaningful comparative analysis as is required by Miller-El. Petitioner 14 asserts these errors entitle him to habeas relief. (ECF No. 330 at 210-35; ECF No. 361 at 76-82.)

15 On the other hand, Respondent argues the California Supreme Court's rejection of 16 Petitioner's due process claim was neither contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, 17 Supreme Court precedent. Therefore, he contends Petitioner is not entitled to relief. (ECF No.
18 345 at 95-99.)

19 The California Supreme Court's Determination

20 The California Supreme Court addressed Petitioner's claim on direct appeal as follows:

22 At the outset, defendant maintains that his Wheeler/Batson claim must be resolved 23 in his favor on the ground that the record on appeal is not adequate to permit meaningful 24 review. The deficiency of which he complains is the absence of certain questionnaires, 25 which were completed by prospective jurors, then lodged with the superior court, 26 subsequently lost by its clerk's office, and finally determined by the superior court to be 27 beyond reconstruction. A criminal defendant is indeed entitled to a record on appeal that is 28 adequate to permit meaningful review. That is true under California law. (People v. Howard (1992) 1 Cal.4th 1132, 1165.) It is true as well under the United States Constitution—under the Fourteenth Amendment generally, and under the Eighth Amendment specifically when a sentence of death is involved. (People v. Howard, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 1166.) The record on appeal is inadequate, however, only if the complained-of deficiency is prejudicial to the defendant's ability to prosecute his appeal.

1 (See id. at pp. 1165–1166.) It is the defendant’s burden to show prejudice of this sort. (Id.
2 at p. 1165.) Defendant attempts to carry this burden, but does not succeed. He simply 3 does not show that the absence of the questionnaires is prejudicial to his ability to urge his 4 Wheeler/Batson claim—or any other. Indeed, material from the now lost items survives in 5 the reporter’s and clerk’s transcripts through quotation and paraphrase.

6 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 196, n.8.

7 The Applicable Legal Standards

8 Although, “the Constitution does not require states to grant appeals as of right to criminal 9 defendants seeking to review alleged trial court errors,” where such a system of appellate review 10 occurs, its procedures must comport with due process. Evitts v. Lucey, 469 U.S. 387, 393 (1985).
11 Due process and equal protection are satisfied where a state court’s appellate process provides “a 12 criminal appellant pursuing a first appeal as of right [the] minimum safeguards necessary to make 13 that appeal ‘adequate and effective.’” Smith v. Robbins, 528 U.S. 259, 276 (2000) (quoting 14 Evitts, 469 U.S. at 392).

15 In Griffin v. Illinois, 351 U.S. 12, 19 (1956), the United States Supreme Court held that 16 states must afford indigent defendants an “adequate appellate review” equal to “defendants who 17 have enough money to buy transcripts.” “In terms of a trial record, this means that the State must 18 afford the indigent a ‘record of sufficient completeness’ to permit proper consideration of [his] 19 claims.” Mayer v. Chicago, 404 U.S. 189, 194 (1971) (quoting Draper v. Washington, 372 U.S.
20 487, 499 (1963)). The high court explained that a “‘record of sufficient completeness’ does not 21 translate automatically into a complete verbatim transcript.” Mayer, 404 U.S. at 194. Rather, 22 what violates the Constitution is a total denial of a transcript without explanation. Draper, 372
23 U.S. at 498; Eskridge v. Washington State Bd. of Prison Terms and Paroles, 357 U.S. 214, 215 (1958).

24 Analysis

25 Petitioner argues the California Supreme Court’s determination of this claim is contrary to 26 or an unreasonable application of United States Supreme Court precedent because that court 27 misapplied the high court’s test regarding an effective appeal. He further asserts the California 28 Supreme Court misapplied the law regarding the burdens associated with proving “suitable 1 alternatives.”

2           Significantly, the undersigned finds Petitioner’s interpretation of the California Supreme 3 Court’s holding to be inaccurate. Petitioner interprets the court’s holding as requiring him to 4 prove no reasonable alternative to the missing juror questionnaires was available, contrary to the 5 United States Supreme Court’s holding in Britt v. North Carolina, 404 U.S. 226 (1971).
6 However, the California Supreme Court’s holding referenced the burden associated with 7 Petitioner’s ability to prosecute his appeal: “The record on appeal is inadequate, however, only if 8 the complained-of deficiency is prejudicial to the defendant’s ability to prosecute his appeal.”
9 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 196, n.8. Petitioner’s reference to Britt and the availability of an 10 alternative is misplaced in the procedural sense and therefore distinct.

11           In Britt, the issue before the high court concerned the state’s duty to provide a free 12 transcript of prior proceedings to an indigent defendant claiming a right to such a transcript and 13 the factors relevant to a determination of need relative to an effective defense at retrial. Britt, 404 14 U.S. at 226-27. The court noted its prior cases had “identified two factors that are relevant to the 15 determination of need: (1) the value of the transcript to the defendant in connection with the 16 appeal or trial for which it is sought, and (2) the availability of alternative devices that would 17 fulfill the same functions as a transcript.” Id. at 227. The North Carolina courts rested their 18 denials of the defendant’s request upon the availability of “adequate alternatives to a transcript” 19 rather than the defendant’s particularized need of the transcript. Id. at 228. The high court held 20 that “[a] defendant who claims the right to a free transcript does not, under our cases, bear the 21 burden of proving inadequate such alternatives as may be suggested by the State or conjured up 22 by a court in hindsight.” Id. at 230.

23           Here, Petitioner interprets the California Supreme Court’s denial of his claim to be the 24 equivalent of requiring him to prove that alternatives suggested are inadequate. The ability to 25 prosecute an appeal however is not synonymous with a requirement to prove inadequate 26 alternatives. The defendant’s indigent status was central to the holding in Britt, where the 27 determination of need was plainly at issue. Petitioner’s needs as it concerns the jury 28 questionnaires does not equate to the defendant’s need for a trial transcript of prior proceedings,

1 as was the case in Britt. In fact, need is presumed in a capital case appeal where the record is to 2 include any and all proceedings and documentation. See Cal. Pen. Code, § 190.7. Hence, 3 considering whether the record that is available is adequate to provide meaningful review is 4 precisely the determination the state court must make.

5 The California Supreme Court referenced its decision in People v. Howard, 1 Cal.4th 1132 6 (1992), in support of its resolution of Petitioner’s claim. In Howard, the state court 7 acknowledged that “[u]nder the Fourteenth Amendment, the record of the proceedings must be 8 sufficient to permit adequate and effective appellate review,” citing to Griffin v. Illinois and 9 Draper v. Washington. Howard, 1 Cal.4th at 1166. The court in Howard held that because the 10 defendant could not show the omissions in the record – three bench conferences and one 11 chambers conference that could not be recreated – prejudiced his ability to argue each of his 12 points, he was not entitled to relief. Howard, 1 Cal.4th at 1164-66. The Ninth Circuit has held 13 similarly. In United States v. Carrillo, 902 F.2d 1405-10 (9th Cir. 1990), where a portion of the 14 transcript was missing, the court indicated a defendant must demonstrate that the missing portion 15 specifically prejudices his appeal before relief is afforded. See also United States v. Anzalone, 16 886 F.2d 229, 232 (9th Cir. 1989) (“even assuming there were omissions in the transcripts, 17 appellant cannot prevail without a showing of specific prejudice”).

18 Petitioner’s overriding contention is that the record is not complete without the missing or 19 lost juror questionnaires. And while Petitioner is entitled to a complete record, a perfect one is 20 not mandated by either the state or federal courts. See, e.g., Mayer v. City of Chicago, 404 U.S.
21 at 194 (“A ‘record of sufficient completeness’ does not translate automatically into a complete 22 verbatim transcript”); People v. Harris, 43 Cal.4th 1269, 1283 (2008) (a perfect record cannot 23 always be achieved).

24 This court also notes defense counsel has an “obligation to bring to the trial court’s 25 attention any disagreement with the prosecutor’s representations as to the content of the 26 questionnaires.” People v. Heard, 31 Cal.4th 946, 970 (2003). Here, the prosecutor regularly 27 relied upon the prospective jurors’ responses to the juror questionnaire during voir dire.
28 Additionally, he specifically identified a number of those questionnaire responses when asked to 1 provide justification for exercising his peremptory challenges. (8 RT 1436-43.) More 2 particularly, the prosecutor referred to the questionnaire responses provided by prospective jurors 3 Klose, Harris, Gonzalez, Elliott, Del Rosario and Soto; he referenced voir dire exclusively when 4 providing justification for striking prospective juror Troyer. (8 RT 1437-43.) Defense counsel 5 then addressed the prosecutor's reasons for striking the prospective jurors at issue in written 6 points and authorities filed with the court. (5 CT 1001-09.) It is significant to note however that 7 counsel did not challenge the content of the questionnaire responses identified by the prosecutor, 8 but rather the prosecutor's interpretation of that content. (See CT 1002-07.) In other words, 9 counsel did not challenge that a particular thing was said, but rather what he believed was meant 10 by it. At argument on the first Batson/Wheeler motion, the prosecutor made further references to 11 the specific questionnaire responses provided by the stricken jurors, and defense counsel had 12 another opportunity to present his challenges to the prosecutor's interpretations of those responses 13 relied upon. (10 RT 1963-74.) Additionally, although the prosecutor was not required to state a 14 justification for exercising a peremptory challenge against Katrina George when defense counsel 15 made the second Batson/Wheeler motion, the prosecutor nevertheless stated his reason for doing 16 so on the record. (11 RT 2203-06.) He expressly referenced George's questionnaire and a 17 specific response revealing she had "been convicted of a credit card deal where she picked up 18 somebody's purse and gone off and charged up about $400 on the credit cards." (11 RT 2206.)

19 Defense counsel did not object to the statement or the prosecutor's recitation of the questionnaire 20 response. (Ibid.) The above referenced portions of the reporter's transcript sufficiently allowed 21 the California Supreme Court to examine the propriety of the prosecutor's exercise of peremptory 22 challenges and whether or not purposeful discrimination was shown. That same record allows 23 this court to adequately consider the same question as part of its de novo review.

24 To the degree Petitioner contends the loss of all juror questionnaires does not permit a 25 meaningful comparative juror analysis, his argument is not persuasive. The questionnaires 26 completed by other prospective jurors who were not selected to serve on the jury are of debatable 27 value; only those seated to try the case are to be compared to the jurors against whom the 28 peremptory strikes were improperly exercised. See Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. at 239-45 (side-1 by-side comparisons of jurors who were struck and those allowed to serve).

2 While the questionnaires of those allowed to serve are not a part of the record available to 3 the reviewing courts, the questionnaires of six of the eight prospective jurors against whom the 4 prosecutor exercised a peremptory strike are a part of the record. Additionally, the voir dire 5 reporter's transcript is complete. And that same record reflects the trial court permitted the 6 parties freedom to explore the prospective jurors' views on the death penalty and a variety of 7 other subjects. More particularly, the attorneys were permitted to reference or read from the 8 juror's questionnaire and ask questions pertaining to the juror's given responses. In so doing, 9 "the salient material from the lost juror questionnaires survives in the reporter's and clerk's 10 transcript through quotation and paraphrase." People v. Jordan, 146 Cal.App.4th 232, 251 (2006).
11 The undersigned finds the available information to be more significant than the "clues" Petitioner 12 paints the information to be.

13 Next, Petitioner contends the loss of the juror questionnaires prohibits him from 14 discerning the racial composition of the various jury panels, information relevant to statistics and 15 analysis of the prosecutor's peremptory strikes against minority venirepersons. However, the 16 United States Supreme Court found this type of statistical evidence to be less compelling than 17 side-by-side comparisons of those jurors against whom the prosecutor exercised a peremptory 18 challenge and those jurors ultimately seated. Miller-EI v. Dretke, 545 U.S. at 240. In this case, 19 the complete reporter's transcript of the voir dire testimony allows for a meaningful, side-by-side 20 comparison.

21 This case is distinguishable from Boyd v. Newland, 467 F.3d 1139, 1146-50 (2006), cited 22 by Petitioner, where the Ninth Circuit granted relief on a Batson claim where the entire transcript 23 of the voir dire was not before the court. There, the petitioner had raised a Batson claim on direct 24 review and repeatedly requested the transcript of the entire jury voir dire, which the California 25 courts had denied. The Ninth Circuit held that, while the Supreme Court had never explicitly 26 held that an indigent defendant is entitled to an entire voir dire transcript as of right, since a 27 comparative juror analysis was a centerpiece of the Batson analysis under Miller-EI II, and that 28 analysis could not be done in the absence of a voir dire transcript, the state court's refusal to

1 provide petitioner with the whole voir dire transcript in the face of a plausible Batson claim 2 involved an unreasonable application of clearly established Supreme Court precedent. Boyd, 467 3 F.3d at 1146-50. Here, however, there is no refusal to provide Petitioner with an entire voir dire 4 transcript; in fact, the transcript of the voir dire proceedings is indeed complete. The omissions in 5 this case are the questionnaires rather than a stenographic record of the voir dire proceedings, a 6 distinguishing fact making Boyd inapplicable.

7 Further, a comparative analysis was indeed performed by the undersigned, employing a 8 complete record of the voir dire proceedings. The reporter's transcript includes the pertinent jury 9 selection proceedings as well as the proceedings involving both Batson/Wheeler motions 10 entertained by the trial court. In fact, it involves nearly 2,200 pages spanning 10 separate 11 volumes of the reporter's transcript, commencing March 1, 1989, and concluding on April 10, 12 1989. (3 RT 370 - 12 RT 2566.) The prosecutor justified his peremptory challenges on both the 13 jury questionnaires and the voir dire testimony. A review of the record reveals that the prosecutor 14 also read a number of the challenged jurors' responses to specific portions of the questionnaire 15 into the stenographic record. (8 RT 1436-43; 10 RT 1963-70.) Hence, despite the loss of the juror 16 questionnaires, the record provides substantial evidence to support the trial court's decision to 17 deny the defense motions, as well as for purposes of any review of the trial court's ruling in that 18 regard.

19 The trial court and all counsel read the jurors' questionnaires. There was no dispute as to 20 the content of those questionnaire responses. The salient material from the lost questionnaires 21 survives in the form of references thereto in the reporter's transcripts of the voir dire testimony.
22 Therefore, the fact certain jury questionnaires have been lost did not deny Petitioner his right to 23 an adequate and effective review of his Batson claims. Mayer v. Chicago, 404 U.S. at 194. The 24 California Supreme Court's determination that the record on appeal was adequate to permit 25 meaningful review was not contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, clearly established 26 Supreme Court authority, nor was it based on an unreasonable determination of the facts.
27 Accordingly, Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief on this claim and the undersigned 28 RECOMMENDS that Claim GG be DENIED.

1                    Claims FF, PP & UU: The Presentation of Mitigating Evidence

2                    Petitioner asserts that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to reasonably 3 investigate and present mitigating evidence. More specifically, he takes issue with counsels' 4 refusal to stipulate to the admission of statements of Petitioner's relatives, failure to investigate 5 and present additional evidence regarding his background, and failure to properly investigate, 6 prepare and present mental health evidence. (ECF No. 330 at 235-591; ECF No. 361 at 83-109.)
7 Respondent contends the California Supreme Court's rejection of Petitioner's ineffective 8 assistance claims related to personal background mitigation evidence was not contrary to, nor an 9 unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. (ECF No. 345 at 99-144.)

10                    The Applicable Legal Standards

11                    “The Sixth Amendment right to counsel in a criminal trial includes ‘the right to the 12 effective assistance of counsel.’” Summerlin v. Schriro, 427 F.3d 623, 629 (9th Cir. 2005) 13 (quoting McMann v. Richardson, 397 U.S. 759, 771 n.14 (1970)). “This right extends to ‘all 14 critical stages of the criminal process,’ including capital sentencing.” Id. (citations omitted). The 15 Sixth Amendment standard for analyzing an ineffective assistance of counsel claim is well 16 established. To prevail on a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, a petitioner must show 17 that his trial counsel's performance “fell below an objective standard of reasonableness” and that 18 “there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the 19 proceeding would have been different.” Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687–88, 694 20 (1984).

21                    Deficient Performance

22                    Under the first prong of the Strickland test, a petitioner must show that counsel's conduct 23 failed to meet an objective standard of reasonableness. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687. There is “a 24 ‘strong presumption’ that counsel's representation was within the ‘wide range’ of reasonable 25 professional assistance.” Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. at 104 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 26 689). Petitioner must rebut this presumption by demonstrating that his counsel's performance 27 was unreasonable under prevailing professional norms and was not the product of “sound trial 28 strategy.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688–89. Judicial scrutiny of defense counsel's performance is 1 “highly deferential,” and thus the court must evaluate counsel’s conduct from the perspective at 2 the time it occurred, without the benefit of hindsight. Id. at 689.

3 The Supreme Court has “declined to articulate specific guidelines for appropriate attorney 4 conduct and instead ha[s] emphasized that ‘[t]he proper measure of attorney performance remains 5 simply reasonableness under prevailing professional norms.’” Wiggins v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510, 6 521 (2003) (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688). Nevertheless, “general principles have 7 emerged regarding the duties of criminal defense attorneys that inform [a court’s] view as to the 8 ‘objective standard of reasonableness’ by which [a court must] assess attorney performance, 9 particularly with respect to the duty to investigate.” Summerlin, 427 F.3d at 629. “[S]trategic 10 choices made after thorough investigation of law and facts relevant to plausible options are 11 virtually unchallengeable.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 690. But, 13 strategic choices made after less than complete investigation are reasonable precisely to 14 the extent that reasonable professional judgments support the limitations on investigation.

15 In other words, counsel has a duty to make reasonable investigations or to make a 16 reasonable decision that makes particular investigations unnecessary. In any ineffectiveness case, a particular decision not to investigate must be directly assessed for reasonableness in all the circumstances, applying a heavy measure of deference to counsel’s judgment.

17 Wiggins, 539 U.S. at 521 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 690–91).

18 With respect to defense counsel’s role in presenting penalty phase mitigating evidence, 19 “[t]he duty to investigate is critically important.” Summerlin, 427 F.3d at 630. As explained by 20 the Ninth Circuit, counsel in a capital case has an affirmative duty to unearth all relevant 21 mitigating information because 22 23 [t]he determination of whether to impose a death sentence is not an ordinary legal 24 determination which turns on the establishment of hard facts. The statutory factors give 25 the jury broad latitude to consider amorphous human factors, to weigh the worth of one’s life against his culpability.

26 Wallace v. Stewart, 184 F.3d 1112, 1117 (9th Cir. 1999).

27 This duty on the part of defense counsel to investigate begins prior to trial. It is well-28 recognized that competent strategy decisions cannot be made regarding presentation of mitigating

1 evidence without a foundation of knowledge based upon a thorough defense investigation that 2 was completed long before jury selection begins. Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. at 395 (holding 3 that the petitioner received ineffective assistance in connection with the penalty phase of his trial 4 and noting the record established “that counsel did not begin to prepare for that phase of the 5 proceeding until a week before the trial”); Earp v. Ornoski, 431 F.3d at 1175 (“The Supreme 6 Court has conveyed a clear, and repeated, message about counsel’s sacrosanct duty to conduct a 7 full and complete mitigation investigation before making tactical decisions”). Counsel should 8 attempt to discover “‘all reasonably available mitigating evidence and evidence to rebut any 9 aggravating evidence that may be introduced by the prosecutor.’” Wiggins, 539 U.S. at 524 10 (quoting ABA Guidelines for the Appointment and Performance of Counsel in Death Penalty 11 Cases [“ABA Guidelines”] 11.4.1(c), p. 93 (1989), emphasis in original); see also Caro v.
12 Calderon, 165 F.3d 1223, 1227 (9th Cir. 1999) (“It is imperative that all relevant mitigating 13 information be unearthed for consideration at the capital sentencing phase”). Where “‘indications 14 in the record’ suggest that certain mitigating evidence may be available, those leads must be 15 pursued.” Lambright v. Schriro, 490 F.3d 1103, 1117 (9th Cir. 2007) (quoting Stankewitz v.
16 Woodford, 365 F.3d 706, 719–20 (2004)); Summerlin, 427 F.3d 623, 632 (9th Cir. 2005) 17 (counsel found ineffective for failing to obtain readily available mental health evidence when he 18 had been told by defendant’s prior attorney that defendant may be mentally ill); Stankewitz, 365 19 F.3d at 719–22 (counsel found ineffective for failing to thoroughly investigate the defendant’s 20 childhood, history of drug abuse and mental health problems notwithstanding the fact that counsel 21 was on notice that such an investigation might yield mitigating evidence); Mayfield v. Woodford, 22 270 F.3d 915, 927–28 (9th Cir. 2001) (counsel ineffective for failing to consult appropriate 23 medical experts or collect relevant records after “his investigator’s limited efforts revealed 24 evidence of diabetes and substance abuse,” and for failing to explain to the jury the relevance of 25 the evidence that was presented).

26 Of course, if defense counsel conducts a reasonable investigation, and nothing put counsel 27 on notice of the existence of certain evidence, counsel cannot be faulted for failing to locate and 28 present such evidence. Babbitt v. Calderon, 151 F.3d 1170, 1174 (9th Cir. 1998). In addition, “a 1 lawyer may make reasonable decisions that render particular investigations unnecessary.” Id.

2 Mitigating evidence counsel should consider includes “medical history, educational 3 history, employment and training history, family and social history, prior adult and juvenile 4 correctional experience, and religious and cultural influences.” Wiggins, 539 U.S. at 524 (citing 5 ABA Guidelines 11.8.6, p. 133 (1988), emphasis omitted). Counsel has a “duty to investigate 6 and present mitigating evidence of [any] mental impairment.” Summerlin, 427 F.3d at 630 7 (quoting Bean v. Calderon, 163 F.3d 1073, 1080 (9th Cir. 1998)). Furthermore, in preparation for 8 the penalty phase, “counsel has an affirmative duty to provide mental health experts with 9 information needed to develop an accurate profile of the defendant’s mental health.” Caro v.
10 Woodford, 280 F.3d 1247, 1254 (9th Cir. 2002). “The defendant’s history of drug and alcohol 11 abuse should also be investigated.” Summerlin, 427 F.3d at 630 (citing Jennings v. Woodford, 12 290 F.3d 1006, 1016–17 (9th Cir. 2002)). In addition to investigating the mitigating evidence, 13 “[c]ounsel also has an obligation to present and explain to the jury all available mitigating 14 evidence.” Hamilton v. Ayers, 583 F.3d 1100, 1113 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Correll v. Ryan, 539 15 F.3d 938, 946 (9th Cir. 2008)); see also Stankewitz v. Wong, 698 F.3d 1163, 1172 (9th Cir. 2012) 16 (citing Hamilton, 583 F.3d at 1113).

17 When determining whether the state court’s application of the Strickland standard was 18 reasonable, the federal court must be “doubly” deferential. Richter, 562 U.S. at 105. In this 19 regard, the “standard for judging counsel’s representation is a most deferential one” and the 20 reasonableness standards of § 2254(d) are also “highly deferential.” Id. Further, because the 21 Strickland rule is a “general” one, courts have “more leeway ... in reaching outcomes in case-by-22 case determinations” and the “range of reasonable applications is substantial.” Id. at 101; Premo 23 v. Moore, 562 U.S. 115, 122–23 (2011). As the Supreme Court explained in Richter, “[w]hen 24 § 2254(d) applies, the question is not whether counsel’s actions were reasonable. The question is 25 whether there is any reasonable argument that counsel satisfied Strickland’s deferential standard.”
26 562 U.S. at 105.

27 Prejudice

28 The second prong of the Strickland test requires a petitioner to show that counsel’s

1 conduct prejudiced him. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 691–92. Prejudice is found where “there is a 2 reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding 3 would have been different.” Id. at 694. A reasonable probability is one “sufficient to undermine 4 confidence in the outcome.” Summerlin, 427 F.3d at 640 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693).
5 “This does not require a showing that counsel’s actions ‘more likely than not altered the 6 outcome,’ but the difference between Strickland’s prejudice standard and a more-probable-than-7 not standard is slight and matters ‘only in the rarest case.’” Richter, 562 U.S. at 112 (quoting 8 Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693). “The likelihood of a different result must be substantial, not just 9 conceivable.” Id.

10 Although, “[i]n establishing prejudice under Strickland, it is not necessary for the habeas 11 petitioner to demonstrate that the newly presented mitigation evidence would necessarily 12 overcome the aggravating circumstances.” Correll, 539 F.3d at 951–52 (citing Williams v.
13 Taylor, 529 U.S. at 398); see also Rompilla v. Beard, 545 U.S. 374, 393 (2005) (“[A]lthough we 14 suppose it is possible that [the sentencer] could have heard it all and still have decided on the 15 death penalty, that is not the test”). Instead, in evaluating prejudice, the court must “compare the 16 evidence that actually was presented to the jury with the evidence that might have been presented 17 had counsel acted differently,” Bonin v. Calderon, 59 F.3d 815, 834 (9th Cir. 1995), and evaluate 18 whether the difference between what was presented and what could have been presented is 19 sufficient to “undermine confidence in the outcome” of the proceeding. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 20 694. Prejudice is established in this context if “there is a reasonable probability that at least one 21 juror would have struck a different balance” between life and death. Wiggins, 539 U.S. at 537.

22 When examining the effect of counsel’s failure to unearth and present mitigating evidence 23 at the penalty phase, the Supreme Court has stressed the relevance of evidence of a petitioner’s 24 abusive childhood and mental health problems. It has been recognized that there is a “belief, long 25 held by this society, that defendants who commit criminal acts that are attributable to a 26 disadvantaged background, or to emotional and mental problems, may be less culpable than 27 defendants who have no such excuse.” Boyde v. California, 494 U.S. 370, 382 (1990) (quotation 28 and emphasis omitted). The Ninth Circuit recently described the Supreme Court’s consideration

1 of such evidence:

2 In Wiggins, ... a capital habeas petitioner’s defense counsel failed to introduce social 3 history mitigation evidence during the penalty phase, including evidence that “Wiggins 4 experienced severe privation and abuse in the first six years of his life while in the custody 5 of his alcoholic, absentee mother [, and that h]e suffered physical torment, sexual 6 molestation, and repeated rape during his subsequent years in foster care.” Wiggins, 539 7 U.S. at 535. The Court pointed out that this is the type of evidence that is “relevant to 8 assessing a defendant’s moral culpability,” id., and held that the failure to introduce this 9 evidence at the penalty phase was prejudicial: “[H]ad the jury been confronted with this 10 considerable mitigating evidence, there is a reasonable probability that it would have 11 returned with a different sentence.” Id. at 536.

12 Stankewitz v. Wong, 698 F.3d at 1175.

13 The California Supreme Court’s Application of the Strickland Standard

14 Petitioner contends the California Supreme Court applied the Strickland standard 15 inappropriately in a number of ways that affected its consideration of all of his Sixth Amendment 16 claims. To satisfy 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1), a petitioner must establish that the California Supreme 17 Court’s “decision ... was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly 18 established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.” Petitioner’s 19 argument here falls within the first part of the subsection (d)(1) standard. He argues the 20 California Supreme Court applied a rule “that contradicts the government law set forth” in 21 Supreme Court cases. Price v. Vincent, 538 U.S. 634, 640 (2003).

22 Inappropriate Pleading Standard

23 Initially, Petitioner complains that the California Supreme Court applied a higher pleading 24 standard in assessing his ineffective assistance of counsel claims than was permitted by the 25 Supreme Court in Strickland. According to Petitioner, the California Supreme Court created a 26 pleading standard in People v. Duvall, 9 Cal.4th 464, 474 (1995), that directly contravenes a 27 dictate of Strickland that ineffective assistance of counsel claims be adjudged without a 28 presumption that the trial was fair. In Strickland, the Supreme Court held that a Sixth Amendment challenge to counsel’s effectiveness is an “attack on the fundamental fairness of the proceeding whose result is being challenged.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 697. As a result, the Court observed, “[t]he principles governing ineffectiveness claims should apply in federal collateral

1 proceedings as they do on direct appeal or in motions for a new trial.” Id. The Court specifically 2 mentioned the presumption of finality of criminal judgments that is recognized in habeas in 3 stating that “no special standards ought to apply to ineffectiveness claims made in habeas 4 proceedings.” Id., at 97–98.

5 Even assuming the California Supreme Court’s presumption of correctness described in 6 Duvall were to run afoul of the United States Supreme Court’s holding in Strickland, and further 7 assuming, for the sake of argument, that the California Supreme Court must have applied that 8 presumption of correctness in considering Petitioner’s ineffective assistance of counsel claims, 9 this court may only find § 2254(d)(1) satisfied if the California Supreme Court’s decision was 10 “contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as 11 determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1). It is difficult to 12 find the “rule” Petitioner cites from Strickland to be “clearly established” when he cites no post-13 Strickland Supreme Court or other authority citing or applying that “rule.” To be “clearly 14 established federal law” the rule must have been “squarely established by th[e] Court.” Richter, 15 562 U.S. at 101 (quoting Knowles v. Mirzayance, 556 U.S. 111, 122 (2009)). Petitioner’s entire 16 argument hinges on one statement in a more than thirty-year-old decision. Further, while the 17 California Supreme Court may have been incorrect in its interpretation of the law, its decision 18 only runs afoul of § 2254(d)(1) if that interpretation also “was so lacking in justification that there 19 was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for 20 fairminded disagreement.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 103. See also Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. at 410 21 (“an unreasonable application of federal law is different from an incorrect application of federal 22 law”). Even making all the assumptions regarding the existence of the rule in the state court and 23 its application in this case, this court cannot find the California Supreme Court’s decision to be so 24 lacking that it runs afoul of § 2254(d)(1).

25 Improper Prejudice Standard

26 Petitioner next argues that the California Supreme Court applied an incorrect test for 27 determining prejudice stemming from the alleged ineffective assistance of counsel by relying 28 upon the United States Supreme Court’s decision in Lockhart v. Fretwell, 506 U.S. 364 (1993), to 1 modify the Strickland standard. In Fretwell, the Court was confronted with a unique situation.

2 There was no question that the petitioner’s trial attorney acted unreasonably in failing to object to 3 consideration of an aggravating factor used to determine Fretwell’s penalty. Id. at 369 n.1.
4 Rather, the issue was whether that failure prejudiced the petitioner. At the time of trial, the 5 answer to that question was “yes.” Id. at 367. The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals had ruled the 6 use of that aggravating factor unconstitutional. Id. However, later, after the petitioner sought 7 federal habeas relief, the Court of Appeals overruled its decision and held that reliance on that 8 aggravating factor did not violate the federal constitution. Id. Recognizing that strict application 9 of the Strickland standard under those circumstances would result in “an error in [the petitioner’s] 10 favor,” the Court looked beyond Strickland’s outcome determinative standard and considered 11 whether the failure of petitioner’s trial counsel to object rendered the defendant’s trial “unreliable 12 or the proceeding fundamentally unfair.” Id. at 372. It held that the result of Fretwell’s 13 sentencing proceeding “was neither unfair nor unreliable.” Id. at 371. Accordingly, the Court 14 found Fretwell suffered no prejudice as a result of the performance of his counsel.

15 In April 2000, the United States Supreme Court held that a state court erred in finding that 16 the Court’s decision in Fretwell modified the standards governing ineffective assistance of 17 counsel claims announced in Strickland. Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. at 391–98. The Court 18 recognized that there may be limited situations in which “it would be unjust to characterize the 19 likelihood of a different outcome as legitimate ‘prejudice.’” Id. at 391–92. The Court 20 characterized cases such as Fretwell as ones involving an unreasonable action of a trial attorney 21 that did “not deprive the defendant of any substantive or procedural right to which the law entitles 22 him.” Id. at 393 n.17. It concluded that the state court holding that Fretwell modified Strickland 23 “was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law.”
24 Id. at 399.

25 Petitioner herein argues that the California Supreme Court, “both before and after its 26 decision in Mr. Alvarez’s first habeas petition, has repeatedly relied upon Fretwell when 27 adjudicating ordinary ineffective-assistance claims.” (ECF No. 330 at 243.) However, almost 28 every case cited by Petitioner in support of that contention pre-dates the United States Supreme

1 Court’s April 2000 decision in Williams. (See ECF No. 330 at 243-45 [citing People v. Earp, 20 2 Cal.4th 826, 870 (1999) (citing Fretwell for the prejudice standard and noting that the challenged 3 conduct must have “some effect ... on the reliability of the trial process”); In re Avena, 12 Cal.4th 4 694, 722 & n.5 (1996) (describing the lack of clarity about application of a Fretwell standard and 5 finding no prejudice under either Strickland or Fretwell); In re Harris, 5 Cal.4th 813, 833 (1993) 6 (“[T]his second prong of the Strickland test is not solely one of outcome determination. Instead, 7 the question is ‘whether counsel’s deficient performance renders the result of the trial unreliable
8 or the proceeding fundamentally unfair’” quoting Fretwell, 506 U.S. at 372); In re Clark, 5 9 Cal.4th 750, 766 (1993) (To succeed on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, a petitioner 10 must show that the attorney’s “incompetence ... resulted in a fundamentally unfair proceeding or 11 an unreliable verdict”)].)

12 The only post-Williams case cited by Petitioner is In re Cox, 30 Cal.4th 974 (2003). (ECF 13 No. 330 at 244.) In Cox, the California Supreme Court quoted the Fretwell standard from its 14 earlier decision in Clark, but did not include a citation to Fretwell in doing so. Cox, 30 Cal.4th at 15 1016. Here, although the California Supreme Court’s first decision addressing Petitioner’s 16 ineffective assistance of counsel claims (asserted in case number S073670) was rendered in 1998, 17 before Williams was decided, its second consideration of his ineffective assistance of counsel 18 claims (asserted in case number S146501) occurred in 2011, after Williams was decided. Neither 19 denial included a citation to Fretwell, nor did the California Supreme Court’s opinion in 20 Petitioner’s direct appeal.

21 When determining whether a state court’s decision was contrary to or an unreasonable 22 application of federal law, this court must “presum[e] that state courts know and follow the law.”
23 Woods v. Donald, 135 S. Ct. 1372, 1376 (2015) (quoting Woodford v. Visciotti, 537 U.S. 19, 24 24 (2002)); see also Clark v. Arnold, 769 F.3d 711, 724 (9th Cir. 2014). Of course, Petitioner may 25 rebut this presumption, but he has not done so here. Petitioner has shown only that on occasion 26 after the United States Supreme Court issued its decision in Williams, the California Supreme 27 Court mentioned the prejudice standard based upon Fretwell. Yet, in the vast number of cases 28 decided around the time of the California Supreme Court decisions in Petitioner’s direct appeal

1 and habeas petitions, the California Supreme Court properly cited and/or applied the prejudice 2 standard announced in Strickland in addressing ineffective assistance of counsel claims. The 3 state court decision is entitled to the benefit of the any doubt. Visciotti, 537 U.S. at 24.
4 Petitioner’s showing is insufficient to convince this court that the California Supreme Court likely 5 applied an incorrect prejudice standard to his claims.

6 Failure to Consider Cumulative Effect of Errors

7 Finally, Petitioner argues that the California Supreme Court also failed to consider the 8 effect of his counsels’ alleged errors cumulatively. (ECF No. 330 at 245.) He relies primarily on 9 a single statement in a dissenting opinion indicating that the California Supreme Court majority 10 had, in that case, inappropriately divided one of the petitioner’s claims into subparts and then 11 applied timeliness standards to each subpart, rather than to the claim as a whole. In re Robbins, 12 18 Cal.4th 770, 820–21 (1998) (Kennard, J., dissenting). Petitioner’s argument is unpersuasive.
13 He has provided this court with no basis to find that the California Supreme Court engaged in a 14 “practice of diluting a petitioner’s prejudice evidence by not considering cumulative prejudice” 15 (ECF No. 330 at 245) resulting in a contrary to or unreasonable application of United States 16 Supreme Court precedent.

17 Claim FF: Failure to Stipulate to the Admission of Certain Statements

18 Petitioner contends defense counsel rendered ineffective assistance of counsel for refusing 19 to stipulate to the admission of certain third-party statements, tendered through a defense expert 20 witness, for their truth. Respondent asserts trial counsels’ actions were not ineffective, and in fact 21 were tactical.

22 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

23 In rejecting Petitioner’s claim, the California Supreme Court found as follows:

25 In his case, defendant called Gail McGarrity to the witness stand. As noted, she 26 testified to her opinion, as a cultural anthropologist, on matters concerning his background 27 and character in Cuba, and expressed the view that he suffered from conditions including 28 “profound emotional immaturity” and “extreme culture shock.” In so doing, she stated that she had been unable to go to Cuba to conduct an investigation and hence had been unable to corroborate certain information on which she relied. As she was relating certain

1 out-of-court statements on direct examination by Attorney Gable, Prosecutor Marlette 2 made a hearsay objection and requested the superior court to instruct the jury that it could 3 not consider any such statement for its truth. Attorney Gable declared that he was not 4 offering statements of that sort for that purpose, but solely to reveal the basis of her 5 opinion. He also declared that he did not object to the instruction requested. The superior 6 court largely overruled the hearsay objection, and instructed the jury that it could not 7 consider any out-of-court statement she related for its truth, but only as a basis for her 8 opinion. Attorney Gable completed the direct examination. Prosecutor Marlette then 9 subjected her to cross-examination. After she left the stand, he moved the superior court to 10 “withdraw” the instruction it had given at his request, and to instruct the jury instead that 11 it could consider any out-of-court statement she related for its truth. The superior court 12 declared that it would do so only if defense counsel stipulated. They refused. It effectively 13 denied the motion.

14 Complaining of defense counsel’s refusal to stipulate to Prosecutor Marlette’s 15 motion, defendant contends that he was provided with ineffective assistance of counsel in 16 violation of the Sixth Amendment. We disagree.

17 Defendant does not demonstrate either deficient performance or prejudice. As to 18 the absence of deficient performance: Evidently, Prosecutor Marlette made his motion in 19 order to prevent the jury from drawing any inference favorable to defendant or adverse to 20 the People based on McGarrity’s inability to go to Cuba to conduct an investigation and 21 her consequent inability to corroborate certain information on which she relied. Without 22 offending any objective standard of professional reasonableness, defense counsel could 23 have refused to stipulate, and apparently did refuse to stipulate, in order to allow the jury 24 to draw precisely such an inference. Of course, they had to pay a price for their refusal: 25 They had to give up an opportunity to use the out-of-court statements she related for their 26 truth. The price, however, was not too high: the statements in question had little 27 independent mitigating weight, coming as they did largely from defendant himself, who 28 was affected by self-interest. As to the absence of prejudice: There is no reasonable probability of an effect on the outcome. By giving up an opportunity to use these statements for their truth, they gave up little.

19 FN. 38. To the extent that defendant claims that, because defense counsel 20 refused to stipulate to Prosecutor Marlette’s motion, he was provided with 21 ineffective assistance of counsel in violation of article I, section 15 of the 22 California Constitution, he is unsuccessful. Here, as with the Sixth Amendment to 23 the United States Constitution, he would have to demonstrate deficient 24 performance under an objective standard of professional reasonableness and 25 prejudice under a test of reasonable probability of an effect on the outcome. (E.g., 26 People v. Ledesma, supra, 43 Cal.3d at pp. 215–218.) As explained in the text, he 27 cannot do so.

28 In a single paragraph in his reply brief, defendant claims for the first time that he was provided with ineffective assistance of counsel in violation of the Sixth Amendment if any of defense counsel’s acts or omissions resulted in a failure to preserve any of 11 issues for review. Again, he “asserts the point perfunctorily,” and “[w]e deny it in the same fashion.” (People v. Ashmus, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p.
1011, fn. 29.)

1 Relevant Excerpts of the Record Below

2 Gail McGarrity, a cultural anthropologist retained by the defense, began testifying on 3 Tuesday, July 25, 1989. Direct examination briefly continued into the morning of Wednesday, 4 July 26, before the prosecutor began cross-examination. (29 RT 6580-680; 30 RT 6681-87.)

6 During direct examination, the issue giving rise to Petitioner's claim surfaced during 7 McGarrity's response to Mr. Gable's question about whether Petitioner entered military service in 8 Cuba:

9 [McGARRITY]: His father confirmed to me on the phone that he had been in the 10 military, that the defendant seems very confused about exactly when he went into it, what his experiences were.

11 There - - there seems that this is largely attributable to the fact that he suffered an accident when he was in the military.

12 He was in the back of a military truck, and he fell out of the truck and was run over by a passing vehicle, and he suffered pretty severe injuries.

13 He was in a hospital in Havana for quite a long period of time, and his father stated 14 to me on the phone that he had a metal plate or some kind of insertion put into his brain.
His father also said that he'd been told by - -

15 MR. MARLETTE: Your Honor, I'm going - - I will object at this point, that this 16 seems to simply be hearsay, unrelated to any kind of cultural or that he's in Cuba. It's just as if Mr. Alvarez is testifying, it's hearsay.

17 MR. GABLE: Your Honor, if we need to have a hearing outside the presence, that's fine.

18 THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, would you please step outside for a few minutes?

19 (The jury was excused)

20 MR. MARLETTE: The objection I have, and with all due respect to the witness, it appears that she has very impressive qualifications in the cultural area, but it seems that 21 what we're getting into is just wholesale hearsay about the defendant's early life, that is not related to the witness's expertise.

22 I can understand that some of these things are foundations for her expert opinion, as it relates to the cultural influences where Mr. Alvarez grew up, on his later emotions, 23 then perhaps that hearsay is admissible, but it seems that we're going far afield from her expertise, particularly when we're getting into epileptic seizures and some kind of 24 psychological problems and having a metal plate in his head.

25 And I would ask that we be limited to the witness' expertise.

26 THE COURT: Mr. Gable?

27 MR. GABLE: First of all, I think this is - - I'm having difficulty understanding the objection.

28 If it's hearsay, this is not offered for the truth of the matter, it's offered under Section 801 as the information that the witness acquired for the purpose of forming her opinions, and - -

1 THE COURT: In particular, though, the reference to medical difficulties, 2 particularly a metal plate - -

3 MR. GABLE: Well, she's a - - first of all, one of her sub-specialties is medical 4 anthropology. As far as whether or not Mr. Alvarez has a metal plate in his head, I don't 5 think that this witness knows that for a fact.

6 And I think, if I asked her in front of the jury she'd say she didn't know that for a 7 fact. That it was just a report she got from the father, that something was put in his head.

8 I think that if that's the only, if that's the only problem that we're having an 9 objection to, fine, I don't have a problem with not talking about that anymore.

10 We'll talk about that tomorrow when Dr. Vickery [sic] gets here, but if there's 11 more objection along these lines, I think we ought to deal with it now.

12 THE COURT: No, that's my only concern.

13 MR. GABLE: Okay.

14 Because otherwise, I think everything that's being done here is totally proper, and 15 I don't see where she's going into anything that is outside of the necessary information, 16 which she had to gather in order to render her opinion.

17 And I think that, if I were to ask her that, she would say that that was what, she got 18 this information so she could give me an opinion.

19 THE COURT: All right.

20 MR. MARLETTE: If we go, though, to the factors that involve the witness' 21 expertise of the cultural situation in Cuba, we come up with very few ways, and that is 22 that children might drink at a young age and that was accepted, that there were extended 23 families.

24 We got into kind of an African slant to the religion before the revolution, and 25 every once in a while, those things are tied into, and the defendant drank at an early age, 26 or - - and the defendant went around from aunt to grandparent and so forth.

27 But other than that, we're getting into things about his education, and his school, 28 that do not have particular significance in terms of the cultural aspect, which this witness is being presented for.

THE COURT: I think, I understand your objection, but I think, this witness is presenting basically the defendant's background in relationship with other people, not necessarily just limited to any difference in any cultural differences between what the average United States citizen may have experienced as opposed to what somebody else from another country may have experienced.

MR. MARLETTE: In that case, if we're getting into psychology, I'm not aware of an individual psychological expertise that the witness has.

It was my understanding that it was her expertise in cultural anthropology and especially the social and medical anthropology, but relating to the societal conditions to what the defendant is doing.

And essentially, what we've ended up with is a wholesale hearsay exception, despite the fact that what she's relating may not have any specific significance to her expertise.

THE COURT: Okay.

With the exception of the reference to the metal plate, the objection is overruled.

MR. MARLETTE: May I ask that the witness be, or that the jury be admonished, as Mr. Gable explained, that these things are not for the truth of the matter, that they are simply foundational?

THE COURT: Yes.

1 MR. GABLE: I would have no objection, if the Court wanted to read Section 801 2 of the Evidence Code to the jury. There's also a CALJIC instruction on the issue, that 3 may be - -

4 MR. MARLETTE: I think it would be appropriate to admonish them at this time 5 while the witness is testifying.

6 (29 RT 6620-25 .)<sup>15</sup> Thereafter, the trial court instructed the jury accordingly. (29 RT 6625-26.)

7 The issue arose again on cross-examination when the prosecutor questioned McGarrity 8 about fighting behavior versus assaultive behavior, and then began to inquire into McGarrity's 9 interpretation of certain instances of conduct by Petitioner that she did not consider to be theft 10 behavior (30 RT 6687-97):

11 MR. MARLETTE: Now, you also understand that Mr. Alvarez has been convicted 12 by this jury of theft behavior, stealing?

13 A. I do understand that, yes.

14 Q. And were there instances of stealing in Cuba that you did not talk about 15 yesterday - -

16 A. No.

17 Q. - - on direct?

18 A. Absolutely none at all.

19 Q. What about the motorcycle? We didn't hear about the motorcycle yesterday, 20 did we?

21 A. No, we didn't, but I didn't consider that taking the bike and bringing it back to 22 someone of their same age who they knew, was the same as stealing it because they 23 returned it. Maybe I'm incorrect in that.

24 Q. Let me ask you this: Do you consider that is a situation where Mr. Alvarez 25 wanted something, and took it without permission?

26 A. I think that, that's definitely what happened, but I was under the impression 27 that the term "joy riding" was used for adolescents, including in this country, where they 28 take something, and it's illegal to do it but they bring it back.

So I didn't think it was the same as stealing it.

Q. Where did you get the term "joy riding?"

A. I heard it used in the United States for youngsters taking cars and bringing them back without permission.

Q. Who described this incident with taking the motorcycle in Cuba as joy riding?

A. I did, because when he was reprimanded by the juvenile authorities there, they didn't charge him with theft.

Q. But there was no mention of this situation in Cuba, where he wanted something that belonged to somebody else, and he just took it. There was not mention [of] that

---

<sup>15</sup> Prior to this point, McGarrity had thrice made reference to the fact she had been unable to travel to Cuba to corroborate information she had been provided by Petitioner. (29 RT 6592, 6606, 6617.)

1 yesterday, was there?

2 A. There wasn't, but it wasn't my intent to conceal it. I thought I would have a 3 chance to talk about it today.

4 Q. Understanding that the reason we are here is because of Mr. Alvarez's 5 convictions, including theft behavior, would you have had this jury make the important 6 decision they have to make without that important information, that you had to give them?

7 MR. GABLE: Your Honor, I'm going to object, and I'd ask the Court to reread 8 section 801 of the Evidence Code, which relates to the fact that the jury cannot consider 9 any of this information for the truth of the matter asserted, but only in relying upon or in 10 ascertaining the credibility of the expert witness, because the way it's posed right now, it[] 11 sounds like the prosecutor is eliciting this information for the truth, and it's not for the 12 truth of the matter at all, it's based upon hearsay.

13 MR. MARLETTE: Testing her opinion, your Honor, that she's given because she 14 has left significant facts out of the basis for that opinion.

15 THE COURT: Objection is overruled. She has testified as an expert. She is 16 subject to extensive cross examination.

17 (30 RT 6697-99.)

18 Cross-examination continued with the prosecutor inquiring into an incident involving 19 Petitioner having been found in the possession of an item of contraband – specifically, ducks – in 20 Cuba and serving time in jail as a result. (30 RT 6699-704.) Further questioning and testimony 21 covered these same subjects (assaultive or fighting behavior and theft behavior or taking things 22 belonging to others without permission) and how they related to McGarrity's opinion that 23 Petitioner suffered from culture shock in the United States. (30 RT 6704-10.) The prosecutor 24 then asked McGarrity the following: "You know, in talking about the extent of the fighting 25 problem or in talking about the motorcycle situation and calling that joy riding, and then it came 26 back and he intended to give it back, and in fact, even in talking about the situation that landed 27 him in prison, in Cuba, what was your primary source for all that?;" McGarrity responded, "His 28 father and the defendant." (30 RT 6710.) Similar questioning continued on these topics, and additional testimony addressed the documentation available to and relied upon by McGarrity, in addition to the information provided by Petitioner and his father. (30 RT 6711-36.) Thereafter, McGarrity's testimony concerned Petitioner's experiences upon arriving in the United States, including the detention camps, his time with the Metcalf family, his conduct while residing in Los 1 Angeles, including the incident wherein Petitioner killed a man with a knife, and whether or not 2 Cuban cultural influences made certain acts involving assaultive behavior, theft and murder

3 acceptable. (30 RT 6736-72.)

4           After redirect and recross, McGarrity was excused, subject to recall. (30 RT 6772-80.)
6 Outside the presence of the jury, the prosecutor advised the court that he wished to withdraw his 7 earlier request that the jury be instructed pursuant to California Evidence Code section 801, and 8 instead, that the jury be instructed “they may consider the statements that the witness relied on for 9 the truth of the matter.” (30 RT 6782.) He explained his reason for the request: “because the 10 witness said a number of times she felt hampered by not being able to go to Cuba” and indicated 11 he was “asking the Court to accept [his] waiver of a hearsay objection.” (30 RT 6783.) The trial 12 court advised that it would only reverse an earlier evidentiary ruling if “by stipulation both sides 13 wish to do that.” (30 RT 6783.) In response to the court’s comment, Mr. Gable advised that he 14 was “not going along with that” because the jury was advised, at the prosecutor’s request, 15 pursuant to that particular Evidence Code section and now that the prosecutor’s efforts to 16 discredit McGarrity’s testimony would benefit from the information she relied upon in forming 17 her opinion being regarded as offered for their truth, it would be unfair to rescind the earlier 18 evidentiary ruling. (30 RT 6783-84.) After the court excused the jury for the day, Mr. Gable 19 indicated he was not prepared to argue the issue. (30 RT 6786.) The court later clarified that it 20 was only willing to “reverse an evidentiary ruling after a witness” has finished testifying with a 21 stipulation by the parties. (30 RT 6792.) No such stipulation or agreement between the parties 22 concerning the expert’s testimony and its nature was reached. (30 RT 6792; 31 RT 6794.)<sup>16</sup>

24 25 _____
26 <sup>16</sup> During those Wednesday afternoon proceedings, the trial court indicated a Friday morning 27 hearing would only be necessary should the parties reach an agreement and wish to enter a 28 stipulation on the record. No proceedings were recorded for Friday, June 28, 1989, and proceedings resumed again on August 2, 1989.

1 limited purpose: to wit, it formed the basis for her expert opinion and was not to be considered for 2 its truth. There is nothing unusual about the instruction or counsel’s acquiescence to it being 3 given.

4 In California, during the relevant period, an expert could rely upon and testify regarding 5 the sources on which the expert has based his or her opinions, including hearsay of a type that 6 professionals in that same field would reasonably rely upon. People v. Gardeley, 14 Cal.4th 605, 7 618-19 (1996). And an expert witness in a capital case may testify about a defendant’s 8 psychosocial history. See In re Scott, 29 Cal.4th 783, 823 (2003) (noting an expert witness “may 9 base an opinion on reliable hearsay, including out-of-court declarations of other persons”); People 10 v. Hughes, 27 Cal.4th 287, 396 (2002); In re Gay, 19 Cal.4th 771, 816 (1998).

11 When the prosecutor originally objected on the basis of hearsay during McGarrity’s 12 testimony on direct, the expert witness’s credibility had not yet been subjected to any challenge.
13 While the prosecutor’s hearsay objection was overruled but for McGarrity’s reference to a metal 14 plate, the jury was instructed it was to consider the evidence for a limited purpose rather than for 15 its truth.

16 But when the prosecutor later offered to “withdraw” his request to have the jury so 17 instructed, the landscape had changed. The prosecutor had since subjected McGarrity to a cross-18 examination that may have harmed her credibility with the jury. And although the prosecutor 19 couched his request as one weighing in Petitioner’s favor – that the People also had an interest in 20 ensuring Petitioner received a fair trial given the defense’s inability to obtain the information it 21 had hoped to obtain in Cuba – defense counsel was not required to see it that same way. And 22 obviously defense counsel did not share in that interpretation of the prosecutor’s actions. Rather, 23 defense counsel reasonably believed the prosecutor was seeking to allow the jury to consider the 24 evidence at issue for its truth at that point because he (the prosecutor) had successfully attacked 25 McGarrity’s credibility with the jury. Defense counsel chose this tactic to counter the 26 prosecutor’s efforts to discredit McGarrity on the basis of her reliance upon information provided 27 by Petitioner or his family.

28 The information provided by Petitioner and his family to McGarrity regarding his

1 upbringing and youth in Cuba would no longer have the same force or effect it may have had 2 prior to cross-examination. The undersigned thus finds the California's Supreme Court's 3 determination that Mr. Gable's refusal to stipulate on this issue was the product of a tactical 4 choice, rather than any deficiency, is reasonable and not contrary to Supreme Court precedent, 5 when evaluating counsel's conduct from his perspective at the time it occurred, without the 6 benefit of hindsight. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689.

7         Petitioner claims that by refusing to stipulate, defense counsel deprived him of the 8 opportunity to present mitigating evidence; he cites to Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 76 (1985)
9 in support of his assertion. There, the indigent defendant's sole defense at trial was insanity, yet 10 he was denied the assistance of a court-appointed psychiatrist (or the funds to retain one's 11 assistance) who would have been able to provide testimony regarding the defendant's mental state 12 at the time he committed the crimes, as well as to provide mitigating evidence for the jury's 13 consideration at the time of capital sentencing. Ake, at 76-87. Here, in contrast, the trial court 14 did not deny Petitioner the opportunity to present mitigating evidence through the testimony of a 15 defense expert. McGarrity was retained for the express purpose of offering mitigating evidence 16 during the penalty phase of Petitioner's trial, and she did just that.

17         Next, asserting a jury is required to consider any aspect of a defendant's character or 18 record, Petitioner cites to Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586 (1978). Lockett too is distinguishable.
19 There, an Ohio statute allowed only a "limited range of mitigating circumstances" that could be 20 considered by the sentence. Namely, whether the victim induced or facilitated the offense, 21 whether the offender was under duress, coercion or strong provocation making it unlikely the 22 offense would have otherwise been committed, and lastly, whether the offense was a product of 23 the offender's mental deficiency or psychosis. Lockett, 438 U.S. at 597-608. California's death 24 penalty statute does not limit the mitigating circumstances a jury may consider as did the one at 25 issue in Lockett. Rather, California's statute affords a defendant the opportunity to present 26 evidence "as to any matter relevant to ... mitigation, ... including, but not limited to, ... the 27 defendant's character, background, history, mental condition and physical condition." (Cal. Pen.
28 Code, § 190.3.) Furthermore, Petitioner's citation to Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104 (1982),

1 for the same proposition - that a jury is required to consider any aspect of defendant's character or 2 record – is misplaced. In Eddings, despite a statute that permitted the sentencer to consider all 3 relevant mitigating evidence, the trial court refused to consider “the circumstances of Eddings’ 4 unhappy upbringing and emotional disturbance,” finding only his youth was properly regarded.
5 Eddings, 455 U.S. at 109. The Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals “found that the evidence in 6 mitigation was not relevant because it did not tend to provide a legal excuse from criminal 7 responsibility.” Id. at 113. The Supreme Court held “that the limitations placed by [those] courts 8 upon the mitigating evidence they would consider violated the rule in Lockett.” Id. at 113. A 9 sentencer may not refuse to consider any relevant mitigating evidence as a matter of law. Id. at 10 114. This case does not involve either the trial court or sentencer’s refusal to consider an 11 appropriate mitigating circumstance of the type at issue in Eddings.

12 And, unlike the situations presented in Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 325-28 (1989) 13 (subsequently overruled on other grounds in Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304 (2002),) and 14 Hitchcock v. Dugger, 481 U.S. 393, 395-99 (1987), Petitioner’s jury was not precluded from 15 considering, or instructed not to consider, mitigating evidence. The trial court’s instruction to the 16 jury that McGarrity’s testimony regarding the information or statements provided to her by 17 Petitioner and Petitioner’s family were not to be considered for their truth,<sup>18</sup> but rather as the 18 bases for her opinions, does not amount to a circumstance in which Petitioner was deprived of an 19 opportunity to present any relevant mitigating evidence, nor does it equate to those cases wherein 20 the applicable statutory authority limited the type of mitigating evidence a jury or sentencing 21 court could properly consider. The jury heard the evidence and it was permitted to consider that 22 evidence by way of McGarrity’s opinions. It was not limited to consider only certain types of 23 mitigating evidence or only that evidence enumerated by statute.

24 Also, a limiting instruction concerning the manner in which certain evidence may be 25 considered by the jury does not equate to the loss of an opportunity to present mitigating evidence 26 to the jury. “The rule allowing all relevant mitigating evidence has not ‘abrogated the California

---

27 <sup>18</sup> The jury was instructed pursuant to CALJIC Nos. 2.09 (Evidence Limited As To Purpose) and 28 2.80 (Expert Testimony). (5 CT 1165, 1188; 6 CT 1373-74; see also 31 RT 6874-77.)

1 Evidence Code.” People v. Carpenter, 15 Cal.4th 312, 404 (1997) (abrogated on other grounds in 2 People v. Diaz, 60 Cal.4th 1176 (2015)). Meaning, a trial court retains the discretion to rule on 3 evidentiary issues concerning mitigating evidence, and that discretion does not, and did not, 4 violate Petitioner’s right to present mitigating evidence.

5 Lastly, to the degree that Petitioner argues the California Supreme Court’s determination 6 involves an “unreasonable factual finding regarding trial counsel’s deficient performance” 7 because it “plainly misapprehende[d] or misstate[d] the record in making their findings, and the 8 misapprehension goes to a material factual issue that is central to petitioner’s claim,” the 9 undersigned is not persuaded.

10 The record supports the state court’s factual finding. As discussed above, the prosecutor’s 11 cross-examination of McGarrity challenged the expert’s credibility with the jury and involved 12 McGarrity’s reliance upon information provided by Petitioner and his family members, 13 particularly his father, as the basis for her expert opinion. It was not unreasonable for the 14 California Supreme Court to conclude that the prosecutor “made his motion in order to prevent 15 the jury from drawing any inference favorable to the defendant or adverse to the People based on 16 McGarrity’s inability to go to Cuba ...” McGarrity mentioned that inability during direct 17 examination on three occasions. The first when she was asked whether she had consulted with 18 other individuals similarly situated:

19 20 Q. And did you also consult with other individuals who had experienced the 21 similar process of being brought over to the United States during the Mariel Boatlift.

22 MR. MARLETTE: I’ll object to the relevance of that.

23 THE WITNESS: Yes, I did.

24 MR. GABLE: It’s just to give a basis for her research which she’ll ultimately be 25 giving an opinion on under 801 of the Evidence Code. It’s more for the expert to state the 26 basis of an opinion.

27 .....
28 THE COURT: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

Yes. Well, originally I had thought I was going to be able to visit Cuba, and therefore, I could corroborate the information that the defendant was giving me with information provided by his family and other people who knew him in Cuba.

But when that trip was no longer possible, I felt that it was really important to be able to confirm some of the statements that the defendant had made to me.

1           So I contacted some people in the Bay Area who were Cuban from the same part 2 of Cuba as the defendant, and who had entered the United States through Mariel.

3 (29 RT 6591-92.) And later,

4           [McGARRITY]: So although I haven't been to Cuba, to substantiate every step of 5 the way, I do know that close family members died, that he was living with them at the 6 time of death and that the whole family never recovered from the loss of the mother. The 7 father, for example, never remarried until quite recently.

8 (29 RT 6606.) And, finally, when asked about the period between Petitioner's thirteenth and 9 nineteenth years of age:

10           [McGARRITY]: This is a period where I feel that I - - I'm handicapped because I 11 wasn't able to visit Cuba, because the defendant's memory seems to be a little vague 12 about this period. And although what he says is totally consistent with what his father 13 says, it's not as clear to me as some of the other stages.

14 (29 RT 6617.) Thus, to interpret the prosecutor's motion as an effort to forestall any favorable 15 inference for the defense from McGarrity's references regarding an inability to travel to Cuba to 16 corroborate this information is in no way unreasonable.

17           Further, neither Mr. Gable's later declaration, nor the prosecutor's statements at page 18 6790 of the Reporter's Transcript, as cited by Petitioner, demand a finding otherwise. When the 19 prosecutor made his motion on July 25, 1989, following the noon recess, he stated he was doing 20 so because the defense was "claiming that they had lost some ability to present their case because 21 they were not able to go to Cuba, [but] this witness did have numerous contact[s] with people 22 from Cuba, and have contact with the defendant and contact with the defendant's [] father, and 23 expressed related statements by those people about conditions in Cuba." (30 RT 6782.) The 24 prosecutor wished to "put on the record very clearly [his reasons], and that is that, so the jury can 25 consider those facts, because the witness said a number of times she felt hampered by not being 26 able to go to Cuba, so I wanted to - -." (30 RT 6783.) When the trial court indicated it would not 27 reverse an earlier evidentiary hearing despite the prosecutor's "waiver of a hearsay objection," 28 Mr. Gable made his position known: that despite the prosecutor's attempts to discredit McGarrity's testimony as a result of the information provided by defendant being uncorroborated, where the prosecutor had previously objected and successfully sought a limiting instruction as to 1 that testimony, he believed it unfair were the court to entertain allowing that information to 2 subsequently be considered for its truth. (30 RT 6783-84.) In sum, the California Supreme Court 3 did not misapprehend or misstate the record.

4 Prejudice

5 As to the second prong, again, a petitioner must show that but for counsel's 6 unprofessional error, there exists a reasonable probability of a more favorable outcome. But here, 7 allowing the jury to consider certain evidence proffered by Petitioner and/or his family members 8 for its truth, by way of the testimony of expert witness McGarrity, would not have resulted in a 9 more favorable outcome at the penalty phase.

10 As the California Supreme Court pointed out, Petitioner "was affected by self-interest" 11 and the jury clearly did not find Petitioner to be a credible witness during the guilt phase 12 proceedings. There is no reason to believe the jury would have assigned great weight to 13 Petitioner's statements during the penalty phase. And Petitioner's father and other family 14 members would have been similarly interested or concerned with providing information 15 beneficial to Petitioner, understandably so. In fact, Petitioner's father was described by 16 McGarrity as feeling guilty or responsible for his own behaviors during Petitioner's childhood in 17 Cuba. Nevertheless, it is reasonable to infer Petitioner's family would be motivated to tell 18 McGarrity information designed to help Petitioner.

19 Hearing the evidence at issue for its truth, as opposed to for the more limited purpose of 20 forming the bases for the expert's opinion would not have undermined confidence in the outcome 21 of this proceeding. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. Given the aggravating factors here, particularly 22 Petitioner having killed before, it was not unreasonable for the state court to conclude there was 23 no reasonable probability of at least one juror striking a different balance between a life or death 24 sentence. Wiggins, 539 U.S. at 537.

25 It was not unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to conclude there was no 26 substantial likelihood of a different result. Richter, 562 U.S. at 112. Viewed in context and as a 27 whole, the California Supreme Court's ruling was neither an unreasonable application of Supreme 28 Court precedent, nor did it involve an unreasonable determination of facts. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

2                   Claim PP: Failure to Investigate & Present Additional Evidence Concerning 3                   Petitioner’s Life in Cuba

4                   Petitioner complains that defense counsels were ineffective for failing to investigate and 5 present additional evidence regarding his life in Cuba, including a failure to request an extension 6 of time in order to obtain the necessary time to prepare a proper mitigation investigation “and put 7 the results of it into context through expert testimony.” These “largely bungled efforts,” 8 Petitioner asserts, severely prejudiced him, and thus entitle him to habeas relief. (ECF No. 330 at 9 253-59.) Respondent contends that this claim is unexhausted and must be dismissed because the 10 claim presented in the points and authorities supporting the operative habeas petition is different 11 than that presented to this court in the second amended petition itself, differing as well from those 12 presented to the California Supreme Court in his first and second state habeas petitions.
13 Respondent maintains that version of the claim “focused on the adequacy of counsel’s 14 investigative efforts related to mounting a mental defect defense immediately following 15 McGarrity’s testimony during the penalty phase,” and that the instant claim is an “expansive 16 challenge to the adequacy of counsel’s investigative efforts – both before and during trial – to 17 send an agent to Cuba.” Further, Respondent contends the claim must be denied even as 18 originally presented because Petitioner has failed to carry his burden of demonstrating it was 19 unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to determine counsel was not ineffective. (ECF 20 No. 345 at 111-12.)

21                   Following a review of the claims as presented in this court and in the California Supreme 22 Court, the undersigned finds this claim to be sufficiently exhausted for purposes of review.

23                   Relevant Trial Court Proceedings

24                   The record reveals several references to an ongoing investigation and information the 25 defense hoped to obtain from a trip to Cuba, often, although not always, arising in the context of 26 the California Penal Code § 989.7 proceedings.<sup>19</sup>

27                   On June 8, 1988, counsel sought funds for a psychiatric evaluation and funds to continue

28                   

<sup>19</sup> The undersigned will refer to the in camera hearings concerning funding as § 989.7 proceedings, the statute’s present numerical form, for consistency and ease of reference.

1 “the investigation both from the penalty phase and the guilt phase” as to Petitioner’s background.
2 (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 8-14.)

3 In a hearing held in camera on September 8, 1988, prior to trial and in relation to a motion 4 to continue the trial then set for September 13, 1988, Mr. Holmes proffered the following:

6 [MR. HOLMES]: The main reason why we want to continue it to this time is my 7 client spent - - he was born in Santiago, Cuba, and he was raised there. He was in the 8 army there, and he didn’t come to the United States until he was about 17 or 18 years of 9 age, so our penalty phase investigation, we have been four months now trying to make 10 arrangements for investigators, translators and everything, to go to Cuba - - Santiago, 11 Cuba, mainly to get records, talk to people, take video-taped statements and so forth of 12 individuals, his mother, his sister, his brother, and I think his father still lives there, if we 13 can find him, to do all the various things that are necessary for a social history on him to 14 present to the jury during the penalty phase.

15 The last time we had a meeting on this case, our investigators informed me that 16 they could not make the arrangements and, believe me, they have had letters, phone calls 17 back and forth here trying to arrange this thing.

18 The earliest date we can do this is October 10th, and it’s going to be about a six or 19 seven-day trip. We have the money, arrangements already made for this, and so, while if 20 it works out, they will go down there on October 2. They will be down there for six or 21 seven days, and we will probably need more time after they get back to kind of decipher 22 and assimilate what we have from that trip, and it’s my understanding that the whole thing 23 is very complicated.

24 First of all, when you talk to any State Department officials and we say that we 25 want to send an investigator down to Cuba, they say, n-o, no way. So, you start checking 26 with people that have been there under these like circumstances. Then you find out there 27 are ways, but it’s very complicated and basically it’s my understanding what they do is 28 they take a trip to Guadalajara, Mexico, and from there it’s kind of a tour situation they they get on, a ten-day tour, and from there they go down, and those things only leave on certain dates, and special arrangements have to be made, so that’s our main reason.

There is no way we can - - we could start trial on this thing and after that try to prepare for the penalty phase.

22 (RT [9/8/88] P-118-19, italics added.)

23 On November 21, 1988, both counsel appeared at a hearing and sought additional funding, 24 including travel costs to Cuba. It was also noted that efforts were underway to assess whether 25 Petitioner suffered brain damage as a result of events occurring in Cuba. Further, counsel advised 26 the court efforts would be made to obtain documentation regarding allegations of child abuse, 27 Petitioner’s educational records, and any criminal record. Counsel noted the difficulty in 28

1 obtaining information from Cuba as well as the difficulty associated with traveling to Cuba. On 2 that occasion, the court asked counsel to provide more specific information regarding the need “to 3 go to Cuba, what you intend to get, who you’ll see, [and] what kind of backup preliminary work”
4 justified the funding sought. (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 15-24.)

5 On January 18, 1989, both counsel again appeared at a hearing concerning funds. More 6 particularly, counsel sought additional monies to send two persons to Cuba. (RT § 989.7 7 Proceedings 25-26.) After discussions concerning the possibility of a plea offering that would 8 negate the need for a capital trial, as well as medical testing related to seizures or “alleged mental 9 problems” (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 27-36), the court expressed concern about incurring the 10 expenses before being certain the matter was “in fact, go[ing] to trial.” (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 11 36.) Further discussion ensued (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 36-39) and the following occurred:

12 13 THE COURT: Well, seems to me, you could still schedule this.

14 The trial date is February 1st, 3rd, whatever. You can still schedule it thirty days 15 ahead and still be well within your guilt phase.

16 MR. GABLE: That’s fine.

17 THE COURT: And still make the thirty-day deadline [referencing need to 18 purchase airline tickets in advance].

19 You wouldn’t finish the guilt phase - - unless you are going to move quickly 20 picking the jury. It’s going to take a month picking a jury.

21 MR. HOLMES: That’s pretty minimum.

22 THE COURT: I wish it wasn’t.

23 MR. HOLMES: It is though, by the time you go through it.

24 MR. GABLE: If we get - - we get rolling on this as soon as we start the trial, we 25 are in good shape.

26 THE COURT: I will grant it.

27 MR. HOLMES: Okay.

28 THE COURT: I will put in, however, shall not be expended until trial has actually commenced.

MR. HOLMES: Which would be being assigned - -

THE COURT: Being assigned.

MR. HOLMES: - - a court. We will have motions, and everything else to start with.

MR. GABLE: Would the court indicate, also, we can get an advance on the actual costs of airfare and - - that so everything but the - -

THE COURT: Well, I think you can do that.

If I sent you out that day, then you can get the money as of that day and can make the reservations to get at - - to pick a jury. You have another couple of months on the guilt phase alone.

1           You have got three months of time, conservatively, to get this done. It's not going 2 to take you fourteen days.

3           MR. HOLMES: May have to get a longer time between the two trials, if that 4 comes up.

5           THE COURT: And you may have - - have some delay between. But I don't think 6 you are going to run into that if you get started during the guilt phase.

7           MR. HOLMES: Getting them down there. When he comes back, it will be almost 8 automatic.

9           THE COURT: We better go ahead on the permit, if that takes thirty days.

10          MR. GABLE: We will [be] getting on that right away. [¶] Thank you.

11          THE COURT: You are welcome. Thanks.

12 (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 39-41.)

13          On February 24, 1989, Mr. Holmes sought additional investigative cost funding, noting 14 that his investigator Mr. Wilcox while not traveling to Cuba as was already planned for Messrs.
15 Mayorga and Myers, was "coordinating the Cuba trip," and "putting together some of the 16 applications and things of that nature, getting visas, passports and so forth." (RT § 989.7 17 Proceedings 44-45.)

18          Later, on April 24, 1989, Mr. Holmes sought additional funding for the costs associated 19 with investigator Wilcox's work and expert witness fees. No specific mention of Cuba was made.
20 (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 47-50; see also RT In Camera Hearings 208-12.) In a May 19, 1989 21 appearance, Mr. Holmes advised the court that the figure represented "isn't as bad as it looks 22 because my guess is the way things stand right now, we'll never get [to Cuba]." (RT § 989.7 23 Proceedings 52.) He further advised the court the investigators "got as far as Mexico City here 24 couple weeks ago, and we found out we were misled by all the officials, everything, as far as type 25 of visa that was required. [¶] We're still working on it." (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 52.)

26          On June 16, 1989, in an in camera session with Judge Lewis and defense counsel and the 27 defense investigator, Mr. Gable advised the court regarding the efforts undertaken to "gather 28 relevant mitigating evidence" in light of the "difficulty securing passage to Cuba." (RT In Camera Hearings 5966.) More particularly, Mr. Gable advised that he had reached out to a capital litigator in South Carolina with experience representing a Cuban client who offered
"several different avenues to approach the problem of securing passage to Cuba, including talking

1 to the United States attorney for Mr. Castro – apparently he has an attorney on retainer in New 2 York City, so we’re in the process of contacting him.” (RT In Camera Hearings 5967.) Contact 3 had also been made with the “United States Conference of Catholic Bishops and a Havana-based 4 law firm that may also be of assistance.” (RT In Camera Hearings 5967.) Mr. Gable further 5 advised the court he had “secured the names of four experts on Cuban immigration” and intended 6 to offer one of those individuals as an expert witness. (RT In Camera Hearings 5968.) Because 7 family and friends in Cuba could not be subpoenaed to testify, the defense team indicated it “had 8 intended ... all along [to] send a team down to Cuba, armed with video recorders, and interview 9 these people.” (RT In Camera Hearings 5969.)

10 On June 21, 1989, additional funds were approved related to Mr. Holmes’s request for 11 “witness travel expenses” and “expert witness fees and costs ... strictly for penalty phase 12 witnesses and experts, which will start on Monday.” (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 62-64.)

13 On July 5, 1989, in proceedings held in camera concerning “a continuance for the purpose 14 of going to Cuba,” defense counsel indicated social anthropologist McGarrity could testify 15 concerning the “utmost importance” of such a trip “to gather the information relating to 16 [Petitioner]’s background, in order to make valid assessments.” (RT In Camera Hearings 6181-17 82.) The following day, McGarrity testified regarding her need to travel to Cuba to obtain 18 witness statements and other information regarding Petitioner’s upbringing. (RT In Camera 19 Hearings 6191-200.) In a statement to the court following McGarrity’s testimony, Mr. Gable 20 indicated: “We have been attempting to send a team to Cuba since early, yeah, since about, 21 actually since about May of 1988, is when we first started.” (RT In Camera Hearings at 6200:25-22 27.) McGarrity later indicated she wished to visit at least one of the schools Petitioner attended, 23 in addition to talking with his family and attempting to gain access to hospital and medical 24 records. (RT In Camera Hearings 6205.)

25 On July 7, 1989, during the defense case at the penalty phase concerning scheduling 26 matters, and outside the presence of the jury, Mr. Gable indicated McGarrity had a “confirmed 27 flight to Mexico City on [July] 11th,” heading into Cuba on the 15th, returning via Mexico City 28 and ultimately arriving back in the United States on July 22nd. (28 RT 6308.)

1 On July 10, 1989, a hearing was held wherein the court questioned Mr. Gable specifically 2 about the defense team's plans for sending two people to Cuba. He relayed that Mayorga and 3 Myers "got all the way to Mexico City and were turned back by the Cuban government for 4 reasons that had to do, I think, primarily with the fact that they - - they advised them what they 5 were actually going down there for; and secondly because it was right at the time when the 6 Russian leader Gorbachev was down in Cuba and they didn't want them down there, anyway." 7 (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 66-67.) Thereafter, discussion centered on the defense's retention of 8 McGarrity and its desire to send her to Cuba in place of Mayorga and Myers. Ultimately 9 however, the 989.7 court withdrew its prior authorization of funds to be expended for a trip to 10 Cuba in order to obtain documentation of Petitioner's social history, believing the circumstances 11 of the planned trip would make the court a party to a subterfuge.<sup>20</sup> (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 68-12 86.)

13 Thereafter, two additional in camera hearings were held concerning the appropriation of 14 funds to cover fees for social anthropologist McGarrity and medical expert William Vicary, and 15 additional funds for investigator Wilcox. (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 87-92.)

16 Analysis

17 First, Petitioner contends his attorneys were ineffective for failing to request an extension 18 of time within which to prepare a proper mitigation investigation. He claims this failure severely 19 prejudiced him. The undersigned finds no ineffective assistance of counsel for a failure to request 20 an extension of time in light of the circumstances. Nor was there a failure to investigate and/or 21 prepare a proper mitigation case for the penalty phase, as alleged by Petitioner.

22 Deficiency

23 In June 1988, counsel sought funds for the investigation pertaining to both the guilt and 24 penalty phases. In September 1988, at a hearing on a motion to continue the trial, defense

---

26 <sup>20</sup> The subterfuge involved the defense team's failure to advise the § 989.7 court of the change in 27 its plans regarding who was being sent to Cuba for purposes of the investigation, as well as the 28 fact that by joining a tour group traveling from Mexico into Cuba, the Cuban government would be unaware of the true purpose for the visit.

1 counsel noted efforts to arrange for a trip to Cuba had been ongoing for a period of four months.
2 On that occasion, it was anticipated the trip to Cuba would happen on October 2, 1988. (RT 3 [9/8/88] P-118-19.) When counsel sought additional funds in late November 1988 for a medical 4 expert and/or medical tests, and travel costs to Cuba, he represented to the court the defense had 5 encountered difficulty associated with the previous travel plans. The court asked counsel to 6 provide additional information in support of the request, and counsel agreed to do so. (RT 7 § 989.7 Proceedings 15-24.) In January 1989, the court approved additional funds for sending 8 two investigators to Cuba, to be expended once trial had commenced. (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 9 39-41.) At that point then, the defense team had been working on arranging a trip to Cuba for 10 approximately nine months. The trial had been continued on at least two occasions for this 11 reason. (3 CT 547-50, 574-75, 599-603.)<sup>21</sup>

12 About five months later, in mid-May 1989, defense counsel reported to the court its 13 efforts were recently thwarted when Messrs. Mayorga and Myers could get no farther than 14 Mexico City, having been “misled by all the officials” with regard to the proper documentation 15 necessary for entry to Cuba. (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 52.) The guilt phase was then ongoing, the 16 defense presenting their case during that same period. (5 CT 1101, 1103, 1106, 1109, 1111-13, 17 1115, 1118, 1121.) After guilty verdicts had been rendered in the guilt phase (6 CT 1276-82) and 18 prior to the penalty phase beginning,<sup>22</sup> Mr. Holmes requested additional funds for expert witness 19 fees. (RT § 987.9 Proceedings 62-64.) Those funds were intended to be used by the defense 20 team to cover the costs of sending their social anthropologist expert to Cuba in an effort to obtain 21

22 <sup>21</sup> The parties were assigned to trial before Judge Darrel W. Lewis in Department 15 on February 23 2, 1989. (4 CT 771.) Pretrial motions were considered on February 7, 22, 23 and 28, 1989. (4 24 CT 786, 917, 947-48, 961.) Jury selection proceedings commenced March 1, 1989. (4 CT 962.)
A jury was sworn on April 11, 1989, and the guilt phase of the trial began that same date. (4 CT 1075.) Deliberations commenced June 1, 1989. (5 CT 1139.)

25 <sup>22</sup> The penalty phase was originally scheduled to begin July 10, 1989. (6 CT 1283.) Following an 26 in camera hearing held June 16, 1989, the court ordered the People’s penalty phase case would 27 begin June 26, 1989, whereas the defense case would commence July 5, 1989. (6 CT 1284.) The 28 government put on its case June 26 (6 CT 1285) and rested July 5 (6 CT 1291); Petitioner’s case began that same date (ibid.). Testimony for the defense continued through July 11, 1989. (6 CT 1292, 1294-95.) The trial was then recessed to July 25, 1989. (6 CT 1295-96.)

1 the long sought after social history information concerning Petitioner. (RT § 987.9 Proceedings 2 62-86.) Efforts continued despite repeated setbacks relating to the team’s ability to get 3 representatives into Cuba.

4 In light of all the circumstances, failure to request an extension of time was not outside the 5 wide range of professionally competent assistance. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 690. Counsel tried to 6 get representatives into Cuba for the purpose of obtaining witness statements and documentation 7 relevant to Petitioner’s social history for more than a year and were skeptical such a trip could be 8 completed despite continued efforts to make it happen. The trial court noted the jury was 9 “already extremely frustrated” because they had been told they would be “finished in early July,” 10 and a continuance would affect that timeline. (RT In Camera Proceedings 6200, 6210.) 11 Moreover, the court expressed concern over the uncertainty of the availability of the evidence at 12 issue. (RT In Camera proceedings 6200.) To that end, counsel “exercised acceptable 13 professional judgment” by not seeking an extension in what would have likely been an exercise in 14 futility. Counsel was not deficient. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689-90.

15 With specific regard to Petitioner’s complaints about defense counsels’ conduct 16 concerning their efforts to obtain mitigating evidence from Cuba, the undersigned likewise finds 17 no deficiency.

18 19 In preparation for the penalty phase of a capital murder trial, counsel has an 20 “obligation to conduct a thorough investigation of the defendant's background.” (Williams 21 v. Taylor (2000) 529 U.S. 362, 396; see also Wiggins v. Smith (2003) 539 U.S. 510, 522 22 (Wiggins); In re Lucas (2004) 33 Cal.4th 682, 728.) “[I]nvestigations into mitigating evidence ‘should comprise efforts to discover all reasonably available mitigating evidence and evidence to rebut any aggravating evidence that may be introduced by the prosecutor.’ [Citation.]” (Wiggins, supra, 539 U.S. at p. 524.)

23 People v. Doolin, 45 Cal. 4th 390, 427–28 (2009) (italics in original). This is not a matter that 24 involves counsel failing to act in one way or another. Rather, this case involves efforts by 25 defense counsel to present mitigating evidence in the form of a social history obtained as a result 26 of a visit to Cuba, where those efforts ultimately did not pay off.

28

1 Here, the evidence counsel had hoped to obtain in communist Cuba was simply not 2 reasonably available. Travel to and from Cuba was certainly not common and required special 3 arrangements. Diplomatic relations between the United States and Cuba had been severed for 4 decades at that point. Counsel had sought the same evidence for about a year by the time the jury 5 reached its verdicts on June 9, 1989, in the guilt phase, to wit: Mr. Holmes represented in 6 September 1988 the team had been working on arrangements for four months, since May or June 7 1988.<sup>23</sup> There are specific references in the record pertaining to the defense team’s efforts to 8 work with the State Department and related agencies to gain access to Cuba.<sup>24</sup>

9 Before the penalty phase began, the two persons initially retained by the defense to travel 10 to Cuba to obtain videotaped witness statements, medical, academic and military records, were 11 stopped in Mexico City and never made it to Cuba. Defense counsel represented those 12 individuals were considered “persona non grata” thereafter and would not be permitted to enter 13 Cuba. (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 70.) Counsel tried yet again, retaining expert McGarrity who 14 had studied and lived in Cuba previously. McGarrity testified to the court that based on her prior 15 experience in Cuba, she believed she had a good chance of getting into the country and gaining 16 access to the information sought by the defense team. (RT In Camera Hearings 6191-2100, 17 6205.) But that second effort would not pay off either.

18 Petitioner’s assertion that defense counsel took a “hands off” approach to the efforts 19 undertaken by Mayorga and Myers, as well as the efforts of McGarrity, is not well taken. Based 20 on the record before the court, and the presumption that counsel acted within the wide range of 21 reasonable assistance and exercised acceptable professional judgment (Strickland, 466 U.S. at 22 689-90), Petitioner cannot and has not established any deficiency.

23 This case is unlike Wiggins v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510 (2003), upon which Petitioner relies.
24 There, defense counsel failed to put on any mitigating evidence involving Wiggins’ childhood. In

---

25 <sup>23</sup> This representation is consistent with Mr. Gable’s statement in July 1989 that the defense had 26 been attempting to send a team to Cuba since May 1988.

27 <sup>24</sup> The defense team represented it had been working with the State Department “for months,” 28 starting “a year and a half ago,” and had worked on gaining permission to travel to Cuba with related agencies “for a real long time.” (RT § 987.9 Proceedings 78-80.)

1 an opening statement during the sentencing proceedings, defense counsel advised the jury it 2 would hear evidence that Wiggins “had a difficult life” and no criminal record. Wiggins, 539 3 U.S. at 515. But counsel “introduced no evidence of Wiggins’ life history” during the 4 proceedings. Id. at 515. Yet, outside the presence of the jury and before closing arguments, 5 counsel proffered that had a bifurcation motion been granted, the defense would have introduced 6 “expert testimony demonstrating Wiggins’ limited intellectual capacities and childlike emotional 7 state on the one hand, and the absence of aggressive patterns in his behavior, his capacity for 8 empathy, and his desire to function in the world on the other.” Id. at 515-16. Nevertheless, the 9 jury heard no such evidence. Id. at 516. The high court found counsel were deficient for electing 10 not to introduce evidence of Wiggins’ background given the information available to them. Id. at 11 520-34. That background involved many forms of abuse perpetuated by petitioner’s mother and 12 foster parents. The high court further held that counsels’ failures prejudiced Wiggins’ defense; a 13 reasonable probability existed that, but for counsels’ unprofessional errors, the result of the 14 sentencing proceeding would have been different. Id. at 534-37. “Wiggins’ sentencing jury heard 15 only one significant mitigating factor - that Wiggins had no prior convictions. Had the jury been 16 able to place petitioner’s excruciating life history on the mitigating side of the scale, there is a 17 reasonable probability that at least one juror would have struck a different balance.” Id. at 537.

18 Here, defense counsel did not fail to pursue avenues of readily available information such 19 as school, court or hospital records; counsel did in fact pursue such records, but the fact the 20 records were located in Cuba made them less than readily available. Doe v. Ayers, 782 F.3d 425, 21 435 (9th Cir. 2015). Defense counsel did present mitigating evidence regarding Petitioner’s 22 social history through the testimony of its expert witness, as well as through the testimony of 23 David Myers. Nor did counsel fail to investigate Petitioner’s mental condition as a mitigating 24 factor. Counsel did so, and, ultimately, determined such efforts would not inure to Petitioner’s 25 benefit at the penalty phase, thus making a strategic or tactical decision not to present such 26 evidence. Doe v. Ayers, 782 F.3d at 441-42.

27 Petitioner cites to a statement by Mr. Holmes that sixty percent of the mitigation case was 28 denied to Petitioner when the court withdrew the funding for the trip to Cuba. First, the record

1 also indicates that when asked, Mr. Holmes admitted he made the statement during argument and 2 had “just picked that figure out of the hat.” (30 RT 6682.) Second, regardless of any numerical 3 value assigned to the evidence in Cuba, the comment does not speak to the fact the evidence was 4 simply not readily available; and, it was unavailable well before the funding was withdrawn on 5 July 11, 1989.

6 With specific regard to the new evidence pertaining to physical abuse perpetrated by 7 Petitioner’s father, that information was not known to defense counsel because Petitioner had 8 never alleged any abuse by his father at the time of trial. Neither had Petitioner’s brother 9 Dagoberto, despite providing plenty of other relevant information during telephone conversations 10 with defense expert McGarrity in 1989.<sup>25</sup> His October 28, 2003, declaration does comport with 11 declarations offered by others (compare ECF No. 302, Vol. X, Ex. 22), but a fair-minded jurist 12 could have concluded these declarations were contradicted by other evidence in the record and 13 thus did not support Petitioner’s claim. To the degree Petitioner claims this information would 14 have been uncovered had the investigation in Cuba occurred, as previously found by the 15 undersigned, information from Cuba was unavailable to the defense team for reasons other than 16 ineffectiveness of trial counsel. The evidence proffered by Petitioner’s neighbors and teachers 17 was similarly unavailable and, in some cases, includes information that could not have been 18 personally known by the declarant.

19 It was not unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to conclude counsel were not 20 ineffective based upon the record and evidence. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03.

21 Petitioner relies upon the declarations of clinical and forensic psychiatrist Pablo Stewart, 22 clinical and forensic psychologist Patricia Perez-Arce, and clinical psychologist Monica Delgado 23 to support his claim. (ECF No. 302, Ex. 64; ECF No. 320, Exs. 143 & 163.) The undersigned 24 has reviewed the reports prepared by these experts and concludes the evidence does not require a 25 finding that the California Supreme Court’s determination was unreasonable. Significantly, the 26 reports were generated approximately 15 and 20 years after trial in this matter. As a result, the

---

27 <sup>25</sup> The undersigned notes Dagoberto was able to impart this information via telephone to Ines 28 Monguio, Ph.D. on September 9, 1998. (ECF No. 302, Vol. X, Ex. 32.)

1 reports are not persuasive. See Deere v. Cullen, 718 F.3d 1124, 1146-47 (9th Cir. 2013) (“as we 2 pointed out in Deere I, ‘belated opinions of mental health experts are of dubious probative value
3 and therefore disfavored”). Without exhaustively detailing the inconsistencies in the new expert 4 reports with the information available at the time of trial, and even accepting the content of the 5 three expert opinions, the evidence simply does not establish that trial counsel was deficient for 6 failing to present a mental health defense. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689 (the court’s scrutiny is 7 “highly deferential and is evaluated without the benefit of hindsight”).

8 Next, the undersigned has reviewed Mr. Gable’s declaration of November 4, 2004, and 9 notes that the statements in paragraph 18 are lacking in important detail. (ECF No. 302, Vol.
10 XXII, Ex. 63 at 4288-89.) Gable claims he retained Dr. Vicary to evaluate Petitioner’s mental 11 health but provides no date for having done so. He goes on to state he “tried to communicate” 12 with the doctor “numerous times” in advance of the penalty phase yet was not provided with any 13 information until the night before Vicary was to testify. (Id. at 4288-89.) Again, Gable’s 14 declaration lacks detail: how and when did he attempt to communicate with the expert. The 15 undersigned notes too that Dr. Vicary’s report is dated July 24, 1989, but does not include the 16 date upon which he was retained.

17 It is interesting to note that the record indicates Mr. Holmes advised the § 989.7 judge on 18 June 21, 1989, that the defense was working with a “Ph.D., J.D.” medical expert – Dr. Vicary has 19 both a J.D. and a Ph.D. - and sought related expert witness fees and costs of $9,750. (RT § 989.7 20 Proceedings 62-63.) On that date, Holmes indicated to the court the defense case was scheduled 21 to commence July 5, 1989. (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 63.) On July 6, 1989, after McGarrity 22 testified in camera regarding the importance of traveling to Cuba, Gable indicated to the trial 23 court that he was unsure as to the length of time the medical expert might be required to testify 24 during the penalty phase because he had not yet “totally prepared him. He’s kind of hanging out 25 there, waiting for the information that was hopefully forthcoming.” (RT In Camera Hearings at 26 6212.) On July 10, 1989, Gable represented to the court that he had “been told by the psychiatrist 27 who is working on this case, it’s vitally important to gather this type of information about Mr.
28 Alvarez ....” (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 75.) On July 21, 1989, Holmes appeared for a hearing

1 before the § 989.7 judge and indicated to the court that Gable was “working with this particular 2 expert [referring to McGarrity]” whereas he (Holmes) was “working with other experts ....” (RT 3 § 989.7 Proceedings 88.) Holmes further indicated to the court that Dr. Vicary’s report was 4 incomplete on that date because they were “still waiting for some medical results on some MRIs 5 ... that we’ve had done out at Sutter Hospital.” (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 88.)

6 The record, therefore, indicates continuing contact between the defense team and Dr.
7 Vicary, and also reveals that any delay Mr. Gable’s declaration appears to attribute to Dr. Vicary 8 came from the expert awaiting additional medical testing results. A fairminded jurist could have 9 concluded that Dr. Vicary’s report was not anticipated earlier than it was in fact received by the 10 defense, and that once it was received, the defense team’s strategy changed because there was no 11 evidence to indicate Petitioner suffered from a mental defect. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101, 103.
12 Moreover, the record indicates the medical expert retained by the defense had been told of 13 Petitioner’s medical history as relayed by Petitioner and his family members through McGarrity.
14 (RT In Camera Hearings 6183, 6197-98 [McGarrity “collaborating” with Vicary], 6212.)

15 Dr. Vicary’s report itself reveals he reviewed neurological and psychological reports, 16 among other information. With regard to the former, the report states the February 1989 EEG 17 was “essentially normal” and a “computer enhanced EEG revealed some abnormalities in the rear 18 of the brain and right lateral aspect,” that a June 1989 MRI was “normal” and that skull x-rays 19 were “normal.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 4115.) The psychological test reports 20 reviewed by Dr. Vicary revealed numerous troubling items: (1) that Petitioner told “Dr. Campos 21 that he was intoxicated” on a drug that “makes you act crazy,” and that later he “became more 22 aggressive” and “did whatever he felt like doing without regard for any consequences;” (2) 23 Petitioner reported having been “discharged from his [college] studies because of disciplinary 24 problems;” (3) “that the homicide victim could not have been robbed because [Petitioner] stabbed 25 him to help out a friend who was in a heated argument with the victim;” and (5) that Petitioner’s 26 MMPI inventory revealed elevated findings on the hypochondriacal, manic and antisocial scales, 27 sensitivity to criticism, “extremely poor anger control,” poor judgment, paranoid thought and “a 28 high likelihood of continuing assaultive behavior.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 4116.)

1           The “Family History” interview included Petitioner advising Dr. Vicary that his brother 2 had a “history of antisocial behavior” who was incarcerated in Cuba for shooting a lieutenant in 3 the Cuban Army. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 4116-17.) The “Psychiatric” interview with 4 Petitioner revealed Petitioner “stabbed [a school bully] a few times with a knife” and “tied up 5 another school bully and poured gasoline on him,” threatening to light it before the “victim 6 managed to escape.” (Id. at 4118.) When asked about his criminal history, Petitioner advised Dr.
7 Vicary that in response to a “guy rap[ing his] old lady and [stealing their] stuff,” he “went 8 looking” for the guy and “stabbed three or four guys.” (Id. at 4119.)

9           Ultimately, Dr. Vicary identified several mitigating factors: (1) traumatic family 10 background; (2) chronic depressive mental illness; (3) brain damage and seizure disorder, based 11 on Petitioner’s report; (4) substance abuse; and (5) remorse. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 12 4121-23.)

13           It would appear from the record that the defense team opted not to present a mental health 14 defense at the penalty phase because Dr. Vicary’s report was not helpful and was potentially more 15 harmful. Under the circumstances, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably 16 concluded that action to be sound trial strategy. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689. A court should not 17 overlook “the constitutionally protected independence of counsel and ... the wide latitude 18 counsel must have in making tactical decisions.” Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 195 (citing Strickland, 19 466 U.S. at 689).

20           Next, the undersigned has also reviewed the declarations of Petitioner’s family, friends 21 and neighbors submitted in support of his state habeas proceedings and a part of the record before 22 this court. (ECF No. 320, Exs. 146-56.) Again, foregoing a summary of that material here, the 23 new evidence or information does not serve to establish that trial counsel was deficient for failing 24 to provide this type of information in 1989. The efforts of the trial team relative to information 25 and evidence located in Cuba is discussed extensively elsewhere in these findings. Suffice to say, 26 in that regard, defense counsel was not deficient. Further, absent the information concerning 27 claims that Petitioner’s father subjected him to brutal beatings, the information contained in these 28 declarations was largely known to, and considered by, the jury. And to the degree the 1 declarations offer information not considered by the jury, trial counsel cannot be faulted for 2 deficiency where counsel was not made aware of the information and it would not have otherwise 3 been available. The record otherwise reveals not a hint of physical abuse perpetrated by 4 Petitioner's father. Quite the contrary, the information provided to counsel at that time, including 5 information provided to defense expert McGarrity from Petitioner's brother, pointed only to 6 Petitioner's stepmother as the source of physical abuse. In any event, the California Supreme 7 Court could have reasonably concluded that counsel was not deficient in this regard.

8 In sum, the undersigned finds the California Supreme Court could have reasonably 9 concluded, considering the aforementioned evidence, that defense counsels' performance was not 10 deficient for a failure to present a mental health defense. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101.

11 Prejudice

12 Even assuming for the sake of argument that defense counsel had been deficient as alleged 13 by Petitioner, he must still prove that any alleged "deficient performance prejudiced the defense."
14 Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687. To demonstrate actual prejudice, a petitioner "must show that there 15 is a reasonable probability that but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the 16 proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to 17 undermine confidence in the outcome." Id. at 694. "To assess that probability, we consider the 18 totality of the available mitigation evidence – both that adduced at trial, and the evidence adduced 19 in the habeas proceeding – and reweigh it against the evidence in aggravation." Porter v.
20 McCollum, 558 U.S. 30, 41 (2009).

21 Evidence Adduced at Trial

22 To start, penalty phase mitigation testimony was offered by Sergeant Mark Fluitt with the 23 Department of Corrections, giving greater context to Petitioner's conviction for escape from the 24 California Men's Colony, a minimum-security facility. More specifically, Petitioner was 25 assigned to the forestry unit or honor camp where he and others were housed in unlocked dorms 26 and the outside gate was typically left open. (27 RT 6121-29.) In December 1982, officers 27 conducting a count reported "they had found some dummies in the bed." A search began for the 28 escapees. Sergeant Fluitt and the search team caught up with Petitioner and the other inmates the 1 following day near the train depot in San Luis Obispo, about four miles from the correctional 2 facility. Because he knew Petitioner spoke better English, Fluitt told Petitioner to advise the 3 others “in Cuban” to stand, put their hands on their heads and walk towards him. Petitioner did 4 so and did not resist being returned to custody. (27 RT 6129-36.)

5 Joan Mary Archie and Neetlefer Hawkins, mother and daughter, both testified that 6 Petitioner helped care for Hawkins’ special needs son during the period he was involved with 7 Neetlefer, shortly before these crimes. (27 RT 6144-50, 6164-69.) They also testified that 8 Petitioner made numerous attempts to find employment in Sacramento. (27 RT 6150-53, 6169-9 71.) Archie testified Petitioner was “always a proper gentleman” and also offered to help with 10 gardening chores. (27 RT 6153-55.) Hawkins indicated Petitioner “cooked, cleaned, bathed [her] 11 son, fed him, he was just really good with [her] son.” (27 RT 6172.)

12 Siro Delcastillo testified “as an expert in ...Cuban emigration and the impact on the 13 Cuban refugees of the Cuban political and social policies, as they exist in Cuba,” providing the 14 jury with valuable information about life in Cuba and immigrant experiences in the United States.
15 (28 RT 6241-307.)

16 Next, Robert and Elaine Metcalf testified concerning their experiences as Petitioner’s 17 sponsors in Richmond, Virginia, following his release from Fort Chaffee. (28 RT 6320-65.)
18 More specifically, the Metcalfs sponsored two men, Petitioner and an older man named Alfredo; 19 the idea was to assist them with assimilating into life in America. (28 RT 6323, 6360.) The jury 20 heard about those efforts and Petitioner’s difficulty fitting in. (28 RT 6326-29, 6358.) The 21 Metcalfs testified Petitioner was great with their young children and helpful around the house. (28 22 RT 6330-31, 6350, 6355, 6361-62.) They described their experience with Petitioner as positive, 23 and noted he remained in contact with them. (28 RT 6338-39, 6355, 6361-62.)

24 Robert Wissmath testified regarding his encounters with Petitioner in 1987 and 1988; 25 Wissmath teaches independent study courses in Sacramento County jails. Petitioner was studying 26 English, history, art, and government, with an emphasis on English; he was making good progress 27 and had never presented any difficulty. (28 RT 6366-81.)

28 Defense counsel called Steven Arthur to testify concerning an incident wherein it was

1 alleged that Petitioner struck Arthur while the two were incarcerated. Arthur was apparently 2 expected to testify that Petitioner did not strike him as alleged in earlier testimony proffered by 3 the government. He was wholly uncooperative as a witness, however, and testified he did not 4 know Petitioner, did not throw feces on him, and that Petitioner had never struck him in the face.
5 (29 RT 6531-36.)

6 The defense also called David Gutierrez, then an inmate at the California Medical Facility 7 in Vacaville, in an effort to provide context for the incident that resulted in Petitioner's prior 8 conviction for voluntary manslaughter. Gutierrez testified concerning an incident in Los Angeles 9 in late December 1981. Petitioner lived down the hall from Gutierrez at the St. Francis Hotel 10 during that time. One evening Gutierrez left his apartment and returned to find it had been 11 burglarized; he knew which two individuals were responsible because they were exiting his 12 apartment with his television and stereo as he was returning from the store. Later that same 13 evening he mentioned the incident to Petitioner, describing the two individuals. Gutierrez did not 14 believe calling the police would have done any good given the questionable individuals who 15 resided in the hotel. He testified Petitioner was concerned, but did not say anything to him about 16 confronting the individuals, and he denied seeing Petitioner in possession of a knife. (29 RT 17 6537-52.)

18 McGarrity's testimony as an expert in social anthropology involved details concerning 19 Petitioner's upbringing in Cuba as told to her by Petitioner and his family members. Those 20 details included the fact Petitioner's mother died when he was about three years old, his 21 grandparents took he and his infant brother in, but when his grandmother died of cancer, they 22 were sent to an aunt and uncle's home until the uncle passed away. Ultimately, when he was 23 about seven years old, Petitioner went to live with his father. By that time, his father had become 24 involved with another woman who was to care for the boys while he was away working during 25 the week. This woman mistreated Petitioner and his brother in a number of ways, including 26 physical and emotional abuse, and often left them unattended. McGarrity also testified about 27 injuries Petitioner received as a toddler and teenager, including significant separate injuries to his 28 head requiring hospitalization, as well as psychological counseling he received during his teens in 1 Santiago, and epileptic attacks he suffered requiring medication. In his teens, Petitioner attended 2 a number of schools in Santiago where he lived, as well as a boarding school in Havana, before 3 ultimately serving in the military. During his military service, Petitioner fell from a military truck 4 and was struck by a passing vehicle, suffering severe injuries. Additionally, McGarrity testified 5 concerning the types of crimes Cubans could be sentenced to prison for that would not result in a 6 prison sentence had the same conduct occurred in the United States. McGarrity further testified 7 concerning the Mariel boat lift, and Petitioner's time in the Fort Chaffee and Fort McCoy 8 detention centers. Ultimately, the jury learned that in McGarrity's expert opinion, Petitioner 9 suffered from extreme culture shock as a result of the circumstances of his upbringing in Cuba

10 and abuse suffered while a detainee in Fort Chaffee. (29 RT 6579-74; 30 RT 6682-87, 6772-78.)

11 McGarrity subsequently testified about telephone conversations she had just had with 12 Petitioner's father and other family members. Those conversations served to confirm information 13 she had previously been provided by Petitioner, as well as provided new information. As to the 14 new information, for example, Petitioner was bullied and taunted by others, and considered to be 15 "somewhat mongoloid," and referred to as the "village idiot." He was often depressed and cried a 16 lot after being injured as a teenager. A first cousin, who was considered to be like a sister, 17 relayed that Petitioner had always had physical and mental problems, having endured a lot of 18 mistreatment. When asked whether this new information changed her expert opinion, McGarrity 19 said that it did not, only that she felt more confident in her opinion in light of these conversations.
20 She did add that she felt the entire family suffered from emotional problems. (31 RT 6838-55.)

21 Finally, David Myers testified concerning his translation of a tape-recorded statement of 22 Manuel Machado Urquia, Petitioner's father, that was read to the jury. (30 RT 6822-26.) The 23 statement confirmed information previously relayed to the jury through McGarrity's testimony, 24 particularly regarding Petitioner's childhood upbringing and the injuries he sustained as a child 25 and teenager. Urquia also admitted punishing Petitioner by confining him to his room and 26 prohibiting Petitioner from participating in activities. (ECF No. 349 at 2-5.)

27 Evidence Adduced in the Habeas Proceeding

28 The 2004 opinion of Dr. Pablo Stewart (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 64) and the 2009

1 opinions of Dr. Patricia Perez-Arce and Dr. Monica Delgado (ECF No. 320, Exs. 143 & 163)
2 were proffered in state habeas proceedings before the California Supreme Court.

3 Briefly stated, Dr. Stewart identified three psychiatric conditions affecting Petitioner's 4 mental functioning: (1) complex post-traumatic stress disorder; (2) substantial frontal lobe 5 impairment likely caused by brain injury; and (3) chronic alcohol and cocaine abuse. (ECF No.
6 302, Vol. XXII. Ex. 64 at 4310-11.) Dr. Perez-Arce's neurological assessment concluded there 7 was "strong evidence of prefrontal brain impairment resulting in cognitive and socioemotional 8 deficits in behavior," "evidence of fine-motor coordination impairment in both hands indicating a 9 brain abnormality in the area of the posterior aspect ... of the frontal lobes of the brain," 10 "decreased tactile discrimination ... indicating a dysfunction in the associated area of the sensory 11 strip in the anterior aspect of the right parietal lobe," stuttering, "a history of posttraumatic onset 12 of seizures that reflect an electrophysiological brain abnormality," and "cognitive, motor, sensory, 13 and emotional-regulation deficits [expressing a] dysfunction predominantly, but not solely, of his 14 front lobes." (ECF No. 320, Ex. 143 at 5324-26.) And, finally, Dr. Delgado opined that 15 Petitioner was "mentally slow, emotionally volatile, and suffered from seizures, and impaired 16 brain functioning," "suffered extreme physical and emotional damage from early childhood 17 onward," "was further brutalized during incarceration in a Cuban prison and in detention centers 18 in the United States," "faced cultural isolation and a growing dependence on drugs," all of which 19 combined to place him "at highly increased risk for involvement in violence and criminal 20 activity." (ECF No. 320, Ex. 163 at 5512.)

21 The above-referenced mitigating expert opinions and the associated reports proffered in 22 the habeas proceeding before the California Supreme Court do not amount to a reasonable 23 probability that this evidence would have changed the jury's verdict. The expert opinions 24 reference, in part, material already known to and considered by the jury. And to the degree those 25 opinions included new factual allegations or evidence, its value is questionable. Had Drs.
26 Stewart, Perez-Arce and Delgado testified at trial, the People could have, and undoubtedly would 27 have, offered a rebuttal expert or experts. Wong v. Belmontes, 558 U.S. 15, 25-26 (2009). The 28 government's expert could contradict any diagnoses offered by the defense, and offer a different

1 diagnosis, undermining the value of the mitigation evidence. Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 177, 201.
2 The government appeared prepared to counter the anticipated testimony of Dr. Vicary, but 3 ultimately did not need to do so. It is reasonable to infer the prosecutor would have been 4 prepared to offer expert opinion contradicting any diagnoses offered by the defense, whether 5 offered by a neuropsychologist or neuropsychiatrist, or any other specialist.

6 Academic records that may have served to support Petitioner's family's statements as 7 relayed through McGarrity's testimony – that Petitioner's grades were good and his teachers 8 thought highly of him – could also work to the government's advantage. In other words, despite a 9 difficult upbringing, Petitioner was able to succeed in an academic setting. A success that could 10 be seen as mirroring that Petitioner exhibited while detained, wherein he was the first detainee to 11 earn a GED. Additionally, those same records may have revealed, as referenced in McGarrity's 12 testimony, that Petitioner had been known to engage in fights with his peers, or as the prosecutor 13 argued, that he was an individual who simply took what he wanted when he wanted it.

14 Reweighing the Evidence

15 Lastly, the court reweighs the aggravating and mitigating evidence, considering whether 16 there is a substantial likelihood that had the jury heard that evidence it would have concluded that 17 the balance of aggravating and mitigating circumstances did not warrant death. Strickland, 466
18 U.S. at 695.

19 Here, the aggravating evidence proffered by the government involved (1) the 20 circumstances of the crime of which Petitioner was convicted, (2) prior felony convictions, and 21 (3) criminal acts of violence. (27 RT 5986.)

22 As to the first aggravating factor, the jury was told it could properly consider the evidence 23 adduced during the guilt phase portion of the trial. That evidence was strong and compelling as 24 discussed elsewhere in these findings.

25 As to the second aggravating factor, documentary evidence was introduced regarding 26 Petitioner's April 1982 conviction in Los Angeles County Superior Court for voluntary 27 manslaughter with use of a deadly weapon and assault with a deadly weapon, and March 1983 28 conviction in San Luis Obispo County Superior Court for escape from state prison without use of

1 force. (27 RT 5990-91.)

2 Further, Aram Karsian testified concerning the events of December 1981 that relate to 3 Petitioner's conviction for voluntary manslaughter. Karsian worked at a liquor store in 4 Hollywood and was working with another store employee on a Sunday evening when a man ran 5 inside the store followed by another man, the latter identified as Petitioner. At the back of the 6 store, the man being chased put his hands and a foot up to protect his body. Petitioner said, 7 "Chinga su madre," pulled the other man's hands down and stabbed him in the throat with a long-8 bladed knife. Then he removed the knife and turned toward Karsian. Karsian's coworker pointed 9 a shotgun at Petitioner and told him to stop; Petitioner then ran from the store. (27 RT 5992-10 6003, 6014-15.)

11 Robert Rozzi testified in rebuttal concerning the Los Angeles homicide investigation that 12 ultimately resulted in Petitioner's conviction for voluntary manslaughter. Rozzi testified that 13 David Gutierrez said Petitioner told him he would "take care of" the individuals who had 14 burglarized Gutierrez's apartment, and that the following day Petitioner advised Gutierrez he had 15 stabbed both men. (30 RT 6802-11.) The man stabbed by Petitioner in the liquor store survived 16 his injuries. The second man was found dead in a nearby alley; he too had been stabbed.

17 Regarding the third aggravating factor, Raymond Lopez testified concerning an incident 18 that occurred at the Sacramento County Jail during an inmate transportation on October 16, 1987.
19 As he was escorting four inmates off an elevator, Lopez heard a thump behind him and turned to 20 observe a restrained Steven Arthur lying on the floor and Petitioner standing nearby, his hands 21 unrestrained and fists clenched. In his incident report, Lopez noted a red mark on Arthur's face 22 and Arthur's statement that Petitioner had struck him once in the face with his fist. Lopez later 23 learned that Arthur had apparently thrown feces on Petitioner when they were housed together on 24 third floor of the jail. (27 RT 6017-27, 6037.)

25 Stanton Newcomb testified concerning an incident of May 31, 1988, at the Sacramento 26 County Jail. Newcomb escorted Petitioner from his cell to the elevator lobby area so that 27 Petitioner could be prepared for transport to court. When an inmate trustee approached Newcomb 28 about supplies, words were exchanged between the trustee and Petitioner, who had accused the 1 trustee of removing a towel from his cell. Petitioner and the trustee “squared off” when the 2 trustee denied doing so; Newcomb ordered them to separate and step away from one another.

3 The trustee turned to do so, and then Newcomb observed Petitioner strike the trustee on the side
4 of the head with his fist. (27 RT 6038-43, 6049.)

5 In reweighing the evidence in aggravation against the total of mitigating evidence, the 6 California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that there was no reasonable 7 probability that, absent the assumed errors, the jury would have concluded that the death penalty 8 was not warranted. Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 202; Richter, 562 U.S. at 112-13. Even considering 9 the new evidence – whether medical expert opinions or the declarations of family and friends in 10 Cuba, and others – in this case, the aggravating evidence plainly outweighs the mitigating 11 evidence, particularly where Petitioner killed a man, and injured another, a few years prior to the 12 murder of Allen Birkman. The circumstances of the crime for which he was tried, Petitioner’s 13 prior felony convictions and prior acts of violence, are significant and weighty. They serve to 14 portray a man, readily wielding a knife, without regard for human life. Wong v. Belmontes, 558 15 U.S. at 22-24, 27-28 (concluding evidence regarding difficult childhood and expert testimony 16 regarding petitioner’s mental state unlikely to outweigh facts of brutal murder, and even less 17 likely because he had committed prior murder; any failure to present additional mitigation 18 evidence not prejudicial); see also Strickland, 466 U.S. at 699-700.

19 For those reasons, the undersigned finds that the California Supreme Court could have 20 reasonably concluded that “‘fairminded jurists could disagree’ on the correctness of the state 21 court’s decision.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 101. Therefore, its denial of his ineffective assistance of 22 counsel claim in this regard involved neither an unreasonable or contrary application of Supreme 23 Court precedent, nor did it involve an unreasonable application of the facts. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

24 Claim UU: Failure to Present Evidence Concerning Petitioner’s Incarceration in Cuba
25 & in U.S. Detention Facilities

26 Petitioner contends trial counsel were ineffective for failing to investigate and present 27 mitigating evidence during the penalty phase regarding his incarceration in Cuba and in INS 28 detention facilities in the United States. He asserts there exists a reasonable probability of a

1 different outcome had the jury learned of this information. (ECF No. 330 at 259-83.)

2 Respondent maintains trial counsels' investigation was adequate and resulted in tactical decisions 3 to limit or omit this evidence. Moreover, Respondent argues that even if counsel were deficient, 4 Petitioner suffered no prejudice. (ECF No. 345 at 132-44.)

5 Incarceration in Cuba

6 Petitioner argues trial counsel performed no investigation "whatsoever" into his prison 7 experience in Cuba, asserting that Quivican prison is one of the most violent and brutal prisons in 8 Cuba where hardened felons were housed alongside youthful offenders. According to Petitioner, 9 McGarrity's testimony was "truncated" and hindered by trial counsels' failure to visit Cuba and 10 obtain any records in this regard. On this point, Respondent asserts that this claim fails at the 11 outset because Petitioner has offered no evidence that he was actually confined at Quivican 12 prison.

13 The undersigned has reviewed Vicente Fournier's declaration and notes Fournier was 14 serving a "20-year" sentence at the Quivican prison in Cuba before emigrating to the United 15 States in 1980; a significant length of term difference as compared to Petitioner's sentence. One 16 that would be served at a facility different than a facility that housed first time, youthful offenders 17 as described at trial by McGarrity concerning Petitioner's confinement in Cuba. Further, Fournier 18 does not declare he served any time at Quivican alongside Petitioner, or even that the information 19 provided in his declaration would have been available to trial counsel at the time of Petitioner's 20 trial. Hence, his declaration, even assuming the truth of its content, does not serve to establish 21 trial counsel were ineffective for failing to present this evidence.

22 The undersigned has also reviewed McGarrity's 2000 report entitled "Cuba's Legal, 23 Judicial and Penitentiary System." (ECF No. 302, Vol. X, Ex. 30.) Interestingly, McGarrity's 24 report significantly departs from her trial testimony. At trial, McGarrity testified those young 25 persons who had committed minor crimes against the state, such as possessing or transporting 26 ducks on a bus, were jailed with other youthful offenders, separate from those considered to be 27 hardened criminals, whereas in this report she claims "[i]n most prisons, adults and minors are not 28 separated." (Id. at 2061.) Notably too, McGarrity's report states the following: "Although

1 reports of torture, both physical and psychological are common, I will not analyze this aspect of 2 incarceration in Cuba here, as there is no evidence that Machado was subjected to this form of 3 punishment.” (Id. at 2062.) And,

5 [i]t would be incorrect to consider Alvarez to have been a hardened criminal when he left 6 the island. As was outlined in several ethnographic reports which I prepared for the 7 defense, Alvarez had a very difficult childhood and did not excel at his studies. However, 8 he was not by any stretch of the imagination, a sociopath. He was first imprisoned for 9 transported [sic] a duck and a few chickens on a public bus in Santiago. This would be 10 considered delinquent behavior ....

11 (Id. at 2062-63.)

12 Nothing about the information McGarrity provided to trial counsel in 1989 would have 13 warranted further information about Petitioner’s incarceration in Cuba. Further, her contrary 14 report of more than a decade later does not support a finding of deficiency or prejudice.

15 More particularly, in her testimony of July 25, 1989, gleaned in large part from between 16 10 to 18 hours spent interviewing Petitioner (29 RT 6591), McGarrity first referenced Petitioner’s 17 criminal background in Cuba as occurring during the period she referred to as the “third stage” or 18 that period between the ages of 13 and 19. (29 RT 6603-30.) She reported Petitioner “was 19 convicted of carrying two ducks on a bus” to supply a friend’s restaurant, “and he was sent to 20 prison, I think, for a period under a year.” (29 RT 6631.) She continued: “My understanding of 21 the Cuban penal system and of his experiences there, was that it was a pretty benign setting. It 22 was a pretty open prison.” (29 RT 6631 (italics added).) “They played guitar and played drums 23 and sang, and although they were certainly restricted and they were in jail, he was in a jail for 24 first offenders and for young adults. [¶] He was not with hardened criminals or people who had 25 committed felonies, so I think at the time he left [Cuba], he had served like five months of a nine-26 month sentence ...” (29 RT 6631-32 (italics added).) Neither did McGarrity include this 27 incarceration experience when identifying the numerous bases for her expert opinion that 28 Petitioner suffered from extreme culture shock following his immigration to the United States.
(29 RT 6643-44; 30 RT 6683-85.)

1 In his points and authorities, Petitioner cites to page 6,631 of the Reporter’s Transcript
2 involving McGarrity’s testimony, to support his assertion that he was “imprisoned in Quivican 3 prison” following his arrest for illegally transporting two ducks. And yet, significantly, a review 4 of the record establishes McGarrity never testified Petitioner was imprisoned at “Quivican.”
5 Rather, as noted above, McGarrity testified Petitioner was jailed in “a pretty benign setting,” “a 6 pretty open prison” “for first time offenders and young adults” where they played guitar and 7 drums. (29 RT 6631.) She further testified Petitioner “was not with hardened criminals or people 8 who had committed felonies ...” (29 RT 6631-32.)

9 During cross-examination, McGarrity indicated she received equal parts information 10 concerning Petitioner’s incarceration in Cuba from Petitioner and from the INS records she was 11 provided by trial counsel. (30 RT 6712.) She testified she “knew about the ducks [from the INS 12 records] before” speaking with Petitioner. (30 RT 6712.) There was mention on cross-13 examination of a “Cubacan” and “Quibican” as reflected on certain INS documents. (30 RT 14 6722-24.) McGarrity even spelled it for the record: “Q-U-I-B-I-C-A-N”. (30 RT 6723.) She 15 testified she thought “Quibican” was the “name of a juvenile center there” in Havana, and 16 Cubacan was “the prison where they have both juveniles and adults.” (30 RT 6723-24.)

17 McGarrity also testified on cross-examination that she thought the time Petitioner spent in 18 jail in Cuba was not very significant. (30 RT 6733.) And, McGarrity made no mention of 19 Petitioner’s incarceration in Cuba when testifying as to her ultimate conclusion on direct: “Okay, 20 my ultimate conclusion is that his early childhood experiences, the loss of his mother, the 21 traumatic experiences with this stepmother, the unstable childhood, the military accident which 22 caused some kinds of memory problems, the experiences in the detention centers, led to a state of 23 mind which was essentially unstable. [¶] I think [he] suffered from extreme culture shock ....” 24 (29 RT 6643-44; see also 30 RT 6683-85 [Cuban incarceration omitted].) During redirect and in 25 relation to Petitioner’s incarceration in Cuba and the inconsistencies related thereto, McGarrity 26 also testified that the INS “criminal record worksheet” was “totally blank.” (30 RT 6776.)

27 The INS documents do identify “Quivica[n] (Prison)” or “Quibican” as a previous address 28 of Petitioner’s in Cuba, but those documents also include a Chronological Record of Medical

1 Care form that states Petitioner “was being questioned by INS [and] became upset and put hand 2 [right] through window,” a memorandum dated September 10, 1980, indicating Petitioner “was 3 seen carrying banners and helping to instigate the riot of 9/7/80” and that he “broke 2 panes of 4 glass with his fists,” a memorandum dated August 12, 1980, indicating he “escaped” Fort McCoy 5 with another detainee and was headed to Chicago when he was “picked up by US Border Patrol”; 6 the memo further stated Petitioner was placed in “800” detention overnight “and was reported to 7 have given the Detention Officers many problems.” Hence, while the INS documents reflect 8 Petitioner’s custody in a Cuban prison, they also reveal particulars about his detention in the 9 United States that the government could have used in aggravation: physical outbursts, instigating 10 a riot, and escape.

11 During closing arguments in the penalty phase, Mr. Holmes argued Petitioner was not a 12 criminal in Cuba. (31 RT 6946.) Mr. Gable argued that testimony established a person might be 13 sentenced to jail or prison in Cuba for acts that are not crimes in the United States (31 RT 7002), 14 plainly inferring that Petitioner was not a criminal in Cuba and had no true criminal record.

15 This record reveals that trial counsel had no reason to believe Petitioner spent time in a 16 “notorious” Cuban prison. Additionally, the record establishes that trial counsel elected to 17 minimize the Petitioner’s Cuban incarceration as a trial strategy. Hence, there appears to be no 18 deficiency as to trial counsels’ performance. Richter, 562 U.S. at 109.

19 Based upon the foregoing, Petitioner was not prejudiced by defense counsels’ election to 20 pursue a mitigation strategy that involved depicting Petitioner’s criminal behavior in Cuba as 21 non-existent or minor. Had defense counsel even been aware that Quivican prison was worthy of 22 further investigation as Petitioner alleges – because the record plainly reveals the defense expert 23 believed it to be a “benign” facility for first time offenders rather than hardened criminals, based 24 on hours of interviews with Petitioner wherein he apparently made no mention of a stay in a 25 violent and brutal prison – the jury could have come away with the impression that Petitioner was 26 a violent offender even before coming to the United States. Clearly that was an impression the 27 defense team sought to avoid. The government certainly would have been free to make use of 28 Quivican’s reputation as a violent and brutal prison, even if it housed youthful minor-crime

1 offenders – to bolster its case that Petitioner had always been a violent individual.

2 It is interesting to note also that a May 7, 2000 report prepared by Ines Monguio, Ph.D., a 3 clinical neurologist who met with Petitioner for a period of ten hours, states Petitioner “spent 4 some months in a labor camp for juveniles.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. X, Ex. 32 at 2139.) The report 5 further states, “he was sentenced to a juvenile prison camp in Cuba for stealing two ducks.” (Id.
6 at 2140.) It makes no mention of “Quivicán” or a prison facility that also housed both adults and 7 children. This information also supports the finding there was no reason for trial counsel to 8 further investigate Petitioner’s detention in Cuba, even assuming the documentation was available 9 to them; there was no deficiency on their part and Petitioner was not prejudiced.

10 Given the above, a fair-minded jurist could have concluded that trial counsel’s 11 investigation was adequate and there was no need for further development or investigation 12 concerning Petitioner’s incarceration in Cuba, and that Petitioner suffered no prejudice. Richter, 13 562 U.S. at 101-03, 109, 112-13.

14 Detention at Fort McCoy

15 The evidence offered by Petitioner to support his claims about Fort McCoy does not serve 16 to prove counsel were deficient or that he was prejudiced by any failure to investigate Petitioner’s 17 detention at Fort McCoy.

18 Defense expert Gail McGarrity testified at trial that Petitioner “spent time” in both “Fort 19 Chaffee and Fort McCoy.” (29 RT 6637.) She indicated that although Petitioner had not 20 expected to have to stay at a detention camp when he arrived in the United States (29 RT 6636), 21 at Fort McCoy “he spent time outside the camp, he’d gone into town, [and] he bought American 22 kind of clothes.” (29 RT 6639.)

23 Again, Petitioner complains there was “no investigation whatsoever” into his time at Fort 24 McCoy, and because trial counsel failed to present evidence regarding that period, they rendered 25 ineffective assistance of counsel. And yet, the record reveals their expert’s understanding of 26 Petitioner’s time at Fort McCoy, as relayed by Petitioner to McGarrity in anticipation of the 27 penalty phase, would have given trial counsel no reason to further investigate his detention at Fort 28 McCoy. Petitioner relayed to McGarrity that he was able to leave the camp and shop in town. He

1 apparently made no mention of abuse taking place there, apart from being part of a generally 2 unwelcome group of immigrants. On cross-examination, McGarrity agreed that during 3 Petitioner's time at Fort McCoy, he was "given passes" to leave the "compound on occasion."
4 (30 RT 6742.)

5 This record establishes that trial counsel had information indicating Petitioner's detention 6 at Fort McCoy was, like his incarceration in Cuba, a benign experience. McGarrity's testimony 7 indicates Petitioner never complained of any abuse at Fort McCoy. Further, the record reveals 8 that Dr. Vicary's report makes no mention of Petitioner's detention at Fort McCoy involving any 9 abuse whatsoever.

10 Specifically, a review of McGarrity's testimony concerning Fort McCoy reveals 11 Petitioner's experience at that initial detention facility differed from his later experience at Fort 12 Chaffee. On the whole, McGarrity offered nothing, based upon the information she had been 13 provided by Petitioner, to suggest Petitioner suffered abuse at Fort McCoy. Conversely, 14 throughout her testimony, whether on direct or cross-examination, it is plain her understanding of 15 Petitioner's experiences at Fort Chaffee were those involving abuse physical and mental. This 16 understanding is further reflected in the closing argument given by Mr. Gable wherein his 17 reference to the abuse Petitioner suffered at the "detention center" was in the singular. (31 RT 18 7005.)

19 The undersigned has also reviewed other exhibits offered in support of Petitioner's claim.
20 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XI, Ex. 34-37.) The review does not change the analysis. The fact that there 21 may have been issues at Fort McCoy is, at most, a separate consideration from a determination of 22 whether trial counsel in this case were ineffective.

23 Following a thorough review of the record, the undersigned finds that the California 24 Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that fairminded jurists, at most, could disagree 25 whether defense counsel rendered ineffective assistance of counsel for a failure to investigate and 26 present further evidence concerning Petitioner's detention at Fort McCoy. Richter, 562 U.S. at 27 101-03.

1 Detention at Fort Chaffee

2 In her trial testimony, McGarrity had the following to say about Fort Chaffee:

3 [McGARRITY]: ... At Fort Chaffee, when they arrived, the detainees were 4 separated into those who [were] considered to be compliant and [well] behaved detainees 5 and those who, by their style of dress, indicated that they'd had some contact with U.S.
6 society, and therefore, in the view of the guards, [were] more apt to be trouble makers.

7 The metaphor that I would choose to use in this situation is that a lot of the Cubans 8 when they came here, they were sort of cooped up, and so when they were allowed to get 9 out and see what was on the outside, they were not able to function in the detention center, 10 in a way that was easier for the guards to control them, I don't think that sounded correct - 11 - what I mean is the ones that had been outside of camps got a taste of life in the U.S., 12 experienced things, were gonna be more trouble in a detention center because they would 13 have contacts on the outside, they'd be more likely to go out on passes and to get involved 14 in things that might cause disciplinary problems, whereas the ones who had always stayed 15 inside the camps would be more used to detention life and would be less of a disciplinary 16 problem, anyway, some of the defendants - - I'm sorry, some of the research informants 17 who I spoke with, as well as the defendant, said they were separated in this manner.

18 When the defendant was separated and placed with other people, who were seen to 19 be potential trouble makers, they were made to do what could be considered quite 20 demeaning acts.

21 They were stripped in front of the guards, they were made to jump up and down 22 and say things ....

23 (29 RT 6646-47.) And, "they were forced to imitate animals like ducks and chickens and pigs, 24 and to jump up and down in imitation of those animals, and they were forced to repeat in English, 25 'I am a faggo[ ]t, I am a gay,' and sort of make themselves ridiculous while the guards laughed at 26 them." (29 RT 6654.) Because this behavior was afflicted upon Cuban males – members of a 27 "very so-called macho" and "exaggerated" masculine society – it was particularly demeaning, and 28 McGarrity believes it served to compound the culture shock. (29 RT 6655.) She also testified regarding Petitioner's having earned the first GED diploma awarded to a Cuba detainee at Fort Chaffee. (29 RT 6656-58.) A defense exhibit dated January 24, 1981, published in Spanish, was shared with the jury; it concerned Petitioner's academic accomplishment and included his photograph alongside the director of Fort Chaffee. McGarrity explained to the jury that the article noted the fact Petitioner performed maintenance and janitorial work at the camp, and "had good relations with all of the employees there," and also referenced Petitioner's hope of

1 continuing his education in the United States. (29 RT 6658-59.)

2 The record reveals that trial counsels' strategy involved providing general information 3 concerning the difficulties faced by Cuban refugees on the whole, including conditions at the 4 detention centers. Mr. Holmes's September 1, 1999 declaration confirms as much. (ECF No.
5 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 ["As to the conditions of confinement in Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, we did 6 present experts Siro Del Castillo and Gail McGarrity on the problems of Cuban refugees in the 7 United States"]). That strategy was not unreasonable because it is "at least arguable that a 8 reasonable attorney could decide to forgo" further inquiry into Petitioner's detention at Fort 9 Chaffee. Richter, 562 U.S. at 106. There are "countless ways to provide effective assistance in 10 any given case. Even the best criminal defense attorneys would not defend a particular client in 11 the same way." Id. at 106 (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689).

12 The evidence offered to support Petitioner's claim that the defense team was ineffective 13 for a failure to investigate and present additional mitigation evidence concerning Petitioner's 14 detention at Fort Chaffee also serves to reveal that same evidence contains information the jury 15 would very likely have considered aggravating rather than mitigating.

16 More particularly, although the documents generated as a part of the government's 17 investigation into numerous abuses perpetrated at Fort Chaffee may have served to give greater 18 context to the testimony of Del Castillo and McGarrity, that same evidence would have served to 19 reveal Petitioner's own assaultive-type behavior and grand jury testimony lacking in veracity and 20 credibility. For example, frustrated with a process he apparently did not understand, upon his 21 arrival at Fort Chaffee, Petitioner kicked the door of the holding cell. Yet, despite the accounts of 22 other eye-witnesses present, during his grand jury testimony, Petitioner denied kicking the door.
23 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XIII, Ex. 39 at 2661, 2664.) Significantly too, when asked what he had been 24 to jail for in Cuba, Petitioner did not admit to possessing or stealing two ducks during his grand 25 jury testimony; rather, he claimed the police arrested him for a crime other Cubans in the area 26 committed, and that he was convicted of robbery because the police "couldn't find the other 27 people, the people who had actually stolen from that place." (ECF No. 302, Vol. XIII, Ex. 39 at 28 2660.) Petitioner's grand jury testimony stands in stark contradiction to all previous accounts of

1 the stolen duck story. Further, the not guilty verdicts recorded against the four detention officers 2 facing federal criminal charges regarding the abuses perpetrated at Fort Chaffee could have been 3 used by the prosecutor to argue or infer that Petitioner’s own poor behavior was the cause of his 4 injuries.

5 By offering the testimony of Del Castillo and McGarrity with regard to the general 6 conditions at Fort Chaffee, the defense successfully presented some mitigating evidence and 7 avoided having the jury learn information that would have negatively affected their mitigation 8 efforts. “An attorney need not pursue an investigation that would be fruitless, much less one that 9 might be harmful to the defense.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 108 (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. at 691).

10 In any event, even assuming counsel were deficient for failing to present more specific 11 evidence concerning Petitioner’s detention at Fort Chaffee, the California Supreme Court could 12 have reasonably concluded Petitioner suffered no prejudice because it was not reasonably likely 13 the result would have been different had the jury learned the more specific information, 14 particularly where it may also have been harmful. Richter, 562 U.S. at 111-13. As previously 15 noted, the aggravating factors in this case greatly outweighed those in mitigation, even had the 16 jury learned about certain abuses Petitioner suffered either in Cuba or in INS detention facilities.

17 A review of the entire record before the California Supreme Court reveals that fairminded 18 jurists could disagree about whether the defense team was ineffective for failing to present 19 evidence about more specific evidence about detention facilities in either Cuba or the United 20 States. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. Hence, the California Supreme Court’s denial of Petitioner’s 21 ineffective assistance of counsel claim is neither contrary to nor does it involve an unreasonable 22 application of clearly established federal law. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). The undersigned hereby 23 RECOMMENDS that Claim UU be DENIED.

24 Claim KK: Failure to Investigate Glidewell

25 Petitioner claims trial counsel were ineffective for failing to investigate Edwin Glidewell’s 26 background, which would have led to impeachment evidence due to Glidewell’s cocaine 27 addiction. Petitioner alleges that had the information been presented, there is a reasonable 28

1 probability he would not have been convicted or sentenced to death. (ECF No. 330 at 237-38.)
2 Respondent contends the California Supreme Court’s rejection of this claim was not necessarily 3 unreasonable or contrary to Supreme Court precedent. (ECF No 345.)

5 Petitioner presented this claim in his first and second state habeas petitions; both were 6 denied on their merits. Despite Petitioner’s assertion otherwise, as previously addressed by the 7 undersigned, the AEDPA applies.

8 Relevant Background

9 Edwin Glidewell testified at trial. (13 RT 2688-730.) On May 13, 1987, Glidewell 10 traveled from his home in Washington state to Sacramento for a medical appointment. (13 RT 11 2689-90.) He stopped first at his brother’s home located at 2485 Boxwood, leaving the keys in 12 the ignition of his red 1975 Chevrolet Camaro. (13 RT 2689-90, 2696.) As Glidewell stood at 13 the open door of his brother’s home trying to hurry his wife along, he observed Petitioner walking 14 toward El Camino Boulevard; Glidewell recognized Petitioner as someone who frequented the 15 Boxwood area. (13 RT 2693-95.) Once Petitioner neared the passenger door of the Camaro, he 16 jumped around the vehicle and into the driver’s seat, starting the car and driving away, spinning 17 its tires. (13 RT 2695-96, 2699.) Glidewell gave chase, yelling to the family inside the house to 18 call 911. (13 RT 2696-97.) When police arrived, Glidewell described the individual who stole 19 his car. (13 RT 2701-02.) Glidewell admitted a prior felony conviction for burglary 20 approximately ten years prior. (13 RT 2704.) 21

23 When Petitioner testified about these events, he claimed that as he left Stramaglia’s 24 apartment and headed down the street, he ran into “an older Cuban guy” who told him that a 25 “white dude that I be dealing with him for the last, you know, two or three days, that he was 26 looking for me again ...,” identifying Glidewell as that man. (18 RT 4056-57, 4061, 4068; see 27 also 19 RT 4435-36.) Petitioner testified he met Glidewell on his first visit to the Boxwood 28

1 neighborhood and they discussed Petitioner having “good cocaine.” (18 RT 4057-60.) Petitioner 2 walked to the home Glidewell previously identified to him as his residence; Glidewell was on the 3 front porch. (18 RT 4069.) He asked Petitioner to “front” a half ounce of cocaine; Petitioner 4 declined. (18 RT 4069-71.) Glidewell then offered to trade crank for cocaine; Petitioner again 5 declined. (18 RT 4071-72.) Finally, Glidewell offered his car as collateral for the half ounce of 6 cocaine and Petitioner agreed. (18 RT 4072-75.) The drug transaction took about ten to fifteen 7 minutes and occurred inside the house. (18 RT 4075-76.) Petitioner left in Glidewell’s car. (18 8 RT 4077-78.) On cross-examination, Petitioner claimed Glidewell did not leave any luggage or 9 anything of value in the car. Rather, there was a bag of dirty laundry and a “piece of junk” 10 camera. (19 RT 4307-08.) Petitioner never returned to the house where Glidewell stayed to tell 11 him “here’s your car, I want my money,” before leaving Sacramento. (19 RT 4312.) He testified 12 he didn’t do so because he had been told “the white dude, you know, was talking to the police, 13 and that he was saying that I ripped him off;” if he tried to return the car, he would be arrested 14 and Glidewell would get his car back and Petitioner’s “dope.” (19 RT 4313.) Petitioner told 15 Neetlefer that he bought the car for $500 and some cocaine because it wasn’t “her business” to 16 know he was holding the car as collateral. (19 RT 4349-57.)

19 Analysis

20 Initially, the undersigned notes that Respondent is correct: Petitioner has offered no 21 evidence to support his claim that Glidewell was an addict. Conclusory allegations that are not 22 supported by specific facts do not merit habeas relief. See James v. Borg, 24 F.3d 20, 26 (9th Cir.
23 1994).

24 In any event, Mr. Holmes’s September 1, 1999 declaration states the following: “I have 25 little recollection of why the defense did not investigate Glidewell’s drug use except that such 26 drug use, if true, did not seem helpful to the defense; that is, as defense counsel, we reasoned that 27
28

1 our client would appear in a worse light as Glidewell’s drug supplier than as the thief of his car.”
2 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5254-55.) Neither of Mr. Gable’s declarations address the 3 issue. (ECF Nos. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 63 & 320.) Counsel therefore made a reasonable, strategic 4 decision not to investigate Glidewell’s drug use, if any. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 691 (“counsel has 5 a duty to make a reasonable investigation or to make a reasonable decision that makes particular 6 investigations unnecessary”).

8 In judging the defense’s investigation, as in applying Strickland generally, 9 hindsight is discounted by pegging adequacy to ‘counsel’s perspective at the time’ 10 investigative decisions are made, 466 U.S. at 689, and by giving a ‘heavy measure of 11 deference to counsel’s judgments,’ id., at 691.

12 Rompilla v. Beard, 545 U.S. at 381. “It is ‘all too tempting’ to ‘second-guess counsel’s assistance 13 after conviction or adverse sentence.’ [Citations.]” Richter, 562 U.S. at 105. “The question is 14 whether an attorney’s representation amounted to incompetence under ‘prevailing professional 15 norms,’ not whether it deviated from best practices or most common custom.” Id. Here, while 16 habeas counsel in the place of trial counsel, or any other counsel in place of trial counsel, would 17 have or may have investigated and even presented evidence of Glidewell’s addiction, assuming it 18 existed, trial counsels’ election not to pursue Glidewell’s drug use in favor of avoiding the 19 additional or further taint of Petitioner being labeled a drug dealer or supplier does not amount to 20 incompetence under prevailing professional norms. “An attorney need not pursue an 21 investigation that would be fruitless, much less one that might be harmful to the defense.”
22 Richter, 562 U.S. at 108. Furthermore, “[t]here is a ‘strong presumption’ that counsel’s attention 23 to certain issues to the exclusion of others reflects trial tactics rather than ‘sheer neglect.’” Id. at 24 109.
25

26 Even if the undersigned were to find counsel to have been deficient, Petitioner cannot 27 establish the required prejudice. Assuming evidence of Glidewell’s supposed crack addiction 28 existed, there is no reasonable probability that, but for the errors of Messrs. Holmes and Gable,

1 the result of the penalty phase would have been different. All Petitioner can potentially show is 2 that those “errors had some conceivable effect on the outcome of the proceeding,” but that “is not 3 enough.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693-94.

4 Glidewell testified that when Petitioner jumped into the Camaro and started the engine, he 5 immediately gave chase and yelled to the occupants of his brother’s home to call 911. The police 6 responded to the call and Glidewell made a report concerning the theft of his vehicle. (13 RT 7 2695-702; see also 17 RT 3813-20 [Testimony of Michael Tupper].) In addition to testifying that 8 Glidewell gave him the car as collateral for a half ounce of cocaine, Petitioner testified that 9 Glidewell told him “he, you know, was moving dope back and forth,” between Oregon or 10 Washington and California. (18 RT 4076-77.) And, Petitioner denied Glidewell chased after the 11 car as he drove off. (18 RT 4077.)

12 The jury heard both versions of the events surrounding Petitioner’s possession of the 13 Camaro and apparently found Glidewell’s version to be the more credible of the two. The jury 14 did so in spite of Glidewell’s criminal background and the inferences raised on cross-examination 15 that he was a drug user. Additionally, as Respondent contends, the significance of the taking of 16 Glidewell’s Camaro was not why or how Petitioner came to be in possession of it – but rather, 17 that the vehicle was the one used by Birkman’s killer. Petitioner admitted he was in possession of 18 the Camaro. Whether that possession was the result of a theft or not, the jury was not 19 substantially likely to return a different verdict on the murder charge. Hence, the California 20 Supreme Court was not unreasonable in concluding Petitioner’s evidence of prejudice fell short of 21 the Strickland standard. Richter, 562 U.S. at 112.

22 A fairminded jurist could have found defense counsel were not deficient by failing to 23 investigate and present evidence that Glidewell was a crack addict and, in any event, that 24 Petitioner was not prejudiced thereby. Strickland, 466 U.S. 687-98. Therefore, the California 25 26 27 28

1 Supreme Court's rejection of the claim was not contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, 2 clearly established federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court. Nor was the state court's 3 ruling based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in 4 the state court proceeding. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Accordingly, the undersigned RECOMMENDS 5 that Claim KK be DENIED.

7 Claim XX: Failure to Rebut Aggravating Evidence

8 Petitioner also asserts trial counsel were ineffective for failing to mitigate the aggravating 9 evidence of Petitioner's prior Los Angeles conviction for voluntary manslaughter and assault with 10 a deadly weapon. Specifically, he contends that had counsel employed the preliminary hearing 11 transcript, versus the testimony of David Gutierrez, there is a reasonable probability that he would 12 not have been convicted or sentenced to death. (ECF No. 330 at 285-86.) Respondent maintains 13 the California Supreme Court's denial of the claim is neither unreasonable nor contrary to 14 established Supreme Court precedent. (ECF No. 345 at 148-54.)
15

16 Petitioner presented this claim in his first and second state habeas petitions; both were 17 denied on their merits. Despite Petitioner's assertion otherwise, and as previously addressed by 18 the undersigned, the AEDPA applies.
19

20 Relevant Background

21 The prosecution admitted exhibits 136 and 137, establishing Petitioner had been convicted 22 of voluntary manslaughter with the use of a deadly weapon and assault with a deadly weapon on 23 April 19, 1982, in Los Angeles County Superior Court. (27 RT 5990.)

24 Thereafter, Aram Karsian testified concerning the events of December 27, 1981. (27 RT 25 5992-6015.) More particularly, at about 11:00 p.m., Karsian was stocking the cooler at a liquor 26 store on Hollywood Boulevard where he worked with another employee, Jim. A man ran inside 27 the store toward the back, being chased by another man armed with a knife. (27 RT 5992-99.) 28

1 The first man tried to protect himself by putting his hand and a foot up, but the second man – 2 identified by Karsian as Petitioner – pulled the other man’s hands down and stabbed the man in 3 the throat. (27 RT 5997-99, 6001.) Just before Petitioner stabbed the man, he said, “Chinga su 4 madre,” or “fuck your mother, motherfucker.” (27 RT 5999-6000.) The victim fell to the ground
5 and Petitioner pulled his knife from the man’s throat and started to move towards Karsian. (27 RT 6 6001-02.) Karsian backed up, and Jim – now armed with a shotgun – shouted “stop;” Petitioner 7 ran out of the store. (27 RT 6002.) Karsian described Petitioner’s knife as about 18 inches long, 8 with a 14-inch blade. (27 RT 6014-15.)

10 In his opening statement to the jury during the penalty phase, Mr. Holmes told the jury the 11 defense team was going to “present some evidence of facts leading up to” the prior conviction so 12 that the jury would “understand from the evidence, that along with other things, other than one 13 man walking up to another man, putting a knife into his neck, there were some things leading up 14 to this.” (27 RT 6111.) That evidence came in the form of David Gutierrez’s testimony.

16 Concerning the day of the incident specifically, Gutierrez testified that he had gone to the 17 store and returned to find two men exiting his apartment at the St. Francis Hotel with his 18 television and stereo. (29 RT 6538-43.) When Gutierrez asked the men why they had his 19 television, one of the men threw the television at him and both ran downstairs. (29 RT 6043-44.)
20 Later that evening he told Petitioner about it, describing the two men. Petitioner was concerned, 21 but not hostile. (29 RT 6544-45, 6547.) Petitioner left and didn’t return that evening; Gutierrez 22 saw him the next day. (29 RT 6547, 6566.) Gutierrez testified Petitioner never told him he had 23 confronted the two men or taken care of the “Mexicans.” (29 RT 6566-68.) Gutierrez later 24 identified the man who had his television when police showed him the photograph of a dead man.
25 (29 RT 6546, 6553, 6565-66.) He denied telling detectives that Petitioner had been living with 26 27 28

1 him, or that they were lovers, and denied that police had to kick in the door when they came to 2 arrest Petitioner. (29 RT 6553-55, 6562-64.)

3 Homicide detective Robert Rozzi testified on behalf of the People. (31 RT 6802-21.) On 4 December 28, 1981, Rozzi was assigned to investigate a body found behind a business on the 5 northeast corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Gramercy Place. (31 RT 6803, 6805.) During the 6 course of his investigation, that homicide was connected to the assault occurring at a nearby 7 liquor store. (31 RT 6804-05.) The body showed evidence of a stab wound to the left side of the 8 back, near the hip. (31 RT 6806, 6812.)

10 Ultimately, Rozzi contacted David Gutierrez. (31 RT 6806.) Gutierrez and Petitioner 11 were found in Gutierrez's room after the detective and his partner received no response to Rozzi's 12 knock and the hotel manager opened the door with his key. (31 RT 6806-08.) Rozzi took a 13 statement from Gutierrez. (31 RT 6809.) Gutierrez told him that when Petitioner returned to the 14 apartment the day after the burglary incident, Petitioner told Gutierrez he had "taken care of the 15 Mexicans, that he had stabbed them both down by the liquor store." (31 RT 6810-11.) Gutierrez 16 identified one of the men as the homicide victim found in the alleyway. (31 RT 6811.)

18 Analysis

19 Initially, the undersigned notes Petitioner's points and authorities include the following 20 statement: "[t]he Los Angeles homicide was emphasized by the prosecution during closing 21 argument as evidence that [Petitioner] was a vicious unredeemable killer; the trial judge expressly 22 adopted this view when he found that death was the appropriate sentence .... RT 7052." (ECF 23 No. 330 at 285.) However, a review of Volume 32 of the Reporter's Transcript, in context of the 24 court's overall comments, reveals it placed significance on a number of factors in making its 25 determination that death was the appropriate penalty, including the circumstances of the Birkman 26 murder, the Slatten assault and robbery, and the Stramaglia rape. Less significant than those 27
28

1 crimes and Petitioner’s prior conviction for voluntary manslaughter and assault with a deadly 2 weapon were the “fairly minor scuffles in the jail setting” and the escape from prison in 1983. (32 3 RT 7051-53.) The court then commented that

4 of significance, something that was pointed out in the Prosecution’s argument is Mr.
5 Alvarez’s propensity for violence and that the fact that he chooses to impose violence and 6 death on other individuals, personally, by direct contact, and to me, that indicates a 7 particularly vicious attitude toward his fellow human beings, and the fact that he can walk 8 up to a person and shove a knife in their chest or back or neck and walk away from it and 9 then do it twice again, is a significant factor indicating that there’s no possibility of any 10 type of rehabilitation of this individual, and there’s no possibility that he can live in 11 society and not place in danger the lives of other human beings, and that includes being in 12 prison.

13 (32 RT 7053.)

14 In any event, Petitioner argues trial counsel were deficient because the only thing 15 Gutierrez’s testimony provided was “evidence that [he] had a motive for attacking the victims, 16 and a stated intent to do so” (ECF No. 330 at 286), but the undersigned disagrees. It was not 17 unreasonable for trial counsel to offer the testimony of Gutierrez for the reason stated during 18 opening argument, or to provide context or “some evidence of facts leading up to” the incident 19 giving rise to the conviction. That was not an unreasonable strategy. Nor would it be 20 unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to determine counsel were not ineffective for 21 having done so because fairminded jurists could disagree. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03.

22 Nonetheless, Petitioner argues that introducing the preliminary hearing transcript would 23 have “been far more effective mitigation,” claiming the prosecution had no evidence that 24 Petitioner “killed the ‘John Doe.’” (ECF No. 330 at 286.) But this is nothing more than hindsight 25 or second-guessing. Richter, 562 U.S. at 105. Offering Gutierrez’s testimony for context 26 regarding Petitioner’s prior convictions for voluntary manslaughter with the use of a deadly 27 weapon and assault with a deadly weapon did not amount to incompetence under ““prevailing 28 professional norms.”” Id.

1 Respondent argues that had defense counsel admitted the preliminary hearing transcript 2 from the Los Angeles conviction, the jury would have learned that Petitioner was held to answer 3 on murder and attempted murder charges,<sup>26</sup> and that the graphic depiction of the crimes would 4 have revealed there were three victims rather than the two referenced during the penalty phase 5 proceedings. (ECF No. 345 at 150-52.) Respondent is correct.

7 The undersigned's review of the preliminary hearing transcripts, dated January 22 and 8 January 25, 1982, from the proceedings before Division 37 of the Los Angeles County Superior 9 Court involve the testimony of Juan Abundez, who, on December 27, 1981, at about 11:00 p.m., 10 witnessed Petitioner attempting to start a fight with his friends - known as "Louie" and 11 "Guatemala" - and chasing them from the area of 5555 Hollywood Boulevard. Abundez saw 12 Petitioner push at Guatemala while he had something shiny in his hand, and also witnessed 13 Petitioner chase Louie into a nearby liquor store and exit seconds later armed with a big knife.
14 James Whitworth, a clerk working in the liquor store, identified Petitioner as the man who chased 15 "Louie" into the store. Petitioner knocked the other man down, stabbed him in the neck with a 16 long knife and then "took off," running out of the liquor store. Testimony was also offered by a 17 Los Angeles homicide detective who observed a blood trail, or "dropping and splatterings," from 18 5555 Hollywood Boulevard to Gramercy Place where the decedent was found on December 28, 19 1981, and a Los Angeles coroner's investigator who estimated the decedent had been dead for 20 approximately 14 to 16 hours based upon body temperature and rigor mortis. The parties 21 stipulated that an autopsy performed on the decedent identified his cause of death as a stab wound 22 to the back that perforated the left kidney, stomach, liver and pericardial sac. Ultimately, 23 Petitioner was held to answer for murder and attempted murder. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex.
24 119.)

27 <sup>26</sup> The trial court was careful to ensure the jury understood the prior conviction involved 28 manslaughter rather than murder. (27 RT 5980-81.)

1 Notably too, had defense counsel relied exclusively on the preliminary hearing transcript, 2 prosecution trial witness Aram Karsian's testimony would have been bolstered by that given by 3 James Whitworth, or "Jim" as Karsian's referred to him, at the 1982 preliminary hearing. All 4 without the benefit of the context for Petitioner's actions and leaving the jury with the impression 5 Petitioner confronted and assaulted completely innocent individuals.

7 In light of the foregoing, it would not be unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to 8 conclude trial counsels' strategy spared the jury an impression that Petitioner stabbed two men in 9 the absence of provocation and was, therefore, not deficient. Richter, 562 U.S. at 108.

10 Even assuming arguendo there was deficient performance, Petitioner was not prejudiced.
11 He argues trial counsels' "failure to mitigate the prior conviction was deficient performance that 12 prejudiced [him] because the State's aggravating evidence came in unrebutted and unmitigated," 13 citing Rompilla v. Beard, 545 U.S. at 383-84. (ECF No. 330 at 286.) However, it is inaccurate to 14 say the evidence of Petitioner's prior conviction for voluntary manslaughter and assault with a 15 deadly weapon was "unmitigated." As explained above, providing context for the incident giving 16 rise to the conviction revealed the victims to be burglars known to be associated with other 17 criminal types who targeted residents of the St. Francis Hotel, rather than innocent bystanders.
18

19 Furthermore, it is not reasonably probable that had trial counsel opted to introduce the 20 preliminary hearing transcript from the Los Angeles conviction, versus present the testimony of 21 Gutierrez, that the outcome of the penalty phase would have been any different. Strickland, 466 22 U.S. at 696. In the scenario preferred by Petitioner, the California Supreme Court could have 23 concluded that the jury would have been left with a more negative impression of him because it 24 would not have heard from any witness about a prior burglary occurring at the St. Francis Hotel 25 that involved both of Petitioner's victims in the role of burglars. Any likelihood of a different 26 27 28

1 result was nothing more than remotely conceivable. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693-94; Richter, 562 2 U.S. at 111-13. Simply stated, fairminded jurists could disagree. Richter, at 101-03.

3 In sum, the undersigned finds the California Supreme Court's denial of Petitioner's 4 ineffective assistance of counsel claim for defense counsels' failure to mitigate a prior conviction 5 for voluntary manslaughter by introducing the preliminary hearing transcript for that conviction, 6 rather than the testimony given by David Gutierrez, was neither an unreasonable application of, 7 nor contrary to, existing Supreme Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Therefore, Petitioner is 8 not entitled to relief and the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim XX be DENIED.

10 Claim ZZ: Failure to Retain Mental Health Experts

11 Petitioner maintains that he is entitled to relief for trial counsels' failure to retain, in both 12 the guilt and penalty phases, an expert in the field of pharmacology or drug abuse and its effects 13 on the brain.<sup>27</sup> (ECF No. 330 at 286-96.) Respondent counters that the California Supreme 14 Court's adjudication of the claim was neither contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, 15 Strickland. (ECF No. 345 at 145-62.)

17 The claim is exhausted as Petitioner presented it in both his first and second state habeas 18 petitions, and the state's highest court denied the claim on its merits. And, despite Petitioner's 19 assertion otherwise, as previously addressed in these findings by the undersigned, the AEDPA 20 applies.
21

22 Relevant Background

23 Guilt Phase

24 As previously noted, Petitioner testified in his own defense. With specific regard to his 25 drug use, Petitioner did testify to such use (18 RT 4023, 4097-100, 4104-07, 4113-16; 19 RT 26

27 <sup>27</sup> "Psychopharmacology is the study of the effects of drugs and mechanisms of drug action on the 28 brain and behavior." Williams v. Calderon, 41 F.Supp.2d 1043, 1051 (C.D.Cal. 1998).

1 4365-66); however, most of the testimony centered on Petitioner's sales of (and reputation related 2 to those sales) or "rocking up" of the drug, rather than his use of it. (18 RT 4027, 4029-33, 4057-
3 60, 4070-75, 4101-04; 19 RT 4189-90, 4192-99, 4257-59, 4281-84, 4287-97, 4315, 4332-34, 4 4341, 4405-06, 4435-36). During that testimony, Petitioner made no reference to his own use or 5 sale of heroin,<sup>28</sup> and denied smoking cocaine while at Neettlefer's home. (19 RT 4359). Other 6 witnesses testified to Petitioner's drug use, e.g., Gail Patton and co-defendant Ross. Petitioner 7 also testified to drinking to excess on two occasions: once the evening before his encounter with 8 Stramaglia, and again the following Saturday with co-defendant Ross. (18 RT 4019-20, 4139-40, 9 4149; see also 19 RT 4288-89, 4365-66, 4373.)

11 Addressing the trial generally and the guilt phase particularly, trial counsel Holmes' 12 declaration pertaining to this issue states:

14 Claim ZZ, the alleged failure of counsel to investigate and obtain expert advice on 15 Petitioner Alvarez's use of crack cocaine.

16 The defense observed and/or ascertained nothing that would indicate that Mr.
17 Alvarez's drug use affected him in any significant way. Moreover, to have presented the 18 defense that Mr. Alvarez did not have the ability to form specific intent at the time of the 19 crimes at issue would have contradicted Mr. Alvarez's testimony that he did not commit 20 any of the charged crimes.

21 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5259.)

22 Penalty Phase

23 Defense expert Gail McGarrity testified that her interviews with Petitioner revealed he 24 first consumed alcohol in Cuba at the age of 14 or 15, and that he was exposed to a variety of 25 illicit drugs when he arrived in the United States. (19 RT 6591, 6616-17, 6667-69; 30 RT 6747-26 50.) McGarrity believed Petitioner began to feel disgusted by the lifestyle he was leading, 27 including his sales of drugs, and that he used drugs to escape. (29 RT 6669; 30 RT 6706-07.)
28 That drug use clouded his faculties (30 RT 6705) and altered his "mental condition," making him

---

1 more capable “of worse acts” (30 RT 6756). McGarrity also testified that she was told by 2 Petitioner and the defense team that he was under the influence of drugs at the time he committed 3 these crimes, having been on a days-long binge. (30 RT 6757-58.)

4 Trial counsel Gable’s November 2004 declaration provides the following:

6 Upon the advice of another local attorney, I retained Dr. Vicary to evaluate Mr.
7 Alvarez’s mental health for penalty phase purposes. I tried to communicate with Dr.
8 Vicary numerous times prior to the penalty phase trial in order to determine what his 9 report would be. Dr. Vicary did not provide me with any information until the night 10 before he was scheduled to testify. I was surprised to find that Dr. Vicary’s report 11 contained information, received from Mr. Alvarez and about which I was unaware prior to 12 examining the report, that could potentially have been inflammatory. Dr. Vicary’s failure 13 to cooperate made it impossible for me to seek other mental health assistance prior to trial.
14 Dr. Vicary did not review Gail McGarrity’s report of Mr. Alvarez’s background, nor did 15 he talk to her about any of the information she had gathered from family members. Dr.
16 Vicary did not interview any of Mr. Alvarez’s family members himself. Without 17 appropriate background material I felt Dr. Vicary’s evidence could not be used. I had not 18 used Dr. Vicary prior to the Alvarez trial, and would never use him again after that 19 experience.

20 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 63 at 4288-89.) Mr. Gable’s declaration makes no specific 21 mention of Petitioner’s drug use, nor does his 2009 declaration address the issue. (ECF No. 320, 22 Ex. 160.)

23 Although Forensic Psychiatrist William Vicary did not ultimately testify at trial, he met 24 with Petitioner on three occasions for a total of about eight hours prior to issuing his July 24, 25 1989 report. He reviewed numerous documents provided by counsel, including preliminary 26 hearing transcripts, Petitioner’s trial testimony, investigator interviews with Petitioner, 27 neurological reports and psychological test reports. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 4110.) 28 Exploring Petitioner’s mental condition and the existence of any mitigating circumstances (id., at 4110), the doctor identified “Substance Abuse” as a mitigating factor:

The defendant began abusing alcohol and drugs during his teens. The drugs of abuse included marijuana, amphetamines, heroin, and cocaine. In part, the defendant’s substance abuse was an attempt at self-medicating his depressive symptoms. He did achieve some short-term relief of his frustration and despair. Over time, however, his substance abuse only exacerbated his mental deterioration. His use of alcohol,

1 amphetamines, and cocaine was an inflammatory factor with regard to his seizures and 2 aggressive outbursts. The defendant was in an intoxicated state during virtually all his 3 antisocial behavior. At the time of the manslaughter he was drunk and under the influence 4 of amphetamines. During the period just prior to the current offenses, the defendant had 5 been consuming substantial amounts of alcohol and cocaine each day. At the time of 6 the offenses, he was intoxicated on alcohol and cocaine. His acute and chronic 7 intoxication compromised his judgment and impulse control.

(ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 4122-23.)

8 Analysis

9 To review, “[w]here a state court’s decision is unaccompanied by an explanation, the 10 habeas petitioner’s burden still must be met by showing there was no reasonable basis for the 11 state court to deny relief.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 98. In considering whether trial counsel was 12 ineffective on federal habeas review, the pivotal question is whether the state court’s application of the Strickland standard was 13 unreasonable. This is different from asking whether defense counsel’s performance fell 14 below Strickland’s standard. ... For purposes of § 2254(d)(1), ‘an unreasonable 15 application of federal law is different from an incorrect application of federal law.’

16 [Citation.] A state court must be granted a deference and latitude that are not in operation 17 when the case involves review under the Strickland standard itself.”

18 Id., at 101 (emphasis in original). “Federal habeas courts must guard against the danger of 19 equating unreasonableness under Strickland with unreasonableness under § 2254(d). When 20 § 2254(d) applies, the question is not whether counsel’s actions were reasonable. The question is 21 whether there is any reasonable argument that counsel satisfied Strickland’s deferential standard.”
22 Id., at 105. Applying Strickland and § 2254(d) to this claim calls for “‘doubly’” deferential 23 review. Id., at 105.

24 “A state court’s determination that a claim lacks merit precludes federal habeas relief so 25 long as ‘fairminded jurists could disagree’ on the correctness of the state court’s decision.”
26 Richter, 562 U.S. at 101. The undersigned “must determine what arguments or theories 27 supported or ... could have supported, the state court’s decision” and then “must ask whether it is 28

1 possible fairminded jurists could disagree that those arguments or theories are inconsistent” with 2 a holding of the Supreme Court. Id. at 102.

3 “[E]ven a strong case for relief does not mean the state court’s contrary conclusion was 4 unreasonable.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 102. Petitioner is required to “show that the state court’s 5 ruling on the claim being presented in federal court was so lacking in justification that there was 6 an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded 7 disagreement.” Id. at 103.

9 Deficient Performance

10 Guilt phase

11 Petitioner contends trial counsel were deficient for failing to retain a medical expert who 12 specialized in drug abuse and its effects on the brain.

13
14 Trial counsel Holmes’s declaration provides two bases for electing not to do so: (1) 15 counsel did not believe Petitioner’s drug use “affected him in any significant way” based upon 16 their observations and investigation; and (2) presenting a defense wherein it was asserted 17 Petitioner’s drug use prevented him from forming specific intent was inconsistent with the 18 defense asserted – that Petitioner did not commit the crimes charged. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, 19 Ex. 136.) Giving counsels’ actions the double deference to which they are entitled, the 20 undersigned finds the California Supreme Court could have determined defense counsel were not 21 deficient. Richter, 562 U.S. at 105.

23 “Unlike a later reviewing court, the attorney observed the relevant proceedings, knew of 24 materials outside the record, and interacted with the client, with opposing counsel, and with the 25 judge. It is ‘all too tempting’ to ‘second-guess counsel’s assistance after conviction or adverse 26 sentence.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 105. Both Holmes and Gable “interacted with the client” 27 regularly and would have knowledge of materials outside the record. Mr. Holmes’s declaration 28

1 indicates the defense team “observed and/or ascertained nothing that would indicate that Mr.
2 Alvarez’s drug use affected him in any significant way.” Mr. Holmes continued, stating “to have 3 presented the defense that Mr. Alvarez did not have the ability to form specific intent at the time 4 of the crimes at issue would have contradicted Mr. Alvarez’s testimony that he did not commit 5 any of the charged crimes.” Neither of Mr. Gable’s declarations specifically address Petitioner’s 6 drug use. The undersigned will not “second-guess” counsel’s assistance.

8 Trial counsel Holmes and Gable knew the facts of the case, and Holmes’s declaration 9 makes clear the defense team did not believe Petitioner’s drug use was a significant factor. This 10 determination is not unreasonable, even in the face of Petitioner’s significant use of drugs and 11 alcohol, given his actions and decisions following the involved crimes: (1) after raping 12 Stramaglia, he stole Glidewell’s nearby vehicle (Camaro) and fled the area; (2) following the 13 Birkman robbery and stabbing, Petitioner and co-defendant Ross fled to Patton’s apartment until 14 the police arrived to question residents about a Camaro parked nearby because it had just been 15 used in a robbery; (3) Petitioner then leaves Patton’s apartment alone on foot, assaulting the 16 elderly Slatten and robbing her of her purse and vehicle (Taurus) at a nearby convenience store; 17 (4) leaving the state altogether before being apprehended more than a week later in Mississippi 18 driving that same vehicle. Given that evidence, trial counsel could “reasonably surmise ... that 19 character and psychological evidence would be of little help.” Strickland, 436 U.S. at 699. “An 20 attorney need not pursue an investigation that would be fruitless, much less one that might be 21 harmful to the defense.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 108.

24 Further, counsel may have made the strategic decision that evidence of drug use and any 25 brain disorder or impairment related thereto could also function as a double-edged sword, 26 demonstrating Petitioner’s dangerousness. Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. at 321. Counsel may 27 have reasonably concluded that calling such an expert would have other risks, including shifting 28

1 attention away from whether Petitioner was telling the truth, or cause the case to become a battle 2 of the experts. Richter, 562 U.S. at 108-09. In any event, the California Supreme Court could 3 have reasonably concluded counsel were not ineffective on this basis because fairminded jurists 4 could disagree. Id., at 101.

6 Moreover, given Petitioner’s testimony and the defenses to his four crimes, offering the 7 testimony of a mental health or pharmacology expert to address drug abuse and its effects on the 8 brain would have been contradictory. To briefly summarize, Petitioner testified (1) there was 9 consent in relation to the rape of Stramaglia, (2) that he did not steal Glidewell’s vehicle, rather 10 Glidewell offered it as collateral in a drug deal, (3) that he didn’t have access to Glidewell’s 11 vehicle at the time of the Birkman robbery and murder, inferring someone else committed those 12 crimes, and (4) that he bought Slatten’s vehicle from a couple of young men, trading drugs 13 despite knowing it was stolen. See, e.g., Williams v. Woodford, 306 F.3d 665, 709 (9th Cir.
14 2002) (“Given this factual support for the alibi defense, it was clearly within the wide range of 15 professionally competent assistance for [defense counsel] to choose not to present a psychiatric 16 defense theory that could conflict with the alibi defense”) (amended & superseded on other 17 grounds, 384 F.3d 567 (9th Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 934 (2005)); Bean v. Calderon, 163 18 F.3d at 1082 (rejecting claim that defense counsel failed to thoroughly investigate Bean’s mental 19 impairment and drug use and unreasonably rejected a mental impairment defense because “[o]nce 20 [defense counsel] reasonable chose [an alibi] theory, largely on the basis of Bean’s own 21 representations, his duty to investigate the directly conflicting [mental impairment] defense was at 22 an end”); Correll v. Stewart, 137 F.3d 1404, 1411 (9th Cir. 1998) (defense counsel not ineffective 23 for failing to present psychiatric evidence that would have contradicted the primary defense 24 theory of misidentification), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 984, 996 (1998); Turk v. White, 116 F.3d 25 1264, 1267 (9th Cir. 1997) (“After [trial counsel] reviewed the preliminary facts of the case, he 26 27 28

1 reasonably decided that he would pursue only a theory of self-defense. Even if Turk told [trial 2 counsel] of his mental problems, [trial counsel] did not need to investigate Turk’s competency.
3 As Strickland suggests, once [trial counsel] reasonably selected the self-defense theory, his duty 4 to investigate the competency defense, which directly conflicted with the self-defense theory, 5 ended”), cert denied, 522 U.S. 1125 (1998); Villafuerte v. Stewart, 111 F.3d 616, 630 (9th Cir.
6 1997) (counsel properly declined to raise an intoxication defense because it would have 7 contradicted defense theory that someone else committed crime) (cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1079 8 (1998)); Fritchie v. McCarthy, 664 F.2d 208, 215 (9th Cir. 1981) (counsel not ineffective for 9 choosing not to present evidence of petitioner’s diminished capacity that would have undermined 10 primary defense theory of mistaken identity).

12 Thus, the undersigned finds that the California Supreme Court could have reasonably 13 concluded that trial counsel were not ineffective because the defense theory was that Petitioner 14 was not present when Birkman was robbed and stabbed, nor when Slatten was robbed and 15 injured, and that Stramaglia consented to a sexual encounter and Glidewell offered Petitioner his 16 vehicle as collateral for a half ounce of cocaine, all of which would have been inconsistent with 17 expert testimony offered to explain that polysubstance abuse can affect one’s state of mind. It 18 was at least arguable that reasonable attorneys could have decided to forego inquiry into 19 Petitioner’s drug abuse and its effects in light of the circumstances. In sum, fair-minded jurists 20 could disagree. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-02.

21 22 23 Penalty phase

24 Petitioner claims trial counsel Gable admitted “that he did not learn what his mental health 25 expert had to say until the night before he was supposed to testify in the penalty phase” (ECF No.
26 330 at 294), arguing reasonable counsel would not “wait until the night before the penalty phase 27 to learn the facts necessary to make an informed decision” about mitigation evidence (id. at 295).
28

1 Notably, Petitioner fails to recognize that trial counsel would have had the findings and opinion 2 of “Dr. Campos” before those of Dr. Vicary, and it is clear from Vicary’s references to Dr.
3 Campos’s report that Campos’s opinion was not helpful to the defense. Plainly then, counsel had 4 conducted an investigation into the issue of Petitioner’s mental health and any defense, and that 5 counsels’ continued efforts by way of Dr. Vicary’s involvement served to essentially confirm 6 those offered previously by Dr. Campos. More specifically, Dr. Vicary’s report provides the 7 following:

9           The defendant told Dr. Campos that he was intoxicated on Dexedrine at the time of 10 his involvement in a vehicle accident in Cuba in July of 1978. He stated that Dexedrine 11 “makes you act crazy.” The defendant felt like a bullfighter confronting a charging bull.
12 After the accident he had a personality change and became more aggressive. He did 13 whatever he felt like doing without regard for any consequences.

14           The defendant was hooked on cocaine in 1986 and was using it almost daily for 15 two months prior to the offenses which occurred in 1987. In his social history he reported 16 that he finished high school and almost completed a college degree in physical education.
17 He was apparently discharged from his studies because of disciplinary problems. The 18 defendant missed his mother and believed that if she had been around to take care of him, 19 none of his major problems would have happened.

20           The defendant reported that the homicide victim could not have been robbed 21 because the defendant stabbed him to help out a friend who was in a heated argument with 22 the victim.

23           Intellectually the defendant functioned in the average range. His MMPI profile 24 revealed elevations on the hypochondriacal, manic and antisocial scales. The defendant 25 was overly sensitive to criticism or implied slights. He had extremely poor anger control.
26 His judgment was poor and he tended to act impulsively. His resourcefulness in coping 27 with stress was limited. There was a high likelihood of continuing assaultive behavior.
28 There was some paranoia in his thinking.

(ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 4116.) Hence, defense expert Dr. Campos’s earlier psychological assessment and opinion established little if any basis upon which to assert a mental defect defense at trial. In fact, his report was more damaging than helpful as it reveals inconsistencies with Petitioner’s defense (stabbed Birkman to defend a friend, not to rob him) and facts about Petitioner’s youth in Cuba that were best avoided (drug use began there contrary to his report to McGarrity that he first used drugs in the U.S.), over and above other inconsistencies and psychological testing results that were less than compelling.

1           With specific regard to the penalty phase, trial counsel may have refrained from 2 presenting this type of testimony because they believed that evoking sympathy from the 3 circumstances of Petitioner’s upbringing in Cuba and subsequent experiences as a part of the 4 Mariel boatlift, including time spent at detention camps, was a better penalty phase strategy.
5 Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 193, 197. The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded 6 so, and it is certainly possible that fair-minded jurists could disagree that the argument is not 7 inconsistent with Strickland. Richter, 562 U.S. at 102.

9           Furthermore, Petitioner’s reliance upon Jennings v. Woodford, 290 F.3d 1006 (9th Cir.
10 2002), to support his position is misguided. Jennings is distinguishable on its facts. There 11 counsel failed to: (1) follow up with a psychiatrist who had conducted a preliminary assessment 12 of competency at the request of Jennings’ first attorney; (2) request copies of the petitioner’s 13 voluminous medical records; (3) inquire into possible child abuse in the petitioner’s family; (4) 14 seek the appointment of an additional expert regarding the petitioner’s mental state; (5) discuss 15 drug use with his client; (6) follow-up on a report by the petitioner’s ex-spouse about the 16 petitioner’s attempted suicide and schizophrenia diagnosis; (7) investigate an incident wherein a 17 judge ordered Jennings committed involuntarily for a psychiatric evaluation; (8) review, in whole, 18 medical records subpoenaed by the district attorney; and (9) investigate the petitioner’s 19 commitment to a boys’ ranch for molesting two young boys. Jennings v. Woodford, at 1013-14.

22           Petitioner’s reliance on Porter v. McCollum is also misplaced. There, trial counsel did 23 almost nothing to prepare for the penalty phase. Counsel had one brief meeting with his client, 24 “did not obtain any of Porter’s school, medical, or military service records or interview any 25 members of Porter’s family.” Porter v. McCollum, 558 U.S. 30, 39 (2009). “[H]e ignored 26 pertinent avenues for investigation of which he should have been aware” and in so doing “failed 27 to uncover and present any evidence of Porter’s mental health or mental impairment, his family 28

1 background, or his military service. The decision not to investigate did not reflect reasonable 2 professional judgment.” Id. at 40.

3 In this case, trial counsel investigated Petitioner’s mental health or mental impairment, 4 retaining medical experts who provided counsel with their findings. Counsel also made efforts to 5 obtain Petitioner’s school and medical records from Cuba, although they ultimately proved 6 unavailable. Trial counsel presented Petitioner’s family background by way of McGarrity’s 7 testimony and the testimony of the translator who read Petitioner’s father’s statement into the 8 record. Unlike counsel for Porter, trial counsel investigated Petitioner’s mental health and/or 9 impairments; however, following consideration of the findings prepared by medical experts, 10 counsel determined the expert opinions would be more harmful than helpful to Petitioner and 11 therefore elected not to present evidence in that regard. “[A] tactical decision may constitute 12 constitutionally adequate representation even if, in hindsight, a different defense might have fared 13 better.” Bemore v. Chappell, 788 F.3d 1151, 1163 (9th Cir. 2015).

14 Pablo Stewart’s November 2004 declaration indicates he was asked by habeas counsel to 15 determine Petitioner’s “mental status currently, when in custody, at the time of his trial, and at the 16 times of the charged crimes.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 64 at 4294.) The doctor was also 17 asked, among other things, to determine influencing factors on “the effect of a life-long history of 18 severe physical abuse and psychological abuse and humiliation, organic brain damage, 19 [Petitioner’s] attempts to cope with substance abuse, and the extreme stressors extant in the time 20 frames prior to and at the time of all of his crimes.” (Id. at 4294.) In making those 21 determinations, Dr. Stewart “conducted psychiatric examinations” (the number and length of the 22 examinations is not provided), and “an extensive set of documents ... includ[ing] various life 23 history documents and other mental health evaluations.” (Id. at 4294-95.) The doctor also noted 24 that those materials “were of the type that are commonly relied upon by psychiatrists in rendering 25 26 27 28

1 a full and accurate assessment and expert opinion of an individual’s psychiatric and neurological 2 condition.” (Id. at 4295.)

3 Dr. Stewart’s diagnoses and conclusions were as follows:

4 It is my professional opinion that Manual Alvarez suffers from three psychiatric 5 conditions that have detrimentally affected his functioning throughout his life and almost 6 certainly were a major factor in the commission of his crimes. He suffers complex Post-7 Traumatic Stress Disorder, related to an extensive history of devastating emotional and 8 physical injuries from substantial front lobe impairment, most likely the result of 9 traumatic brain injury, and chronic alcohol and cocaine abuse, most likely attributable in 10 large part to the mental effects of his PTSD and front lobe syndrome. Each of these 11 conditions tends to exacerbate the others and the presence of the three together can have, 12 as it did in Manual’s case, a catastrophic effect on mental status and functioning.

13 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 64 at 4310-11.) It is interesting that Dr. Stewart makes no mention 14 of the medical reports and/or findings relied upon by Dr. Vicary, nor any by Dr. Campos – two 15 medical experts retained by the defense in anticipation of trial, but neither of whom testified.

16 In any event, the fact a subsequently retained expert suggests a more comprehensive 17 mental or neurological examination could have been performed is not evidence that it should have 18 been done, or that counsel should have further investigated the issue. In light of the testing 19 performed, the results obtained therefrom, and the opinion of the medical experts consulted by the 20 defense team prior to or during trial, trial counsel were not required to “shop” for a more 21 favorable expert. See Payton v. Cullen, 658 F.3d 890, 896 (9th Cir. 2011) (“experts examined 22 Payton, but no red flags warranted further investigation” thus it was not unreasonable for counsel, 23 having already retained qualified experts, to “not seek others”). Notably too, in this case Dr.
24 Stewart’s opinion rests upon information that was unavailable to Dr. Vicary, not for any lack of 25 effort on trial counsels’ part. Additionally, fifteen years had elapsed between the time of 26 Petitioner’s trial and Stewart’s November 2004 opinion. For all of those reasons, the undersigned 27 does not second guess trial counsel.
28

1 Trial counsels' forensic psychiatric expert, Dr. Vicary, who was made aware of 2 Petitioner's social and medical history as it was then known, found no significant mental disorder 3 or defect. Dr. Vicary's review of the neurological reports provided to him revealed an 4 "essentially normal" February 1989 EEG, a normal June 1989 MRI scan, normal skull x-rays, and 5 a "computer enhanced EEG [that] revealed some abnormalities in the rear of the brain and right 6 lateral aspect." (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 58 at 4115.) Regarding his mental status 7 examination of Petitioner, the doctor noted "[t]here was no consistent evidence of any psychosis 8 or gross physical brain damage." (Id. at 4121.) Ultimately, Dr. Vicary opined that Petitioner 9 suffered "from a chronic depressive mental illness and a seizure disorder and that "alcohol and 10 drug abuse" had been "a major exacerbating factor." (Id. at 4111.)

12 13 In the end, trial counsel elected not to present the testimony of two defense experts who 14 considered Petitioner's mental status. The constitutional guarantee of effective assistance of 15 counsel does not necessarily require the introduction of expert testimony. Richter, 562 U.S. at 16 106-07; see also Bonin v. Calderon, 59 F.3d at 834 ("the presentation of expert testimony is not 17 necessarily an essential ingredient of a reasonably competent defense"). It would not have been 18 unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to conclude Petitioner had failed to establish 19 deficient performance by trial counsel pursuant to the dictates of Strickland where counsel did not 20 present a mental health expert's testimony. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101.

21 22 Prejudice

23 Even assuming trial counsel were found to be deficient, the state court's denial of 24 Petitioner's claim is not an unreasonable application of Strickland.

25 In assessing prejudice, Strickland asks whether it is "reasonably likely" the result would 26 have been different. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 696. "The likelihood of a different result must be 27 substantial, not just conceivable." Richter, 562 U.S. at 112, citing Strickland, at 693.
28

1 In the guilt phase, then, “the question is whether there is a reasonable probability that, 2 absent the errors, the factfinder would have had a reasonable doubt respecting guilt.” Id. at 3 695, 104 S.Ct. at 2068-69. Likewise, in the sentencing phase, “the question is whether 4 there is a reasonable probability that, absent the errors, the sentencer ... would have concluded that the balance of aggravating and mitigating circumstances did not warrant death.” Id.

5 Hendricks v. Calderon, 70 F.3d 1032, 1036-37 (9th Cir. 1995) (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. 668).

6 Here, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that, even had a 7 mental health expert testified during the guilt phase concerning Petitioner’s drug abuse and its 8 effects on his mental state, the jury would not have had reasonable doubt of Petitioner’s guilt.
9 The jury heard evidence of Petitioner’s drug use from a number of witnesses, including Petitioner 10 himself. And while it did not hear evidence of the effects of such use on an individual’s brain, 11 there was substantial evidence pointing to Petitioner’s guilt. As noted above, Petitioner left 12 Stramaglia’s apartment after Simpkins arrived, stealing Glidewell’s Camaro in an effort to 13 escape;<sup>29</sup> days later, after robbing Birkman at an ATM machine while armed with a knife, 14 Petitioner jumped into the getaway Camaro piloted by co-defendant Ross, fleeing the scene; he 15 and Ross took refuge at Patton’s apartment immediately thereafter, Ross provided Patton with a 16 knife to return to Petitioner, before the police arrived to question Patton about the Camaro parked 17 nearby that was used in a robbery; Petitioner then left Patton’s apartment on foot after the police 18 left, assaulting and robbing Greta Slatten of her purse and vehicle, using it to run from the area; 19 more than a week later, he was apprehended in Mississippi driving Slatten’s vehicle. Hence, the

---

23 <sup>29</sup> Stramaglia’s residence was located at 2447 Boxwood #5 (13 RT 2615); Glidewell’s brother’s 24 home address is 2485 Boxwood (13 RT 2689). Stramaglia testified she woke to find Petitioner in 25 her apartment “close to noon” on May 13, 1987 (13 RT 2619-20), he raped her over the course of 26 about 10 minutes (13 RT 2627) and kept her in the bathroom (13 RT 2631-333) before running 27 out once Simpkins arrived (13 RT 2633-34, 2638). Glidewell’s Camaro was stolen on May 13, 28 1987 (13 RT 2689), the police responding to a 911 call made at 12:39 p.m. (13 RT 2701; see also ECF No. 302, Vol. III, Ex. 8 at 538 [911 printout]); Officer Michael Tupper of the Sacramento Police Department responded, interviewed Glidewell about one o’clock and finished his report at 2:15 p.m. (17 RT 3813-14; see also 17 RT 3819 [Glidewell advised Tupper the theft occurred about 12:30 p.m.] )

1 likelihood of a different result absent the error asserted by Petitioner is merely conceivable, rather 2 than substantial. Conceivability of a different result is not the test. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693-3 94.

4           Therefore, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that, even had 5 a mental health expert such as Dr. Stewart testified during the penalty phase concerning 6 Petitioner’s drug abuse and its deleterious effects on the brain, it was not reasonably likely the 7 jury would have concluded that the mitigating factors outweighed the aggravating factors 8 warranting a sentence of life in prison.

9           Additionally, any mental health expert’s testimony on the part of the defense “would have 10 opened the door to rebuttal by a state expert.” Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 173; see also 11 Wong v. Belmontes, 558 U.S. at 24 (explaining that “expert testimony discussing [petitioner’s] 12 mental state, seeking to explain his behavior, or putting it in some favorable context would have 13 exposed [petitioner] to” damaging evidence in aggravation). The state could have called a 14 rebuttal expert, meaning “counsel faced a serious risk that a mitigation case could turn out to be 15 aggravating.” Pinholster v. Ayers, 590 F.3d 651, 707 (9th Cir. 2009) (en banc) (Kozinski, C.J., 16 dissenting) (rev'd sub nom. Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170).

17           Here, while the jury may have been sympathetic to Petitioner’s evidence of mental and 18 emotional problems, those same problems could have suggested future dangerousness or that 19 Petitioner was simply beyond rehabilitation. Particularly given the circumstances of the then-20 current crimes and Petitioner’s prior convictions for manslaughter and assault with a deadly 21 weapon. A severe criminal history carries great weight. Belmontes, 558 U.S. at 22-24, 27-28 22 (evidence a defendant previously committed another murder may be “most powerful imaginable” 23 aggravating evidence). Therefore, it would not have been unreasonable for the California 24 Supreme Court to conclude the aggravating evidence was overwhelming, and hence, any failure 25 26 27 28

1 to introduce certain mitigating evidence did not amount to prejudice.

2           Considering the totality of the evidence before the jury, the original as well as the “new 3 mitigating evidence,” as against the aggravating evidence presented at trial, the California 4 Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that Petitioner suffered no prejudice where trial 5 counsel did not present expert testimony concerning Petitioner’s drug use and its effects. Sears v.
6 Upton, 561 U.S. 945, 955-56 (2010); Belmontes, 558 U.S. at 20; Berghuis v. Thompkins, 560 7 U.S. 370, 389 (2010).

9           Conclusion

10           In sum, the California Supreme Court’s decision to deny habeas relief on Petitioner’s 11 ineffective assistance of counsel claim for failure to investigate and present medical expert 12 testimony addressing Petitioner’s drug use and its effect on his brain at the guilt and penalty 13 phases was not contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established federal law. The 14 undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim ZZ be DENIED.
15

16           Claims II, JJ & G: Errors Depriving Petitioner of the Opportunity to Impeach Sandra 17 Stramaglia & Other Related Constitutional Errors

18           In Claim II, Petitioner asserts that a combination of errors related to the testimony of rape 19 victim Sandra Stramaglia resulted in a deprivation of his constitutional rights. (ECF Doc. 330 at 20 297-381.) Respondent replies that habeas relief must be denied because the state court’s 21 adjudication of the claim was not contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court 22 precedent. Respondent also alleges the claim is unexhausted. (ECF No. 345 at 162-83.) 23

24           With regard to the issue of exhaustion in particular, Petitioner asserts his claim is 25 exhausted. Yet, Respondent contends Petitioner’s claim in this court is now more broadly 26 asserted, and includes numerous arguments not asserted in the California Supreme Court, and as a 27 result, “this new and much broader version of claim II is not exhausted.” (ECF No. 345 at 163-28 64.) More particularly, Respondent argues the “newly phrased claim II lumps together supposed

1 impeachment evidence beyond Sandra S.'s 'history of drug abuse' to include her supposed 2 relationship with the Sacramento Police Department as a confidential informant, her prior 3 testimony in a different criminal case where she alleged rape, and her prostitution activities."
4 (ECF Doc. 345 at 163:20-23.) A review of the first and second state habeas petitions reveals that 5 while the first state habeas petition clearly did not cover the "broader version" (as Respondent 6 deems it) of Petitioner's argument here, the second state habeas petition sufficiently presented the 7 claim.<sup>30</sup> Vasquez v. Hillery, 474 U.S. 254, 257-58 (1986). Therefore, the undersigned finds it to 8 be exhausted.

10 Finally, Petitioner's Claim JJ argues trial counsel were ineffective for failing to investigate 11 and present evidence concerning Stramaglia's relationship with law enforcement and that the 12 prosecution failed to disclose she acted as an informant, depriving him of the effective assistance 13 of counsel. (ECF No. 330 at 381-83.) Petitioner's Claim G argues the trial court's refusal to 14 admit evidence of Stramaglia's belated rape complaint deprived him of due process and the right 15 to a fair trial. (ECF No. 330 at 383-84.) These claims will be addressed alongside Claim II.
16

17 Relevant Background Information

18 Trial Counsels' Declarations

19 Concerning this claim, trial counsel Holmes declared as follows: 20

21 Claim II, the failure of counsel to argue against the trial court's ruling excluding 22 victim Sandra St[r]amaglia's history of drug abuse.

23 I would have filed a California Evidence Code section 782 motion if it had been 24 necessary to admit into evidence the past sexual conduct of Stramaglia in order to 25 impeach her. However, since the prosecution did not object to the admission of 26 Stramaglia's "profession" as a prostitute, and in fact introduced it, a section 782 motion 27 was not necessary. Moreover, questions about Stramaglia's drug use at the time of the 28 crime and at the time of her testimony were properly allowed (RT 2586); and the defense did secure a ruling that, if Stramaglia denied past drug use, she could be impeached with it

1 (RT 2586). Other than these three areas, the defense did not believe that Stramaglia's past 2 drug use was relevant. (RT 2586.)

3 (ECF Doc. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5253-54 (emphasis in original).)

4 Trial counsel Gable declared the following:

6 16. I was told by Mr. Holmes to cross-examine Sandra Stramaglia, the 7 prosecution's first witness in the guilt phase. At the time, I was unaware that Ms.
8 Stramaglia had testified for the prosecution in the rape trial of Thomas Korves. I 9 attempted to get permission to question Ms. Stramaglia about her failure to report 10 previous rapes, as she had testified during the preliminary hearing. I was unaware that 11 shortly before Ms. Stramaglia testified at the Alvarez preliminary hearing, Ms. Stramaglia 12 had testified at Mr. Korves's trial, nor that Roxanne Simpkins, Anthony Simpkins and 13 Michael Hopper had been involved as witnesses either at trial or during the investigation 14 of the Korves case. I was unaware that Ms. Stramaglia had testified, in the Korves case, 15 that she had been assured by a police officer on a prior unreported rape (the one in which 16 she testified she was stabbed) that she and her sister prostitutes should never hesitate to 17 report rapes, that they would not be "hassled" for being prostitutes; nor was I aware that 18 Ms. Stramaglia had testified in that case that she had so much confidence in the officer's 19 word that she encouraged Roxanne Simpkins to report being raped by Mr. Korves. Had I 20 known that, I would have used this knowledge to support my arguments to Judge Lewis 21 that I should be allowed to question Ms. Stramaglia concerning prior unreported rapes. I 22 would also have used it to challenge her testimony at Mr. Alvarez's trial, when she 23 perjured herself in light of her testimony in, and the circumstances of, the Korves trial by 24 saying that she didn't report her alleged rape by Mr. Alvarez because she believed that 25 police officers disregarded the rape complaints of prostitutes.

17 17. I was not aware that Roxanne Simpkins had information that she and Ms.
18 Stramaglia often exchanged sex for drugs, that Ms. Stramaglia would do or say anything 19 for drugs, and that she and Ms. Stramaglia had been provided with money to purchase 20 heroin so that they would not be "sick" from withdrawals during their testimony at, 21 presumably, the Korves trial. Had I been aware of this, I would certainly have cross-22 examined Ms. Stramaglia about this. I also believe this information would have been very 23 helpful to bolster the testimony of Danny Stokes.

22 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 63 at 4287-88.)

23 Relevant Preliminary Hearing Testimony

24 Ms. Stramaglia testified at the preliminary hearing; the relevant testimony is excerpted 25 below:

- 26
27 Q. When the man was pinning you down, did you attempt to resist in any way?
28 A. I started to and then I remembered being raped before and I got stabbed real 1 bad and I just - - I didn't - - no, I didn't resist after awhile cause I just didn't want to - - 2 didn't want to be hurt again.

3 Q. Initially you did resist, though?

4 A. A little bit at first and then I - - I started to push and then I didn't, I stopped 5 remembered all that.

6 I saw the - - I still have a scar on the back of my neck from the time I was raped 7 before.

8 MR. HOLMES: Number one your Honor, I can't hear her, what she's saying; and 9 number two, I believe that was probably non-responsive to the last question.

10 MAGISTRATE: The answer was non-responsive - - not the answer but the 11 comment. It may be stricken.

12 (1 CT 180.)

13 On cross-examination, Mr. Holmes made the following inquiries and elicited this 14 testimony:

15 Q. Now, you indicated you had been raped before. Was that within the last couple 16 years?

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. Was that here in Sacramento?

19 A. Yes.

20 Q. And did you report that rape?

21 A. No.

22 MR. MARLETTE: Objection, your Honor, to the relevance.

23 MAGISTRATE: Objection overruled.

24 THE WITNESS: I talked - -

25 MAGISTRATE: Just a moment, ma'am. You've answered the question. If he 26 has other questions, he'll ask you.

27 THE WITNESS: Oh, okay.

28 Q. ... I didn't even hear your answer. Did you say no, you did not report it?

A. No, I didn't report it at first is a better answer.

Q. All right. [¶] How long after that prior rape did you report it?

A. Well, I didn't report it until the officer discovered it that picked me up on a drunk driving warrant that I had and she saw - - the wound in the back of my neck which had happened a couple weeks before that.

Q. Okay. So, the answer is - -

A. And I told her.

Q. You did report it about two weeks afterwards after the officer confronted you?

A. But yeah, but I didn't - - I never made an official report. She told me to go down to the detectives and they never wrote it down. They just told me if I see the guy to come in and tell 'm.

Q. All right. [¶] So nothing ever came of that case?

A. No.

Q. And had the officer not confronted you, you would have never reported that?

A. No.

1 (1 CT 185-86.) The prosecutor's objections to the last question were overruled. (1 CT 186-87.)

2 Later, the following testimony was elicited:

4 Q. ... Okay. Was that date May 17th, four days later that you talked to an officer about this?

5 A. I don't remember the date. If you want to know the truth, I don't remember.

6 Q. All right. That's fair. [¶] But is - - was it about four days later that you're talking told an officer?

7 A. I'm not sure. I believe so. I'm not positive.

8 Q. And when that officer talked to you, did he originally talk to you concerning at that time an attempted murder, a stabbing?

9 A. Nobody said anything about that until later after I was through giving a testimony - - or not testimony, my whatever - - my statement.

10 Q. Well, let me put it this way: Why were you called down - - were you called down to the Police Department to give a statement?

11 A. Yes.

12 Q. And was your understanding that you were called down there to give a statement about rape?

13 A. Right.

14 Q. All right. Nothing about a homicide or an attempted homicide?

15 A. No.

16 Q. Did the officer contact you or did you contact the officer?

17 A. They contacted me.

18 Q. You at no time had ever phoned the Police Department to make a report of a rape?

19 A. No, but I told the officer Lister, Jim Lister.

20 Q. That's okay. Just let me ask you another question. Is that correct that you never - - you personally never called in to report the rape?

21 A. No.

22 Q. Okay.

23 A. I did not.

24 Q. I take it then, correct me if I'm wrong, that when the officer had contacted you about four days after this incident, that the officer had some information about a possible rape?

25 MR. MARLETTE: Objection, your Honor, calls for speculation.

26 MR. HOLMES: I'll withdraw it, your Honor.

27 Q. ... You never had any intentions of ever reporting this, did you?

28 A. I did.

Q. At what point in time?

A. Right after it happened.

Q. About the time you're telling the defendant that you wouldn't report it if he'd let you out of the bathroom?

A. Yeah.

(1 CT 196-98.)

Ms. Stramaglia testified she was "a prostitute by profession." (1 CT 199.) She denied 1 being paid money on this occasion, and also indicated she was not given any drugs in payment for 2 the act. (1 CT 199-200.) Following an objection by the prosecutor and brief argument, 3 Stramaglia's "[n]o" answer to Mr. Holmes's question, "have you ever accepted cocaine or any 4 other drug in exchange for the act of prostitution," was stricken when the objection was sustained 5 by the court. (1 CT 201-04.) During her preliminary hearing testimony, Stramaglia denied being 6 "on any drugs," "on heroin" or "cocaine," or taking "any drug or any controlled substance within 7 the last 24 hours." (1 CT 206-07.)

8 Relevant Trial Proceedings & Testimony

9 Prior to Ms. Stramaglia's testimony at trial, the prosecutor moved as follows:

10 11 MR. MARLETTE: Regarding Miss Stramaglia, who'll be the first witness, she is 12 an admitted prostitute, and she is the alleged victim in the rape count.

13 I would make, I have a motion in two areas. One is her sexual habits, and the 14 other is drug use.

15 Although she is an admitted prostitute, I would move the Court ma[k]e an order in 16 limine that her prior sexual history or subsequent sexual history, for that matter, not be 17 inquired [into], on the grounds of relevance and the statute protecting such.

18 THE COURT: Who's going to argue?

19 MR. GABLE: It's my witness, so I'll go ahead and argue.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. GABLE: I think it's highly relevant, with regard to whether or not Miss 22 Stramaglia was plying her trade at the time of the alleged rape.

23 If in fact, she was, and the subsequent charge or allegation of rape was a result of a 24 breach of some agreement, then that certainly would be relevant to inquire into the nature 25 of her profession.

26 The reason - - the reason it's so relevant is, otherwise, she's presented to the jury 27 in a false light.

28 They think she's asleep in her bedroom, and that she did - - was accosted by the defendant, that she did not have a history of having sexual intercourse with men, and I think it's highly relevant, because at the time that this was going on, that was what she was doing. I suppose she's still doing it, but I don't know - -

THE COURT: Is that in fact your contention, that this was consen[s]ual sexual intercourse?

MR. GABLE: At this time, if the Court wants us to offer more information in camera, I'd be happy to.

I don't want to disclose our defense at this time, as to what - - but I'm saying, though, that within the limits of common sense, that would be certainly an inference that could be raised, and whether or not there will be evidence presented in that regard by the defense, which I don't think is necessary to argue the relevance of any piece of evidence, I can't tell you at this time.

THE COURT: Mr. Marlette, would you step outside for a moment?

MR. MARLETTE: I'm sorry?

THE COURT: Would you step outside for just a moment?

MR. MARLETTE: Yes. [¶] Perhaps I should clarify; that is, that I intend to ask her what her occupation is, and she will say that she's a prostitute.

The reason I'm going into that is that she did not report this until she was approached by the police.

What I would ask to limit, though, is the extent of her prior habits, when the previous time she'd had sex, if she had ever been raped before, if she'd ever reported rapes before, and that kind of thing.

Also, the fact that, she had no felony conviction, but she does have a number of B's, and I would ask that she not be asked about that, but I do not, by any means, intend to hide the fact that she's a prostitute. In fact, that will come out in direct.

MR. GABLE: I don't think we need to have an in camera, then, in light of what Mr. Marlette just said.

I would indicate, though, that there is the issue regarding a prior rape that she stated had occurred to her, and this in the preliminary hearing transcript.

It was one where she said that she also did not report the incident at the time, but only reported the incident after she was confronted by the police, very similar to the circumstances that gave rise to this particular allegation.

She did not report this alleged rape until she was confronted by the police in connection with her knowledge of Mr. - -

THE COURT: What fact in issue does that prior conduct tend to prove or disprove?

MR. GABLE: Well, I would assume that it would tend to show that there's a potential for her to fabricate information; in other words, instead of making a - - what's called a fresh complaint when it occurs, she doesn't say anything about anybody until such time as the police confront her and then, "Oh, yes, I remember that."

THE COURT: Isn't that analogous to a propensity to commit crime?

MR. GABLE: On her part?

THE COURT: If you were looking at it from, analogizing it to, if she were on trial as a defendant, wouldn't that be bringing in prior conduct to a showing a propensity to commit a crime or, in your case, a propensity to make false reports?

MR. GABLE: Exactly, and I think that's the relevance here, a propensity to fabricate, and that's, I think, highly relevant.

Obviously when you're dealing with a witness, and it's not a question of propensity to commit a crime, although it happens to be a crime, to make a false report, that isn't why it's being offered. It's being offered on the issue of credibility and fabrication.

THE COURT: But you're offering a single incident.

MR. GABLE: Which I think is appropriate, in light of Proposition 8 and subsequent rulings in People versus Taylor, and - -

THE COURT: What's Taylor about?

MR. GABLE: Taylor was, I believe - - and there's two cases that came out, but Taylor, I believe, dealt with 790 of the Evidence Code, and said that proposition had repealed that.

There's been a subsequent case that came out dealing with Section 787, that went along with the Taylor rationale.

1 I'm trying to remember the name of that case, Adams, I believe, People versus 2 Adams.

3 MR. MARLETTE: Your Honor, I'll submit that one of the difficulties here is that 4 we're not dealing with a prior false report, and even if we were, it will be necessary, if this 5 is going to her credibility, to show that her failure to make a report on the prior occasion 6 somehow shows that she was false on this occasion, that would require a showing of the 7 prior - -

8 THE COURT: What evidence do you have . . . Mr. Gable - - that this other 9 incident was a false report?

10 MR. GABLE: The information that I've been able to glean from the preliminary 11 hearing transcript is that she made the report after being confronted by the police. They 12 did not even write a formal report of the incident and told her if she ever sees the guy 13 again to let them know.

14 And they basically didn't themselves take it as a reporting of a - - an actual crime, 15 but just elected not to do anything about it, which, the inference is, they didn't really feel 16 it was a crime.

17 THE COURT: I'm satisfied that's not admissible.<sup>[31]</sup>

18 MR. GABLE: The drug use, drug usage.

19 MR. MARLETTE: Right. [¶] I also, in regards to sexual habits, I'd ask she not be 20 asked about B convictions. She's got misdemeanor B's, a number of them.

21 THE COURT: I don't see any reason why that would be admissible.

22 MR. GABLE: I'm not even going to argue that.

23 THE COURT: About what about drugs?

24 MR. MARLETTE: In drug usage, she testified in the preliminary hearing 25 transcript that she did not use, at least, cocaine and heroin at the time of the offense.

26 I'll ask that she not be asked about her drug use in general. [¶] I think the only 27 time this may be relevant is at the time she's testifying or at the time of the act, and other 28 than that, I submit that her general drug usage is irrelevant.

THE COURT: Mr. Gable?

MR. GABLE: Well, that may be true, except to the extent that if she indicates on the stand that she's never taken cocaine or heroin, then I think it becomes relevant to impeach her, and although it's somewhat collateral, I think it goes directly to her credibility.

THE COURT: Yeah, if she says that that makes it a very close issue, but otherwise, use of drugs outside of the p[a]rameters of the time frame here, where she, in fact, wouldn't be under the influence, would not be admissible.

MR. GABLE: Okay.

MR. MARLETTE: That's all.

(13 RT 2580-86.)

<sup>31</sup> A prior false accusation is admissible to challenge a victim's credibility, but only if it is first established that the prior accusation was false. People v. Tidwell, 163 Cal.App.4th 1447, 1457 (2008). When earlier complaints "never reached the point of formal charges" and there is no conclusive evidence of falsity, a trial court may properly exclude the evidence under Evidence Code section 352. Tidwell, 163 Cal.App.4th at 1458. Stramaglia's complaint never resulted in formal charges and there was no conclusive evidence of falsity.

1           At trial, Stramaglia did in fact testify on direct, when asked what her occupation was at 2 the time of the rape, that she “was a prostitute,” and that she was currently “retired.” (13 RT 3 2616.) With specific regard to the incident itself, Stramaglia testified that after Petitioner raped 4 her, he kept her from leaving her bathroom (13 RT 2631-32); she told him she would not “say 5 anything to anybody” about the rape if he allowed her to leave the bathroom. (13 RT 2633.)
6 Asked if she reported the rape, Stramaglia replied she did not do so until “a day or so later,” 7 telling “Detective Jim Lister, because he’s kind of a friend.” (13 RT 2639.) Following up, she 8 explained she did not immediately report it to police because “[p]eople don’t usually care about 9 prostitutes.” (13 RT 2639.) Stramaglia testified that Lister was driving by on his beat in her area 10 and “was saying something about a guy stealing a car and stuff, killing somebody or something, 11 and I - - we got to talking about it, and it was the same guy, I told him what he did.” (13 RT 12 2640.)

13           On cross-examination, Stramaglia acknowledged prostitution as her occupation during the 14 relevant time period and that she was “now retired.” (13 RT 2646-47.) Although she denied 15 plying her trade the evening she met Petitioner, Stramaglia testified she “was pretty much tired 16 and didn’t want to work anymore, but it - - if somebody happened to come by, [she was] not 17 gonna turn down money.” (13 RT 2648.)

18           After Petitioner raped her, Stramaglia tried “to convince him” to let her out of the 19 bathroom telling him her friends would be there “in a minute” and that neither she nor her friends 20 would “say anything to anybody” if he let her out. (13 RT 2674.) When Mr. Gable asked 21 Stramaglia about telling Lister about the rape and making a report to another officer later, she 22 indicated she did so when the officer went out to her residence and picked her up, taking her back 23 to the station. (13 RT 2683-84.) In response to being asked “isn’t it true that you would never 24 have reported this incident if you had not been approached by the officers, Stramaglia said she 25 “was still thinking about going up there and reporting” but that she “hadn’t decided.” (13 RT 26 2684.)

27                           The California Supreme Court’s Determination

28           The California Supreme Court considered a part of Petitioner’s claim here on direct

1 appeal, to wit: the superior court erred by granting the People’s motion to bar, as irrelevant, the 2 introduction of evidence of Stramaglia’s prior misdemeanor prostitution convictions and her prior 3 belated rape complaint, arguing the evidence would have been relevant for impeachment. It 4 determined there was no error, as follows:

6 In its first part, as to evidence of Sandra S.’s prior misdemeanor prostitution 7 convictions, we reject the claim at the threshold. Defendant has not preserved the point for 8 review in this respect. He may not offer an argument here that such evidence would have 9 been relevant for impeachment because he did not offer any to that effect below. (People 10 v. Rowland (1992) 4 Cal.4th 238, 262, fn.2; People v. Gordon (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1223, 11 1251–1252.) We recognize that, at the time of the motion, we had yet to decide People v.
12 Wheeler (1992) 4 Cal.4th 284, in which we held that article I, section 28, subdivision (d), 13 of the California Constitution supersedes Evidence Code section 787 insofar as it 14 impliedly renders evidence of prior misdemeanor convictions, or more precisely, evidence 15 of the misconduct underlying such convictions, generally inadmissible for impeachment.
16 But that is of no consequence. Defendant could surely have argued that it did. Indeed, on 17 another point, he relied on People v. Adams (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 10, in which the court 18 held that article I, section 28, subdivision (d), of the California Constitution supersedes 19 Evidence Code section 787 insofar as it expressly renders evidence of misconduct 20 generally inadmissible for impeachment. If he had so argued, the superior court might 21 well have been persuaded. To the extent that he attempts to excuse his omission by 22 asserting that any act would have been futile, he fails: his assertion is mere conjecture.

23 [FN] 11. We note in passing that, although defendant was precluded from 24 using evidence of Sandra S.’s prior misdemeanor prostitution convictions for 25 impeachment, he could, and did, use evidence of her work as a prostitute for that 26 very purpose. Strictly speaking, evidence of prior misdemeanor convictions 27 themselves is not relevant for impeachment, but rather the misconduct underlying 28 such convictions (People v. Wheeler, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 299)—and then only if it involves “moral turpitude” (id. at p. 295).

29 In its second part, as to evidence of Sandra S.’s prior belated rape complaint, we 30 reject the claim on the merits. Broadly speaking, an appellate court reviews any ruling by 31 a trial court as to the admissibility of evidence for abuse of discretion. (See, e.g., People v.
32 Rowland, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 264.) Specifically, it scrutinizes a decision on a motion to 33 bar the introduction of evidence as irrelevant for such abuse: it does so because it so 34 examines the underlying determination whether the evidence is indeed irrelevant. (E.g., 35 People v. Gordon, supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1239.) After review, we find no abuse of 36 discretion. The superior court impliedly determined that any relevance that evidence of 37 Sandra S.’s prior belated rape complaint might have for impeachment was premised on 38 the falseness of the prior complaint. It was not unreasonable in this regard. Indeed, under the reasoning of People v. Neely (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 16, 18, if her prior complaint was in fact true, it would have no relevance for impeachment whatsoever. The superior court also impliedly determined that the premise that the prior complaint was false was without sufficient support. In this regard too, it was not unreasonable. Defense counsel’s

1 speculation that the police might not have “really fe[lt] it was a crime” could obviously 2 have been deemed inadequate. Defendant here asserts that Neely entitled him to inquire of 3 Sandra S. in the presence of the jury in the hope of establishing the falseness of her prior 4 complaint. It did not. The Neely court held only that the defendant therein should have 5 been allowed to so inquire of a woman who “was a mentally ill person who had been” 6 institutionalized “for several years,” and had “indicate[d] some uncertainty and confusion 7 concerning the exact nature of her charges....” (People v. Neely, supra, 228 Cal.App.2d at 8 p. 19.) From all that appears, Sandra S. was not such a woman.

6 [FN] 12. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court 7 committed reversible error under California law by granting the People’s motion, 8 it thereby committed reversible error under the Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth 9 Amendments to the United States Constitution. In the text, we have rejected the 10 assertion that the superior court committed error under California law.

10 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 200-02.

11 Stramaglia’s Drug Use

12 Petitioner makes much of Stramaglia’s drug use and abuse. He complains trial counsel 13 failed to make an offer of proof concerning its relevance, to request an in camera review of 14 evidence that could have established that relevancy, or to lay a foundation for questioning 15 Stramaglia about drug use and addiction. (ECF No. 330 at 299-302, 340-45.)

16 To begin, Petitioner ignores trial counsel Holmes’s declaration on the subject, revealing 17 the defense position on Stramaglia’s drug use to be a tactical one. Holmes declared in September 18 1999 that other than questions pertaining to “Stramaglia’s drug use at the time of the crime and at 19 the time of her testimony,” or in the event of any denial on her part of past drug use that “the trial 20 court’s ruling that she could be impeached with it,” “the defense did not believe that Stramaglia’s 21 past drug use was relevant.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136.)<sup>32</sup>

22 _____
23 <sup>32</sup> Defense counsels were not precluded from all inquiry into this area; rather the trial court 24 limited the inquiries into whether or not Stramaglia was under the influence at the time of the 25 incident or at the time of her testimony, and that in the event she was to deny ever using drugs, 26 defense counsel would be permitted to impeach her. “[T]he Constitution leaves to the judges who 27 must make these decisions ‘wide latitude’ to exclude evidence that is ‘repetitive ..., only 28 marginally relevant’ or poses an undue risk of ‘harassment, prejudice, [or] confusion of the issues.’” Crane v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 683, 689-90 (1986) (quoting Delaware v. Van Arsdall, 475 U.S. 673, 679 (1986)); see also Taylor v. Illinois, 484 U.S. 400, 410-11 (1988) (defendant’s right to present evidence is not absolute for defendant must comply with established rules of evidence and procedure). In California, the trial court enjoys “wide discretion” in determining the relevancy of evidence. People v. Green, 27 Cal. 3d 1, 19 (1980) (abrogated on other grounds by

1 Mr. Gable's 2004 declaration states that had he known about Roxanne Simpkins 2 statements concerning Stramaglia – that she exchanged sex for drugs, would do or say anything 3 for drugs, and had been provided money to purchase heroin to avoid withdrawals during 4 testimony in Korves trial – Gable “would certainly have cross-examined” Stramaglia about those 5 statements. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 63.) Gable's declaration does not deny at the time of 6 trial the team believed Stramaglia's past drug use was irrelevant. And, Gable's declaration 7 potentially invites the “distorting effects of hindsight” that are to be avoided when this court 8 considers an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 669; Richter, 562
9 U.S. at 107. Gable's 2009 declaration does not address the subject. (ECF No. 320, Ex. 160.)

10 Further, Petitioner's citation to page 2586 of the Reporter's Transcript, indicating counsel 11 “intended to impeach Stramaglia with evidence of her drug use,” is accurate to the degree Mr.
12 Gable noted that if Stramaglia were to testify “she's never taken cocaine or heroin,” such a 13 statement “becomes relevant to impeach her,” after agreeing that her drug use would be relevant 14 “at the time she's testifying or at the time of the act.” That same record citation, however, does 15 not establish that “counsel failed to anticipate the impeaching nature of Stramaglia's drug use and 16 addiction.” (ECF No. 330 at 340.) In fact, Mr. Gable's statements during the discussion and 17 argument that followed the People's motion seeking to limit the information about drug usage (13 18 RT 2580-81, 2585-86), mirror the strategy reflected in Mr. Holmes's declaration on this issue, to 19 wit: Stramaglia's drug use was relevant only as to “use at the time of the crime and at the time of 20 her testimony,” as well as in the event she “denied past drug use, she could be impeached with it 21 ... [o]ther than these three areas, the defense did not believe that Stramaglia's past drug use was 22

23 People v. Martinez, 20 Cal. 4th 225 (1999)). Notably, the Confrontation Clause guarantees an 24 opportunity for effective cross-examination, not cross-examination that is effective in whatever 25 way, and to whatever extent, the defense might wish. See Delaware v. Fensterer, 474 U.S. 15, 20 26 (1985) (per curiam). In this case, Stramaglia testified she had not taken any controlled substance 27 the night before the incident, nor did she drink any alcohol. (13 RT 2651-52.) She was not 28 asked whether she was under the influence of any substance at the time of the rape.
Nevertheless, there was testimony from which it could be inferred she was not under the influence of any substance at the time of the rape, to wit: she went to bed about 4:00 a.m. and awoke just before noon to find Petitioner masturbating in her bedroom. (13 RT 2619-23; 1 CT 177-78.)

1 relevant.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5254.)

2 At trial in this matter, on cross-examination, Stramaglia denied using drugs the night 3 before the rape, when she first met Petitioner. (13 RT 2651.) She also specifically denied “using 4 coke” or “shooting heroin” that evening. (13 RT 2652.) In California, testimony as to narcotic 5 addiction, or expert testimony as to the effects of the use of such drugs, is not considered 6 admissible in order to impeach the witness unless followed by testimony showing that the witness 7 was, inter alia, under the influence of drugs at the time of the events in testimony. People v.
8 Hernandez, 63 Cal.App.3d 393, 405 (1976); People v. Smith, 4 Cal.App.3d 403 (1970).

9 Stramaglia was not asked at trial whether she was under the influence of drugs at the time of the 10 rape. However, she testified that she went to bed at 4:00 a.m. and awoke just before noon to find 11 Petitioner masturbating at the foot of her bed. One can infer from her testimony – consistent with 12 that offered on the subject at the preliminary hearing in this matter – that she was not under the 13 influence at that time. Thus, counsel would not have been deficient for failing to present 14 evidence of Stramaglia’s addiction in these circumstances, over and above their chosen trial 15 strategy.

16 There is a strong presumption that counsel acted for tactical reasons rather than through 17 sheer neglect. Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 191. The reviewing court therefore must not simply give 18 counsel the benefit of the doubt but instead must affirmatively entertain the range of possible 19 reasons counsel may have had for proceeding as he did. Id. at 196. The California Supreme 20 Court could have reasonably concluded that trial counsel elected not to pursue inquiry into 21 Stramaglia’s drug use and/or addiction as a matter of trial strategy. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101.

22 Petitioner also contends counsel was ineffective for failing to impeach Stramaglia in the 23 form of evidence that she traded sex for drugs. (ECF No. 330 at 340-42.) At the preliminary 24 hearing of October 16, 1987, Stramaglia testified that Petitioner did not pay her with either money 25 or drugs in exchange for sex. (1 CT 200.) Mr. Holmes asked Stramaglia if she had “ever 26 accepted cocaine or any other drug in exchange for the act of prostitution;” she answered “No.”
27 (1 CT 201.) The prosecution objected, argument was heard, and ultimately the magistrate 28 sustained the objection on the ground of relevance; the answer was stricken. (1 CT 201-04.) Mr.

1 Holmes stated that Stramaglia “appeared to be kind of slurring [her] words a little bit,” and asked 2 her whether she felt “okay at this time?” (1 CT 205.) Stramaglia denied being ill or under the 3 influence of any drug, including heroin or cocaine, or using any other controlled substance within 4 the preceding twenty-four hours. (1 CT 206-07.)<sup>33</sup> At trial, Stramaglia was not asked whether 5 she traded drugs for sex.

6 Petitioner argues that had the information been presented, the jury would have learned 7 from Roxanne Simpkins that Stramaglia regularly traded sex for drugs. He points to Simpkins’ 8 February 18, 1999, declaration: “It was common for Sandra Stramaglia and me to lie or be 9 deceptive in order to obtain drugs or whatever we needed. It was also common for Sandra 10 Stramaglia and me to trade drugs for sex.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX at 1841.)

11 As pointed out by Respondent, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably 12 concluded that there is no evidence Roxanne Simpkins would have testified in 1987 to the 13 information contained in her declaration of 1999. This is a reasonable inference where there is 14 other evidence in the record that had Roxanne Simpkins testified at trial, her testimony could 15 have been harmful to Petitioner.

16 Specifically, when Roxanne Simpkins was interviewed on May 25, 1987, her statement to 17 Detective Adam recited an incident involving Petitioner on May 12, 1987, the day she first met 18 him. He became angry because Roxanne and “Gloria” left him out of a drug deal. He locked 19 Roxanne in the bathroom after throwing “$5 on top of the toilet and [taking] what he wanted” of 20 the drugs purchased by the two women. (ECF No. 302, Vol. III, Ex. 8 at 536.) Roxanne 21 Simpkins was afraid of Petitioner; he had to be “talked [] down” and told to “lighten up” by 22 others present. (ECF No. 302, Vol. III, Ex. 8 at 536.) Simpkins also told the detective:

23 24 Mannie was raping my sister Sandra when Tony walked in on the rape. Tony went and 25 got my brother and some other people and returned to the apartment. Mannie left the 26 <sup>33</sup> Magistrate George Nicholson noted that from his perspective, he did not “detect any slurring of 27 the witness’ speech at all;” rather he did “detect a stress.” (1 CT 207.) He added: “I wouldn’t 28 want the record to have only the indication of your opinion and conclusion as to her speech pattern because I - - that’s your personal observation and I want the record to reflect that.” (1 CT 207.)

1 apartment, but returned shortly with a butcher knife, and he had a pistol, but they thought 2 it was a fake one. I was told this by my brother.

3 (Id. at 536.) Certainly, there is evidence in the record that Roxanne Simpkins believed Petitioner 4 had raped Stramaglia in May 1987. Notably too, the record contains indications that near the 5 time of Petitioner’s trial in 1989, Stramaglia and Roxanne Simpkins remained close. (13 RT 6 2633 [Stramaglia: “we refer to each other as sisters, we’ve be friends so long. We frequently 7 refer to each other as sisters. We’ve be together for years”]; 16 RT 3535 [Anthony Simpkins:
8 “real good friend with my sister and our family”], 3553-54.) Roxanne Simpkins’ 1999 9 declaration – about 12 years after Petitioner’s trial - does not speak to the relationship between 10 she and Stramaglia as it then existed.
11

12 Further, had Roxanne Simpkins been called to testify at Petitioner’s trial, and, even 13 assuming she would have testified as to the content of her 1999 declaration, Simpkins’ credibility 14 would have been subject to scrutiny. Trial counsel clearly had access to Simpkins’ statement 15 given in May 1987 and would have been aware that putting her on the stand would have allowed 16 the prosecution the opportunity to impeach her with facts harmful to Petitioner. The ultimate 17 decision not to call witnesses at trial is well within counsel's “full authority to manage the conduct 18 of the trial.” Taylor v. Illinois, 484 U.S. at 418; Eggleston v. U.S., 798 F.2d 374, 376 (9th Cir.
19 1986).
20

21 It is also significant to note that Roxanne Simpkins’ 1999 declaration asserting the 22 prosecution provided she and Stramaglia with money to purchase heroin prior to their testimony 23 “in a Sacramento County case in which a defendant was charged with rape-murder” is not 24 credible. The record establishes the only case in which Stramaglia and Roxanne Simpkins were 25 called as “prosecution witnesses” is the Korves case. That case did not involve a “rape-murder.”
26 In Korves, the case against the defendant involved a rape allegation by Simpkins, and an assault 27 charge stemming from Stramaglia jumping out of Korves’s moving vehicle after he pulled a knife 28

1 on her. There was no murder charge. And the case wherein Stramaglia testified as a prosecution
2 witness that did involve murder was Petitioner's case; however, Roxanne Simpkins did not testify 3 for either the prosecution or the defense.

4           Lastly, Petitioner's assertions about the purported benefits of any testimony that Roxanne 5 Simpkins could have offered at trial fail to recognize that Simpkins would have suffered from the 6 same credibility problems he attributes to Stramaglia: prostitution, willingness to trade sex for 7 drugs, drug use and addiction, et cetera. It is reasonable to infer from Simpkins' declaration that 8 she too possesses a criminal history involving convictions for prostitution and drug-related 9 offenses, as does Stramaglia. The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded 10 that the defense team elected not to call Roxanne Simpkins as a witness because its focus and 11 strategy did not involve Stramaglia's drug use or addiction. Alternatively, that court could have 12 concluded that Simpkins' statement in May of 1987 – close in time to Petitioner's trial - would 13 have been more harmful to Petitioner than any potential benefit, even had Simpkins been willing 14 to testify. Hence, it could have reasonably concluded that defense counsels were not ineffective.
15 In sum, fair-minded jurists could find the state court's ruling consistent with Supreme Court 16 precedent. Richter, 562 U.S. at 102, 105.

17           The California Supreme Court's determination on direct appeal that Petitioner did not 18 preserve his claim pertaining to the use of Stramaglia's misdemeanor prostitution convictions for 19 impeachment purposes is reasonable because the ruling does not violate federal law, either by 20 infringing upon a specific federal constitutional or statutory provision or by depriving him of a 21 fundamentally fair trial guaranteed by due process. Pulley v. Harris, 465 U.S. 37, 41 (1984).
22 That court's statement that "the superior court might well have been persuaded" had he argued 23 the evidence was admissible does not equate to a denial of due process that deprived him of a fair 24 trial. Id.

2 Possession of Hypodermic Syringe (before trial)

3 With regard to Petitioner's argument that the trial court's ruling limiting the use of 4 Stramaglia's prior misdemeanor convictions and belated rape complaint was error, the California 5 Supreme Court's determination of the claim on direct appeal is neither contrary to, nor an 6 unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent.

8 As the state's highest court initially pointed out, Petitioner waived his claim for purposes 9 of appeal by failing to raise the issue in the trial court. In general, a state court's evidentiary 10 ruling is not subject to federal habeas review unless the ruling violates federal law, either by 11 infringing upon a specific federal constitutional or statutory provision or by depriving the 12 defendant of the fundamentally fair trial guaranteed by due process. See Pulley v. Harris, 465 13 U.S. at 41. States have considerable latitude under the Constitution to establish rules excluding 14 evidence from criminal trials. Holmes v. South Carolina, 547 U.S. 319, 324 (2006).
15

16 “[A] trial judge may exclude or limit evidence to prevent excessive consumption of time, 17 undue prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury. The trial judge enjoys broad 18 latitude in this regard, so long as the rulings are not arbitrary or disproportionate.” Menendez v.
19 Terhune, 422 F.3d 1012, 1033 (9th Cir. 2005) (citations omitted); see Montana v. Egelhoff, 518 20 U.S. 37, 42-43 (1996) (holding due process rights are not violated by exclusion of relevant 21 evidence where probative value is outweighed by danger of prejudice or confusion).
22

23 The Supreme Court “has never held that the Confrontation Clause entitles a criminal 24 defendant to introduce extrinsic evidence for impeachment purposes. [Citations.]” Nevada v.
25 Jackson, 569 U.S. 505, 512 (2013). The high court explained:

26 The Constitution guarantees criminal defendants a meaningful opportunity to 27 present a complete defense, but we have also recognized that state and federal rulemakers 28 have broad latitude under the Constitution to establish rules excluding evidence from criminal trials. Only rarely have we held that the right to present a complete defense was

1 violated by the exclusion of defense evidence under a state rule of evidence.

3 Petitioner's exhibits do not include a criminal history printout for Stramaglia dated near 4 the time of trial; therefore, it is not known what arrests, warrants, and convictions appeared then.
5 Rather, a February 2001 criminal history has been provided. That document reflects an arrest by 6 the Sacramento Police Department on June 27, 1986, on an outstanding warrant for possessing a 7 hypodermic needle or syringe. The following related notations appear: "DISPO:RELEASED" 8 and "COM: ENROUTE TO PLACER ON WARR NBR CR 21848." (ECF No. 302, Vol. II, Ex.
9 8 at 238; see also ECF No. 302, Vol. IV, Ex. 8 at 710.) On October 22, 1986, the same agency 10 arrested Stramaglia, apparently on the same warrant: "ROSEVILLE PD WARR NBR CR21848."
11 (Id. at 238.) Another arrest entry dated February 2, 1987, references the same warrant: "WARR 12 NBR CR21848 PLACER COUNTY SHERIFF." (Id. at 238-39.) There are no corresponding 13 court-related or conviction entries, nor further references pertaining to the warrant or Placer 14 County on the criminal history report. (Id. at 238-43.)<sup>34</sup> Apparently, no records pertaining to the 15 Placer County arrest exist. (ECF No. 302, Vol. IV, Ex. 8 at 930-39.)

16 An arrest report form prepared by officers of the Sacramento Police Department, dated 17 October 22, 1986, also references warrant number CR21848 originating with the Roseville Police 18 Department regarding possession of a syringe. (ECF No. 302, Vol. II, Ex. 8 at 274.) An arrest 19 report form, also completed by the Sacramento Police Department, dated September 3, 1987, 20 references Placer County warrant number CR21848, but this arrest does not appear on the 21 <sup>34</sup> In July 1988, trial counsel sought "[r]ecords of any felony convictions of any persons who are 22 called to testify in this action." (3 CT 523.) Arrest information was sought specifically for those 23 "investigated as suspects for any the offenses charged . . ." (3 CT 523-24.) Further, the 24 government was to "[p]rovide criminal charges pending [in] this county and any other county in 25 the State of California as disclosed by CI&I rap sheets against any potential witnesses . . ." (3 CT 26 525.) The points and authorities associated Gable's motion for discovery, cited, without analysis, 27 to Hill v. Superior Court, 10 Cal.3d 812 (1974), Engstrom v. Superior Court, 20 Ca.App.3d 240 (1971), People v. Sims, 8 Cal.App.3d 599 (1970), People v. Allen, 77 Cal.App.3d 924 (1978), People v. Coyer, 142 Cal.App.3d 839 (1983), and Evidence Code section 1103(a). (3 CT 528-35.) Counsel also sought notification "of the existence of any informant used in connection with the investigation or prosecution of the pending matter." (3 CT 524.)

28 Judge Ronald W. Tochterman granted Petitioner's motion for discovery of these items on July 15, 1988. (3 CT 543; see also 1 RT 98-101.)

1 and 68153. (ECF No. 302, Vol. IV, Ex. 8 at 836, 840, 901.)

2 The above-information appears to substantiate Stramaglia’s criminal history as referenced 3 in the trial record, to wit: “she has no felony conviction, but she does have a number of [Pen.
4 Code, § 647]B’s” (13 RT 2582 [emphasis added]), and “[s]he’s got misdemeanor B’s, a number 5 of them” (13 RT 2585). The prosecutor’s references arose during a colloquy specifically 6 concerning Stramaglia’s prostitution activities. And, as Respondent points out, defense counsel 7 did not correct the prosecutor’s recounting to include any further arrests or convictions of any 8 kind.

9 Analysis

10 At the time of Petitioner’s trial, misdemeanor convictions were generally inadmissible to 11 impeach a witness’s credibility at trial. Following Petitioner’s trial, the California Supreme Court 12 decided People v. Wheeler, 4 Cal.4th 284 (1992), wherein it held misdemeanor conduct that 13 constitutes a crime of moral turpitude is admissible to impeach a witness, and that prostitution is a 14 crime of moral turpitude. Wheeler, at 297. Possession of a hypodermic syringe however – 15 whether arrested for or convicted of - does not amount to a crime of moral turpitude for purposes 16 of impeachment. People v. Anderson, 20 Cal.3d 647, 650 (1978) (“evidence of ... prior arrests is 17 inadmissible”); People v. Castro 38 Cal.3d 301, 317 (1985) (misdemeanors are proper for 18 impeachment only when they involve moral turpitude).

19 At the time of Petitioner’s trial, Stramaglia’s misdemeanor convictions were generally 20 inadmissible to impeach her credibility. As such, it would have been reasonable for the 21 California Supreme Court to conclude trial counsel was not deficient for failing to impeach 22 Stramaglia’s credibility on that basis. Furthermore, even after the California Supreme Court 23 decided Wheeler, permitting impeachment of a misdemeanor conviction involving moral 24 turpitude, Stramaglia’s prior convictions for possession of a hypodermic needle remained 25 inadmissible and, hence, did not give rise to any deficiency on the part of trial counsel. Richter, 26 562 U.S. at 101-03.

27 Even assuming for the sake of argument that counsel was deficient for failing to question 28 Stramaglia about her misdemeanor arrests and/or convictions for purposes of impeachment, 1 Petitioner cannot show prejudice.

2 At trial, Stramaglia testified she earned her living as a prostitute before recently retiring.
3 (13 RT 2616.) In addition to the jury learning Stramaglia was working as a prostitute at the time 4 of the crime alleged against Petitioner, it also learned a number of facts that the jury would have 5 considered as going to her credibility on direct examination, to wit: she lived with her 6 boyfriend/fiancé and then 11-year-old son in an apartment on Boxwood and had “guests from 7 time to time” (13 RT 2615); people regularly congregated outside the apartment, drinking and 8 smoking (13 RT 2617); she stayed up late and went to bed at 4:00 a.m. on a Wednesday, 9 apparently not waking to ensure her son ate breakfast or got to school (13 RT 2619-21); her son 10 slept in the dining room as she and her boyfriend used the only bedroom (13 RT 2619-20); 11 “several people,” “three, maybe four people” slept in her living room the evening before the 12 incident (13 RT 2620); and she did not immediately file a police report because “[p]eople don’t 13 usually care about prostitutes” (13 RT 2639). On cross-examination, the jury learned Stramaglia 14 did not actually rent the apartment, that she did not recall the name of the friend who did, and she 15 did not pay any rent because the apartments were to be condemned (13 RT 2643-44); she did not 16 completely support herself via prostitution, receiving welfare assistance when not “sanctioned” 17 (13 RT 2646); and “[s]ometimes the dates would drive by” the front of the apartment (13 RT 18 2647). In light of all this information for the jury’s consideration, Petitioner cannot show 19 prejudice from a limitation or omission regarding Stramaglia’s misdemeanor convictions for 20 prostitution. Further, Stramaglia was also impeached with her preliminary hearing testimony as 21 to whether or not Petitioner removed her nightgown (13 RT 2663-64), how far along the sexual 22 act was when Black Tony walked in (13 RT 2667-69), and how much of Petitioner’s knife she 23 saw (13 RT 2680-82).

24 Stramaglia was an admitted prostitute living an unsavory lifestyle, one to which her young 25 son was subjected. Impeaching her credibility on the basis of three misdemeanor convictions for 26 prostitution, or arrests for misdemeanor possession of hypodermic syringes, would likely not have 27 made any difference in the jury’s verdict. Further, her testimony that she was raped and did not 28 consent to sexual relations with Petitioner was partially corroborated by the testimony of Anthony

1 Simpkins. (16 RT 3535-37 [awoke to Sandy screaming], 3538 & 3589 [black man named Tony 2 leaving her apartment; told him to “let it be”], 3541-42 [Petitioner carrying knife], 3543 & 3550
3 [Sandy “semi-hysterical”], 3543-44 [Petitioner left and walked toward El Camino], 3545-46 4 [Sandy told him Petitioner had just raped her; Simpkins told Sandy to “calm down” because she 5 was “yelling and babbling”], 3550-51 [Sandy was crying & said she had been raped], 3572 [heard 6 screams], 3574 [same], 3577 [“Nippy” also heard screams], 3579 [Sandy was hysterical], 3580 &
7 3582-83 [Petitioner walking toward El Camino], 3582 [Sandy crying when he arrived], 3589-90 8 [Sandy screaming and calling for Mike], 3597-99 [saw Petitioner walk towards El Camino after 9 leaving Sandy’s apartment carrying knife], 3601-03 [Petitioner had what looked like a butcher 10 knife].)

11 Moreover, Petitioner’s actions immediately following his encounter with Stramaglia were 12 also before the jury: after leaving Stramaglia’s apartment, he stole a vehicle parked just down the 13 block and took off at a high rate of speed. (13 RT 2688-730; 17 RT 3813-21.) That conduct 14 plainly infers guilt. Therefore, it is not likely that had the jury learned that Stramaglia had 15 suffered three misdemeanor convictions for prostitution and that she’d been arrested for 16 possessing hypodermic syringes, it would have concluded that she consented to sex with 17 Petitioner, thereby finding him not guilty of rape. While remotely conceivable, it was not 18 reasonably likely the jury would have returned a different verdict. Richter, 562 U.S. at 111 19 (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. at 696).

20 The undersigned finds Stramaglia’s credibility was sufficiently challenged at trial. Even if 21 trial counsel had confronted Stramaglia with prostitution convictions or other misdemeanor 22 arrests, there is no “reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result 23 of the proceeding would have been different.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. For the foregoing 24 reasons, it would have been reasonable for the California Supreme Court to conclude defense 25 counsel were not ineffective. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03.

26 Right to Present Defense & to Confront Witnesses

27 Similarly, Petitioner did not suffer a constitutional violation of his right to present a 28 defense nor of his right to confront the witnesses against him on these same bases.

1           The Confrontation Clause provides that “[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall 2 enjoy the right...to be confronted with the witnesses against him....” U.S. Const. Amend. VI. It 3 is well settled that, under the Sixth Amendment, an accused has the right to present witnesses, 4 testimony and other evidence in his defense. See Washington v. Texas, 388 U.S. 14, 19 (1967).
5 However, “[t]he accused does not have an unfettered right to offer testimony that is incompetent, 6 privileged, or otherwise inadmissible under standard rules of evidence.” Taylor v. Illinois, 484 7 U.S. at 409-10. States have considerable latitude under the Constitution to establish rules 8 excluding evidence from criminal trials. Holmes v. South Carolina, 547 U.S. at 324. The 9 Confrontation Clause does not prevent a trial judge from imposing “reasonable limits on such 10 cross-examination based on concerns about, among other things, harassment, prejudice, confusion 11 of the issues, the witness' safety, or interrogation that is repetitive or only marginally relevant.” 12 Delaware v. Van Arsdall, 475 U.S. at 679. “[A] trial judge may exclude or limit evidence to 13 prevent excessive consumption of time, undue prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading 14 the jury. The trial judge enjoys broad latitude in this regard, so long as the rulings are not 15 arbitrary or disproportionate.” Menendez v. Terhune, 422 F.3d at 1033 (citations omitted); see 16 Montana v. Egelhoff, 518 U.S. at 42-43 (holding due process rights are not violated by exclusion 17 of relevant evidence where probative value is outweighed by danger of prejudice or confusion).

18           The Supreme Court “has never held that the Confrontation Clause entitles a criminal 19 defendant to introduce extrinsic evidence for impeachment purposes. [Citations.]” Nevada v.
20 Jackson, 569 U.S. at 512. The high court explained:

22           The Constitution guarantees criminal defendants a meaningful opportunity to 23 present a complete defense, but we have also recognized that state and federal rulemakers 24 have broad latitude under the Constitution to establish rules excluding evidence from 25 criminal trials. Only rarely have we held that the right to present a complete defense was 26 violated by the exclusion of defense evidence under a state rule of evidence.

27 Id., at 509 (internal citations & quotation marks omitted).

28           Confrontation Clause errors are subject to harmless-error analysis. Winzer v. Hall, 494 F.3d 1192, 1201 (9th Cir. 2007). Errors are harmless if they do not have a “substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury's verdict.” Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S.

1 at 623; Winzer, 494 F.3d at 1201.

2 Petitioner is entitled to “a meaningful opportunity to present a complete defense,” Crane 3 v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 683, 690 (1986), and “states may not impede a defendant's right to put on a 4 defense by imposing mechanistic ... or arbitrary ... rules of evidence,” LaGrand v. Stewart, 133 5 F.3d 1253, 1266 (9th Cir. 1998). Nonetheless, “state and federal rulemakers have broad latitude 6 under the Constitution to establish rules excluding evidence from criminal trials.” United States 7 v. Scheffer, 523 U.S. 303, 308, (1998); see also Montana v. Egelhoff, 518 U.S. at 53 (“the 8 introduction of relevant evidence can be limited by the State for a ‘valid’ reason”).

9 The California Supreme Court could have concluded that the trial judge’s limits regarding 10 Stramaglia’s drug use were reasonable. Delaware v. Van Arsdall, 475 U.S. at 679. Certainly, it 11 could have concluded that his rulings were neither arbitrary nor disproportionate. Menendez v.
12 Terhune, 422 F.3d at 1033. Petitioner was permitted to present admissible evidence concerning 13 Stramaglia’s drug use. He was not denied his right to present evidence in the form of 14 Stramaglia’s addiction because there was no evidence she was under the influence of any drug at 15 the time of the rape. Simply put, Petitioner was not denied the right to present a meaningful 16 defense. Nevada v. Jackson, 569 U.S. at 509; Crane v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. at 690.

17 Even if the California Supreme Court erred in concluding there were no violations of the 18 Confrontation Clause, any such errors were harmless. Given the evidence presented at trial that 19 corroborated Stramaglia’s testimony that Petitioner raped her, any error in excluding the evidence 20 of Stramaglia’s drug use would not have had a substantial influence on the jury’s verdict. Despite 21 credibility issues, Stramaglia’s testimony was corroborated by that of Anthony Simpkins. (16 RT 22 3535-37 [awoke to Sandy screaming], 3538 & 3589 [black man named Tony leaving her 23 apartment; told him to “let it be”], 3541-42 [Petitioner carrying knife], 3543 & 3550 [Sandy 24 “semi-hysterical”], 3543-44 [Petitioner left and walked toward El Camino], 3545-46 [Sandy told 25 him Petitioner had just raped her; Simpkins told Sandy to “calm down” because she was “yelling 26 and babbling”], 3550-51 [Sandy was crying & said she had been raped], 3572 [heard screams], 27 3574 [same], 3577 [“Nippy” also heard screams], 3579 [Sandy was hysterical], 3580 & 3582-83 28 [Petitioner walking toward El Camino], 3582 [Sandy crying when he arrived], 3589-90 [Sandy

1 screaming and calling for Mike], 3597-99 [saw Petitioner walk towards El Camino after leaving 2 Sandy’s apartment carrying knife], 3601-03 [Petitioner had what looked like a butcher knife].)
3 Her testimony was also indirectly bolstered by the testimony of Edwin Glidewell. (13 RT 2688-4 2730; 17 RT 3813-3821.) In fact, the jury reached its verdicts as to all crimes alleged against 5 Petitioner – including the rape of Stramaglia – in the first two days of its deliberations. (See 6 CT 6 1276-80 [all verdict forms related to Petitioner’s crimes dated June 6 & 7].)<sup>35</sup> The excluded 7 evidence did not have a “substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury’s 8 verdict.” Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. at 623.

9 Korves Matter, Retirement, Subsequent Arrest & Probation, 10 And Law Enforcement Relationship

11 Petitioner contends that had his jury known that when Stramaglia testified at his trial that 12 “she believed the police would not care about her rape allegation against Petitioner,” it had 13 already been “demonstrated to Ms. Stramaglia” as a part of the Korves case “that authorities did 14 care about prostitutes and would respond to their complaints,” the jury would have rejected her 15 testimony. (ECF No. 330 at 347.) Further, Petitioner complains the prosecutor knew she was 16 “not reluctant to report an alleged rape, and yet he deliberately elicited testimony from her to the 17 contrary.” (Id. at 347.) He claims that had the jury “disbelieved Stramaglia about the reason for 18 her delay in reporting the alleged rape by Petitioner, there is a reasonable probability that the jury 19 would have disbelieved Stramaglia’s testimony in other respects, including whether she had been 20 raped at all.” (Id. at 348.)

21 Additionally, Petitioner maintains Stramaglia’s “relationship with law enforcement would 22 have made her more, not less, likely to report rape.” (ECF No. 330 at 348.) He points to the 23 involvement of Detective Terry Brown as the lead detective in both the Korves matter and this 24 one, her relationship with Officer Lister, and the prosecution’s failure to “disclose that she was 25 his informant.” (ECF Doc. 330 at 348.)

codefendant. (6 CT 1282 [minutes reflecting Ross verdicts reached June 8 & 9].)

The Applicable Legal Standards

The court may grant habeas relief on a prosecutorial misconduct claim only if the misconduct rises to the level of a due process violation. Sechrest v. Ignacio, 549 F.3d 789, 807 (9th Cir. 2008). A violation of a defendant’s rights occurs if the government knowingly uses false evidence in obtaining a conviction. Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150, 153-54 (1971); Napue v. Illinois, 360 U.S. 264, 269 (1959). It is clearly established that “a conviction obtained by the knowing use of perjured testimony must be set aside if there is any reasonable likelihood that the false testimony could have affected the jury’s verdict. United States v. Bagley, 473 U.S. 667, 680 n.9 (1985); see also Morales v. Woodford, 388 F.3d 1159, 1179 (9th Cir. 2004) (“The due process requirement voids a conviction where the false evidence is ‘known to be such by representatives of the State’”) (quoting Napue, 360 U.S. at 269). Due process is violated in such circumstances regardless of whether the false testimony was obtained through the active conduct of the prosecutor, or was unsolicited. Napue, 360 U.S. at 269 (“[t]he same result obtains when the State, although not soliciting false evidence, allows it to go uncorrected when it appears”); Hysler v Florida, 315 U.S. 411 (1942); Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U.S. 103 (1935). This rule applies even where the false testimony goes only to the credibility of the witness. Napue, 360 U.S. at 269; Hayes v. Brown, 399 F.3d 972, 986 (9th Cir. 2005).

To establish a claim where a prosecutor has purportedly introduced perjured testimony, the petitioner must first establish that the testimony was false. United States v. Polizzi, 801 F.2d 1543, 1549-50 (9th Cir. 1986). Next, the petitioner must demonstrate that the prosecution knowingly used the perjured testimony. Id. And lastly, the petitioner must show that the false testimony was material. United States v. Juno-Arce, 339 F.3d 886, 889 (9th Cir. 2003). False evidence is material “if there is any reasonable likelihood that the false [evidence] could have affected the judgment of the jury.” Hein v. Sullivan, 601 F.3d 897, 908 (9th Cir. 2010) (quoting Bagley, 473 U.S. at 678). Mere speculation regarding these factors is insufficient to meet the required burden on the petitioner. United States v. Aichele, 941 F.2d 761, 766 (9th Cir. 1991).

In Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), the United States Supreme Court held “that the suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused upon request violates due

1 process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment, irrespective of the good 2 faith or bad faith of the prosecution.” 373 U.S. at 87. The duty to disclose such evidence is 3 applicable even though there has been no request by the accused. United States v. Agurs, 427
4 U.S. 97, 107 (1976). The duty encompasses impeachment evidence in addition to exculpatory 5 evidence. Bagley, 473 U.S. at 676. A Brady violation may also occur when the government fails 6 to turn over evidence that is “known only to police investigators and not to the prosecutor.”
7 Youngblood v. West Virginia, 547 U.S. 867, 870 (2006) (quoting Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S.
8 419, 437, 438 (1995) [“the individual prosecutor has a duty to learn of any favorable evidence 9 known to the others acting on the government’s behalf in the case, including the police”]).

10 As stated in Strickler v. Greene, 527 U.S. 263, 281-82 (1999), three components are 11 required to establish a Brady violation: “[t]he evidence at issue must be favorable to the accused, 12 either because it is exculpatory, or because it is impeaching; the evidence must have been 13 suppressed by the State, either willfully or inadvertently; and prejudice must have ensued.” See 14 also Banks v. Dretke, 540 U.S. 668, 691 (2004); Silva v. Brown, 416 F.3d 980, 985 (9th Cir.
15 2005). “The prosecutor, although ‘not required to deliver his entire file to defense counsel,’ is 16 required to turn over evidence that is both favorable to the defendant and material to the case.”
17 Amado v. Gonzalez, 758 F.3d 1119, 1134 (9th Cir. 2014) (quoting Bagley, 473 U.S. at 675).

18 A defendant is prejudiced by a Brady violation if the evidence that was not produced is 19 material. Amado v. Gonzalez, 758 F.3d at 1134. Evidence is material if “‘there is a reasonable 20 probability’ that the result of the trial would have been different if the suppressed documents had 21 been disclosed to the defense.” Strickler, 527 U.S. at 289. “The question is not whether 22 petitioner would more likely than not have received a different verdict with the evidence, but 23 whether ‘in its absence he received a fair trial, understood as a trial resulting in a verdict worthy 24 of confidence.” Id. (quoting Kyles, 514 U.S. at 434); see also Silva, 416 F.3d at 986. Once the 25 materiality of the suppressed evidence is established, no further harmless error analysis is 26 required. Kyles, 514 U.S. at 435-36; Silva, 416 F.3d at 986. “When the government has 27 suppressed material evidence favorable to the defendant, the conviction must be set aside.” Silva, 28 416 F.3d at 986.

1                   Analysis

2                                   Testimony about reporting or not reporting

3                   The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that Petitioner could not 4 establish that Stramaglia’s testimony during his trial was false. Of note, Stramaglia testified that 5 she did not think “people” cared about prostitutes; she did not use the word “police.” Moreover, 6 neither Stramaglia’s testimony nor the testimony of Officer Ramsey in the Korves matter can be 7 said to be “contrary” to Stramaglia’s testimony in this case.

8                   In Korves, Stramaglia testified that she had been previously raped and stabbed. (ECF No.
9 302, Vol. I, Ex. 7 at 142.) When asked whether she urged Roxanne Simpkins – the victim of the 10 rape crime alleged in the Korves case – to report, Stramaglia testified Simpkins was “afraid” to 11 tell the police; Stramaglia told Simpkins she herself had “talked to the police a couple weeks” 12 after her own rape and “they told [her she] wouldn’t have been in trouble” if she had reported it 13 herself. (Id. at 150.) Stramaglia told Simpkins it was “perfectly okay,” and encouraged her to tell 14 “them right now before it’s too late.” (Id. at 150.) On cross-examination in Korves, when asked 15 whether she reported the rape and stabbing that happened to her, Stramaglia replied, “I didn’t 16 really report it offic - - I did, Ramsey, the same – just happens to be the same officer that was 17 there on the scene, and I had talked to her before about it.” (Id. at 154.) Later, her reply was 18 clarified:

19                                   Q. You say you were raped at the same time you were stabbed?

20                                   A. Yeah. I was raped and stabbed about a month before all this happened.

21                                   Q. And Officer Ramsey was arresting you on a warrant for some charge?

22                                   A. Yeah.

23                                   Q. You told Officer Ramsey that you were raped and stabbed?

24                                   A. Yeah. When we got up to the police station she noticed the wound on the back 25 of my neck. She wanted to know about it. And I told her about it. I hadn’t report that 26 rape because I was afraid to.

27                                   Q. And you didn’t report that rape until you were arrested for something?

28                                   A. Right.

(ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 7 at 192.)

On redirect, Stramaglia was asked if the wound on her neck was visible at the time of her arrest; she replied no, explaining that Officer Ramsey was “searching” her and “noticed it.” (Id.

1 at 226.) The following colloquy occurred:

2 Q. Did she ask you how you got the wound?

3 A. Yes.

4 Q. Did you tell her?

5 A. Yes.

6 Q. By telling her how you got that wound, were you intending at that point in time 7 - - was it your intention to make a report about being raped and stabbed?

8 A. No. Because at that point in time I was afraid to tell anybody like most of the 9 girls are.

10 Q. All right.

11 A. Most of the girls are afraid because they are going to be in trouble because they 12 are a prostitute. So most of them are scared to death. However, when Roxanne got - - 13 that had already happened to me and Detective Ramsey assured me I wouldn't get in any 14 trouble, and I hadn't gotten in any trouble, and a couple other girls that reported rapes 15 didn't, and I let Roxanne know that when that happened. I said you better get yourself 16 over there and let them know.

17 Q. So what you're telling me is that at least - - well, you and some [of] the other 18 girls were afraid to report rapes because they were afraid to get in trouble for being 19 prostitutes?

20 A. Right.

21 Q. After talking to Diane Ramsey you felt better about being able to report things?

22 A. Yes.

23 (ECF No. 302, Vol. I, Ex. 7 at 226-27.)

24 At Petitioner's trial, when asked whether she reported "this rape to the police," Stramaglia 25 replied, "No, not 'til a day or so later. I told Detective Jim Lister, because he's kind of a friend."
26 (13 RT 2639.) Asked why she did not "immediately report" it to police, she testified: "People 27 don't usually care about prostitutes." (13 RT 2639.)

28 In both instances, Stramaglia elected not to report a rape to police on her own. Rather, in the incident occurring prior to the Korves trial, she told an officer only in response to questions posed of her during the booking process related to an outstanding warrant. Following the rape by Petitioner, again Stramaglia elected not to report it to police on her own, or at least had not yet decided one way or another. (13 RT 2684.) In Korves, she explained most prostitutes were afraid to report a rape for fear they would face charges themselves. In this case, she did not testify she was not afraid or no longer afraid; rather, she expressed a belief that "[p]eople don't usually care about prostitutes." Her statement can be reasonably inferred to mean that some 1 people care and others do not. Those that may not care who are working in a law enforcement 2 capacity may still represent a reason for fear on the part of the prostitute. In other words, 3 Stramaglia's previous experience with Officer Ramsey – someone who did care about the rape of 4 a prostitute – did not necessarily mean she would feel safe in reporting that same crime to another 5 law enforcement officer.<sup>36</sup> Whether Stramaglia feared facing criminal charges herself if she 6 reported a rape is a separate consideration from her beliefs concerning whether others cared about 7 the crime of rape where the victim is a prostitute. United States v. Croft, 124 F.3d 1109, 1119 8 (9th Cir. 1997) (the fact “that a witness may have made an earlier inconsistent statement or that 9 other witnesses have conflicting recollection of events, does not establish that the testimony 10 offered at trial was false”). Furthermore, one's fear of facing criminal charges does not 11 necessarily evaporate with a single positive experience. Fearing prosecution for prostitution is 12 not the same as maintaining a belief that people don't care about whether prostitutes are raped.

13 The first concerns a personal instinct to avoid criminal liability whereas the second concerns a 14 society's judgment about whether a prostitute can even be the victim of a rape. Simply stated, the 15 California Supreme Court could have concluded that Petitioner failed to establish that 16 Stramaglia's testimony was false, the first requirement for establishing a claim that the 17 prosecution introduced perjured testimony. United States v. Polizzi, 801 F.2d at 1549-50;
18 Richter, 562 U.S. at 103.

19 Moreover, Stramaglia testified at Petitioner's preliminary hearing on October 16, 1987, 20 that when she reported the prior rape (as encouraged by Officer Ramsey), no official report was 21 generated because the detectives with whom she spoke just told her to come in and tell them if 22

23 <sup>36</sup> Officer Diane Ramsey's testimony in the Korves matter does not change this conclusion.
24 Regarding her interaction with Stramaglia following Stramaglia's prior arrest on an outstanding 25 warrant, Ramsey testified on cross-examination that she knew Stramaglia prior to the Korves 26 assault and kidnapping. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 67 at 4357.) Ramsey arrested her about a 27 month prior. (Id. at 4357.) In completing the booking report, medical information concerning the 28 arrested person is recorded, including any injuries present. Stramaglia indicated then that she had been “stabbed in the back of the neck” and showed Ramsey “the stitch in the back of the neck.” (Id. at 4357-58.) Learning the injury was tied to a rape, Ramsey told Stramaglia to report it to police, and to report any such attacks against Stramaglia and other prostitutes to police. (Id. at 4358.)

1 she saw the guy again. Thus, while Officer Ramsey was concerned about Stramaglia's report, it 2 might be inferred that the detectives with whom Stramaglia subsequently spoke lacked that same 3 concern. (1 CT 185-86.) Said another way, they were possibly people who didn't care. Which 4 means Stramaglia's testimony was consistent, and not false. Mr. Gable argued the police's lack 5 of action meant Stramaglia's report was false: "They did not even write a formal report ... elected 6 not to do anything about it, which, the inference is, they didn't really feel it was a crime." (13 RT 7 2585.) But Gable's argument was speculation. United States v. Aichele, 427 U.S. 97. Certainly, 8 fairminded jurists could disagree as to the nature of Stramaglia's testimony. Based upon this 9 record, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded Petitioner failed to 10 establish the second requirement - that the prosecutor knowingly used perjured testimony - 11 because the testimony was not false or perjured. United States v. Juno-Arce, 339 F.3d at 889;
12 Richter, 562 U.S. at 103.

13 Even assuming for the sake of discussion the previous two requirements had been met, the 14 state's highest court could also have concluded that Petitioner failed to show the testimony was 15 material. Again, false evidence is material "if there is any reasonable likelihood that the false 16 [evidence] could have affected the judgment of the jury." Hein v. Sullivan, 601 F.3d at 908.

17 This crime is one wherein credibility is important; the victim testified she did not consent 18 to sexual intercourse and Petitioner testified she did. But, whether Stramaglia was no longer 19 afraid to report a rape as she had been in the past, was not reasonably likely to have affected the 20 jury's verdict. Stramaglia's testimony that a rape occurred was corroborated in part by the 21 testimony of Anthony Simpkins. (16 RT 3535-37 [awoke to Sandy screaming], 3538 & 3589 22 [black man named Tony leaving her apartment; told him to "let it be"], 3541-42 [Petitioner 23 carrying knife], 3543 & 3550 [Sandy "semi-hysterical"], 3543-44 [Petitioner left and walked 24 toward El Camino], 3545-46 [Sandy told him Petitioner had just raped her; Simpkins told Sandy 25 to "calm down" because she was "yelling and babbling"], 3550-51 [Sandy was crying & said she 26 had been raped], 3572 [heard screams], 3574 [same], 3577 ["Nippy" also heard screams], 3579 27 [Sandy was hysterical], 3580 & 3582-83 [Petitioner walking toward El Camino], 3582 [Sandy 28 crying when he arrived], 3589-90 [Sandy screaming and calling for Mike], 3597-99 [saw

1 Petitioner walk towards El Camino after leaving Sandy’s apartment carrying knife], 3601-03
2 [Petitioner had what looked like a butcher knife].)

3 Additionally, Stramaglia’s testimony was indirectly corroborated by the testimony of 4 Edwin Glidewell and Officer Michael Tupper regarding the theft of Glidewell’s vehicle minutes 5 after Petitioner left Stramaglia’s apartment, allowing Petitioner to flee the scene of his crime. (13 6 RT 2688-730; 17 RT 3813-21.) See Hovey v. Ayers, 458 F.3d 892, 920 (9th Cir. 2006) 7 (corroborating testimony reduces prejudice of withheld impeachment evidence).

8 The evidence was not material because it could not have affected the judgment of the jury.
9 There is no reasonable probability that had the jury heard Stramaglia’s testimony in the Korves 10 matter concerning the prior rape and reporting or not reporting it, that disclosure would have 11 resulted in the jury acquitting Petitioner of the crime of rape. Stramaglia’s credibility, as noted 12 elsewhere in these Findings, was challenged in a number of ways. Ultimately, the California 13 Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that even absent this evidence, Petitioner 14 received a fair trial and the jury’s verdict was worthy of confidence. Strickler, 527 U.S. at 289; 15 Kyles, 514 U.S. at 434; Silva, 416 F.3d at 986. Thus, the California Supreme Court’s rejection of 16 Petitioner’s claim was not unreasonable as fairminded jurists could disagree. Richter, 562 U.S. at 17 103.

18 Testimony about retirement

19 Petitioner also argues that had he known about Stramaglia’s arrest shortly before trial on 20 June 8, 1988, he could have impeached her testimony at trial that “she retired from prostitution 21 since the alleged rape by Mr. Alvarez in May 1987.” (ECF No. 330 at 343.)

22 Specifically, at trial, on April 11, 1989, Stramaglia testified as follows on direct 23 examination:

24
25 [PROSECUTOR]: And Miss Stramaglia, what was your occupation [in May 1987]?

26 A. At that point in time, I was a prostitute.

27 Q. And are you a prostitute now, as well?

28 A. No, I’m retired.

(13 RT 2616.) No further testimony was given on the issue at trial.

1 Stramaglia did not testify as Petitioner asserts in his points and authorities, “that she 2 retired from prostitution since the alleged rape ...” (emphasis added.)

3 Petitioner reasons Stramaglia must then have retired sometime between October 16, 1987 4 (preliminary hearing testimony) and April 11, 1989 (trial testimony). He then speculates that 5 Stramaglia’s January 31 and June 7, 1988 arrests could have impeached her trial testimony on this 6 point.

7 Even assuming Stramaglia retired between October 1987 and April 11, 1989, neither the 8 1988 arrests nor her probationary status are evidence she was not “retired” on April 11, 1989.
9 Based upon the testimony itself, Stramaglia could have retired the day prior – or April 10, 1989 – 10 or on June 8, 1988, after pleading guilty to one count of disorderly conduct: prostitution, electing 11 to retire from that date forward. And, her testimony at trial would be consistent and thus not 12 subject to impeachment.

13 Again, based on this record, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably 14 concluded that Stramaglia’s testimony was not false or perjured (U.S. v. Polizzi, 801 F.2d at 15 1549-50), that the prosecutor did not knowingly use perjured testimony (U.S. v. Juno-Arce, 339 16 F.3d at 889), and that it was not likely Stramaglia’s testimony she was retired from prostitution 17 affected the jury’s judgment (Hein, 601 F.3d at 908). Richter, 562 U.S. at 103.

18 Neither was the prosecutor required to disclose Stramaglia was a “retired” prostitute, even 19 assuming he knew of her retirement. Whether Stramaglia had retired is neither exculpatory nor is 20 it impeaching.

21 Stramaglia’s date of retirement is not known. Although impeachment evidence is 22 exculpatory within the meaning of Brady (see Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. at 154), Brady's 23 “reasonable probability” test requires more than mere speculation that evidence withheld was of 24 such a nature that its exclusion undermines confidence in the outcome of the proceeding. See 25 Wood v. Bartholomew, 516 U.S. 1, 6–8 (1995). Petitioner has failed to provide anything beyond 26 mere speculation that any arrest of Stramaglia after May 1987, or probationary term to which she 27 might have been then subject to, could have been used to impeach her trial testimony and 28 ultimately undermine confidence in the jury’s verdict.

1 there was no Brady violation. This conclusion is reasonable because it's not clear there was any 2 evidence withheld in the first instance. Petitioner's argument is based on pure speculation. See 3 Barker v. Fleming, 423 F.3d 1085, 1099 (9th Cir. 2005) (rejecting Brady claim based on "mere 4 speculation"). Richter, 562 U.S. at 102, 105.

5 The same analysis applies to Petitioner's argument that his rights were violated when the 6 prosecutor failed to disclose Stramaglia was on probation at the time of her testimony.

7 Turning again to the record, and in particular Petitioner's exhibits, Stramaglia's criminal 8 history indicates she was placed on a 36-month probation following her first conviction for 9 disorderly conduct/prostitution in February 1987. (ECF No. 302, Vol. II, Ex. 8 at 239.) Plainly, 10 defense counsel knew of Stramaglia's first conviction, and at the time of Petitioner's trial, the 36-11 month probationary period would still have been in effect, to wit: February 1987 through 12 February 1990. The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded there was no 13 Brady error for a duty to disclose Stramaglia's probationary status. Richter, 562 U.S. at 102, 105.

14 Relationship with law enforcement

15 Petitioner also claims the prosecutor failed to disclose that Stramaglia was a police 16 informant, asserting Brady error. Applying the required analysis to these facts, if Stramaglia were 17 a police informant, such information would clearly be impeaching and would serve to establish 18 the first of three necessary components for a Brady violation. Strickler v. Greene, 527 U.S. at 19 281-82. Petitioner had to next show that the impeaching evidence was "suppressed by the State, 20 either willfully or inadvertently." Strickler, 527 U.S. at 281-82. This he cannot do because his 21 evidence does not establish Stramaglia was an informant in the first instance.

22 The undersigned must agree with Respondent that neither Jim Lister's October 21, 2003 23 letter, nor Charles Formosa's July 15, 2004 declaration, amount to evidence that Stramaglia was a 24 confidential and/or paid informant of the Sacramento Police Department. More particularly, Mr.
25 Lister's letter does not make such a claim. It states only that he has knowledge of so-called "red 26 files" maintained by the "Office of Investigations," consisting of "the informant's name, mug 27 shot, biographical information, cases [in] which they have given testimony and any amounts of 28 money paid to them by the City of Sacramento." (ECF No. 301, Ex. 12, ¶ 11-attachment.) Lister

1 makes no claim that Stramaglia was a confidential reliable informant and/or that information
2 about her could be found in the “red files.” (ECF No. 301, Ex. 12, ¶ 11-attachment.)

3 Notably, Lister does note in his letter that it was not his practice to “submit an informant’s 4 name to the ‘red file’” because he “had great success in using informants as tipsters, as opposed 5 to using their information to write search warrants.” (ECF No. 301, Ex. 12, ¶ 11-attachment.) He 6 protected his “street informants” from being exploited by other officers or inadvertent leaks, by 7 keeping their information from the “red file,” and “never paid for information from an informant 8 and [] never dealt off a case for their information.” (ECF No. 301, Ex. 12, ¶ 11-attachment.)

9 Mr. Formosa’s declaration indicates his February 1999 and 2003 interviews with Lister 10 revealed Lister “remembered knowing Mike Hopper and Sandra Stramaglia” as a result of his 11 patrol beat in the mid to late 1980s that included the Boxwood Apartments. (ECF No. 301, Ex.
12 12, ¶¶ 2-4.] Specifically, Mr. Formosa’s declaration concludes:

13
14 While Mr. Lister was working for the Sacramento Police Department, all 15 information about an informant would have been kept in a separate file. This file was 16 commonly known as the “red file” or the “snitch file”. Anyone who was used as an 17 informant should have a “red” or “snitch” file on record. To his knowledge, the department maintained these files from the time he started working there. His understanding was they are still maintained.

18 (ECF No. 301, Ex. 12, ¶ 10.) Petitioner makes the inaccurate and unsupported assumption, based 19 upon Lister’s general statements concerning informant files maintained by the Sacramento Police 20 Department, that Stramaglia was such an informant. Yet, he ignores Lister’s correspondence that 21 plainly indicates to the contrary: that Lister kept that information to himself rather than share it 22 with a wider law enforcement audience where it might be exploited. And significantly, Lister 23 never indicated Stramaglia was a formal or “red file” informant of the Sacramento Police 24 Department.

25 Mr. Holmes’ declaration on this issue indicates defense counsel were “aware that 26 Detective Jim Lister talked extensively to the people in the area of Stramaglia’s residence as a 27 way of keeping himself informed about his ‘beat.’ Therefore, the fact that Stramaglia referred to 28

1 Lister as a ‘friend’ did not suggest to the defense a need to investigate her now-alleged 2 ‘connections’ with law enforcement.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5254.) Neither of 3 Mr. Gable’s declarations address this issue. (ECF Nos. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 63 & 320, Ex. 160.)

5 To establish deficient performance a person challenging a conviction must show 6 that “counsel’s representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness.” 466 7 U.S. at 688 []. A court considering a claim of ineffective assistance must apply a “strong 8 presumption” that counsel’s representation was within the “wide range” of reasonable 9 professional assistance. Id., at 689 []. The challenger’s burden is to show “that counsel 10 made errors so serious that counsel was not functioning as the ‘counsel’ guaranteed the 11 defendant by the Sixth Amendment.” Id., at 687 [].

12 Richter, 562 U.S. at 104.

13 Petitioner cannot establish deficient performance by trial counsel. As explained above, 14 the record does not support the need for additional investigation into any relationship between 15 Stramaglia and Lister. Mr. Holmes’ declaration reveals counsel reasonably concluded that 16 Stramaglia’s friendship with Lister was benign and merely the result of Lister’s policing method; 17 a method that did not include paid informants or “red files.”

18 With respect to prejudice, a challenger must demonstrate “a reasonable probability 19 that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been 20 different. A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in 21 the outcome.” Id. at 694 []. It is not enough “to show that the errors had some 22 conceivable effect on the outcome of the proceeding. Id. at 693 []. Counsel’s errors must 23 be “so serious as to deprive the defendant of a fair trial, a trial whose result is reliable.”
24 Id. at 687 [].

25 Richter, 562 U.S. at 104.

26 Neither can Petitioner establish prejudice even assuming deficiency. There is no 27 reasonable probability the result of the trial would have been different had the jury learned that 28 Lister’s regular contact with residents in the Boxwood area, including Stramaglia, provided him with information on an informal basis.

Accordingly, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that Petitioner failed to establish a Brady violation or that defense counsels were ineffective in some manner for failing to offer this evidence to impeach Stramaglia’s testimony at trial. That court’s 1 determination is not “so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and 2 comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.” Richter, 562

3 U.S. at 103.

4 As to Detective Terry Brown’s involvement in both cases, the evidence is not favorable to 5 Petitioner. Brown testified in the Korves matter that he interviewed Roxanne Simpkins. He 6 indicated Stramaglia was “involved” in the case he “handled,” but he did not interview her or 7 show her suspect photographs for purposes of identification. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 68 at 8 4366-67.) The simple fact Brown was lead detective in both cases in which Stramaglia was a 9 victim is not exculpatory or impeaching. Strickler v. Greene, 527 U.S. at 281-82. Neither is there 10 a reasonable probability that the result of the trial would have been different had the jury learned 11 Brown was also the lead investigator in the Korves matter, having had no personal contact with 12 Stramaglia in that case. In the absence of that evidence, the verdict remains worthy of 13 confidence. Id. at 289.

14 The same can be said of the last component. The state’s highest court could have 15 concluded that Petitioner was not prejudiced. It is immaterial that Stramaglia was friendly with 16 an officer or detective assigned to her neighborhood, because she was not a police informant 17 whose name would appear in the so-called “red files.” The California Supreme Court could have 18 determined that in the absence of that information, and the information that Detective Brown was 19 lead detective in this case and in the Korves case, Petitioner received a fair trial and a verdict 20 worthy of confidence was rendered. Strickler, 527 U.S. at 289-90; Richter, 562 U.S. at 103.

21 In any case, this matter is unlike United States v. Kizer, 569 F.2d 504, 506 (9th Cir. 1978).
22 This record does not establish that Stramaglia was a paid government informer with pending 23 criminal charges against her, where criminal charges were dropped against her prior to trial, or 24 where the fact of addiction is probative of other motivation for testifying, or where she was 25 intoxicated at the time of her testimony. None of those circumstances applied here.

26 Finally, it would not have been unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to 27 conclude that trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to discover this information in order to 28 present it to the jury as a reason to question Stramaglia’s credibility due to her purported close

1 relationship with law enforcement. Stramaglia and Lister were familiar with one another due to 2 the fact she plied her trade as a prostitute in the area to which he was assigned as a member of the 3 Sacramento Police Department. While Stramaglia might have provided him with information 4 from time to time, he never paid her for the information, nor did he make any effort to affect the 5 outcome of any case she was facing.

6 The second prong of the Strickland test requires showing a “reasonable probability that, 7 but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the [trial] would have been different.”
8 Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. A reasonable probability is a probability “sufficient to undermine 9 confidence in the outcome.” Id. “The likelihood of a different result must be substantial, not just 10 conceivable.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 104. “Only those habeas petitioners who can prove under 11 Strickland that they have been denied a fair trial by the gross incompetence of their attorneys will 12 be granted the writ and will be entitled to retrial.” Kimmelman v. Morrison, 477 U.S. 365, 382 13 (1986). Even had counsel learned of the close relationship between Lister and Stramaglia, 14 Petitioner cannot show the result of the trial would have been different; the jury already knew 15 Stramaglia was a prostitute, the fact she considered Lister a “friend,” and that she may have 16 provided him with information about things relevant to his patrol route. A different result might 17 be conceivable, but it is not substantially likely. Richter, 562 U.S. at 104.

18 Further, the undersigned disagrees that Stramaglia’s purported relationship with law 19 enforcement, and prior belated rape allegation, amount to violations of his constitutional rights to 20 present a defense and confront witnesses.

21 With specific regard to belated rape reports, any delay in reporting other rapes had little 22 relevance to the circumstances surrounding the manner in which this rape was reported. As 23 previously discussed, Stramaglia’s testimony regarding reporting was not false or inconsistent.
24 The jury knew that Stramaglia did not report this rape immediately and allegedly why, and that 25 she ultimately told Lister about it. And there is evidence in this record to suggest that Lister 26 approached Stramaglia after other investigators working the Birkman robbery/murder learned that 27 the same suspect wanted for that crime and the theft of Glidewell’s Camaro was also responsible 28 for the rape of an area prostitute. (ECF No. 302, Vol. III, Ex. 8 at 475 [Natalie Glidewell’s

1 statement of 5/17/87 at 1710 hours], 532-33 [crime scene summary], 751 [Stramaglia's statement 2 of 5/17/87 at 1930 hours] & 940 [crime report dated 5/17/87].) Hence, it would be reasonable for 3 the California Supreme Court to conclude the absence of this evidence did not prevent Petitioner 4 from presenting a complete defense. Crane v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. at 689-90; Nevada v. Jackson, 5 569 U.S. at 509.

6 Regarding Stramaglia's alleged relationship with law enforcement, as previously 7 discussed, the undersigned finds that because there was no evidence to support the assertion that 8 Stramaglia's was an informant, the California Supreme Court could have concluded that Brady 9 error did not occur. Similarly, the California Supreme Court could have concluded Petitioner was 10 not denied his right to confront Stramaglia on this point because any foreclosure of inquiry to 11 demonstrate potential bias was harmless. The jury was aware Stramaglia considered Lister "a 12 friend" (13 RT 2639), and the evidence does not support Petitioner's assertions about a 13 relationship. Thus, the state's highest court could have reasonably concluded that Petitioner was 14 not denied his constitutional right to present a complete defense, nor his right to confront 15 witnesses. Fairminded jurists could disagree on the issue. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03.

16 Percy Spence

17 In passing, Petitioner claims that defense counsels were ineffective for failing to object to 18 the prosecutor having elicited testimony about witness Percy Spence's drug use. Specifically, 19 defense counsel were allegedly ineffective for an "unreasonable failure to object to the 20 prosecutor's questioning of Percy Spence regarding his past drug use and failure to urge the court 21 to revisit its ruling in limine preventing the defense from questioning Sandra Stramaglia about her 22 past drug use." (ECF No. 330 at 352, 354.)

23 In the absence of any citation to the record identified by Petitioner, the apparent exchange 24 at issue is as follows:

25
26 Q. Mr. Spence, what were you doing over at those apartments that day?

27 A. Well, I lived in the neighborhood, you know, I know everybody over there, 28 you know, I go and visit friends, you know, Roxanne, her brother sometime.

Q. Where had you been the - - where had you slept that night?

A. Matter of fact, I don't even think I slept that night.

1 Q. Did you and Mr. Alvarez stay up that whole night?
2 A. Yeah, we drank beer, you know, had a few drinks.
3 Q. Smoked cocaine?
4 A. What make you say something like that? Do you?
5 Q. Do I smoke cocaine?
6 A. Yeah.
7 Q. No, sir.
8 A. Why would I have to be smoking cocaine to stay up?
9 Q. You give me the answer and then we'll know. [¶] You were smoking cocaine 10 the night before?
11 A. How you know what I was doing? I wasn't smoking nothing. I was drinking 12 some beer, man.
13 Q. I'm not - - 14 THE COURT: Mr. Spence, just do your best to answer the question that he asks.
15 THE WITNESS: I was drinking some beer.
16 Q. [PROSECUTOR]: I'm not gonna get you in trouble.
17 A. You can't get me in trouble.
18 Q. That's right. [¶] You were smoking cocaine the night before with Mr. Alvarez 19 and Roxanne; is that right?
20 MR. GABLE: I'm going to object as being argumentative, the answer was given.
21 THE COURT: Overruled.
22 Q. [PROSECUTOR]: Were you smoking cocaine with Manny and Roxanne in 23 Roxanne's apartment?
24 A. Say what you want to say, I tell you I was drinking some beer. I may have 25 smoked some marijuana, I wasn't smoking no cocaine, due to the fact my funds was low.
26 If I had funds, I probably would have.
27 Q. The way you get funds is by selling cocaine, isn't it?
28 MR. GABLE: Objection, your Honor irrelevant.
THE COURT: Sustained.

(17 RT 3788-89.)

Petitioner complains Mr. Gable failed to object where the prosecutor failed to lay a foundation for his questions concerning Spence's drug use; he asserts that "[r]easonably competent counsel would have capitalized on the prosecutor's questioning of Spence to urge the court to revisit the issue and allow the defendant to recall Stramaglia." (ECF No. 330 at 354.) Again, the record reflects defense counsels' trial strategy involved treating Stramaglia's past drug use as irrelevant. Therefore, counsel was not unreasonable in failing to object to the cross-examination of Spence on this issue to "capitalize" on it in order to urge the court to revisit its earlier ruling regarding Stramaglia. That earlier ruling was consistent with the trial strategy adopted by counsel. Hence, it would not have been unreasonable for the California Supreme 1 Court to conclude counsel was not ineffective on this basis. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687; Richter, 2 562 U.S. at 104.

3 Conclusion

4 For the foregoing reasons, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded 5 that Petitioner was not deprived of any opportunity to impeach Stramaglia, that he received the 6 effective assistance of counsel concerning investigation of Stramaglia, and that Petitioner was not 7 deprived of any right to due process and a fair trial. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Accordingly, the 8 undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claims II, JJ and G be DENIED.

9 Claim RR: Alleged Errors Depriving Petitioner of the Opportunity to Impeach

10 Anthony Simpkins

11 In this claim, Petitioner asserts trial counsel failed to properly investigate and present 12 evidence that Anthony Simpkins was a heroin addict, and also failed to properly argue in favor of 13 his impeachment on the basis of his heroin addiction; their failures resulted in the denial of his 14 right to confront Simpkins and to present a defense. (ECF No. 330 at 381-405.) Respondent 15 maintains Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief because the California Supreme Court's 16 adjudication of the claim was not unreasonable or contrary to Supreme Court precedent. (ECF 17 No. 345 at 198-207.)

18 The Applicable Legal Standards

19 As noted elsewhere, to succeed on a Strickland claim, a defendant must show that (1) his 20 counsel's performance was deficient and that (2) the "deficient performance prejudiced the 21 defense." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687. Counsel is constitutionally deficient if his representation 22 "fell below an objective standard of reasonableness" such that it was outside "the range of 23 competence demanded of attorneys in criminal cases." Id. at 687-88 (internal quotation marks 24 omitted). "Counsel's errors must be 'so serious as to deprive the defendant of a fair trial, a trial 25 whose result is reliable.'" Richter, 562 U.S. at 104 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687). A 26 reviewing court is required to make every effort "to eliminate the distorting effects of hindsight, 27 to reconstruct the circumstances of counsel's challenged conduct, and to evaluate the conduct 28 from counsel's perspective at the time." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 669; see also Richter, 562 U.S. at 1 107.

2 In order to show ineffectiveness of counsel based on the failure to investigate, a petitioner 3 must show that his counsel did not make a reasonable investigation or did not make a reasonable 4 decision that made a particular investigation unnecessary. See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 691; 5 Wiggins v. Smith, 539 U.S. at 527 (“In assessing the reasonableness of an attorney's 6 investigation, however, a court must consider not only the quantum of evidence already known to 7 counsel, but also whether the known evidence would lead a reasonable attorney to investigate 8 further”); Duncan v. Ornoski, 528 F.3d 1222, 1235 (9th Cir. 2008) (“We allow lawyers 9 considerable discretion to make strategic decisions about what to investigate, but only after those 10 lawyers ‘have gathered sufficient evidence upon which to base their tactical choices’”).

11 Relevant Background

12 Prior to Anthony Simpkins’ testimony before the jury on the afternoon of April 26, 1989, 13 the following colloquy occurred:

14 15 THE COURT: Counsel, do you want me to conduct the preliminary inquiry regarding his felonies?

16 MR. GABLE: That would be fine.

17 THE COURT: Mr. Simpkins, do you know if you’ve been convicted of any felonies.

18 THE WITNESS: Yes, sir, I have.

19 THE COURT: What were those?

20 THE WITNESS: 11550.

21 THE COURT: Okay. When were those convictions?

22 THE WITNESS: 1986 and 19 - - 1986 and 1988.

23 THE COURT: Now, 1150 [sic], was that for, I take it, well, was that for just straight possession, possession for sale?

24 THE WITNESS: Straight possession, personal use.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Have you had any other criminal convictions of any kind?

26 THE WITNESS: A few misdemeanors.

27 THE COURT: What were those?

28 THE WITNESS: Under the influence and petty theft.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Holmes, Mr. Gable, you wish to inquire further?

MR. HOLMES: I’m sorry, I was rustling through some papers here. [¶] Sir, what were the dates on the 11550, 86’?

A. ’86, I believe, and ’88.

Q. So, we’re talking about two different offenses for being under the influence of narcotics; is that right?

A. Two different offenses for being in possession of narcotics.

1 Q. Possession, all right. And those were both in Sacramento County?
2 A. No. Washoe County, Reno, Nevada and San Francisco County.
3 Q. Okay. Now, did you get picked up on a federal offense for drugs in 1987?
4 A. No, sir. It wasn't for drugs, it was a misdemeanor for petty theft of 5 government property.
6 Q. On government property, like a railroad or something? What happened in that 7 case?
8 A. Post office. I served nine months, Terminal Island, Lompoc.
9 Q. Did you have any other federal offenses, which you were arrested for and 10 charged with?
11 A. No, sir.
12 Q. Okay. You didn't tell Mr. Marlette here earlier today that your federal offense 13 was for narcotics, did you?
14 A. No, sir.
15 Q. Okay. What happened on your burglary down in Fairfield?
16 A. It was dissolved. It wasn't a burglary, it was a petty theft.
17 Q. Dissolved, you mean resolved as a petty theft misdemeanor?
18 A. Yeah.
19 Q. Did some time on that one?
20 A. Credit for time served, I believe.
21 Q. Then, on your federal offense, you failed to appear on that; is that correct?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 MR. MARLETTE: Objection, your Honor, relevance.
24 THE COURT: Overruled at this time, this is just inquiry.
25 (BY MR. HOLMES): That resolved, pertaining to the same petty theft of 26 government property?
27 A. Yeah, it resolved, one incident.
28 Q. What did you fail to appear for Court for, doing time or what?
A. No, I failed to appear because I was in custody one time in Sacramento, and because when I was arrested, it was under an alias.
Q. Okay. And then in December of - - out of San Francisco, December of 1988, you had a felony possession of narcotics?
A. Yes. I already - - I've already told you about that.
Q. Just inquiring. That started off as a possession for sale?
A. I'm not sure.
Q. Okay. Well, were you ever charged with possession for sale of narcotics?
A. Never sold any narcotics to anybody.
Q. No, possession for sale, holding it out there package - -
A. It was a very minor amount. It was possession as far as I know.
Q. Okay. Thank you, sir.
MR. GABLE: That's all I have.
THE COURT: Do you have any charges pending right now?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE COURT: What charges are pending? So you're still - - you have Court appearances to - -
THE WITNESS: I have one, under the influence from 1987.
THE COURT: That you haven't been sentenced on yet.
THE WITNESS: No.

1 THE COURT: Why - - what jurisdiction is that in?
2 THE WITNESS: It's in San Mateo County. I filed a 1389 while I was in Lompoc, 3 but I never got any reply, and after I was released, they picked me up on it.
4 THE COURT: And you're doing time now on a misdemeanor charge?
5 THE WITNESS: Yes.
6 THE COURT: Have you talked to anybody about whether or not your testifying 7 today in this case will be of any benefit to you?
8 THE WITNESS: No, I haven't talked to anybody about that.
9 THE COURT: Do you expect that it will be of any benefit to you, at all?
10 THE WITNESS: I don't expect it, no.
11 THE COURT: Do you intend to - - 12 THE WITNESS: I don't intend to.
13 THE COURT: Do you intend to ask for any benefit from testifying today?
14 THE WITNESS: Absolutely not.
15 THE COURT: Any further questions?
16 MR. MARLETTE: No, sir.
17 THE COURT: Okay.
18 MR. HOLMES: No.
19 THE COURT: Bring the jury in, please.
20 MR. MARLETTE: Your Honor, I would ask, before the jury comes in, that 21 inquiry into Mr. Simpkins' criminal background be prohibited.
22 THE COURT: As far as impeachment is concerned?
23 MR. MARLETTE: Yes.
24 THE COURT: Yes, there does not seem to be any impeachable prior convictions.
25 The two felonies which I assume are 11350's, and I'm not sure, I think the one in Nevada, 26 I'm not sure, but anyway, if they are for possession only, that's - - that doesn't qualify as a 27 crime involving moral turpitude.
28 MR. HOLMES: I would agree with that. It appears that the most he had was one where he was picked up on possession for sale, this is in San Francisco.
This may end up as possession, but I would ask to be permitted to at least ask him, you know, if he's in custody right now, so forth. I think Counsel is going to do that, to start off with.
THE COURT: Yes, questions of that nature may lead to any possible promises or bias, it would be permissible. Okay.
(16 RT 3529-34.) During testimony before the jury, Simpkins was asked whether he was "in custody in San Mateo County" at that time; he replied, "Yes, sir." He agreed also that he was serving "a 45-day sentence for a misdemeanor." (16 RT 3552-53.)
Mr. Holmes' 1999 declaration provides as follows:
Claim RR, the failure to investigate and present evidence that Anthony Simpkins was a heroin addict.
While I have little recollection of this particular issue, I do recollect that we did considerable investigation for Mr. Alvarez's trial and that Simpkins' alleged heroin addiction was not particularly relevant or important to the charge of Mr. Alvarez's rape of 1 Sandra Stramaglia.

2 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5257.) Neither of Mr. Gable’s declarations address this 3 issue. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXII, Ex. 63 & ECF No. 320, Ex. 160.)

4 Analysis

5 Petitioner begins by claiming Mr. Holmes’ “declaration indicates he saw no way in which 6 Simpkins’s heroin addiction could be used as impeachment.” (ECF No. 330 at 389-90.) Next, he 7 contends that both Mr. Holmes’ declaration and the trial record suggest Holmes believed that 8 misdemeanor convictions are never admissible for impeachment purposes, citing to page “3533” 9 of the Reporter’s Transcript. (ECF No. 330 at 390.) The undersigned begins with the latter 10 contention.

11 Impeachment

12 Mr. Holmes’ declaration does not address Simpkins’ misdemeanor convictions in any 13 way; it addresses only the drug issue. If Petitioner’s assertion is based solely on the fact the 14 declaration does not address those misdemeanor convictions, it is not well taken. As for the 15 reference to page 3533, Holmes is quoted on a single line, to wit: answering “No,” in response to 16 the court’s inquiry concerning any further questions. (16 RT 3533.) Therefore, the undersigned 17 assumes Petitioner intended reference to the following page of the Reporter’s Transcript wherein 18 Mr. Holmes agreed with the trial court’s assessment that “[t]he two felonies which I assume are 19 11350’s ...are for possession only, that’s - - that doesn’t qualify as a crime involving moral 20 turpitude.” (16 RT 3533-34.) Holmes then went on to state, “[i]t appears that the most he had 21 was one where he was picked up on possession for sale, this is in San Francisco. [¶] This may 22 end up as a possession, but I would ask to be permitted to at least ask him, you know, if he’s in 23 custody right now, so forth.” (16 RT 3534.)

24 Mr. Holmes could have been referencing a September 20, 1988 arrest of Simpkins by the 25 San Francisco Police Department for a violation of California Health and Safety Code § 11351, 26 possession of a controlled substance for sale. (ECF No. 302, Vol. V, Ex. 10 at 951.) The 27 complaint filed thereafter alleged a single count of possession of a controlled substance in 28 violation of California Health and Safety Code § 11350(a) (ECF No. 302, Vol. VII, Ex. 10 at 1 1349), to which Simpkins pled guilty (ECF No. 302, Vol. VII, Ex. 10 at 1351-1360), resulting in 2 a conviction for possession and a suspended prison sentence and three-year probationary term.

3 (ECF No. 302, Vol. VI, Ex. 10 at 1117-26 & Vol. VII, Ex. 10 at 1343.)

4 However, Holmes was more likely referencing a March 5, 1989 arrest by the San 5 Francisco Police Department for a violation of that same section – possession of a controlled 6 substance for sale – wherein an entry dated one day later on March 6, 1989, indicated the 7 following “DISPO:PROS REL-DET ONLY-COMB W/OTHER CNTS/CASE.” (ECF No. 302, 8 Vol, V, Ex. 10 at 952.)<sup>37</sup>

9 In any event, this record does not support Petitioner’s assertion that trial counsel 10 misunderstood the use of Simpkins’ prior convictions for purposes of impeachment or that he 11 “believed misdemeanor convictions were never admissible for impeachment.” Rather, the record 12 reveals defense counsel was informed regarding Simpkins’ record, which at that time included 13 misdemeanor convictions involving possession of a controlled substance and petty theft. Notably 14 too, co-counsel Gable clearly understood that a misdemeanor conviction involving moral 15 turpitude could potentially be admissible for purposes of impeachment. (20 RT 4642-46.)

16 Avoiding the distorting effects of hindsight from the perspective of counsel at the time of 17 trial, and because it was not outside “the range of competence demanded” for Holmes to agree 18 with the trial court that Simpkins’ criminal history did not include an impeachable admissible 19 offense, the California Supreme Court could have concluded trial counsels’ representation of 20 Petitioner did not fall “below an objective standard of reasonableness,” amounting to a 21 constitutional deficiency. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687-88 (internal quotation marks omitted).
22 Moreover, even assuming error, the state’s high court could have concluded any error did not 23 result in the deprivation of a fair trial because fairminded jurists could disagree that counsels’ 24 representative was ineffective. Richter, 562 U.S. at 104; Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687.

25 Investigation

26 Petitioner’s assertion that counsel failed to consider “specific facts” is not borne out by the 27 _____ 28 <sup>37</sup> Other arrests prior to April 1989 for this same violation involved unlawful searches and seizures; none resulted in the filing of a complaint. (ECF No. 302, Vol. V, Ex. 10 at 952.)

1 record. Mr. Holmes's declaration indicates consideration was given to the issue of Simpkins'
2 drug addiction and a strategic or tactical decision was made to disregard the information. (ECF 3 No. 320, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136.)

4 More specifically, counsel's strategy with regard to Simpkins' testimony, as was evident 5 during cross-examination and in closing argument, included pointing to the close relationship that 6 Simpkins shared with Stramaglia as a basis for Simpkins' corroborating testimony. More 7 particularly, during his cross-examination, Mr. Holmes addressed Simpkins' close relationship 8 with Stramaglia and asked whether he had "an interest in this case, as far as helping out Sandra 9 and making sure that someone's convicted of this act?" (16 RT 3595, 3596.) In closing 10 argument, Mr. Gable argued that Simpkins and Stramaglia "were like sister and brother, very, 11 very close relationship, known each other for years. [¶] It doesn't seem implausible at all that a 12 person of his ilk would and could be capable of coming in here and lying to make sure that 13 somebody who he thought had done his sister wrong, got his just desserts." (25 RT 5733.) And, 14 "Simpkins, also known as White Tony, who as I indicated, is a very close friend of Sandra, 15 considers her to be a sister, I'd submit to you that his story is a complete fabrication." (25 RT 16 5744-45.) This strategy also involved two defense witnesses who testified regarding 17 conversations they were alleged to have had with Simpkins while in jail, wherein Simpkins 18 indicated he intended to lie on the stand in order to implicate Petitioner because he believed 19 Petitioner had raped his sister. (17 RT 3825-41 [Jacobs 5/1/89]; 24 RT 5404-29 [Stokes 5/26/89]; 20 see also 25 RT 5745-46 [closing argument].)

21 A wide measure of deference must be given to counsel's tactical decisions. Indeed, 22 Strickland notes that "counsel's tactical decisions are virtually unchallengeable." Strickland, 466 23 U.S. at 690; see also Furman v. Wood, 190 F.3d 1002, 1007 (9th Cir. 1999); Bashor v. Risley, 24 730 F.2d 1228, 1241 (9th Cir. 1984) (tactical decisions are not ineffective assistance simply 25 because in retrospect better tactics are known to have been available); United States v. Mayo, 646 26 F.2d 369, 375 (9th Cir. 1981) (difference of opinion as to trial tactics does not constitute denial of 27 effective assistance). A petitioner "must overcome the presumption that, under the 28 circumstances, the challenged action 'might be considered sound trial strategy.'" Strickland, 466

1 U.S. at 689 (citations omitted).

2 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that the defense team's 3 chosen strategy was a sound one even if a better tactic might have been to address Simpkins' drug 4 use or heroin addiction. Richter, 562 U.S. at 102. Further, as similarly discussed in Claim II, 5 neither Roxanne Simpkins' 1999 declaration, nor the declaration of Charles Formosa concerning 6 Jim Lister, make the California Supreme Court's denial of Petitioner's claim unreasonable.

7 While Roxanne Simpkins' declaration includes the statement that her brother Anthony 8 was "addicted to heroin" during the period he stayed "with [her] on Boxwood in May 1987" 9 (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 11), there is no evidence Roxanne would have testified similarly at 10 the time of Petitioner's trial. See Allen v. Woodford, 395 F.3d 979, 1002 n.2 (9th Cir. 2005); 11 United States v. Harden, 846 F.2d 1229, 1231-32 (9th Cir. 1988).<sup>38</sup> And, as discussed above, 12 Simpkins' heroin use or addiction was not addressed because defense counsel's strategy was 13 expressly focused elsewhere. As for Mr. Formosa's declaration, including the letter from Lister 14 appended as an exhibit thereto, it makes no reference to Anthony Simpkins in any way. (ECF 15 No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 12.) To the degree it is offered to support a claim that Simpkins was a 16 government informant, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably denied the claim on 17 this basis, for the reasons previously addressed in Petitioner's related Claim II.

18 With regard to Petitioner's cursory argument that evidence of Simpkins' lying to law 19 enforcement "was Brady material: it was known to law enforcement, it was favorable, it was 20 suppressed" (ECF No. 330 at 394), the record does not establish the material was suppressed in 21 any way.

22 Initially, the undersigned notes that some of the material Petitioner expressly cites to 23 occurred after Petitioner's trial and hence obviously could not have been suppressed. Nor is there 24 any evidence in the record that defense counsel failed in its asserted "duty to discover Simpkins's 25 lies to law enforcement." (ECF No. 330 at 394.) Simpkins' criminal history was known to the 26

27 <sup>38</sup> Petitioner asserts that Roxanne "would have testified that at the time of the alleged rape, 28 Simpkins was addicted to heroin" (ECF No. 330 at 394), however, the declaration itself does not include such a declaration.

1 defense team, including Simpkins' willingness to lie to law enforcement. By way of example, in 2 November 1986, Simpkins was arrested for providing false identification to a police officer.
3 (ECF No. 302, Vol. V, Ex. 10 at 95 & Vol. VIII. Ex. 10 at 1637-40.) Additionally, Simpkins'
4 record as of 1988 included his use of at least two aliases: David Eric Scorsonelli and Mark
5 Simpkins. (ECF No. 302, Vol. V, Ex. 10 at 950-52 [names 4 & 5], Vol. VI, Ex. 10 at 1233-39 & 6 Vol. VIII, Ex. 10 at 1667-76.) In fact, Simpkins admitted using an alias during questioning 7 outside the jury's presence; neither Holmes nor Gable expressed surprise. (16 RT 3531.)
8 Further, as noted, counsels' strategy or tactic was focused on inferring that Simpkins' testimony 9 was not worthy of belief due to his close relationship with Stramaglia.

10 The undersigned herein incorporates the previous discussion in Petitioner's Claim II 11 concerning prejudice. There is no reasonable probability of a different outcome had Simpkins 12 been impeached "with his heroin addiction and its manifestations in his dishonest behavior" (ECF 13 No. 330 at 395), for the jury could still have accepted all or some of his testimony.<sup>39</sup> The 14 question of a witness's credibility is a matter for the jury. And again, Petitioner ignores the 15 indirect corroboration evidence offered by Edwin Glidewell and Officer Michael Tupper 16 concerning the theft of Glidewell's vehicle at that same time, allowing for Petitioner's escape and 17 a reasonable inference of guilt relating to Stramaglia's rape.

18 The jury knew Simpkins was in custody at the time of his testimony. (16 RT 3552-53.)
19 And while Simpkins denied using drugs the night before the Stramaglia incident, his testimony 20 did not amount to a categorical denial of any drug usage on his part. On cross-examination, 21 Simpkins was asked if he was "taking drugs" that evening and he replied, "Not myself, not that 22 night." (16 RT 3564 (emphasis added); see also 16 RT 3565-66.) He did specifically deny using 23 crack cocaine. (16 RT 3567.) Hence, the jury knew Simpkins was a drug user.

24 It is possible that, even had evidence of Simpkins' heroin addiction and willingness to lie 25 to law enforcement to avoid criminal consequences been presented, the jury could still have 27 <sup>39</sup> The jury was instructed regarding the credibility of witnesses. (25 RT 5594-95.) 28

1 chosen to believe his testimony concerning the circumstances of his encounter with Stramaglia 2 and others on the morning in question. Based on this record, the California Supreme Court could 3 have reasonably concluded that defense counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel.
4 Richter, 562 U.S. at 102.

5 As for Petitioner’s assertion that because rape is considered by the jury pursuant to Penal 6 Code § 190.3, subdivisions (a) and (b), and is “a particularly aggravating circumstance” there is a 7 reasonable probability the jury would not have sentenced him to death had it not convicted him of 8 raping Stramaglia, the record suggests otherwise.

9 Petitioner faced numerous aggravating circumstances for his various then-current crimes 10 and other incidents, over and above the Stramaglia rape. Those numerous other aggravating 11 factors included the robbery and murder of Alan Birkman, the robbery of Greta Slatten (who 12 sustained significant injuries as a result of the force employed during the robbery), and two 13 incidents involving the use of force against other inmates. (31 RT 6900-10; 6 CT 1353; see also 2 14 CT 361-64; 3 CT 544-46; 4 CT 993.) The jury also considered, as an aggravating factor pursuant 15 to subdivision (c) of Penal Code § 190.3, Petitioner’s prior conviction for voluntary 16 manslaughter. (31 RT 6907-09; 6 CT 1353, 1380.) Given the circumstances surrounding the 17 various and numerous aggravating factors considered by the jury, the undersigned finds the 18 California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded there was no reasonable probability 19 of the jury imposing a sentence other than death, even had it not convicted him of rape. Murder 20 and robbery are also “particularly aggravating,” to use Petitioner’s words. In sum, Petitioner has 21 failed to show that no reasonable jurist could have found that he failed to make a prima facie 22 showing of prejudice as a result of counsels’ alleged failure to investigate and present evidence 23 regarding Simpkins’ heroin addiction, and failure to impeach Simpkins. Richter, 562 U.S. at 102.

24 Because the undersigned has found the California Supreme Court could reasonably have 25 concluded there was no violation of Petitioner’s constitutional right to the effective assistance of 26 counsel, Petitioner could not have been deprived of his constitutional right to confront Simpkins 27 or to present a defense predicated on that same basis. Washington, 388 U.S. at 19; Taylor, 484
28 U.S. at 409-10.

1           Petitioner also argues that the cumulative effect of the trial errors complained of warrants 2 reversal. (ECF No. 330 at 396.) “While the combined effect of multiple errors may violate due 3 process even when no single error amounts to a constitutional violation or requires reversal, 4 habeas relief is warranted only where the errors infect a trial with unfairness.” Peyton v. Cullen, 5 658 F.3d 890, 896–97 (9th Cir. 2011) (citing Chambers v. Mississippi, 401 U.S. 284, 298, 302–03 6 (1973)). Such “infection” occurs where the combined effect of the errors had a “substantial and 7 injurious effect or influence in determining the jury’s verdict.” Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S.
8 at 623 (citation omitted). As discussed, however, Petitioner’s allegations in Claim RR, as well as 9 those related thereto, do not amount to error, and thus he demonstrates no errors that can 10 accumulate to a level of a constitutional violation. See Mancuso v. Olivarez, 292 F.3d 939, 957 11 (9th Cir. 2002).

12           Lastly, the undersigned notes that, like he did in Claim II, Petitioner spends some time 13 repeating the arguments asserted by Respondent in the habeas proceedings previously pending 14 before the California Supreme Court and attempting to explain how if that court accepted 15 Respondent’s arguments, it was wrong to do so. But the test is not whether the California 16 Supreme Court was persuaded by and/or adopted a respondent’s arguments as posed. Rather, it is 17 whether there are arguments or theories that could have supported the state court's decision, and 18 whether it is possible fairminded jurists could disagree that those arguments or theories are 19 inconsistent with the holding in a prior decision of the United States Supreme Court. Richter, 562
20 U.S. at 102.

21                               Conclusion

22           The undersigned finds that the California Supreme Court could have reasonably 23 concluded that trial counsel was not ineffective for a failure to investigate and present evidence 24 that Simpkins was a heroin addict, or for a failure to properly argue impeachment of Simpkins on 25 that basis; relatedly, it could also have reasonably concluded Petitioner was not denied his rights 26 to confront Simpkins as a witness or to present a defense. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-13.
27 Therefore, the California Supreme Court’s determination of Petitioner’s claim is neither contrary 28 to, nor does it involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent; he is not entitled

1 to relief. The undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim RR be DENIED.

2 Claim F: Deprivation of the Constitutional Right to a Defense When Trial Court
3 Refused to Permit Petitioner to Impeach Stramaglia and Simpkins with Long 4 History of Arrests and Convictions for Drug and Prostitution Offenses

5 Petitioner contends the trial court erroneously precluded impeachment of Stramaglia and 6 Simpkins with their criminal records,” and incorporates the related arguments he asserted in 7 Claims II and RR. He further contends that because “the State put on no physical evidence to 8 support the rape allegation, Stramaglia and Simpkins were the State’s entire case for the rape 9 charge,” meaning the claim should be considered with his Claims II, JJ, G, and RR. (ECF No.
10 330 at 405-09.) Respondent asserts that the California Supreme Court’s rejection of Petitioner’s 11 claim of erroneous preclusion of misdemeanor conviction evidence was neither unreasonable nor 12 contrary to Supreme Court precedent. (ECF No. 345 at 207-10.)

13 This claim is exhausted for it was presented in Petitioner’s direct appeal to the California 14 Supreme Court, as well as in his second state habeas petition filed with that same court.

15 The California Supreme Court’s Adjudication

16 The California Supreme Court’s decision pertaining to Stramaglia’s criminal history is 17 excerpted in its entirety above, in the undersigned’s discussion concerning Claim II. As for its 18 determination of the same concerning Simpkins’ criminal history, the state’s highest court found 19 as follows:
20

21 In the course of trial, the People moved the superior court, in limine, to preclude 22 defendant and Ross from impeaching Sandra S.’s friend Anthony Simpkins in the 23 presence of the jury with evidence of prior convictions, including one for the 24 misdemeanor of petty theft. Neither defendant nor Ross opposed the motion. The superior 25 court observed that “there does not seem to be any impeachable prior convictions.”
26 Defense counsel expressly “agreed with that.” The superior court granted the motion.
27 Defendant requested permission to inquire in the jury’s presence whether Simpkins was 28 then in custody. The superior court gave leave to do so.

At the guilt phase, Simpkins testified on the People’s behalf. On direct examination, he admitted that he was then in custody following a prior, otherwise unidentified, misdemeanor conviction. On cross-examination by defendant, he was impeached with evidence of misconduct, but not such as underlay his prior petty theft

1 misdemeanor conviction. On cross-examination by Ross, he was not impeached at all, 2 testifying inter alia that he had never seen her previously.

3 Defendant now contends that the superior court erred by granting the People's 4 motion to bar impeachment of Simpkins with his prior petty theft misdemeanor 5 conviction.

6 We reject the claim at the threshold. Defendant has not preserved the point for 7 review. He may not offer an argument in favor of impeachment because he did not offer 8 any to that effect below. [Fn. omitted.]

9 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 202.

10 Analysis

11 Initially, the record confirms that trial counsel did not object to the People's motions 12 below, and for that reason the state's highest court found the argument had been waived for 13 purposes of appeal. Petitioner contends, in the absence of any citation to legal authority, that by 14 "not alternatively address[ing] the merits of the claim ... [t]he state court defaulted the claim."
15 (ECF No. 330 at 407:8-12.) In the next paragraph, Petitioner acknowledges raising the claim in 16 his second state habeas petition wherein the "state court denied the claim on the merits and as 17 procedurally defaulted." (ECF No. 330 at 407:13-15.) Thereafter, however, he asserts, this court 18 "need not decide whether the state court decision was reasonable" because the state court "did not 19 adjudicate Claim F on the merits." (ECF No. 330 at 407:17-18.)

20 The undersigned finds the claim was rejected on the merits by the California Supreme 21 Court's denial of the claim in the second state habeas petition. See Richter, 562 U.S. at 98-99.
22 As a result, the court considers what arguments or theories supported or could have supported the 23 California Supreme Court's decision, and whether it is possible fairminded jurists could disagree 24 about whether those arguments or theories are inconsistent with Supreme Court precedent.
25 Richter, at 101-02. The undersigned herein incorporates the discussion and analyses performed in 26 related Claims II, RR, JJ, and G.

27 At the time of Petitioner's trial in 1989, arrests that did not lead to convictions were 28 inadmissible for impeachment purposes. See People v. Anderson, 20 Cal.3d 647, 650-51 (1978)

1 (“it has long been held that evidence of an accused’s prior arrests is inadmissible”). To the 2 degree Petitioner’s claim can be understood to complain the trial court erred in precluding 3 admission of either Stramaglia or Simpkins’ arrest record, the California Supreme Court could 4 have reasonably concluded such evidence was inadmissible, and that fairminded jurists could 5 disagree on the issue of whether his constitutional rights were violated as a result. Richter, 562
6 U.S. at 101-02.

8       Regarding any conviction involving moral turpitude by either Stramaglia or Simpkins and 9 its admissibility, at the time of Petitioner’s trial, felony convictions involving moral turpitude 10 were admissible, subject also to a determination pursuant to Evidence Code § 352. People v.
11 Castro, 38 Cal.3d 301, 315 (1985). Not until 1992 did the California Supreme Court determine 12 that a misdemeanor crime of moral turpitude was admissible for purposes of impeachment.
13 People v. Wheeler, 4 Cal.4th 284, 295-96 (1992). And again, admissibility or exclusion would be 14 subject to Evidence Code § 352 analysis. People v. Clair, 2 Cal.4th 629, 654-55 (1992). As a 15 result, and despite any deficiency in preserving the issue by a failure to object, the state’s highest 16 court could have reasonably concluded that the trial court did not err in precluding its admission, 17 and that disagreement could exist among fairminded jurists. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-02.
18

19       Here, in October 1988, Simpkins incurred a misdemeanor conviction pursuant to 20 California Penal Code § 32 and served one day in jail.<sup>40</sup> (ECF No. 302, Vol. V, Ex. 10 at 952.) A 21 review of Petitioner’s exhibits concerning this conviction reveals Simpkins pled guilty to the 22 misdemeanor crime of being an accessory after having been originally charged with possession of 23 a controlled substance (Cal. Health & Saf. Code, § 11350(a)) and driving without a valid driver’s 24 license (Cal. Veh. Cod, § 12500(a)). (ECF No. 302, Vol. VI, Ex. 10 at 1273.) His plea was 25

26 _____
27 <sup>40</sup> A violation of California Penal Code § 32 “necessarily involves moral turpitude since it 28 requires that a party has a specific intent to impede justice with knowledge that his actions permit a fugitive of the law to remain at large.” In re Young, 49 Cal.3d 257, 264, 261 (1989).

1 considered a lesser included offense, by stipulation, to the crime of possession of a controlled 2 substance. (ECF No. 302, Vol. VI, Ex. 10 at 1270.) Hence, this conviction is (1) a misdemeanor 3 and (2) despite typically being considered a crime of moral turpitude, the original crime to which 4 this charge was considered a lesser of, did not involve moral turpitude.

6 The crime of possession of heroin is not a crime involving moral turpitude. People v.
7 Castro, 38 Cal.3d at 317 (the crime possession of heroin for sale involves moral turpitude).
8 “Misdemeanor convictions themselves are not admissible for impeachment, although evidence of 9 the underlying conduct may be admissible subject to the court's exercise of discretion.” People v.
10 Chatman, 38 Cal.4th 344, 373 (2006). Regarding Simpkins’ convictions for petty theft, and other 11 misdemeanor convictions, the trial court may have elected to exercise its discretion pursuant to 12 Evidence Code § 352. It is entirely speculative to assert that Stramaglia and Simpkins could have 13 been impeached on these convictions. Trial judges retain wide latitude to impose reasonable 14 limits on impeachment based on concerns about harassment, prejudice, confusion of the issues, 15 repetition or marginal relevance. Delaware v. Van Arsdall, 475 U.S. at 679. Here, Judge Lewis 16 made no ruling concerning either Stramaglia or Simpkins’ arrests. He was not asked to admit 17 evidence concerning Simpkins’ other misdemeanor convictions because counsel agreed with the 18 trial court that those convictions were not admissible for purposes of impeachment.

19
21 This record confirms Petitioner was given an opportunity to effectively cross-examine 22 Stramaglia and Simpkins. He is entitled to do so in an “effective” manner, not in “whatever way, 23 and to whatever extent” Petitioner wished. See Delaware v. Fensterer, 474 U.S. at 20. Further, 24 Petitioner was permitted, and able, to expose Simpkins’ motivation for testifying. Davis v.
25 Alaska, 415 U.S. 308, 316-17 (1974). And to the degree the trial court imposed limits on 26 Petitioner’s right to confront witnesses, those limits were reasonable. Delaware v. Van Arsdall, 27 475 U.S. at 679. It was not unreasonable for the California Supreme Court to conclude that the 28

1 exclusion of the evidence at issue was neither contrary to nor an unreasonable application of 2 Supreme Court precedent. Nor is that decision based upon on an unreasonable determination of 3 the facts. Certainly, fairminded jurists could disagree concerning the admissibility of the 4 evidence at issue for purposes of impeachment. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03.

6 Even assuming for the sake of argument that the impeachment evidence identified by 7 Petitioner should have been admitted at trial, Petitioner is only entitled to federal habeas relief 8 where he can show that the error had a substantial and injurious effect on the jury's verdict, 9 resulting in actual prejudice. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 622-23, 638. But, Petitioner has failed to show 10 actual prejudice resulting from the trial court's exclusion of either Stramaglia or Simpkins' 11 criminal history including arrests and convictions for drug and other misdemeanor offenses.

12
13 The jury was aware that Stramaglia and Simpkins resided in and frequented an area 14 known for drug and prostitution activity, that both lived in an apartment building that had been 15 condemned and for which no one paid rent or utilities. It knew that while each denied using 16 drugs at or around the time of the incident giving rise to the rape allegation, and while testifying, 17 it could be inferred that drug use occurred at other times. It heard Simpkins testify that his sister 18 Roxanne, a Boxwood resident with whom he was staying, had smoked crack cocaine the prior 19 evening with others. It knew Stramaglia had been a prostitute by profession and that she raised a 20 young son in a dangerous and delinquent environment, and could reasonably infer that she did not 21 trouble herself with ensuring her son awoke in time for school and had breakfast before leaving 22 for school. The jury also learned that, at the time of his testimony, Simpkins was serving a 23 sentence in jail for a misdemeanor crime. Therefore, in the eyes of the jury, the evidence at issue 24 would not have created a significantly different impression of either Stramaglia or Simpkins' 25 credibility.

26 27 Both Stramaglia and Simpkins' testimony was important, as acknowledged, and it was not 28

1 cumulative. The evidence excluded did not contradict the testimony on material points other than 2 the question of credibility; in other words, the excluded evidence did not speak directly to 3 whether a non-consensual sexual encounter occurred. Moreover, the extent of the cross-4 examination of Stramaglia and Simpkins was not otherwise limited. And, significantly, the 5 state's case was not as weak as Petitioner paints. Briefly, Stramaglia testified that she awoke to 6 find Petitioner masturbating in her bedroom, and that he raped her despite her calls for help.
7 Simpkins testified that when he responded to the screams coming from Stramaglia's apartment, 8 he found her semi-hysterical and crying. Simpkins testified that Petitioner was still present when 9 he arrived, but after finishing dressing and displaying a knife, Petitioner left the apartment on foot 10 in the direction of El Camino Boulevard. Stramaglia and Simpkins testified Stramaglia told him 11 she had been raped and that Black Tony did not help her. Simpkins indicated Stramaglia 12 continued to cry and ask for her fiancé Mike. At about that same time, Edwin Glidewell's 13 Camaro was parked in front of his brother's home on Boxwood near El Camino. As Glidewell 14 waited for his wife to say her goodbyes before they headed to a medical appointment, he noticed 15 Petitioner walking nearby. Before Petitioner passed the Camaro however, he jumped into the 16 driver's seat of the waiting vehicle and sped off. Glidewell immediately reported the vehicle as 17 stolen.
18 19 20 21 The undersigned notes that the entire cast of characters relating to the rape charge 22 (referring to the testimony of Stramaglia, Simpkins, Petitioner, Stokes, and Jacobs, even 23 Glidewell's testimony, albeit indirectly) suffered from significant credibility issues. And, 24 although it is true that the jury's evaluation of the credibility of Stramaglia and Simpkins was a 25 critical factor at trial, the jury would not have had a significantly different impression of their 26 veracity even if the evidence at issue had been admitted. Given all of the information available to 27 the jury, the undersigned cannot conclude that the exclusion of Stramaglia and Simpkins' arrests 28

1 and misdemeanor convictions had a substantial and injurious effect in determining the jury's 2 verdict. Hence, error, if any, was harmless. Van Arsdall, 475 U.S. at 684; Brecht, 507 U.S. at 3 638.

4 For the foregoing reasons, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim F be DENIED.

6 Claims O, OO & SS: Denial of Adequate Interpreter Services

7 In a series of claims pertaining to interpretation services, Petitioner complains he was 8 denied an adequate interpreter at all critical stages of the trial (Claim SS), that trial counsel did 9 not use an interpreter to communicate with him (Claim OO), and that he testified without the 10 assistance of an interpreter (Claim O). He argues he is entitled to habeas relief as a result of these 11 constitutional violations. (ECF No. 330 at 409-83.) Respondent contends the California Supreme 12 Court's rejection of these claims is not contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, Supreme 13 Court precedent; as a result, Respondent argues Petitioner's claims must be denied on habeas 14 review. (ECF No. 345 at 210-40.)

15 Claim O is exhausted following its presentation to the California Supreme Court on direct 16 review and subsequent denial in a reasoned opinion. Claims OO and SS were presented in both 17 habeas petitions filed in that same court; both were denied on the merits. Concerning Claim O, 18 the undersigned determines whether the California Supreme Court's denial is contrary to, or 19 involves an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent, or was based on an 20 unreasonable determination of the facts. § 2254(d)(1) & (2). Regarding Claims OO and SS, the 21 undersigned will determine what arguments or theories could have supported the California 22 Supreme Court's decision and whether it is possible fairminded jurists could disagree those 23 arguments or theories are inconsistent with prior holdings of the Supreme Court. Richter, 562
24 U.S. at 101-03.

25 Relevant Background

26 Various pre-trial proceedings were held between November 1987 and January 1989, 27 including arraignment, the preliminary hearing, and numerous motions, without the assistance of 28 an interpreter for Petitioner. (1 RT 1-184; 1 CT 1-250, 2 CT 251-355.) More particularly, at the 1 preliminary hearing held October 15, 16 and 19, 1987, Petitioner made no request for the 2 assistance of an interpreter. (1 CT 1-250; 2 CT 251-355.) More than twenty appearances in the 3 superior court occurred thereafter without a request for assistance. (2 CT 367-68, 377, 381-82, 4 418, 444, 495-97; 3 CT 508-09, 516, 543, 574, 580, 599, 603-06.) Not until late January or early 5 February 1989, did Petitioner request the assistance of an interpreter “during all proceedings of 6 the Trial commencing February 1, 1989.” (4 CT 767-69.) Mr. Holmes declared that he and 7 Petitioner “discussed need” for an interpreter because “technical” or complex issues posed 8 Petitioner difficulty. (4 CT 768.) Petitioner’s request or motion for the assistance of an 9 interpreter was granted. (4 CT 771, 947.) When proceedings commenced before Judge Lewis on 10 February 2, 1989, an interpreter was sworn (2 RT 2-14) and employed thereafter.

11 More specifically, on January 31, 1989, before trial began, Petitioner’s motion to 12 substitute counsel pursuant to People v. Marsden, 2 Cal.3d 118 (1970) (see 3 CT 608-11), was 13 heard before Judge Rodney Davis (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55). During those in camera 14 proceedings, Petitioner requested “the use of a translator, interpreter,” claiming it would be “more 15 useful” and allow him to better explain himself. (Id. at 4089.) After inquiring of Petitioner 16 whether he had written the motion himself, Judge Davis inquired of both Holmes and Gable 17 whether they had had any difficulty communicating with their client, particularly Petitioner’s 18 “command of the English language.” (Id. at 4089-90.) Holmes initially responded, “No, your 19 Honor, there has been full communication on this,” and then indicated that while he and 20 Petitioner could carry on a conversation, Petitioner had expressed that he does not understand 21 “the detailed things” or “what’s going on when we start talking about different motions and things 22 like that.” (Id. at 4089-90.) The proceedings were then recessed until an interpreter could be 23 located; state certified Spanish interpreter Jessie Correa assisted at the in camera hearing. (Id. at 24 4090-95I.)<sup>41</sup>

25 Immediately after the interpreter was sworn, Judge Davis stated the following:

1           The record will indicate that the Court finds that the defendant at this time, based 2 on his communications, his oral communications in court as well as his written 3 communication, which is marked and filed as part of the permanent records in this case, is 4 capable of proceeding without the assistance of a court interpreter.

5           However, for the sake of - - or out of an abundance of caution, in order to make 6 Mr. Alvarez feel entirely comfortable during these Marsden proceedings, I have asked 7 Court Interpreter Correa to interpret for him.

8 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55 at 4091.)

9           During those same proceedings, defense counsel Holmes was asked to respond to 10 Petitioner's "statement that [he had] declined to arrange for a court interpreter to be present to 11 assist him with [his] interviews;" Holmes explained he had represented Petitioner for about two 12 years and that he recalled "meetings with Mr. Alvarez with an interpreter in the past," but that 13 within the previous year he did not believe there was a "need" if he (Holmes) slowed his speech 14 and chose "different terms." (ECF Doc. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55 at 4095C.) Holmes further stated 15 that Petitioner had indicated that "detailed things, such as different motions, grounds for motions 16 things like that, that he does have some difficulty understanding. In fact, he's requested that at 17 trial we have an interpreter for him during the trial, and we will be bringing a written motion on 18 that on those bases." (Id. at 4095C-D.) Holmes noted he had no complaints regarding any ability 19 of either Mr. Gable or defense investigator Wilcox to communicate with Petitioner, and, further, 20 that Petitioner himself had no complaints until recently:

21           [A]ctually the first time I was aware of Mr. Alvarez's request for an interpreter in 22 court is when he had a new case which is in Department C, possession of an illegal item in 23 the county jail, which is still pending. [¶] He, at that time, asked for an interpreter, and 24 there has been an interpreter in that court each time, but as far as all Superior Court 25 proceedings, he's never directly asked me for an interpreter.

26           I have also been aware that there was a little bit of an area where he maybe was 27 not understanding fully, but I always felt like since I spent so much time talking to him on 28 the phone, talked to him at the county jail, and the investigator talks to him, Mr. Gable talks to him, that anything he needs to be filled in on we can fill him in on, either before we go to court or after court. I never felt like it was a real serious problem as far as my commun[ic]ation with him and vice versa.

(ECF Doc. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55 at 4095D-E.) Gable concurred, and concluded: "Certainly, if he needs an interpreter, I certainly am not going to stand in the way of that, and I don't think Mr.

11 Occasionally, other interpreters assisted: Daniel Robert (3/2/89 [4 CT 966]), Gladys Cook 12 (partial 5/17/89 [5 CT 1121]), Frank Valdes (7/26/89 [6 CT 1345]), Christina Beebe and Arnulfo 13 Hernandez (8/2/89 [6 CT 1346-47]). On July 24, 1989, Petitioner “personally waived the 14 presence of the [S]panish interpreter” during proceedings held outside the jury’s presence 15 concerning a purported breach of confidentiality by the interpreter’s office. (6 CT 1343.)

16 The record also contains a relevant Sacramento County Sheriff’s Department Inmate 17 Incident Report dated March 14, 1989, reciting the following circumstances:

18 19 20 21 During the first jury selection that I sat with ALVAREZ, who was seated next to 22 his attorney on one side and his interpreter on the other, I noted that he and his interpreter 23 were engaged in personal conversation for at least a five minute period. Both were 24 laughing, his female interpreter more so than he. It was obvious neither he nor the 25 interpreter were paying attention to what was going on. I brought this situation to Bailiff 26 Lynn Taff, who advised Judge Lewis. Shortly Judge Lewis observed what appeared to be 27 personal conversation between the two and went on record about this conversation.

28 During the second day I escorted ALVAREZ to court, and while in court his interpreter produced a small pill box from her purse, opened it and removed two brown pills. She very quickly showed them to me and stated, “Advil, he has a headache.” She

1 then handed them to ALVAREZ. I objected to anyone giving inmate ALVAREZ 2 medication off the street. This matter was quickly settled. Bailiff Taff gave him two 3 Tylenol tablets. It should be noted that on March 13, 1989, Monday, the interpreter 4 produced the same pill box, removed what appeared to be an aspirin or Tylenol pill which 5 she herself took. [¶] On March 14, 1989, Tuesday, ALVAREZ complained he could not 6 take aspirin because of his ulcers. [¶] At this point, I cannot help but to believe that 7 ALVAREZ told the interpreter that he had a headache, could not take aspirin, and asked 8 her to bring him the Advil.

10 Applicable Legal Standards

11 Initially, the undersigned notes the United States Supreme Court has not yet recognized a 12 constitutional right to a court-appointed interpreter. United States v. Si, 333 F.3d 1041, 1043, n.3 13 (9th Cir. 2003). The Ninth Circuit has held that a defendant whose fluency in English is so 14 severely impaired as to inhibit comprehension of the proceedings and/or interfere with the 15 exercise of his constitutional rights has a constitutional right to an interpreter. United States v.
16 Lim, 794 F.2d 469, 470-71 (9th Cir. 1986). The failure to provide the defendant with an 17 interpreter so that he may deliver his own testimony clearly implicates defendant's Fifth 18 Amendment right to testify on his own behalf. See United States v. Mayans, 17 F.3d 1174, 1181 19 (9th Cir. 1994). And the failure to provide a defendant with an interpreter to help him understand 20 those who testify against him may implicate his Sixth Amendment right to confront witnesses.
21 Id. at 470. It may also violate due process by rendering the trial fundamentally unfair. See 22 Valladares v. United States, 871 F.2d 1564, 1566 (11th Cir. 1989).

23 And, although the United States Supreme Court has not yet recognized a specific 24 constitutional right to a court-appointed interpreter, improper denial of an interpreter could violate 25 clearly established federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court, including the right to testify 26 on one's own behalf (Riggins v. Nevada, 504 U.S. 127, 144-45 (1992)), right to counsel (Gideon 27 v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 344 (1963)), right to communicate effectively with counsel (Dusky 28 v. United States, 362 U.S. 402, 402 (1960) (per curiam)), right to understand the nature of the

1 proceedings (Cooper v. Oklahoma, 517 U.S. 348, 368 (1996)), and right to cross-examine 2 witnesses (Pointer v. Texas, 380 U.S. 400, 403-04 (1965)).

3 Generally, the use of interpreters is a matter within the trial court's discretion. See 4 Perovich v. United States, 205 U.S. 86, 91 (1907); see also Gonzalez v. United States, 33 F.3d 5 1047, 1051 (9th Cir. 1994). In the face of an uncontradicted statement that a defendant needs an 6 interpreter, a trial court must satisfy itself through personal observation that the defendant has no 7 difficulty speaking English before an interpreter is denied or withdrawn. See Mayans, 17 F.3d at 8 1180; see also Gonzalez, 33 F.3d at 1049-51 (lack of interpreter does not violate 5th or 6th 9 Amendment where record of district court's sua sponte inquiry supported finding that defendant's 10 language difficulties was not a "major" problem).

11 Analysis

12 Claim SS

13 14 15 Petitioner asserts he did not have adequate interpreter services at all critical stages of his 16 trial because counsel did not request an interpreter until trial was about to begin, because 17 interpreter Carmen Krewson had difficulty translating for Petitioner as she used a Mexican dialect 18 of Spanish wherein he spoke with a Cuban dialect, and because Krewson was "taking large 19 amounts of medication [to treat a terminal illness] that adversely affected her ability to translate."
20 21 Petitioner further asserts Krewson was inadequate for a "lack of understanding of her role as a 22 member of the defense team" and her inability to maintain confidentiality.

23 No request prior to trial

24 As previously noted, the record establishes no request for the assistance of an interpreter 25 was made until just prior to trial. (4 CT 767-69.) Nearly two dozen court appearances over the 26 course of more than one year occurred prior to any request by Petitioner. (1 CT 1-250; 2 CT 251-

27 28 ///

1 355.) To the degree Petitioner argues trial counsel was ineffective in this regard, he cannot 2 establish deficient performance or prejudice. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687-94.

3           The undersigned notes Mr. Holmes' 1999 declaration is consistent with the trial record.
4 In 1989, Holmes indicated to the superior court that he did not have difficulty communicating 5 with Petitioner, but that Petitioner did struggle with technical or more complex subjects, hence 6 the request for an interpreter at trial. Holmes expressly indicated that Petitioner never directly 7 asked him for the assistance of an interpreter until after an early 1989 appearance by Petitioner in 8 another matter involving criminal conduct in the county jail. In his 1999 declaration, Holmes 9 declared that communicating with Petitioner "was not a problem" because Petitioner "spoke 10 English well" and Holmes knew "some Spanish." He further declared that if an interpreter was 11 needed, he would have used one. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5255-56.)

12           Notably too, Mr. Gable's declaration does not address any communication difficulties 13 between Petitioner and defense counsel, nor does it serve to contradict Holmes' declaration. In 14 fact, Gable's comments at the Marsden hearing could reasonably be read and understood to 15 reflect that that occasion was the first time the issue had even been brought to Gable's attention.
16 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55 at 4095E ["if he indicates he needs an interpreter, I will be the 17 first to stand up and request that on his behalf"].)

18           Petitioner's own words at the Marsden hearing wherein he requested the assistance of an 19 interpreter at that proceeding can be reasonably understood to infer he wanted the assistance of an 20 interpreter moving forward. Petitioner advised the court on that occasion that an interpreter 21 would be "more useful" (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55 at 4089), implying improvement rather 22 than any prior deficiency in understanding the proceedings.

23           Petitioner's requests to the court hearing the Marsden motion, as well as the request for an 24 interpreter during the trial proceedings presented by trial counsel, were granted. The record 25

1 simply does not support Petitioner’s claim for the need of an interpreter prior to those requests.
2 As a result, Petitioner has failed to demonstrate that his trial attorneys were aware of any need for 3 an interpreter prior to the January or February 1989 request and failed or refused to act. Thus, 4 Petitioner has not established trial counsel were deficient. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688. Because 5 Petitioner received the assistance of an interpreter during the entire trial, there is no reasonable 6 probability of a different outcome had an interpreter been appointed earlier. Id.

8 It is possible, based upon the foregoing and the record, that fairminded jurists could 9 disagree whether counsel were ineffective for failing to request an interpreter during all 10 proceedings occurring prior to trial. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. In fact, Petitioner has not 11 shown that the California Supreme Court’s denial of the claim “was so lacking in justification that 12 there was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for 13 fairminded disagreement.” Richter, at 103.
14

15 Krewson’s Adequacy as an Interpreter

16 Petitioner complains interpreter Carmen Krewson performed inadequately on several 17 bases. This claim and the evidence Petitioner relies upon for support are discussed variously 18 below.
19 20 The undersigned begins with an examination of a declaration by Yolanda Riley-Portal and 21 a report by Roseann Gonzalez, Ph.D.

22 Yolanda (Oliver) Riley-Portal

23 Yolanda Riley-Portal has provided a declaration in support of Petitioner’s claims. (ECF 24 No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 17.)<sup>43</sup> Initially, the undersigned notes Ms. Riley-Portal’s declaration is 25 purportedly based upon “personal knowledge,” yet it contains statements that cannot possibly be 26

---

27 <sup>43</sup> The undersigned is personally familiar with Ms. Riley-Portal’s interpreter services in federal 28 court and thinks highly of her abilities. Nevertheless, the undersigned has concerns with her declaration as set forth below.

1 based upon Ms. Riley-Portal's personal knowledge. Furthermore, in several instances, Ms. Riley-2 Portal's declaration relies upon assumptions and mere speculation. In others, the record does not 3 support Ms. Riley-Portal's assertions. Of equal concern are Ms. Riley-Portal's specific assertions 4 in paragraph nineteen of her declaration concerning ethics and professionalism. For these 5 reasons, addressed with particularity below, the declaration is unavailing.

7 First, Ms. Riley-Portal's declaration includes statements about matters of which she had 8 no personal knowledge. One example appears in paragraph thirteen wherein she states: "Ms.
9 Cook then went to Judge Lewis to tell him that Ms. Santivanez was not a certified interpreter and 10 anything she brought back would be discredited" and that "Judge Lewis then called Judge Cecily 11 Bond" and made certain statements resulting in the denial of travel funds (conversations to which 12 Ms. Riley-Portal was not a party), concluding with "I think this happened during the beginning of 13 penalty phase or it was just getting started when this occurred." (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 17 at 14 1858-59.) To the degree Ms. Riley-Portal's declaration is not based on personal knowledge, it is 15 neither helpful nor admissible. Fed. R. Evid. Rules 602 ("Need for Personal Knowledge") & 16 1101 (FREs apply to habeas proceedings); see, e.g., Argo v. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of 17 Kansas, Inc., 452 F.3d1193, 1200 (10th Cir. 2006) (affidavit inadmissible if the witness could not 18 have actually perceived or observed that which he testifies to). Ms. Riley-Portal does not have 19 personal knowledge of any conversation between Gladys Cook and Judge Lewis, nor of the 20 telephone conversation between Judge Lewis and Judge Bond. To the degree that information is 21 included beyond providing context, it is unreliable.
22

24 Next, the declaration includes the following assertion: "I told Judge Lewis that I was not 25 having personal conversations with Mr. Alvarez. Judge Lewis said he just wanted to make sure I 26 was interpreting and nothing more." (ECF No. 302, Vol. IV, Ex. 17 at 1855, ¶ 5.) However, a 27 review of the record reveals the interpreter did not address Judge Lewis to advise him she "was 28

1 not having personal conversations” with Petitioner after the judge made a record of his concerns.
2 (4 RT 752-54.) Rather, after the recess and the judge’s further comments about the situation, the 3 prosecutor advised the judge that it was his “understanding that the interpreter has been 4 interpreting the complete proceedings to Mr. Alvarez, despite that he may ask her a question now 5 and then, but that she has been interpreting the complete proceedings to him.” (4 RT 754.) Ms.
6 Riley-Portal merely agreed with that statement when asked, but did not at any point deny having 7 had personal conversations with Petitioner.

9         There are a number of statements attributed to Judge Lewis by Ms. Riley-Portal some 10 fourteen years after the trial, but for which there is no corresponding record because those 11 statements purportedly occurred during a recess. (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 17 at 1856-57 ¶¶ 8-12 9, 11 & 1859-60 ¶¶15-16.) Due to the passage of time and lack of record, the undersigned 13 afforded little weight to this information on review. Ms. Riley-Portal’s declaration also contains 14 statements attributed to Gladys Cook and Carmen Krewson. (Id. at 1857-58 ¶ 12 & 1859-60 15 ¶¶ 14, 18.) The undersigned notes again the passage of nearly fifteen years between the time the 16 statements were purportedly made to the declarant and the date of her declaration. Where Ms.
17 Riley-Portal’s declaration is critical of Ms. Krewson’s purported statements or acts in particular, 18 the undersigned also considered the fact Ms. Krewson is now deceased and thus unable to provide 19 any response thereto. For example, Ms. Riley-Portal’s declaration infers in paragraph eighteen 20 that Ms. Krewson was untruthful about her birthplace and/or heritage. (Id. at 1860.) 21
22

23         Paragraph ten of the declaration is a curious inclusion. Ms. Riley-Portal’s complaints 24 about defense counsel assigning the “very patronizing” defense investigator to “brief” her “on 25 their case because [she requested it and] it would better help” her “translate for Mr. Alvarez” 26 (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 17 at 1857) is simply not helpful to this court, and potentially calls 27 into question her objectivity.
28

1 Notably too, Ms. Riley-Portal's declaration can be interpreted to make inappropriate legal 2 conclusions. For example, she declared: "Mr. Holmes and Mr. Gable both stood silently while I 3 was standing up for their client's rights. I was amazed that Mr. Alvarez's attorneys did not say 4 anything to protect their client's rights." (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 17 at 1856.) Simply put, 5 whether defense counsels were acting appropriately is outside Ms. Riley-Portal's expertise.

7 Finally, Ms. Riley-Portal's declaration includes the following:

8 As [interpreters], we have a code of ethics and professionalism we must maintain.
9 This was the policy at the Sacramento County Courts Interpreters Office all throughout 10 my contracting with them. We are not to reveal confidential conversations between 11 defendants and their attorneys to anybody. We are to translate thoroughly everything that 12 is said in the courtroom. We are not to interact and cultivate personal relationships with 13 the defendants. We are not to make vested interests in specific cases. I have followed and 14 continue to follow these ethics.

15 (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 127 at 1860-61, ¶ 19.) Yet, Ms. Riley-Portal's declaration curiously 16 fails to address a matter that appears in the trial court record speaking directly to her own lapse in 17 professionalism.

18 In an incident report dated March 14, 1989, an escort officer of the Sacramento County 19 Sheriff's Department recorded his observations involving Petitioner and Ms. Riley-Portal during 20 court proceedings. On the first day of jury selection, March 13, 1989, the officer allegedly 21 observed Petitioner and the interpreter engaging in "personal conversation for at least a five 22 minute period," wherein both were "laughing." The officer stated that it was "obvious" neither 23 Ms. Riley-Portal nor Petitioner were "paying attention to what was going on." The officer 24 brought his observations to the attention of the bailiff, and shortly thereafter, Judge Lewis made 25 statements on the record. (4 CT 997; see also 4 RT 752-54.)<sup>44</sup> On the following day, March 14,

---

26 <sup>44</sup> This behavior is corroborated somewhat in the form of Allen Birkman's wife's statement to the 27 probation officer that she was "amazed how some of the women involved in the case 'fall at the 28 defendant's feet.' She stated some of the interpreters, along with some of the expert witnesses, seemingly are enamored by the defendant." (6 CT 1443.) And by Mr. Birkman's father who attended proceedings and advised the probation officer that he was "amazed at the laughing and 1 1989, the same escort officer observed Ms. Riley-Portal take a small pill box from her purse, open 2 it, remove two brown-colored pills, and quickly showing them to the officer while stating, 3 ““Advil, he has a headache.”” The officer then observed her handing the pills directly to 4 Petitioner. (4 CT 997.)

6 California Rules of Court, rule 2.890, formerly rule 984.4, addresses professional conduct 7 for interpreters. In relevant part, it provides: “An interpreter must be impartial and unbiased and 8 must refrain from conduct that may give an appearance of bias.” Cal. Rules of Court, rule 9 2.890(c)(1). It further provides that an “interpreter must not engage in conduct creating the 10 appearance of bias, prejudice or partiality” and “must maintain an impartial, professional 11 relationship with all court officers, attorneys, jurors, parties, and witnesses.” Cal. Rules of Court, 12 rule 2.890(c)(3) & (f). The conduct reported by the escort officer is in direct conflict with Ms.
13 Riley-Portal’s statements that she always followed the applicable ethical code.
14

15 Ms. Riley-Portal’s declaration asserts she recalls just “two instances where the 16 interactions” between she and Petitioner were “misinterpreted.” Both involve statements by 17 Petitioner to the interpreter – one about a talkative juror whom Petitioner said “must have eaten a 18 parrot for breakfast” causing her to “react by smiling” and another comment concerning the 19 temperature in the courtroom, causing her to shrug her shoulders. (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 17 20 at 1855, ¶¶ 6-7.) Plainly those two instances do not amount to the five-minute period reported by 21 the escort officer; the former instances would amount to mere seconds. Ms. Riley-Portal’s 22 declaration fails to address in any way her alleged conduct of March 14, 1989, to wit: attempting 23 to provide or dispense medication directly to an in-custody defendant on trial for murder and 24 other crimes. (4 CT 997; 5 RT 919-20.) That behavior, uncontradicted in the record, appears to 25 be violative of the professional conduct expected of interpreters, for it was conduct that could 26 27 chatter that went on throughout the trial between the interpreters and the defendant. He noted that 28 the behavior was totally inappropriate.” (6 CT 1444.)

1 give “an appearance of bias” and “partiality,” and called into question Ms. Riley-Portal’s ability 2 to “maintain an impartial, professional relationship” with Petitioner.<sup>45</sup>

3 As to Petitioner’s claims concerning the adequacy of the interpreter provided and Ms.
4 Riley-Portal’s declaration in support thereof, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably 5 determined her declaration lacked objectivity, reliability, credibility or record support. Richter, 6 562 U.S. at 101-03.

8 Roseann Duenas Gonzalez, Ph.D.

9 Petitioner also relies upon a report entitled “An Investigation of the Linguistic Issues in 10 the Case of Mr. Manuel Machado Alvarez: English Language Proficiency, Linguistic Ability to 11 Testify in English, and Ethical and Competency Issues Surrounding the Interpreter Services, and 12 other Related Topics,” prepared by Roseann Duenas Gonzalez, Ph.D., Professor of English at the 13 University of Arizona. (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19.) The undersigned has reviewed Dr.
14 Gonzalez’s report and notes the following.
15

16 First, Dr. Gonzalez’s report includes opinions on matters beyond her area of expertise. For 17 example, she opined that Petitioner’s constitutional rights had been violated, that he received 18 ineffective assistance of counsel, and even that the trial court committed error.

19 Next, the doctor performed a series of tests designed to assess Petitioner’s linguistic 20 abilities, concluding that Petitioner “does not have the English language proficiency and fluidity 21 needed to express himself fully and understandably in English during any kind of critical 22 communication, such as a trial, hearing, or or [sic] critical medical interchange.” (ECF No. 302, 23 Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1872.) However, it is difficult to square her opinion with the record. For 24 example, Dr. Gonzalez’s report states that “during the 7 years that he spent in the United States 25

26 <sup>45</sup> Mr. Gable’s declaration involves two related statements. First, that he “did not observe” any 27 impropriety, and second, that he did not believe any impropriety occurred. (ECF No. 302, Vol.
28 XXII, Ex. 63 at 4285). The former speaks for itself and the latter is belied by the record and the escort officer’s report.

1 before his arrest, Mr. Alvarez never took any classes or courses to learn English” and that in Cuba
2 he studied “German as a second language requirement instead of English.” (Id. at 1876.)
3 Notably missing from Dr. Gonzalez’s report is any acknowledgment of Petitioner’s having earned 4 a GED while at Fort McCoy. In fact, he earned the first GED awarded at the facility. Dr.
5 Gonzalez concluded that Petitioner’s current (in 2004) English proficiency was “a 2- on the OPI
6 (Oral Proficiency Interview) scale of zero to five, which is a limited English speaker of low 7 intermediate proficiency.” (Id. at 1879.) The score translates to a limited vocabulary and a lack 8 of “consistent control of grammatically complex structures.” (Id. at 1879.) At the time of trial, 9 based upon her “analysis of transcripts at the time of his trial in 1989,” Dr. Gonzalez found 10 Petitioner “to have possessed a 1+ proficiency on the OPI scale of 0-5” and that individuals of 11 that limited ability “should always be provided an interpreter in any law enforcement, judicial, 12 critical medical, or social service setting.” (Id. at 1880.) The doctor considered Petitioner to lack 13 the proficiencies necessary to be “‘linguistically present’ at trial.” (Id. at 1880-81.) In noting his 14 “extremely limited speaking ability” and “very limited ability to comprehend spoken English,” 15 Dr. Gonzalez opined Petitioner has “a working vocabulary of perhaps 400 words (less than what 16 is required of first graders to be able to begin reading instruction).” (Id. at 1881.) Again, the 17 record as a whole conflicts with Dr. Gonzalez’ opinions and findings.

21 Citing an “analysis of transcripts,” Dr. Gonzalez makes a series of conclusions concerning 22 Petitioner’s English grammar and punctuation, “memorized proficiency” and “lack of English 23 proficiency” causing misunderstandings, and speech lacking “grammatical control.” Gonzalez 24 cites to specific pages of the transcript pertaining to Petitioner’s trial testimony in support thereof.
25 (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1881-89.) The undersigned notes that the only portion of the 26 trial transcripts that Dr. Gonzalez reviewed was Petitioner’s trial testimony.

27
28 ///

1           Furthermore, Dr. Gonzalez often cites a portion of the record in the absence of context, 2 then proceeds to make conclusions based upon the lack of that context. By way of example, 3 asserting that Petitioner’s “limited” proficiency “caused the judge, his own attorney, and the court 4 reporter to misunderstand him” (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1883), Dr. Gonzalez cites and 5 excerpts testimony appearing at page 4022, lines 13 through 26, as evidence that “the Court, the 6 prosecutor, and Mr. Gable all ignored Mr. Alvarez’ difficulty and expected him to continue 7 answering in English.” Reviewing the passage, the undersigned cannot credit Dr. Gonzalez’ 8 conclusion. First, her report fails to acknowledge in any way that it was Petitioner who elected to 9 testify in English. To the degree her report infers otherwise, it is simply wrong. Second, while 10 far from any model of clarity, a total of approximately 400 pages encompass Petitioner’s 11 testimony at trial. A review of the entirety of that testimony is at odds with Dr. Gonzalez’ 12 conclusions and citations to a dozen or so pages. Further, the record includes multiple exchanges 13 Petitioner had with the court during proceedings that occurred over the course of the more than 14 two years the matter was pending. Those exchanges reveal Petitioner was very often able to 15 communicate in English without any misunderstanding on the part of the court, counsel, clerk, 16 reporter or bailiffs.

19           The undersigned notes that following a thorough review of the record it is obvious that 20 Petitioner knew how to interrupt the proceedings in order to be heard (e.g., 1 RT P-202, 8 RT 21 1428 [interrupts argument re motion], 11 RT 2149 [interrupts his attorney], 19 RT 4325-26 22 [complains about phone calls and medication problems at jail]; 20 RT 4631-32 [outburst during 23 co-defendant Ross’ testimony]), and how to ensure his concerns are relayed to the court through 24 counsel (e.g., 4 RT 681-82 [concern re medication], 5 RT 984-86 [concern re clothing], 9 RT 25 1738 [reports Petitioner was victim of assault], 13 RT 2733-34 [complaint re access to shower], 26 15 RT 3183-84 [complaint re harassment at jail], 15 RT 3281-84 [complaint re access to 27
28

1 physician], 17 RT 3804-05 [complaint re inability to shave]; 18 RT 4066 [concern re 2 medication].) Despite whatever deficiencies Dr. Gonzalez assigns, the record could be viewed 3 otherwise.

4 In a section entitled “Mr. Alvarez did not have a cultural understanding of U.S. judicial 5 process,” Dr. Gonzalez makes conclusory statements unsupported by the record or based upon 6 speculation. (ECF Doc. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1905-09.) For example, Dr. Gonzalez wrote: 7 “Like many Hispanic recent immigrants, Mr. Alvarez relied on his own cultural knowledge and 8 cultural rules and superimposed them upon the United States’ system of justice. Respect is a 9 deeply ingrained cultural belief that pervades the actions and perceptions of Hispanics in many 10 situations.” (Id. at 1906.) While the statement may be accurate as to “many Hispanic recent 11 immigrants,” it is not supported by the record here. This record reveals that Petitioner has 12 significant experience with our system of justice, even if those experiences did not involve a trial.
13 Originally charged with murder, Petitioner’s previous conviction for voluntary manslaughter 14 involved an adversarial proceeding in 1982 at which he was present, with the benefit of an 15 interpreter, to wit: People v. Alvarez, Los Angeles County Superior Court. (ECF No. 302, Vol.
16 XXVI, Ex. 119 at 5063-115.) Petitioner also participated as a witness in an adversarial 17 proceeding relating to his time at Fort Chaffee, to wit: United States versus Clark, a federal case 18 involving the prosecution of correctional officers for abuse perpetrated against Cuban immigrants 19 at the detention facility. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XIII, Ex. 39 & Vols. XIV-XX, Ex. 42.) As far as 20 respect for proceedings and authority, and any acquiescence related thereto, this record contains 21 evidence in contradiction of compliance with and respect for authority. Petitioner defied 22 authority and had no difficulty expressing himself or his needs as cited elsewhere in these 23 findings.
25 26 27

28 ///

1 As for Dr. Gonzalez’s statement that Petitioner “would be inclined to submit to the 2 defense strategies of his attorney, including making the entire defense depend upon Mr. Alvarez’
3 personal testimony” (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1907-08), this too is unsupported. Defense 4 attorney Holmes represented to the court during the Marsden hearing that Petitioner had 5 participated in “meetings” with counsel and an interpreter and that the defense team “had tape 6 recorded statement from him trying to determine what our defense is going to be, witnesses to 7 contact and so forth ....” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55 at 4095B-D.) In his 1999 declaration, 8 Mr. Holmes declared under penalty of perjury the following:

10 The allegation that Mr. Alvarez did not understand his right not to testify and did 11 not know the difference between the adversarial system and the inquisitorial system is the 12 most bizarre argument I have ever heard. I always treat the issue of whether a defendant 13 does or does not testify at trial with great respect. I always take time to explain the rights 14 and options the defendant has to testify or not to testify. I always discuss with each of my 15 clients the pros and cons of taking the stand in their own defense. In the case of Mr.
16 Alvarez, he decided he needed to testify in his own defense because of the significant 17 evidence against him.

18 (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5256.) Hence, Holmes’ declaration stands in contradiction 19 to Dr. Gonzalez’ report.

20 Finally, it is significant that Dr. Gonzalez’ statements include compelling factual 21 inaccuracies. For example, she wrote, “Moreover, since his counsel had not used an interpreter 22 when they met with him, even though they spoke no Spanish ...” (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 23 at 1909 [italics added].) As noted above, counsel did use an interpreter when meeting with 24 Petitioner; but more importantly, Mr. Holmes did some speak Spanish, as did defense investigator 25 Wilcox who also met with Petitioner. (See 4 CT 767-69; 2 RT 39; ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex.
26 53 at 4059 & Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5256.)

27 With respect to Dr. Gonzalez’ opinion that Petitioner was not provided effective 28 interpreter services, it is not disputed that the various interpreters employed during the trial were

1 California or state certified interpreters, including both Yolanda Oliver and Carmen Krewson. To 2 the degree Dr. Gonzalez contends the federal court interpreter certification involved a higher 3 standard of competence and is thus superior, that is of no consequence here. At the time of 4 Petitioner’s trial, he was assisted by appropriately licensed Spanish-language interpreters as 5 required by state statute. (Cal. Govt. Code, § 68560; Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 2.890.)<sup>46</sup>

7 Dr. Gonzalez’ report maintains there exists “a significant difference” between those who 8 speak Mexican/Southwestern Spanish and those who speak Cuban Spanish. (ECF No. 302, Vol.
9 IX, Ex. 19 at 1913-16.) The undersigned notes first that the California statute at issue concerning 10 interpretive services does not provide for interpretative services in a variety of dialects. Rather, 11 the statute speaks to “language” rather than “dialect.” (Cal. Govt. Code, § 68562(a).)

12 13 Interestingly, in proceedings held before an Alabama district court concerning the 14 constitutionality of that state’s statute providing for an English-only driver’s license test, Dr.
15 Gonzalez participated as a linguistics expert. See Sandoval v. Hagan, 7 F.Supp.2d 1234 (M.D.
16 Ala. 1998) (in subsequent determination, as to private right of action, reversed by Alexander v.
17 Sandoval, 532 U.S. 275 (2001)). As a part of her report in those proceedings, Dr. Gonzalez 18 addressed the Alabama Department of Public Safety’s position that “there are too many ‘dialects’ 19 to accommodate” the call for providing driver’s license testing in various foreign languages:

21 All languages have a standard written form that is understood by all speakers of 22 the language, regardless of their native country or region. [See Gonzalez test.] In 23 Spanish, for example, people from one country may use the word “carro” and people from 24 a different country may prefer the work [sic] ‘automovil.’ But everyone who speaks Spanish understands that both words mean ‘car.’ Moreover, to the limited extent that particular words vary from country to country, alternative words can be provided. Id. For example, the Spanish exam previously administered by the Department provided some

---

25 <sup>46</sup> In 1992, the California Legislature mandated that the Judicial Council implement a 26 comprehensive court interpreter program to increase the number and quality of interpreters. In 27 1994, requirements and guidelines for court interpreter certification, certification renewal, and 28 continuing education, were approved by the Judicial Council. (See 2 Witkin, Cal. Proc. 5th
Courts, § 387, Interpreters and Translators (2008); California Criminal Procedure, § 21:24, Interpreters-Certification (2017).)

1 alternative Spanish words. [See Pls.’ Tr.Ex. 13, Spanish Examination [Providing both 2 ‘pito’ and ‘bocino’ as alternatives for the English word ‘horn’].] In any event, any 3 problems with dialect variations on the exams did not pose significant obstacles in the past 4 .....

4 Sandoval v. Hagan, 7 F.Supp.2d at 1305-06. The aforementioned opinion calls into question the 5 objectivity of Gonzalez’ statement here that Petitioner’s “Spanish was significantly much more 6 marked by his Cuban variety, making it virtually impossible for any interpreter not trained or 7 experienced in that variety to interpret accurately.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1913-14 8 [emphasis added].) By crediting both statements, the court is left with conflicting opinions by 9 the same expert.

11 Notably too, other courts have determined that differences in dialect do not amount to 12 impossible interpreting scenarios. See Matias v. Sessions, 871 F.3d 65 (1st Cir. 2017) (due 13 process challenge denied re interpretation in immigration proceedings involving speaker of Todos 14 Santos Mam and Spanish-language interpreter); Kuqo v. Ashcroft, 391 F.3d 856 (7th Cir. 2004) 15 (applicant not denied due process where interpreter at asylum hearing spoke different dialect of 16 Albanian language); United States v. Pitino, 887 F.2d 42, 47 (4th Cir. 1989) (refusing to set aside 17 a guilty plea when the official interpreter and defendant were able to communicate with one 18 another though the defendant spoke Sicilian dialect and the official interpreter spoke Italian); 19 United States v. Mejia-Ruiz, 433 Fed.Appx. 455 (6th Cir. 2011) (no violation of constitutional 20 rights involving speaker of Mayan dialect).

22 Dr. Gonzalez’ conclusory statement that “Mr. Alvarez was unaware that he should have 23 asked the judge for assistance if he did not understand the interpreter or if he felt that the 24 interpreter was misinterpreting his testimony” (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1914) is also 25 belied by this record. As specifically cited elsewhere in these findings, Petitioner repeatedly 26 displayed the ability to interrupt the proceedings to have his needs heard, whether he did so 27 personally or through the assistance of defense counsel.

1           Despite Dr. Gonzalez’ numerous references to Carmen Krewson’s alleged incompetence, 2 and Petitioner’s assertions that she “distorted everything he said” and his attorneys failed to 3 “resolve the communication problem” (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1914-16), again, the 4 record finds little support for Gonzalez’ opinion. Certainly, Petitioner’s complaints years later are 5 suspect where he failed to raise the issue at the time of trial. Even where Mr. Gable’s 2004 6 declaration indicates Petitioner told him “he was very concerned that Carmen Krewson would not 7 accurately translate his testimony” and that he (Gable) did not “take him very seriously, and 8 thought he was being somewhat paranoid,” Petitioner knew how to, and indeed did, speak up for 9 himself on other matters prior to the commencement of trial. (E.g., ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex.
10 55.)
11

12           The undersigned notes too that the record contains other evidence standing in 13 contradiction to Dr. Gonzalez’ report and opinions. For example, Robert and Elaine Metcalf, 14 who sponsored Petitioner upon his release from Fort Chaffee and with whom Petitioner lived for 15 about six weeks in 1980, testified regarding his language skills at that time. Robert Metcalf 16 testified “Manuel had a better command of English than did Alfredo, and an easier time of 17 learning.” (28 RT 6333.) Elaine Metcalf testified Petitioner “didn’t speak much English at all,” 18 but that he was “very” interested in learning it. Elaine Metcalf “taught English as a second 19 language” and testified the two “spen[t] a good deal of our time during the day, talking English 20 and with his teaching me Spanish.” (28 RT 6349.) Compared to the testimony of Robert 21 Wissmath, a credentialed teacher in an independent study program with the Elk Grove School 22 District that includes students at the Sacramento County Jail, who testified that Petitioner was his 23 student as of November 1988, primarily studying English. Wissmath considered Petitioner a 24 “pretty advanced” English as a second language student. (28 RT 6369, 6371.) In 1989, 25 Wissmath believed Petitioner was probably at “the point he actually thinks in English when he’s 26 27 28

1 speaking English.” (28 RT 6372.) Petitioner took other courses, presumably taught in English, in 2 the program geared toward earning a high school diploma. (28 RT 6373.)

3 Lastly, Dr. Gonzalez’ report alleging Ms. Krewson violated several ethical standards of 4 interpreter practice (ECF No. 302, Vol. IX, Ex. 19 at 1916-19) relies upon inapplicable standards, 5 speculation and misrepresentations of the record. As a result, it is of little help.

7 In sum, Dr. Gonzalez’ investigative report, for all the foregoing reasons, is not entitled to 8 this court’s full credit or acceptance.

9 Interpreter Krewson appeared and interpreted on more than four dozen occasions without 10 complaint or challenge to her competence. In fact, Ms. Krewson assisted Petitioner for nearly 11 four months before mid-July 1989, when defense counsel assumed and alleged that Ms. Krewson 12 had breached her duty of confidentiality.

13 The question of an interpreter’s competence is a factual one for the trial court. People v.
14 Mendes, 35 Cal.2d 537, 543 (1950); People v. Roberts, 162 Cal.App.3d 350, 355 (1984). The 15 ideal time to question the qualifications of an interpreter is before he or she is permitted to 16 interpret. People v. Phillips, 12 Cal.App. 760, 763 (1910). However, if the competence of an 17 interpreter becomes an issue after he or she has begun interpreting, it can be raised at that time.
18 People v. Estrada, 176 Cal.App.3d 410, 415-16 (1986). When no objection is raised to the 19 competence of the interpreter during trial, the issue cannot be raised on appeal. Estrada, at 416.
20

22 At no point does the record indicate that Ms. Krewson was incapable of interpreting the 23 language Petitioner spoke, or that he spoke a different dialect. In United States v. Lim, 794 F.2d 24 at 471, the Ninth Circuit rejected a contention that the defendant’s Sixth Amendment rights had 25 been violated due to inadequate translation, noting the absence of any objection to translation.

28

1 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that Carmen Krewson's 2 interpretation services were adequate and in no way violated Petitioner's constitutional rights.
3 Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03.

4 Krewson's medical issues

5 Petitioner also argues that Ms. Krewson's "difficulty in translating" for him was 6 "exacerbated" by a hearing impairment and terminal illness. (ECF No. 330 at 365.) Respondent 7 "entirely disagrees with this characterization of Ms. Krewson's health," and maintains the 8 California Supreme Court's denial of the claim was not unreasonable. (ECF No. 351-1 [sealed].)

9 A review of the sealed exhibit containing documents from Ms. Krewson's medical records 10 reveals that neither Ms. Krewson's hearing difficulties nor colon cancer diagnoses affected her 11 adequacy or ability to provide interpretation services during Petitioner's trial. (ECF No. 320; see 12 also ECF No. 223 [same].)

13 Regarding Ms. Krewson's hearing difficulties, the record reveals that she began using a 14 hearing aid in 1983 due to hearing loss in her right ear (ECF No. 320 at 5307-08), and that in 15 October 1986 Ms. Krewson reported additional hearing loss in that ear, seeking a referral for a 16 new hearing aid. (Id. at 5309-11.) On January 29, 1989, Ms. Krewson reported hearing loss in 17 both ears. (ECF Doc. 320 at 5318-20.) A January 31, 1989, audiology evaluation notes "mildly 18 moderate sensorineural hearing impairment at the right ear and a mild to moderately severe 19 sensorineural hearing impairment at the left ear," also noting that "[a]uditory discrimination for 20 speech was good bilaterally, with scores of 80% at the right ear and 84% at the left ear." Further, 21 there was "normal tympanic mobility bilaterally" and "no significant amount of adaptation on the 22 Tone Decay Test or on the PB-Max Test" administered bilaterally. (Id. at 5321, 5326-27.) The 23 audiologist noted his recommendation that Ms. Krewson "be seen otologically . . . in regards to 24 her subjective decrease in her auditory abilities at the left ear" and that certain records be obtained 25 26 27 28

1 for a comparative analysis. (Id. at 5321-22.) Ms. Krewson was referred for a consultation with 2 an ENT physician. (Id. at 5323-25.) In an audiological evaluation dated March 6, 1989, 3 “significant improvement” was noted as “compared to [the] 1/31/89 findings.” (Id. at 5329.) She 4 reported improvement in her left ear during an appointment with her ENT physician on that same 5 date. (Id. at 5330.) Therefore, any deficiency had been resolved and improvement realized 6 before Krewson’s first appearance in this matter as an interpreter on March 16, 1989.

8       Following the improvement documented in March 1989, Ms. Krewson did not complain 9 of hearing loss again until April 1990 during a comparative audiological evaluation, more than six 10 months after she last provided interpreting services during Petitioner’s trial. (ECF Doc. 320 at 11 5331 [“her hearing recovered in March of 1989, but she now states that her hearing abilities are 12 again decreased at the left ear”]; see also 5333 [reported to ENT physician on 5/2/90 hearing was 13 back to normal].) Ms. Krewson again complained of hearing loss in November 1990 (id. at 5337) 14 and underwent a comparative audiological evaluation in December 1993 prior to receiving 15 chemotherapy (id. at 5347). Those latter occasions are not relevant.
16

17       In sum, Petitioner’s exhibit establishes that before Ms. Krewson began providing 18 interpreter services on March 16, 1989, her prior hearing loss issues had “significantly improved” 19 and she did not complain again of any hearing loss until months after Petitioner was convicted.
20

21       The same exhibit reveals Ms. Krewson was diagnosed with colon cancer in July 1986 and 22 she underwent surgery as a result. (ECF Doc. 320 at 5312-16.) In an operation record dated 23 October 22, 1990, it was noted that a September 1990 radiograph revealed a ureteral obstruction, 24 thus necessitating “[a]bdominal exploration with retroperitoneal biopsy and segmental left 25 ureterectomy.” (Id. at 5334.) As a result of the procedure, it was discovered Ms. Krewson’s 26 cancer had returned. (Id. at 5334-36.) An oncology consultation record dated November 30, 27 1990, notes Ms. Krewson had been “followed closely” after her 1986 sigmoid colectomy and had 28

1 “remained with no evidence of the disease” until a then-recent admission for pyelonephritis. (Id.
2 at 5338.) Further, the oncologist noted “a relatively slow-growing malignancy” that “took four 3 years for her to develop a localized recurrence.” (Id. at 5338.) Ms. Krewson thereafter received 4 radiation treatment. (Id. at 5339-41.) In September 1993, following her complaints of chest 5 discomfort, an x-ray and CT scan confirmed the cancer had spread and chemotherapy was 6 suggested. (Id. at 5342-46.) Ms. Krewson continued to battle cancer (id. at 5348-49) until 7 eventually succumbing to the disease in 1995.

9 In conclusion, Petitioner’s exhibit establishes that while Ms. Krewson was diagnosed and 10 treated for colon cancer in 1986, at the time of Petitioner’s trial, she was living “with no evidence 11 of the disease.” Petitioner’s argument that Ms. Krewson lived in fear or that she likely 12 experienced symptoms like fatigue, nausea and vomiting during the period she served as his 13 interpreter, is nothing more than speculation, unsupported by the record.
14

15 In light of the foregoing, it is reasonable to conclude that fairminded jurists could disagree 16 that Ms. Krewson’s hearing loss and cancer diagnosis affected her ability to perform her duties as 17 a court interpreter. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. Petitioner cannot show that the California 18 Supreme Court’s denial of his claim on this basis “was so lacking in justification that there was an 19 error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded 20 disagreement.” Id. at 103.
21

22 Krewson’s confidentiality obligation

23 Petitioner next challenges Ms. Krewson’s adequacy as an interpreter for an alleged breach 24 of confidentiality. However, the record reveals there is no evidence of the purported breach; 25 rather, the record is rife with mere speculation on behalf of the defense. The undersigned finds it 26 necessary to provide a number of excerpts of record to address Petitioner’s claim, beginning with 27

28 ////

1 proceedings occurring on July 11, 1989, including the testimony of Gladys Cook, supervising 2 court interpreter.

3 On the morning of July 11, defense counsel advised the court, in chambers and on the 4 record, that he would be making “a motion to recuse the interpreter’s office in this action, on the 5 basis that there’s been a breach of confidentiality, whose source was in that office,” that he 6 intended to move for mistrial, and would be “requesting an evidentiary hearing to establish by 7 evidence the basis for that motion.” (28 RT 6382.) Counsel believed matters addressed during in 8 camera proceedings “were disseminated through the interpreter’s office” and to the press, and 9 that that certain other ex parte communications were had. (28 RT 6382-83.) After considering 10 Mr. Gable’s arguments (28 RT 6383-95), the trial agreed to hear testimony from Ms. Cook later 11 that afternoon. (28 RT 6395-96.)

14 When the afternoon session resumed, the judge clarified certain comments he made during 15 the conversation with Judge Bond and further discussion was had outside the jury’s presence (28 16 RT 6397-403) before Ms. Cook took the stand:

17 [MR. GABLE]: Last Friday, did you receive information concerning this case, 18 specifically concerning the fact that the defense was intending to send certain individuals to Cuba?

19 A. Yes.

20 Q. Approximately, what time of the day did you receive that information?

21 A. Actually, I don’t know whether it was on Friday, I think it probably was like 22 on Thursday, Thursday, but I’m not exactly sure which of the two days it was. But I did receive information.

23 David Myers came into the office, and he said that for x reasons, he was unable to 24 go as the interpreter investigator, and he asked me if I would be interested in going, and I told him absolutely not, that I couldn’t.

25 And then later, I believe it was on Friday, or Thursday afternoon, I had an 26 interpreter by the name of Ramone Castanada working in the office, and he told me that 27 David had come and asked him if he would be interested in going, because he’s also a certified interpreter.

28 And being that he has a Cuban wife, it would be, he might be able to know how his way around, and he had already travelled and been to Cuba, and also Mr. Castanada said he would be unable to go.

Q. Was this on Thursday also?

A. I don’t remember whether - - it was between Thursday and Friday.

Q. Okay.

A. Thursday and Friday morning before noon, all of this and then sometime, I don’t know, in one of my breaks, I believe it was Friday, Ramone came into my office and

1 he told me, he was like astounded, because one of our administrative interpreters has just 2 taken the certification test, and he said that, unfortunately, she did very, very poorly, and 3 he was very surprised that the County of Sacramento was choosing her, Patricia, to go as 4 the interpreter in a matter that was so serious, and she has no qualifications, being that she 5 only has the administrative hearing certification.

6 Q. Did you have any idea whether, under what capacity anybody was going to 7 Cuba, at that time?

8 A. When they're in the interpreter's office, we all just assumed that it was in the 9 interpreting capacity.

10 Q. Did you, at any, time attempt to contact either Mr. Holmes or myself to 11 determine whether or not that was true?

12 THE COURT: Let me interject at this time. I think the purpose of this hearing is 13 to determine whether or not there have been any leaks [of] confidential information. [¶] If 14 you'll limit your questions to that area, please.

15 MR. GABLE: Okay. [¶] Did you ascertain from Mr. - - how do you pronounce - - 16 A. Castanada.

17 Q. Castanada, as to where he obtained the information that he gave you?

18 A. Probably because he was also asked by the investigator, and a certified 19 interpreter and federally certified interpreter, David Myers, to go in his place.

20 Q. But - -

21 A. And being that David is a interpreter and, both in the courts here in Sacramento 22 and for the federal, we just knew that there was, you know, it had to be a bilingual person 23 with a certification that would be going to do this sort of thing, and they were coming out 24 of our office to talk about it and make phone calls about it.

25 Q. Did you find out from Mr. Castanada, where he obtained his information that 26 Patricia was going?

27 A. I imagine that David told him.

28 Q. You don't know that?

29 A. No, I don't know.

30 Q. Did you receive any information regarding the fact that Patricia was going 31 from Carmen?

32 A. No, sir.

33 Q. None at all?

34 A. None.

35 Q. Never talked to her about the case, at all, on Friday, after the hearing?

36 A. No, sir. It was Mr. Castanada with his, with my office door closed, that he was 37 talking to me about it.

38 Q. You didn't talk to Carmen about the name of the individual that was going or - 39 - does that ring a bell?

40 A. No. I'm saying that I believe that Mrs. Krewson brought her sandwich and 41 was sitting eating her lunch in the office when all these people were, but she was busy 42 eating her lunch, and was not, you know, talking about it.

43 It was mostly Mr. Castanada, that was very surprised and a couple of other 44 interpreters like Mr. Rick McBride was there, that is right now taking down at the 45 Monterey School of Languages, preparing for the federal exam, and he said, "Gosh, I wish 46 I would have been given this opportunity. I guess this stuff is done, you know, without 47 even, you know, asking other people that have the certification do so this."

48 Q. I see. And at that point, you contacted Judge Lewis; is that right?

49 A. Yes.

50 Q. Okay.

51 A. My job as, I'm an officer of this Court, and I have worked here for the last 20 52 years, and as an officer of the Court, when anything, and being the supervisor of the 53 interpreters and it's my job to ask or, you know, get a clarification, and I immediately

1 called the judge, and I made an appointment to see him.

2 Q. Did you also call the reporters from the Sacramento Union and the Sacramento Bee?

3 A. I believe that the girl from the Union uses our office, and so she was walking 4 by, and I did call my friend, Mr. Wilson, and he told me, and I told him that, if he knew 5 anything, and then he said probably you should talk to the judge, and that's what gave me 6 the idea.

7 I talked to him first, and that's what gave me the idea, that is a good idea, I will 8 talk to the judge, and I called the judge immediately.

9 Q. And then you also called Mr. Marlette; is that right?

10 A. I was, no - - I don't know how it was that we talked, or that - - no, I did not call 11 him. [¶] Did I call you?

12 MR. MARLETTE: I returned a message, there was a message when I got back 13 from lunch, and I called you back.

14 [GLADY COOK]: Oh, well, see I didn't call to talk to you, I called to talk to 15 Kathy Canlis, 'cause she's my friend, and it was a surprise that she wasn't there anymore, 16 and the probably they, you know, then they probably told you that I had called. But I 17 guess that's what it was, you called me, and I just - - and I said, I know that it's not correct 18 that I talk to you about this, because you know, so that's the conversation that I had with 19 you.

20 I says, "And thank you very much for returning my call, but I have already talked 21 to Judge Lewis," and that was it, that I said to you, isn't that correct, I believe?

22 (BY MR. GABLE): What did you tell Judge Lewis, about this?

23 A. Exactly what we just talked about, that the interpreters had come to me as the 24 head interpreter for over 20 years in Sacramento, to say that they were appalled that 25 somebody that was noncertified was being sent to do an assignment, and what would, you 26 know, that somebody without a certification was being sent, that nobody complained of 27 when David Myers, because he is completely certified both as an investigator and also as 28 a court and federally certified interpreter.

MR. GABLE: I have no further questions.

[CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. MARLETTE]

Q. Miss Cook, now, what is this Patricia's last name?

A. She's got a very pretty last name, Santivanias, Santivanias.

Q. Is she a full-time employee of your office?

A. She is really studying to become a court interpreter, and she has passed the administrative hearing. And I do give her work to do like jail interviews or Public Defender interviews. [¶] Sometimes I ask her to help in Department T, you know, traffic Court.

Q. Is she generally here from, like, five days a week, eight hours a day, or is she on call, or how does that work?

A. She has her own business. She's sitting right back there, you'll be able to talk to her, if you like.

Q. Now, if she had gone on this Cuba trip, would she have had to take vacation from, in other words, would she have had to fill out a vacation request form?

A. She's a contract interpreter, self-employed. There are only two staff employees that are interpreters at the courthouse, and all other interpreters are self-employed contract interpreters.

Q. All right.

A. So I don't know what, you know, how - - I have no idea.

Q. She could have just come to you and said, I'm not gonna be available for the next ten days?

A. Her answering machine would have probably said, whatever, you know.

MR. MARLETTE: All right. Thank you, Miss Cook. [¶] I have nothing further.

MR. GABLE: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Okay, thank you very much.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Have a good day. [¶] Anything further, Mr. Gable?

MR. GABLE: Not at this time, unless this Ramon Castanada is here in the courthouse.

THE COURT: All right. I haven't [the] slightest idea.

MR. GABLE: Let me ask.

THE INTERPRETER KREWSON: Your Honor, may I approach the bench?

THE COURT: Yes. [¶] (Interpreter at bench, not reported)

MR. GABLE: Mr. Castanada is in Willows today, interpreting up there, so he's not available to testify, and I was not aware of his involvement in this until just now.

THE COURT: Well, what I suggest is, if you want to have an investigator, or if you want to do some investigation on this matter, you can do that, and we will not use the Court as an investigative tool, but I wanted to give you an opportunity to clarify what we could.

MR. GABLE: I appreciate that, your Honor, and we will utilize the services of an investigator to track down additional information on this, and at this point, I would like to reserve the right to reopen this issue, if we develop additional information.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GABLE: You know, in other words, not have the Court rule on the motion at this time.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. GABLE: Appreciate it.

(28 RT 6404-12.)

On Wednesday, July 12, 1989, the court convened for an afternoon session. (28 RT 6414.) The prosecutor made a record regarding his offer to defense counsel to approach the presiding judge to ask that the decision to withdraw funding for the trip to Cuba be reconsidered, and the defense responded and explained why the offer was not accepted. (28 RT 6414-20.)

After a brief statement about recent articles published in the Sacramento Bee and Sacramento Union, the following colloquy occurred:

MR. GABLE: Judge, I just wanted to, we have another witness in this matter. We did locate the interpreter Miss Cook indicated she heard this information from, and I would like to present his testimony sometime this week. [¶] We will be available tomorrow or Friday, and it is relevant.

THE COURT: Well, I will not have time to do it Friday. I'm going to be working on other matters tomorrow, so we can make some time for it, if that's important to do that, and again, we're almost like the abuse in the jail situation, I'm not sure what my authority is in this. You're using the Court as an investigator, really, to - -

MR. GABLE: No, I can give an offer of proof as to what, what I Mr., I believe his name is - -

THE COURT: Castanada. The name that was mentioned.

MR. GABLE: What he will testify to, according to my investigator, is that he had absolutely no conversation with Miss Cook on Friday, or Thursday, that he was out of town in Willows all day Friday, that the first he ever heard of this incident was on Monday, when Miss Cook brought it to his attention, and she was incensed about the whole thing, and that was the first that he ever heard of it, so obviously, the information

1 did not come from him and I want to establish that on the record.

MR. MARLETTE: In terms of what we're trying to do - -

2 THE COURT: For purposes, for purposes of the hearing, I'll accept your offer of proof as being accurate.

3 MR. GABLE: Well, if the District Attorney will, and if we could stipulate to that, then we can, I can continue my investigation. [¶] What I'm trying to do is find out where 4 this came from. Obviously, it did not come from Mr. Castanada.

5 THE COURT: I suggest you continue your investigation, then, because just simply convening Court to hear that evidence isn't gonna have any effect at all on the Court's ruling, and you're using it to preserve testimony or to pursue your investigation.
6 That's not a proper use of this Court's time.

7 MR. GABLE: I understand that we're doing this piecemeal, but of course, I'm trying to get to the bottom of it, and apparently I'm not doing a very good job of it so far, because what has happened thus far is basically we are stonewalled, because it seems to 8 begin and end with Miss Cook the way her testimony was the other day, so we're going to continue our investigation.

9 THE COURT: That's fine. I think that's what you should do. [¶] Okay, let's proceed.

10 (28 RT 6421-23.)

11 12 Before the afternoon proceedings concluded, the subject arose yet again. The court 13 indicated it was not yet convinced any breach of confidentiality had occurred, that it was inclined 14 to deny the motion, that the court was not to be used "as a grand jury" or as part of defense 15 counsel's investigation, and that when the defendant had "something to present, then present it."

16 (28 RT 6476.) Mr. Gable was to provide notice to the court and parties if the defense wished to 17 "have further hearings on the 24th" concerning its investigation into the issue. (28 RT 6473.)

18 19 When trial proceedings resumed on the afternoon of July 24, 1989, the court noted that no 20 interpreters were available at that time. Petitioner waived the presence of an interpreter for 21 purposes of "this motion." (29 RT 6479-80; 6 CT 1343.) The court noted it had read the written 22 motion filed that morning and was prepared to rule.<sup>47</sup> (28 RT 6482.) It thereafter heard argument

24 _____
25 <sup>47</sup> The pleading filed on that date was entitled "Notice and Motion for Order Precluding 26 Prosecution from Seeking the Death Penalty; Recusal of Judge and Prosecutor; Declaration; 27 Points and Authorities; Attachments." (6 CT 1297-310.) In the motion's points and authorities, 28 under a heading entitled, "A court interpreter is an officer of the court and must be held to a similar standard re confidentiality as exists with other court personnel," the defense team asserted that it was "presently conducting an investigation to determine the course of the leak" and whether that "came to Gladys Cook via the court interpreter assigned to Department 15, or through some other source," the interpreter's office had violated the California Rules of Court,

1 from attorneys Holmes and Gable, as well as a brief statement by the prosecutor. (29 RT 6482-2 93.) During argument, when the trial court inquired of Mr. Gable “[f]rom whom did [Ms. Cook]
3 obtain this information,” Gable replied as follows:

4 That’s what we’ve been trying to determine, and that is what will be the subject of 5 any further hearings conducted in this matter.

6 I can indicate to the Court right now that we have been unable to interview the 7 interpreter here that has been in court, Miss Krewson.

8 We attempted to talk to her on Friday, July the 21st, at about 4:30 p.m. through my 9 investigator, and she was asked to discuss the matter of the incident by which Miss Cook 10 learned of this information, and she said that she would not, she had nothing to say to us, 11 and then that was the end of it, and we’re now informed that she is on vacation for the 12 next three or four months, and apparently unavailable to anybody.

13 What we have discovered through our investigation and which we are prepared to 14 present by way of testimony today, is the fact that Miss Cook lied on the witness stand, 15 and she lied when she said that there was certain people present when she learned of this, 16 she lied when she said that Mr. Ramon Castanada told her about this, she lied when she 17 said the other people were there when this happened. We’ve interviewed all of them and 18 they deny it.

19 She lied when she said she didn’t have a conversation of any import with Mr.
20 Marlette. Mr. Marlette will testify to that.

21 What we have been confronted with so far under oath is perjury, and I hate to say 22 that in such strong language, but I’m firmly convinced of it, on the basis of the 23 investigation that had been conducted here, and every attempt that we have made thus far 24 to ascertain the source of the leak has been stonewalled.

25 I think that the only fair inference that can be drawn is that the leak emanated right 26 out of this courtroom, and I’m prepared to testify to that, so I’m a witness in this.

27 My credibility, just like Mr. Marlette’s credibility, and Mr. Holmes’ credibility is 28 on the line in this hearing, and I don’t think we have any business representing the respective parties in this action, at least for this motion.

(29 RT 6488-90.)

Ultimately, the court denied the motion, ruling and entertaining additional argument as

---

and further, that Ms. Cook additionally violated those standards by contacting the prosecutor and “Wayne Wilson of the Sacramento Bee.” (6 CT 1301.) Petitioner concluded he was prejudiced because it was “now common knowledge as to the intent of the defense to send individuals to Cuba for investigation” and “it would be virtually impossible to send the same two individuals, or anyone else ...” (6 CT 1301.) The remainder of the motion concerns the actions of the trial and presiding judge (6 CT 1301-03) and asserts that because the defense was precluded from presenting mitigating evidence during the penalty phase and hence suffered prejudice, the prosecution should be precluded from seeking the death penalty (6 CT 1304-08), that Petitioner should be appointed new counsel because present counsel were “potential witnesses in this matter was well as their credibility being under attack,” and that both Judge Lewis and Prosecutor Marlette “should be recused” because they “were both involved in the events leading up to” the motion (6 CT 1308-09). A copy of a newspaper article that apparently appeared in the Sacramento Bee on July 12, 1989, was appended to the motion. (6 CT 1310.)

1 follows:

2 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you, gentlemen.

3 I have read the motion and I considered it, and just as I went through it - - I made 4 some notes to myself.

5 Number one, there has been no breach of anything by the trial court judge.

6 I informed the 987 judge of the circumstances of the situation. I simply mentioned 7 to her that there was an anthropologist going, and as I told her, which I now understand is 8 incorrect, that she was taking an investigator and an interpreter, and I just questioned the 9 need for those three individuals, and I mentioned to her the other interpreters were upset, 10 they felt this interpreter was not qualified, and I told him that that was simply not a factor 11 to be considered in the situation, but that just happens to be what brought the focus on the 12 situation, and I informed the presiding judge that it sounded to me like someone was 13 getting a paid vacation and perhaps she should look into it, and that was the extent of it.

14 I did not discuss with her the application or the contents of the application or 15 anything, just since she's the presiding judge and handles all 987 application. I knew 16 either she or the law and motion, the criminal department from which this came, had to be 17 the 987 judge.

18 There was no breach by the 987 judge, because she did not discuss the application 19 or its approval or its contents or anything about it.

20 The only thing she stated at all was just a kind of startled reaction when I 21 mentioned there was an anthropologist going, and she made a response to, you know, the 22 question, an anthropologist and wanted to know why an anthropologist was going, and 23 that was the extent of any comment on her part, so there was no disclosure by the 987 24 judge, so 987 is simply not a basis for any motion in this case.

25 I can understand your frustration and your headaches, because from your 26 viewpoint, something has gone wrong and all of a sudden something that you had you no 27 knowledge of and therefore you want to get some remedy from it, but it just isn't there.

28 And on page nine, line seven, from your Points and Authorities, you said that as a result of the trial court's conversation with Judge Bond, funds were withdrawn, more correctly, as a result of the consideration, as a result of statements by the trial Court to the 987 judge, they then conducted a hearing which then resulted in her determination that the trip was not appropriate.

And you're saying that you can't now send anything to Cuba.

It's my understanding this was a last resort in any event. There was no other way to get anybody into Cuba any way but through this means, so just don't see how you can say that you suffered prejudice in that sense, and your request to appoint Counsel to replace yourselves to conduct this proceeding is just not necessary.

For one thing, it's not at all unusual in proceedings outside the presence of the jury to have an attorney give brief testimony.

That is a totally different situation from an attorney testifying in a trial before a jury, and your claim that your credibility has been attacked just simply doesn't hold water at all.

.....
There is no reason to recuse the prosecutor, because they're just peripherally involved if at all in this situation, and there's no reason for this Court to recuse itself, because my involvement had been just exactly as I stated, just passing some information to the 987 judge to see if she wanted to look into the matter, and there's just simply no legal or factual basis for recusing either the prosecutor or this Court, and so it's my full intention to proceed with the trial tomorrow morning.

MR. GABLE: For purposes of any further appellate review on this matter, does the Court make a finding that there was a privilege that extended to the interpreter's office, not to disclose any confidential information that was gained through, as a result of the interpreter's acting as the interpreter for the defendant and interesting or overhearing

1 discussions between the defense team?

2 THE COURT: I hadn't given that a great deal of thought, but I think it's clear there's an attorney-client privilege there, where her employment is in essence as an agent 3 for you to interpret.

4 The attorney-client privilege certainly isn't waived by having that sort of third person present, whose presence is required for you to communicate with your client.

I think it was clearly an attorney-client privilege that applies.

5 MR. GABLE: The next question that I would ask the Court, then, is does the Court make any determination that by Miss Cook going directly to the Court ex parte, that she - - and also, I might add, to the press and to the District Attorney, that the interpreter's 6 office breached their duty of confidentiality in this case?

7 THE COURT: No, I cannot draw that conclusion, because I don't know the source of her information.

8 The [mere] fact she came to the Court with a concern, which her very, I think, sincere feeling was that this was going to reflect back on the court and the interpreter's office and she was concerned about it, and that was her concern in coming to this Court in 9 the first place, so I cannot say that breached any confidentiality, because I don't know where she got the information.

10 The information she gave to me had little or nothing to do with any proceedings that I've been involved in.

11 There seemed to be a very strong personality conflict involved there, and I frankly just wasn't concerned about that.

12 The only thing that got my attention was when she talked about having three people going, and that's when I put in a call to your office, and after an hour or so, when 13 you had an opportunity to call - - I don't mean that d[e]rogatorily, I think it was during the lunch hour and finally came to a point where I had to leave and just called Judge Bond 14 and suggested she look into it.

15 MR. GABLE: Well, the reason I'm asking that is because we have additional witnesses to represent on that issue.

16 We have a very serious problem; however, with the interpreter that was interpreting in this proceeding.

17 She has refused to discuss the matter with my investigator. He's here in court today and is prepared to testify as to that.

18 And at this point, we don't know where she is. We've been attempting to contact her since Friday in an effort to subpoena her to be here, and of today, we learned that she is on an extended vacation to, we believe, Hawaii, but we're not certain.

19 THE COURT: Florida.

MR. GABLE: Is it Florida?

20 THE COURT: I don't think the motorhome could make it to Hawaii, no, it's my understanding this is something she's been planning for a long time, she's mentioned to 21 me and the court staff for quite sometime.

22 She was a little, kind of irritated that she was not going to be able to conclude the trial, but anyway, the point is, if there was any impropriety of that nature, then the Superior Court should handle that as a personnel matter and will look into it, but even if 23 what you say is correct, that there was a breach of the attorney-client privilege which resulted in ultimately the presiding judge withdrawing the funds, that's not a basis for any 24 action by this Court as a trial Court, that would affect this trial, because what is ultimately ended up with - - again I have to assume that Judge Bond's withdrawal of the funds was 25 based on a full and fair hearing and that decision was made and is correct, and if it's not correct, then you should take a writ on it.

26 MR. GABLE: What I want to make sure, and I would beg the Court's indulgence in this regard, but I want to make sure that the record is clear that we are, we would like to 27 be able to prove by way of testimony where the breach came from; however, if the Court is indicating that even if we were to prove to the Court's satisfaction that the breach 28 emanated right here in this courtroom through Miss Krewson, that that would not make

1 any difference whosoever as to the Court's ruling in this regard, then I think that we've 2 possibly satisfied, in other words, I don't think the Court would find it relevant and not allow us to put testimony on.

3 THE COURT: I think you've satisfied what you need for purpose of an appeal, 4 because even if I were, even if somehow you put Miss Krewson on the stand and she said, 5 "Yes, I sat there and listened to this confidential information and I went ahead and told somebody else about it," given the end result, the most would do would be to remove her or have her disciplined or take some action against her, but it would not affect the outcome of this trial.

6 MR. GABLE: If I were to put on evidence which indicated to the Court's 7 satisfaction that Miss Cook was not telling the Court what really happened and how she got the information and what she did with it, would that be any difference as far as the Court's ruling goes?

8 THE COURT: No, I'd give you the same answer.

9 (29 RT 6495-502.)

10 Mr. Gable then continued to ask the court whether it had considered a certain procedure 11 and Mr. Holmes continued to advocate for a hearing. (29 RT 6502-04.) The court further 12 explained its action, and Mr. Gable then asked for "a continuance of the trial to enable" the 13 defense "to take a writ." (29 RT 6505.) That motion or request was denied. (29 RT 6505.) The 14 court asked if there was anything further, and this brief exchange occurred: 15

16 MR. MARLETTE: I just have one comment. [¶] As this proceeds, I kind of learn 17 more and more about it, and as crux of the 987 judge's withdrawal of the authorization was the substitution of parties who were actually going to go to Cuba, that is something that for the record, I wanted to state, I don't believe was confidential.

18 It had been disclosed to me, I was aware that it was not the same as the original parties, and I believe it had actually been discussed in open court.

19 MR. GABLE: Whether that be the case or not, and the transcripts of the 20 proceedings would obviously disclose that, I would indicate that the identity of the parties other than Miss McGarrity had not been disclosed to anybody, because we didn't even 21 know who the second party was going to be until the day that Miss [McGarrity] testified in camera in this courtroom, so I doubt very much that that would have been the source of 22 common knowledge prior to that time, and that was on Thursday, and it was Friday that Miss Cook came and spoke to the Court.

23 THE COURT: Okay, gentleman. [¶] What we're discussing, I was aware it was 24 anthropologist, apparently I never was aware of the actual, the identity by name of the person, until these proceedings that we're involved in right now, this hearing today.

25 (29 RT 6505-06.)

26 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that Carmen Krewson did 27 not breach any duty of confidentiality owed to the defense team. The evidence adduced during 28

1 the trial indicated as much. Ms. Cook testified she learned the defense team was sending an 2 interpreter investigator to Cuba from fellow interpreter David Myers when he visited the 3 interpreter's office the previous Thursday or Friday morning.<sup>48</sup> Cook further testified that on 4 Friday morning she learned from Ramon Castanada, another interpreter in the office, that Myers 5 had approached Castanada about his interest in traveling to Cuba because Myers could no longer 6 go himself. Ms. Krewson, meanwhile, was providing interpreting services in this matter on both 7 Thursday and Friday mornings. (6 CT 1292 [Thurs. 7/6/89], 1294 [Fri. 7/7/89]; see also 27 RT 8 6110-89 [Wed. 7/5/89]; 28 RT 6216-39 [Thurs. 7/6/89 a.m. session], 6240-318 [Fri. 7/7/89 a.m.
9 session]; In Camera RT 6181-85 [Wed. 7/5/89], 6190-214 [Thurs. 7/6/89].) Ms. Cook also 10 testified that she and other interpreters "all just assumed" the non-court certified interpreter later 11 identified to be travelling to Cuba, Patricia Santivanias, would be acting as an interpreter on the 12 trip, rather than an investigator.

13 14
15         Significantly too, Ms. Cook expressly testified under oath that she did not receive any 16 information from Carmen Krewson, including the fact that Patricia Santivanias was traveling to 17 Cuba. Cook testified that while Krewson was present in the interpreter's office during her lunch 18 breaks to eat her lunch, Krewson did not talk about the subject.

19 20         The undersigned notes that some states recognize "a rebuttable presumption that an 21 interpreter in the course of performing his official duty has acted regularly." State v. Casipe, 5 22 Haw.App. 210, 686 P.2d 28, 33 (Haw.Ct.App. 1984); see also, e.g., Shaha v. State, 44
23 Kan.App.2d 334, 236 P.3d 560, 565 (Kan.Ct.App. 2010) ("Absent some contrary showing, courts 24 presume that an interpreter exercising his or her official duties has acted properly"); State v.
25 Mendoza, 181 Ariz. 472, 891 P.2d 939, 942 (Ariz.Ct.App. 1995) ("it is presumed that court 26

27 <sup>48</sup> Notably, Mr. Myers was an investigator and a state and federally certified interpreter. And, on 28 Wednesday, July 5, in open court, the defense team indicated its expert anthropologist "and an investigator" were planning to travel Cuba. (27 RT 6178, 6186.)

1 interpreters will correctly carry out their duties and that oaths will be properly administered”).
2 Some federal courts have similarly recognized a presumption of regularity in court interpreter 3 official duty. See Michel v. United States, 849 F.Supp.2d 649, 656 (W.D. Virg. Mar. 28, 2012);
4 Hou v. Walker, No. CV 96 1365, 1996 WL 684442, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 20, 1996) (quoting 5 People v. Bicet, 180 A.D.2d 692, 580 NY.S.2d 55, 56 (1992); Clervil v. McNeil, No. 08-20144-6 CIV, 2008 WL 4753575, at *12 (S.D.Fla. Oct. 28, 2008) (citing Hou, 1996 WL 684442, at *3). If 7 the undersigned were to apply such a presumption here, the undersigned would conclude that 8 Petitioner has failed to rebut the presumption regarding Carmen Krewson.

10 And even in the absence of such a presumption, the record does not support Petitioner’s 11 allegations. During her testimony, in response to three or four inquiries by defense counsel, Cook 12 expressly denied learning any information from Krewson. Cook’s testimony indicates the 13 information she obtained and shared with others came from David Myers and Ramon Castanada.
14 Even Gable’s offer of proof regarding Castanada’s anticipated testimony did not involve Krewson 15 in any way; rather, it challenged the accuracy of Cook’s testimony and would have resulted in a 16 credibility contest between Cook and Castanada.
17

18 No declarations have been offered in support of Petitioner’s claim as referenced by trial 19 counsel. In other words, Petitioner has not offered a declaration from Castanada or any other 20 interpreter despite Mr. Gable’s comment that there were others who could establish that Gladys 21 Cook had perjured herself. Neither is there a declaration from the defense investigator regarding 22 his purported efforts to obtain Krewson’s cooperation or his efforts to subpoena her.
23

24 Petitioner, then and now, attempts to make much of Krewson’s purported decision not to 25 speak to the defense investigator, inferring guilt or wrongful conduct on Krewson’s part. But the 26 California Supreme Court could have found a reason for Krewson’s doing so that did not involve 27 any inappropriate conduct. The undersigned notes that the record reveals Mr. Gable’s focus was 28

1 not on Ms. Krewson after Ms. Cook's testimony, but rather on speaking with Ramon Castanada.
2 Ms. Krewson was apparently available for at least the next week or so, but the defense team did 3 not attempt to speak with her until Friday, July 21st, some ten days after Cook's testimony and 4 apparently just prior to Krewson's planned vacation, for she had already departed on that vacation 5 by July 24. Even assuming Krewson refused to speak with the defense investigator, she could 6 have done so because she simply did not have the time prior to her planned vacation.

8         Petitioner infers some nefarious purpose for Ms. Krewson's asking for permission to 9 approach the bench after Cook's testimony on July 11, 1989. But other reasonable inferences can 10 also be made – the trial court stated it knew Ms. Krewson was excited about her planned RV 11 vacation to Florida and disappointment that she may not be able to complete interpreter services 12 through the conclusion of Petitioner's trial. It is equally, if not more, reasonable to infer that 13 Krewson was simply reminding the court of her forthcoming vacation plans given the anticipated 14 delays the defense team's motion had raised.
15

16         The new evidence offered by Petitioner in the state habeas proceedings does not change 17 the fact the state's highest court could have concluded the claim lacked merit. Dr. Gonzalez' 18 opinion or report makes no reference to the testimony of Ms. Cook or to the fact Ms. Krewson 19 was unavailable due to a long-planned RV-across-the-country vacation to Florida. Ms. Riley-20 Portal's declaration was addressed at length above and does little to support Petitioner's position 21 for the reasons previously stated.
22

23         Notably, even had Ramon Castanada testified as laid out in Mr. Gable's offer of proof, 24 Krewson would not have been implicated. Castanada was simply going to contradict Cook's 25 testimony that he had complained to her about Santivanias. Gable's offer of proof made no 26 reference to Castanada having some personal knowledge concerning any act by Krewson.
27

28         A review of this record could support a finding that David Myers may have been the cause

1 of the uproar in the interpreter's office. Cook testified that it was Myers who approached and 2 asked both she and Castanada to take his place on the defense trip to Cuba. At a minimum, 3 Myers also approached Santivanias, who reportedly agreed to travel in his place. By asking 4 others in the interpreter's office if they were available to travel to Cuba as the interpreter
5 investigator, coupled with the various assumptions made by Cook and others in the interpreter's 6 office, it appears word got around. The record reveals that such information being disseminated 7 could have happened without any interference by Krewson. There was reference in open court on 8 the morning of July 5, 1989, that the defense was planning to send an anthropologist and an 9 investigator to Cuba within a matter of days (27 RT 6178, 6186), and that information formed the 10 basis of a defense request to continue the penalty phase of the trial to allow for the travel to take 11 place. A review of the record could also support a determination that Cook may have perjured 12 herself. But even so, that fact, even assuming it is a fact, does not operate to implicate Krewson.

14 15       Petitioner's attempts to lay the sole blame at Ms. Krewson's door are simply not 16 supportable by any evidence in this record. And even were there some evidence, above and 17 beyond inference, given the conflicting accounts available, it would have been reasonable for the 18 California Supreme Court to conclude that fairminded jurists could disagree. Richter, 562 U.S. at 19 101-03.

20 21       Petitioner was not denied an interpreter at any critical stage of the proceedings. Cooper v.
22 Oklahoma, 517 U.S. at 368. Further, the record does not support Petitioner's claims that 23 interpreter Carmen Krewson was in any way inadequate or incapable of providing interpreting 24 services. Perovich v. United States, 205 U.S. at 91; Gonzalez v. United States, 33 F.3d at 1051.
25 Therefore, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that a fairminded jurist 26 could disagree that Petitioner was denied the assistance of an interpreter at all critical stages and 27 that he was unable to proceed effectively with the assistance of Spanish language interpreter 28

1 Carmen Krewson. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. Accordingly, the undersigned RECOMMENDS 2 that Claim SS be DENIED.

3 Claim OO

4 Petitioner also complains trial counsel did not use an interpreter to communicate with him, 5 and that as a result, he was unable to meaningfully communicate and participate at trial.

6 Briefly, to prevail on a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, a petitioner must show 7 that counsel performed deficiently, and that, as a result of that deficiency, he suffered prejudice.
8 Richter, 562 U.S. at 104.

9 As noted elsewhere in these findings, the record reveals the defense team had no difficulty 10 communicating with Petitioner in English. It was decided that due to the fact the trial 11 proceedings might involve more complex matters and technical material than had the pretrial 12 proceedings, Petitioner would benefit from the assistance of an interpreter moving forward. (ECF 13 No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 55 at 4089-90, 4095C-E & Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5255-56.) The defense 14 team's representation of Petitioner did not fall below an objective standard of reasonableness, and 15 Petitioner cannot overcome the court's strong presumption that their representation fell within the 16 wide range of professional assistance. Richter, 562 U.S. at 104. Nor was Petitioner prejudiced by 17 the defense team's failure to request the assistance of an interpreter earlier because there was no 18 reasonable probability of a different result. Id. at 112. Petitioner was provided with the 19 assistance of an interpreter throughout the entirety of the trial proceedings, from the first day the 20 trial was assigned to Judge Lewis' courtroom through the conclusion of all trial related 21 proceedings. The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that fairminded 22 jurists could disagree on the issue of the necessity of interpreter services at all times in the case.
23 Id. at 101-03.

25 26 27

1           Petitioner’s argument that he was unable to meaningfully communicate with his attorneys 2 before that point is not supported by the record, nor are his assertions that he did not understand 3 the differences between the judicial systems in the United States and Cuba.

4           His reliance upon the declaration of Ms. Riley-Portal in support of this argument is 5 questionable for the reasons previously discussed in Claim SS. Further, the undersigned notes 6 Ms. Riley-Portal’s opinion that Petitioner needed an interpreter was based upon a single 7 appearance with him in “Judge Stroud’s court,” whereas counsel for Petitioner had represented 8 him for nearly two years at that point. Counsels’ opinions regarding Petitioner’s ability to 9 understand English and his need for an interpreter, and in particular when that need arose, are 10 entitled to this court’s deference. Richter, 562 U.S. at 109.

11           And, while Leslie Colyer, Clay Jones, and Thomas Richardson found Petitioner’s English 12 language skills lacking in their respective opinions, their declarations are contradicted by other 13 evidence in this record. In addition to both defense attorneys’ impressions at the time of trial, as 14 reflected in the record, there is the testimony of Robert Metcalf and Robert Wissmath.

15           Also addressed in Claim SS was the report prepared by Dr. Gonzalez. The undersigned 16 disagrees with Petitioner’s assertion that her credentials are “unimpeachable” for the reasons 17 explained previously.

18           Simply put, this record does not support a conclusion that Petitioner was unable to 19 communicate with trial counsel because they did not use an interpreter. Dusky v. United States, 20 362 U.S. at 402. Neither does this record establish that Petitioner was unable to meaningfully 21 communicate and participate at trial. Riggins v. Nevada, 504 U.S. at 144-45; Cooper v.
22 Oklahoma, 517 U.S. at 368; Pointer v. Texas, 380 U.S. at 403-04. In any event, the California 23 Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that fairminded jurists could disagree on these 24 issues. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. Therefore, the California Supreme Court’s adjudication of 25 26 27 28

1 the claim was not contrary to, nor did it involve an unreasonable application, of, Supreme Court
2 precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1). Accordingly, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim 3 OO be DENIED.

4 Claim O

6 Petitioner complains his constitutional rights were violated because the trial court 7 permitted him to testify without the assistance of an interpreter “when it became clear after he had 8 testified for a short time that his English proficiency was so poor that he neither understood the 9 questions nor could make himself understood in English.” (ECF No. 330 at 410.)

10 The California Supreme Court considered Petitioner’s Claim O, and held as follows:

11 12 Prior to trial, defendant moved the superior court to appoint an interpreter to assist 13 him throughout the proceedings. In support, defense counsel declared, in substance, that 14 defendant had spent most of his life in Cuba, and there spoke Spanish; he had been in the 15 United States for only eight or nine years; he could carry on a conversation in English on a 16 limited basis; but he “appear[ed] not to understand where the conversation involves 17 anything technical such as explaining different Court procedures”; and he “indicated that 18 he does have a great deal of difficulty when the language becomes technical in nature.”
19 The superior court granted the motion. It made an interpreter from the interpreter’s office 20 for the superior and municipal courts available to assist him throughout the proceedings.
21 An interpreter did in fact assist.

22 23 In his case, defendant took the witness stand on his own behalf. At the 24 commencement of direct examination, defense counsel asked, “Now, you’re going to be 25 testifying in English today; is that correct?” Defendant answered, “Yes.” Defense counsel: 26 “And that’s at your request; is that right?” Defendant: “Right.” Defense counsel: 27 “[W]hat’s your native language?” Defendant: “Spanish.” Defense counsel: “And the 28 interpreter is next to you here, and if you have any problems either understanding me or expressing yourself, then just feel free to ask the interpreter to help out. Will you do that?”
Defendant: “Okay.” The superior court made plain that, if anyone was unable to understand defendant, he should so indicate.

Subsequently, in a recess during cross-examination by the People, defense counsel requested the superior court, outside the presence of the jury, to cause the interpreter to simultaneously translate for defendant “the questions that are being asked on cross-examination, because I noted that, it appeared to me at least, that he had misunderstood a couple of the questions that were asked, and” had given answers “not necessarily responsive to them...” The superior court declined to order simultaneous translation, stating that it “prefer[red] to continue the way we’re going,” that is, with sequential translation. “If you feel ... that he’s misunderstanding the question, you may use that as an objection, in this case.” Defense counsel said, “Okay.” Later, the superior court explained its “preference” by calling on the interpreter to state for the record: “[W]e never do simultaneous [translation] at the witness stand, only at counsel table”; “[t]he main reason

1 is, because of the confusion of hearing two languages at the same time, ... and also, you 2 lose the continuity of the questioning....” Defense counsel commented, “I think that by 3 giving me an additional grounds [sic] of objection, other than those provided for in the 4 [E]vidence [C]ode itself, to solve the problem, ... at least I can stop the proceedings and 5 make sure that he understands what the question is.” The superior court stated, “I think 6 things went well, that way, and we’ll continue that way.”

7 Defendant now contends that the superior court erred by denying him his right to 8 the assistance of an interpreter in the course of his testimony.

9 We shall assume that defendant did in fact have a right to the assistance of an 10 interpreter. For example, article I, section 14 of the California Constitution provides that 11 “[a] person ... who is charged with a crime has a right to an interpreter”—meaning an 12 interpreter’s assistance—if he is “unable to understand English.” For present purposes, 13 defendant may be deemed to have been “unable to understand English.”

14 We cannot conclude, however, that the superior court denied defendant any right 15 he had to the assistance of an interpreter. It made an interpreter available to assist him 16 throughout the proceedings. Furthermore, an interpreter did in fact assist. Taking the 17 witness stand, he chose to testify in English. The superior court continued to make the 18 interpreter available to assist him there—and the interpreter did in fact continue to assist.
19 True, it impliedly prohibited simultaneous translation. But it expressly allowed sequential 20 translation.

21 Against our conclusion, defendant argues that the superior court denied him any 22 right he had to the assistance of an interpreter, at least when it impliedly prohibited 23 simultaneous translation. We disagree. The superior court did not disallow assistance.
24 Even with the implied prohibition, it merely affected the manner in which it was provided.
25 A trial court has the power—indeed, the duty—to conduct the proceedings in an orderly 26 manner. (Code Civ. Proc., § 128, subd. (a)(3).) An appellate court reviews the exercise of 27 such power for abuse of discretion. (People v. Jackson (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 851, 855; 28 People v. Miller (1960) 185 Cal.App.2d 59, 77.) There was no such abuse here. The superior court did not act unreasonably. As indicated, simultaneous translation was explained by the interpreter to be impracticable. As also indicated, sequential translation was found satisfactory by the superior court, and was even accepted by defense counsel.
We do not overlook the fact that, during his testimony, defendant experienced difficulties in understanding and in making himself understood. But neither can we overlook the fact the superior court did not refuse him any assistance.

Defendant also argues that he did not effectively waive any right he had to the assistance of an interpreter. That is true. But it does not matter. The reason is simple: Defendant retained any right he had, and went on to exercise it as he saw fit, subject only to the superior court’s implied prohibition of simultaneous translation.

[FN] 16. At oral argument, defendant attempted to raise a claim that, in the proceedings recounted in the text, defense counsel provided ineffective assistance, apparently in violation of his rights under the Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution and article I, section 15 of the California Constitution. He “assert[ed] the point perfunctorily. We deny it in the same fashion.” (People v.
Ashmus (1991) 54 Cal.3d 932, 1011, fn.29.)

1 The California Supreme Court's determination is neither contrary to, nor does it involve 2 an unreasonable application of, then existing Supreme Court precedent. Moreover, that court's 3 findings did not involve an unreasonable determination of the facts based upon the record before 4 it.

6 On May 2, 1989, Petitioner took the stand in his own defense. (18 RT 4002.) It was 7 Petitioner's request to testify in English rather than Spanish. (18 RT 4003.) Petitioner agreed 8 with defense counsel Gable that he would ask the interpreter present and next to him – Carmen 9 Krewson - for help if he had "any problems either understanding [Gable] or expressing" himself.
10 (18 RT 4003.)

11 During direct examination commencing that afternoon, Petitioner was assisted by the 12 interpreter in approximately nine instances. (18 RT 4020, 4022, 4038-39, 4042, 4047-49.) On 13 the morning of May 3, 1989, the court stated the following, outside the presence of the jury: 14

15 I had a brief discussion this morning with the court reporter and the interpreter, 16 because they indicated they were having some difficulties with - - in reporting or 17 interpreting for Mr. Alvarez. The problem that the court reporter presented to me was ....

18 Now with the interpreter, she wasn't sure what she should do when Mr. Alvarez 19 turns to her and just asks her to clarify something, and I told her that in a situation where 20 she's acting as a consultant to him, where he just turns and says, you know, what words 21 should I use or just simply wants her to tell him what a word is, that - - that doesn't - that 22 doesn't have to be translated, if it's just - - if they're just talking back and forth to, and 23 she's in essence, acting as a consultant.

24 However, if he wants her to actually translate what has been said to him, or what 25 he was to say, then you need to translate verbatim. So if it's - - if he doesn't understand a 26 word in a question and asks you about it, then that should be translated. If he simply 27 trying to - - wants some advice from you on how to compose an answer, or maybe what 28 word to use in answer, I don't think that needs to be translated.

Number one, is that clear to Counsel, and number two, any objection to that?

MR. GABLE: I don't have any objection. I'd like to be able to speak to my client for a moment, privately?

THE COURT: Yes.

(18 RT 4064-66.)

No objection was made, nor any concern whatsoever noted, regarding Ms. Krewson's assistance. Thereafter, Ms. Krewson assisted Petitioner about five times that morning before the 1 proceedings concluded due to Petitioner's illness that same afternoon. (18 RT 4085, 4139, 4148-2 49, 4158.) On May 4, 1989, Petitioner's direct examination testimony resumed; Ms. Krewson 3 assisted approximately ten times. (19 RT 4175-76, 4181, 4193, 4195-96, 4213, 4218, 4225.)

4 Cross-examination began later that morning. During that session, Petitioner was assisted by Ms.
5 Krewson three times before the lunch recess. (19 RT 4242, 4259.) When proceedings resumed, 6 Mr. Gable addressed the court with his concerns as previously excerpted. (19 RT 4267-68.)

8 A review of the exchange between the prosecutor and Petitioner prior to Gable's request 9 simply does not support his assertion that Petitioner misunderstood the questions. It is evident in 10 the more than two dozen pages of testimony that Petitioner understood the questions posed and 11 answered them in a responsive fashion. Moreover, Ms. Krewson's assistance during that portion 12 of the testimony was not of great significance: (1) when Petitioner identified a particular date and 13 added that it was "dusking, you know - -," Ms. Krewson added "That would be about dawn" (19 14 RT 4242) and (2) when Petitioner was attempting to identify the location of a purse inside the 15 Slatten vehicle, he testified, "I told you, about underneath of the, you know, he got the division of 16 the seat - - ," the prosecutor asked "Arm rest?" as Ms. Krewson added, "Right below the arm 17 rest," with which Petitioner agreed (19 RT 4259). Outside the jury's presence, the court made the 18 following record: 19

20 21 THE COURT: I just want had to amplify one point on denying the simultaneous 22 interpretation on cross-examination, that is, that, that was also - - the information I had but 23 I didn't articulate is that when, well, before Mr. Alvarez started testifying, I was talking 24 with the interpreter about making arrangements where she should sit and things, and at 25 that time she told me that she would not simultaneously interpret when he's testifying, but 26 that she would have to listen to the question and repeat it and she wouldn't do it 27 simultaneously.

28 Carmen, maybe you can explain, you explained to me why you didn't do that, and when I found out that there wasn't a request to, I didn't go into that any further.

THE INTERPRETER: The main reason is, because of the confusion of hearing two languages at the same time, the court reporter, also, with Counsel, and also, you lose the continuity of the questioning, because most of the time, we have to switch the words so that question will make sense.

1 If I were to use simultaneous, it would be almost interpreting word by word, and it 2 would be just a lot of mush.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 THE INTERPRETER: We never do, I'm sorry, we never do simultaneous at the 5 witness stand, only at counsel table.

6 MR. GABLE: Your Honor, I think that by giving me an additional grounds of 7 objection, other than those provided for in the evidence code itself, to solve the problem, 8 because at least I can stop the proceedings and make sure that he understands what the 9 question is.

10 THE COURT: I think things went well, that way, and we'll continue that way.

11 (19 RT 4320-21.)

12 When cross-examination resumed and testimony continued until completion (19 RT 4321-13 441), Ms. Krewson continued to assist Petitioner when necessary. (See 19 RT 4299, 4354-58, 14 4360-62, 4364-65, 4370-71, 4373, 4375-77, 4382, 4391, 4402, 4406.) During that portion of 15 testimony, the court inquired about the arrangement:

16 [THE COURT]: Miss Krewson, I just wanted to find out how this is working out 17 with out, right now.

18 For the last 45 minutes or so, Mr. Alvarez has been responding to some questions 19 himself and then going through you on others, is that working out all right?

20 That's putting you in a difficult position 'cause you don't know - -

21 THE INTERPRETER: It's no problem. I just have to pay attention to what both 22 parties are saying, that's all.

23 THE COURT: Okay, do you want Mr. Alvarez to - - when he starts to answer, if 24 he was to go through you, do you want him to turn and look at you or to say something to 25 you, or is it - -

26 THE INTERPRETER: That would help. It also would help if his question would 27 be completely in Spanish, instead of half and half, I would be prone to interpret the 28 English into Spanish.

THE COURT: Yes, I notice that's happened a couple times.

Mr. Alvarez, if you would, then, when you want to go through Miss Krewson, then just turn to her and give her your complete answer in Spanish, or I mean, respond to her in Spanish, rather than some Spanish and some English, if you can.

[PETITIONER]: I be trying to, you know, I just - - I don't know, you know, it's hard for me, you know, after all this time speaking English all the time, then my Spanish, and I can't speak the English that well, you know, just get me stop in my head, just get me stop.

THE COURT: That's fine. My main concern was so that Miss Krewson wouldn't be put on the spot.

[PETITIONER]: That's what I'm trying.

THE COURT: Just let her know that you're gonna go through her when you do want her, so maybe this might be best if you kind of turned towards her and so that she knows that when you start speaking, that she's going to be interpreting.

1           If you're just going to answer directly, in English like you have most of the time, 2 just simply remain facing the front, and respond, okay? [¶] Anything further? [¶] All 3 right, we're in recess for 20 minutes.

4 (19 RT 4374-75.)

5           Again, a review of this portion of that testimony reveals no significant difficulties. The 6 court addressed Petitioner directly, yet Petitioner offered no complaint about the accuracy of 7 Krewson's interpreting skills, nor did he complain of an inability to understand the questions or to 8 make himself understood.

9           Viewing the entire record of the testimony reveals Petitioner was arguably able to 10 communicate and understand adequately in English. In any event, where necessary, Petitioner 11 was assisted by a Spanish language interpreter throughout the trial proceedings, including during 12 his own testimony.

13           The trial court's refusal to permit simultaneous translation on this record did not result in a 14 refusal or failure to provide Petitioner with an interpreter implicating his Fifth Amendment right 15 to testify on his own behalf. United States v. Mayans, 17 F.3d at 1181. Unlike Mayans, here, 16 Judge Lewis did not urge Petitioner "over and over to try testifying in English—to 'try it.'" Id. at 17 1180. Petitioner alone elected to testify in English; he was not urged by the court to do so.

18           Neither did the trial court's limitation amount to a violation of due process rendering the 19 trial fundamentally unfair. Valladares v. United States, 871 F.2d at 1566. Even in continuous 20 word-for word translations, "occasional lapses in the standard will not necessarily contravene a 21 defendant's constitutional rights. [Citation.]" United States v. Long, 301 F.3d 1095, 1105 (9th 22 Cir. 2002). There is no such thing as an error free, perfect trial, or an error free, perfect 23 interpreter. Id. at 1105; United States v. Gomez, 908 F.2d 809, 811 (11th Cir. 1990) (no 24 constitutional right to flawless, word for word translations). Petitioner elected to testify in 25 English and was provided with a Spanish language interpreter should he require additional 26 27 28

1 assistance. The record reveals Petitioner benefitted from the assistance of an interpreter and the 2 trial court's actions did not violate his constitutional rights, entitling him to habeas corpus relief.

3 In sum, the California Supreme Court's denial of Petitioner's claim does not involve an 4 unreasonable application of clearly established Supreme Court precedent, nor is it based upon an 5 unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the state court 6 proceedings. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Thus, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim O be 7 DENIED.
8

9 Claims U, V, W, X, VV & YY: Breach of Duty of Loyalty – Interpreter's Office

10 In a related series of claims, Petitioner contends certain interpreters breached their duty of 11 loyalty to his constitutional detriment.

12 Claim U: Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

13 Here, Petitioner asserts interpreters Cook and Krewson leaked confidential information, 14 adversely affecting his trial and defense counsels' ability to perform essential functions.
15 Particularly, that the interpreters' actions resulted in the withdrawal of funds essential to the 16 penalty phase mitigation investigation, and poisoned the relationship between Petitioner and his 17 interpreters, contributing to inadequate interpreting and Petitioner's inability to meaningfully 18 present and participate in his defense. (ECF No. 330 at 493-94.) Respondent contends any leak 19 did not infringe on Petitioner's right to counsel, and that the California Supreme Court's 20 determination of his claim was not unreasonable or contrary to Supreme Court precedent. (ECF
22
23

24 Petitioner unsuccessfully presented Claim U in his direct appeal to the California Supreme 25 Court, as well as in both state habeas petitions filed with that court. For this court's purposes, the 26 claim is exhausted.

27 ///

1 The California Supreme Court's Determination

2 In its reasoned decision following Petitioner's direct appeal, the state's highest court held 3 as follows:

4 Defendant also claims, in effect, that the interpreter's office committed misconduct 5 by improperly disclosing information about the trip to Cuba by McGarrity and 6 Santivanias. It is improper for an interpreter to disclose information reflecting "privileged 7 communications between counsel and client." (Cal. Standards Jud. Admin., § 18.3(c).) 8 Judge Lewis impliedly assumed that at least one interpreter had indeed improperly 9 disclosed information of this sort. We shall expressly do the same.

10 We cannot conclude, however, that any improper disclosure would require 11 reversal. We believe that a defect of this sort is subject to the general rule for error under 12 California law that reversal requires prejudice. When, as here, it bears on the penalty of 13 death, prejudice requires a reasonable possibility of an effect on the outcome. No such 14 possibility appears. Attorneys Holmes and Gable had themselves disclosed to Judge Lewis 15 and Prosecutor Marlette a significant part of the information concerning the trip to Cuba 16 by McGarrity and Santivanias. Although revealing varied misconceptions and 17 resentments, the interpreter who we assume made an improper disclosure disclosed 18 nothing of substance other than the names of the travelers. That fact, however, was 19 inconsequential. Indeed, while they were still pursuing the trip to Cuba by Mayorga and 20 Myers, Attorneys Holmes and Gable had themselves disclosed their names.

21 We do not ignore the fact that Judges Lewis and Bond initially looked with 22 disfavor on Attorneys Holmes and Gable as a result of what we assume to be the improper 23 disclosure by at least one interpreter of information about the trip to Cuba by McGarrity 24 and Santivanias. We agree with defendant that the judges appear to have falsely believed 25 that the attorneys were "misusing court-approved funds." We also agree that they may 26 consequently have doubted their "credibility." For example, Judge Lewis admitted that he 27 had thought that "it seemed like this could be a boondoggle," and might have told Judge 28 Bond "something like this sounds like a county paid vacation."

But the disfavor of Judges Lewis and Bond toward Attorneys Holmes and Gable passed as the judges learned of the difficulties the attorneys faced. Judge Lewis told them that he recognized that they found themselves in a "very frustrating" situation, and that he did "not doubt[ ] the good faith of either of you." For his part, Judge Lewis stated:
"[F]rom now what I understand about the situation," "I'm of the opinion that you have done nothing wrong..." "Your credibility before this Court is just as high as it has ever been, which is high, I must say..."

Neither do we ignore the fact that what we assume to be the improper disclosure by at least one interpreter of information about the trip to Cuba by McGarrity and Santivanias might have had a "chilling effect" (Barber v. Municipal Court (1979) 24 Cal.3d 742, 753) on communications between defendant and Attorneys Holmes and Gable, and indeed on their relationship. But even a reasonable possibility of an effect on attorney-client communications or even the attorney-client relationship—which we do not discern here—does not amount to a reasonable possibility of an effect on the outcome.

[FN] 33. Defendant claims in substance that what we assume to be misconduct by the interpreter's office through the improper disclosure of 1 information about the trip to Cuba by McGarrity and Santivanias amounts to 2 reversible error under, apparently, the Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth 3 Amendments to the United States Constitution. Any such error is not reversible.

4 The People have shown that any improper disclosure was harmless beyond a 5 reasonable doubt: As explained in the text, such improper disclosure revealed 6 nothing of substance other than the names of the travelers—a fact that was 7 inconsequential.

8 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 235-36.

9 As adjudicated, the claim presented to the California Supreme Court on direct review and 10 its denial thereof, does not involve an unreasonable application of Supreme Court precedent.

11 Analysis

12 Initially, for all claims in this series, the undersigned incorporates all portions of this 13 court’s previous determinations concerning claims O, OO and SS above. Particularly, record 14 citations will be referred to as though fully excerpted to avoid unnecessary repetition where 15 possible. Moreover, because the undersigned recommended Claims O, OO and SS be denied, and 16 because Claim U and others in the series rely upon some of those same facts found wanting in the 17 former set of claims, the reasons for those denials are fully incorporated here as well.

18 Because Claim U was also presented in Petitioner’s state habeas petitions, the denial of 19 which did not involve a reasoned opinion, this Court shall additionally consider what arguments 20 or theories could have supported the California Supreme Court’s decision and whether it is 21 possible fairminded jurists could disagree those arguments or theories are inconsistent with prior 22 holdings of the Supreme Court. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-02.

23 To establish an ineffective assistance claim based on a conflict of interest, a petitioner 24 must demonstrate that: (1) counsel actively represented conflicting interests; and (2) an actual 25 conflict of interest adversely affected counsel’s performance. Cuyler v. Sullivan, 446 U.S. 335, 26 348-50 (1980). In contrast to a general claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, if a petitioner is 27 able to satisfy both prongs under Sullivan, prejudice is presumed. Id. at 349-50 (a petitioner who 28

1 can demonstrate “that a conflict of interest actually affected the adequacy of his representation 2 need not demonstrate prejudice”), citing Holloway v. Arkansas, 435 U.S. 475, 487-91 (1978).

3 The representation of multiple defendants simultaneously, an attorney’s private financial 4 interests, and other alleged conflicts may give rise to a conflict of interest. Mannhalt v. Reed, 847 5 F.2d 576, 580 (9th Cir. 1988); United States v. Hearst, 638 F.2d 1190, 1194-95 (9th Cir. 1980).

7 To establish the second prong under Sullivan, a petitioner must demonstrate the conflict 8 “actually affected the counsel’s performance, as opposed to a mere theoretical division of 9 loyalties.” Mickens v. Taylor, 535 U.S. 162, 171 (2002). Said another way, a petitioner must 10 show that “some effect on counsel’s handling of particular aspects of the trial was ‘likely.’” 11 United States v. Miskinis, 966 F.2d 1263, 1268 (9th Cir. 1992). The adverse effect “must be one 12 that significantly worsens counsel’s representation of the client before the court or in negotiations 13 with the government,” reasoning that a conflict limited to causing problems in the attorney-client 14 relationship but without significant impact on counsel’s representation is insufficient to constitute 15 an adverse effect under Sullivan. United States v. Mett, 65 F.3d 1531, 1535-36 (9th Cir. 1995).

17 In Mickens v. Taylor, the United States Supreme Court explained:

18 The Sixth Amendment provides that a criminal defendant shall have the right to 19 “the Assistance of Counsel for his defense.” This right has been accorded, we have said, 20 “not for its own sake, but because of the effect it has on the ability of the accused to 21 receive a fair trial.” United States v. Cronic, 466 U.S. 648, 658 (1984). It follows from 22 this that assistance which is ineffective in preserving fairness does not meet the 23 constitutional mandate, see Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 685-86 (1984); and it 24 also follows that defects in assistance that have no probable effect upon the trial court’s 25 outcome do not establish a constitutional violation. As a general matter, a defendant 26 alleging a Sixth Amendment violation must demonstrate “a reasonable probability that, 27 but for counsel’s unprofessional errors the results of the proceedings would have been 28 different.” Id., at 6945.

There is an exception to this general rule. We have spared the defendant the need of showing probable effect upon the outcome, and have simply presumed such effect, where the assistance of counsel has been denied entirely or during a critical stage of the proceeding. When that has occurred, the likelihood that the verdict is unreliable is so high that a case-by-case inquiry is unnecessary. See Cronic, supra, at 658-59; see also Geders
v. United States, 425 U.S. 80, 91 (1976); Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 344-45 (1963). But only in “circumstances of that magnitude” do we forgo individual inquiry

1 into whether counsel's inadequate performance undermined the reliability of the verdict.
2 Cronic, supra, at 659, n.26.

3 Mickens v. Taylor, 535 U.S. at 162.

4 First, Petitioner contends the withdrawal of funds for the trip to Cuba in order to obtain 5 mitigation evidence to be presented at the penalty phase, a circumstance he attributes to the 6 actions of Gladys Cook and Carmen Krewson, adversely affected counsels' ability to perform 7 essential defense functions. But the record does not support Petitioner's position.

8 Even assuming a conflict for purposes of Sullivan's first prong, Petitioner cannot meet the 9 requirements of the second prong by demonstrating a conflict that "actually affected" his 10 attorneys' performance "as opposed to a mere theoretical division of loyalties." Mickens v.
11 Taylor, 535 U.S. at 171. There was never any guarantee that defense counsel would be successful 12 in sending a representative or representatives to Cuba in order to obtain information and records 13 relating to Petitioner's upbringing in the communist country. The record indicates that after one 14 failed attempt that apparently involved the traveling parties advising the Cuban authorities of their 15 true intent to investigate Petitioner's background and obtain documents while visiting the country, 16 a second attempt was planned that would involve those traveling to pose as tourists and hide the 17 true reason for their travel to Cuba. As the California Supreme Court recognized, the identity of 18 the persons traveling was not significant where all parties were aware of the defense team's 19 efforts to send representatives to Cuba for information gathering purposes. Thus, to the degree 20 any interpreter breached a duty of loyalty and confidentiality is of less significance on these facts.
21 Gail McGarrity admitted in testimony before the purported breach occurred that she was not 22 certain she would be able to enter Cuba, even as part of a tour group. Therefore, any actual 23 conflict of interest did not affect counsels' performance. United States v. Miskinis, 966 F.2d at 24 1268.
25 26 27

28 ////

1           Moreover, the record establishes that while McGarrity was not able to travel to Cuba, she 2 did present evidence in the form of statements from Petitioner’s father and others pertaining to 3 Petitioner’s upbringing in Santiago, corroborating information Petitioner provided to McGarrity 4 and forming the basis of her opinions. Because obtaining information via a visit to Cuba was 5 never certain, and speculative about what other information might have been obtained, any 6 adverse effect caused by any breach of confidentiality or loyalty by an interpreter cannot be said 7 to “be one that significantly” worsened Holmes and Gable’s representation of Petitioner at trial.
8 United States v. Mett, 65 F.3d at 1535-36. Nor, for the same reason, was there a likelihood of an 9 unreliable verdict, so high as to make case-by-case inquiry unnecessary. Mickens v. Taylor, 535 10 U.S. at 162. Thus, Petitioner is not entitled to a presumption of prejudice pursuant to Sullivan.
11 Instead, his claim is assessed in the traditional Strickland manner.
12

14           Moving directly to the second prong of the Strickland analysis, and assuming deficiency 15 for the sake of argument only, Petitioner cannot establish that but for counsel’s performance, 16 there is a reasonable probability of a different outcome.

17           Through expert McGarrity, a social anthropologist with personal knowledge of and 18 experiences in Cuba because of her prior studies there, Petitioner was able to present evidence 19 concerning his upbringing in Cuba. Petitioner’s father and other family members spoke with 20 McGarrity and corroborated information Petitioner shared with her concerning his upbringing in 21 Cuba. That information included abuse by a stepmother following his mother’s death, injuries he 22 sustained as a toddler and young adult, emotional difficulties, academic experiences, military 23 service and time spent incarcerated in Cuba for committing a theft crime against the state.
24

25           Had representatives been able to get into Cuba, and then had they been successful in 26 obtaining medical, academic, military and jail or prison records, that information would have 27 served only to corroborate that to which McGarrity was able to testify. In other words, the jury 28

1 already had that information before it for consideration. To presume those records would have 2 been more helpful to Petitioner than McGarrity's testimony is nothing more than speculation.

3           The jury did hear from Petitioner's father in the form of a tape-recorded, audio statement.
4 And, had representatives of the defense team successfully entered Cuba, obtaining videotaped 5 statements from Petitioner's father and other family members, there was no guarantee the 6 evidence would have been admitted. Those individuals would not have been available for cross-7 examination at Petitioner's trial given their Cuban residency, and despite trial counsels' 8 arguments based upon their loose interpretation of Green v. Georgia, 442 U.S. 95 (1979).

9           Even assuming the evidence the defense sought to obtain from Cuba was helpful to 10 Petitioner's case – that all his assertions about a physically and mentally abusive stepparent, 11 physical injuries affecting his mental wellbeing, et cetera, were accurate – that mitigating 12 evidence was not likely to outweigh the aggravating evidence properly considered by the jury.

13           The jury was familiar, of course, with the circumstances of the crimes for which it had 14 already found Petitioner guilty, including a robbery resulting in a man's death, another robbery 15 resulting in an elderly woman's significant injuries, and an earlier car theft facilitating 16 Petitioner's escape after committing rape. The jury also properly considered Petitioner's prior 17 felony convictions including voluntary manslaughter and assault with a deadly weapon and an 18 escape from prison without force. (27 RT 5990-6003, 6014-15; 30 RT 6802-11.) Finally, the 19 jury also properly considered criminal acts of violence by Petitioner, including assaults on other 20 inmates during his incarceration at the Sacramento County Jail. (27 RT 6017-27, 6037-43, 6049.)

21           There is no reasonable probability that, but for counsels' error – or those attributed to staff 22 of the interpreter's office – that the jury would have elected to impose a sentence of life without 23 the possibility of parole. Petitioner killed a man and injured another man years before 24 encountering Allen Birkman, Greta Slatten, Sandra Stramaglia and Edwin Glidewell. And 25 26 27 28

1 evidence of a troubled childhood, and the lasting effects of head injuries and mental problems, 2 would not serve to overcome the devastation wrought by Petitioner in May 1987, particularly in 3 light of his criminal history.

4 Notably too, the leak occurred after the jury had already found Petitioner guilty of his 5 crimes, after the People had presented their penalty phase case, and during the penalty phase case 6 presented by the defense. More specifically, assuming interpreter disclosure, it came after 7 Petitioner had been convicted of his crimes (6 CT 1275-80 [6/9/89]) and during the penalty phase 8 portion of the capital trial (6 CT 1295). Mr. Gable complained on July 11 that a breach of 9 confidentiality had come from the interpreter's office. (28 RT 6382.) In fact, following the 10 proceedings of July 11, only two and a half days of trial testimony remained in the penalty phase 11 case: July 25 (for the defense: Steven Arthur, David Gutierrez, Aaron Carnalla, Gail McGarrity) 12 and 26 (for the defense: Gail McGarrity), and August 2 (for the People: Robert Rozzi; for the 13 defense: David Myers & Gail McGarrity). (6 CT 1344-47.)<sup>49</sup> The timing therefore does not lend 14 itself to any finding that the relationship between Petitioner and his defense team was 15 significantly affected. Mickens v. Taylor, 535 U.S. at 162.

16 Addressing briefly Petitioner's position that defense counsels' reputations were harmed by 17 the conduct at issue, the record is plain that any early frustration or doubt entertained by the trial 18 judge was passing. Judge Lewis expressly stated counsels' credibility was "just as high as" ever 19 after the incident. (29 RT 6498). He further stated an "opinion that" counsel had "done nothing 20 wrong." (29 RT 6498.) Judge Bond similarly expressed her regard for counsel. (SCT<sup>50</sup> 63-64.)

25
26 <sup>49</sup> Closing arguments began on August 2nd and concluded on August 3rd. (6 CT 1347,1406.)
27 After less than five hours, the jury returned with its verdict. (6 CT 1406.)

28 <sup>50</sup> "SCT" refers to the Supplemental Clerk's Transcript on Appeal, alternatively identified as Volume 8 of the Clerk's Transcript on Appeal.

1 In sum, the California Supreme Court’s denial of Claim U is neither contrary to, nor did it 2 involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. Further, its subsequent 3 considerations of the claim as presented in state habeas could have involved a determination that 4 fairminded jurists could disagree as to whether arguments or theories on this issue were 5 inconsistent with prior holdings of the Supreme Court. The undersigned thus RECOMMENDS 6 that Claim U be DENIED as Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief.

8 Claim V: Improper Ex Parte Communications

9 Petitioner avers that Judges Lewis and Bond engaged in improper ex parte 10 communications because of the “breach of interpreter’s obligations.” (ECF No. 330 at 483-84, 11 494-95.) Respondent counters the communication between the judges did not violate due process 12 and that the California Supreme Court’s rejection of the claim was neither unreasonable nor
14

15 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

16 Defendant next claims that Judge Lewis erred by determining that neither he nor 17 Judge Bond committed judicial misconduct by communicating between themselves about 18 his application for authorization to incur expenses for a trip to Cuba.

19 [FN] 34. At the outset, defendant asserts that Judge Lewis conducted an 20 inadequate hearing on the question of judicial misconduct, but does not follow 21 through successfully.

22 Any such judicial misconduct would not entail reversal. A defect of this sort is 23 subject to the general rule for error under California law that reversal requires prejudice.
24 (People v. Anderson (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1104, 1133–34.) When, as here, it bears on the 25 penalty of death, prejudice requires a reasonable possibility of an effect on the outcome.
26 No such possibility appears. “The fundamental ... harm” threatened in this situation is “the 27 disclosure of potentially significant information to the prosecution.” (Id. at p. 1134.) There 28 was no disclosure of this kind. Even before Judges Lewis and Bond communicated between themselves about defendant’s application for authorization to incur expenses for a trip to Cuba, Attorneys Holmes and Gable had themselves disclosed its existence and substance to Prosecutor Marlette. Defendant argues that the communications in question had a “tendency ... to deprive [him] of the right to challenge ‘questionable facts or opinions’ ....” The tendency, however, did not result in a deprivation. Judges Lewis and Bond themselves brought the communications to light. Defendant then exercised his “right,” and mounted a successful “challenge.” It is true that the communications between 1 Judges Lewis and Bond resulted in the withdrawal of authorization to incur expenses for a 2 trip to Cuba. But, as explained above, such withdrawal of authorization did not affect the 3 outcome within a reasonable possibility.

4 [FN] 35. To the extent that defendant claims that Judge Lewis erred by 5 determining that he did not commit judicial misconduct by receiving from 6 interpreter Cook her complaint about Santivanias's participation in the trip to Cuba 7 with McGarrity, he fails to persuade. As a general matter, an appellate court 8 reviews a trial court's ruling on judicial misconduct for abuse of discretion. (Cf. 2 9 Childress & Davis, Federal Standards of Review, supra, § 12.03, pp. 12–23 to 12– 10 31 [setting forth the standard of review under federal law].) There was no such 11 abuse here. Judge Lewis was not unreasonable in determining that he did not 12 commit judicial misconduct. “A judge may consult with court personnel whose 13 function is to aid the judge in carrying out the judge's adjudicative 14 responsibilities....” (Cal.Code Jud. Ethics, canon 3B(7)(b), asterisk omitted; 15 accord, former Cal.Code Jud. Conduct, canon 3A(4) commentary, eff. Jan. 1, 16 1975.) Such “court personnel” include interpreter Cook. Since Judge Lewis could 17 actively “consult” with her, we believe he could passively receive her complaint.
18 But, even if judicial misconduct had occurred, it would not be reversible because it 19 would not have been prejudicial: there is no reasonable possibility of an effect on 20 the outcome.

22 Applicable Legal Standards

23 The Due Process Clause guarantees a criminal defendant the right to a fair trial before a 24 fair and impartial judge. See In re Murchison, 349 U.S. 133, 136 (1955) (“A fair trial in a fair 25 tribunal is a basic requirement of due process.”); Hurles v. Ryan, 752 F.3d at 788 (same). To 26 establish a due process violation based on judicial bias, a petitioner must overcome the “strong 27 presumption that a judge is not biased or prejudiced.” Rhoades v. Henry, 598 F.3d 511, 519 (9th 28 Cir. 2010) (citing Bracy v. Gramley, 520 U.S. 899, 909 (1997)); see also Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. 35, 47 (1975) (there is “a presumption of honesty and integrity in those serving as adjudicators”).

Under clearly established Supreme Court precedent, absent actual bias, such presumption may be rebutted by evidence that, as an objective matter, “the probability of actual bias on the part of [an average judge under the same circumstances] ... [was] too high to be constitutionally

1 tolerable.” Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. at 47; see also Caperton v. A.T. Massey Coal Company, 2 Inc., 556 U.S. 868, 876-77 (2009). However, allegations that the state courts erred do not 3 demonstrate judicial bias. See Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540, 555 (1994) (“judicial 4 rulings alone almost never constitute a valid basis” for a showing of bias); Taylor v. Regents of 5 Univ. of Calif., 993 F.2d 710, 712 (9th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1076 (1994) (adverse 6 ruling does not show judicial bias); Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 842 F.2d 1034, 1046 (9th Cir.
7 1987), aff’d on other grounds, 496 U.S. 543 (1990) (“[e]ven if trial court’s rulings were erroneous 8 ..., they could not justify a finding of judicial bias”). Further, on habeas review of a state 9 conviction, judicial misconduct will warrant habeas relief only where “the state trial judge’s 10 behavior rendered the trial so fundamentally unfair as to violate federal due process under the 11 United States Constitution.” Duckett v. Godinez, 67 F.3d 734, 740 (9th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 12 517 U.S. 1158 (1996).

14 15 For purposes of a claim governed by § 2254(d), “Supreme Court precedent reveals only 16 three instances in which an appearance of bias—as opposed to evidence of actual bias—17 necessitates recusal” or due process will be violated. Crater v. Galaza, 491 F.3d at 1131 (finding 18 that § 2254(d)(1) precluded habeas relief when none of these three circumstances were present 19 and the judges’ comments were not evidence that overcame the presumption of honesty and 20 integrity accorded by Withrow). The first is when the judge has a direct, personal, and substantial 21 pecuniary interest in reaching a particular conclusion against one of the litigants. Crater, at 1131.
22 The second is when the judge becomes embroiled in a running, bitter controversy with one of the 23 litigants. Id. And the third is when the judge acts as part of the accusatory process, such as 24 holding the trial after acting as a one-man grand jury. Id.

1 Analysis

2 The California Supreme Court's denial of the claim on direct review does not involve any 3 unreasonable application of Supreme Court precedent. And its denial of the claim in state habeas 4 proceedings could have involved a determination that fairminded jurists could disagree about 5 whether Petitioner had been denied any federal constitutional right.

7 California Penal Code § 987.9, subdivision (a) states:

8 In the trial of a capital case or a case under subdivision (a) of Section 190.05, the 9 indigent defendant, through the defendant's counsel, may request the court for funds for 10 the specific payment of investigators, experts, and others for the preparation or 11 presentation of the defense. The application for funds shall be by affidavit and shall 12 specify that the funds are reasonably necessary for the preparation or presentation of the 13 defense. The fact that an application has been made shall be confidential and the contents 14 of the application shall be confidential. Upon receipt of an application, a judge of the 15 court, other than the trial judge presiding over the case in question, shall rule on the 16 reasonableness of the request and shall disburse an appropriate amount of money to the 17 defendant's attorney. The ruling on the reasonableness of the request shall be made at an 18 in camera hearing. In making the ruling, the court shall be guided by the need to provide a 19 complete and full defense for the defendant.

20 "The confidentiality requirement was evidently intended to prevent the prosecution from 21 learning of the application for funds and thereby improperly anticipating the accused's defense." 22 People v. Anderson, 43 Cal.3d 1104, 1132 (1987). As correctly noted by the California Supreme 23 Court in this matter, the prosecutor did not learn anything as a result of any breach of 24 confidentiality that would allow him to improperly anticipate Petitioner's defense. (28 RT 6393-25 94.)

26 Here, the record also reveals the trial court and the prosecutor were already aware that an 27 application for investigative funds had been made by the defense; that information was provided 28 by the defense team during various discussions with the trial court concerning scheduling in open court. Messrs. Mayorga and Myers were identified in open court on June 13, 1989. (26 RT 5945-46, 5948-49.) On June 26, 1989, Mr. Gable stated in open court that the "prosecutor is well aware that we're trying to gather information from Mr. Alvarez's homeland ...." (27 RT 6052.)

1 Further, on July 5, 1989, the defense indicated it was sending a cultural anthropologist and an 2 investigator to Cuba around July 10, 1989. (27 RT 6178, 6186.) And the specific contents of the 3 application for funds were not revealed in any way by Judge Bond as § 987.9 judge. Judge Lewis 4 was aware from defense counsel that certain funds had been set aside to obtain information and 5 records regarding Petitioner’s upbringing in Cuba, and that two representatives would be 6 traveling to Cuba. Judge Lewis also knew that the defense team’s first attempt to gain entry into 7 Cuba was not successful. When Judge Lewis learned from Gladys Cook that “an interpreter that 8 was going was not really needed, and was just, in fact, had kind of boasted, to mean that she was 9 getting this free vacation” (28 RT 6389), Lewis eventually called Judge Bond, advising her that 10 he had some concerns about the necessity of three people traveling to Cuba, and that he “simply 11 wanted to bring that to her attention.” (28 RT 6391.) Judge Lewis mentioned to Judge Bond that 12 he had been advised in open court that those traveling would have to be in Mexico for three or 13 four days in order to “get the visas” and that “they’re part of a tour group.” (28 RT 6392.)

16 “A judge should accord to every person who is legally interested in a proceeding, 17 or his lawyer, full right to be heard according to law, and, except as authorized by law, 18 neither initiate nor consider ex parte or other communications concerning a pending or 19 impending proceeding. A judge, however, may obtain the advice of a disinterested expert 20 on the law applicable to a proceeding before him if he gives notice to the parties of the 21 person consulted and the substance of the advice, and affords the parties reasonable 22 opportunity to respond.” (Cal.Code of Jud.Conduct, canon 3A(4).)

21 People v. Hernandez, 160 Cal.App.3d 725, 738 (1984). And,

22 [t]he commentary to canon 3A(4) states in pertinent part: [¶] “The proscription against 23 communications concerning a proceeding includes communications from lawyers, law 24 teachers, and other persons who are not participants in the proceeding, except to the 25 limited extent permitted. It does not preclude a judge from consulting with other judges, or with court personnel whose function is to aid the judge in carrying out his adjudicative responsibilities.” (Emphasis added.)

26 Id. at 739. Judge Lewis did not improperly communicate with either Judge Bond or interpreter 27 Cook. Judge Lewis was understandably concerned with the completion of the penalty phase of 28 the trial and circumstances affecting the trial schedule. Nor was Judge Bond precluded from

1 receiving communications from Judge Lewis as that information aided her adjudicative 2 responsibilities relative to funding requests.

3 Even if the communication between Judges Bond and Lewis “injected misinformation into 4 the proceedings,” the California Supreme Court could have concluded there was no prejudice to 5 Petitioner. He did not have a right to leave the 987.9 judge with inaccurate information once it 6 was learned that Messrs. Mayorga and Myers were “persona non grata” and that other persons 7 had to be sent to Cuba in their place. Mr. Gable expressly admitted he had avoided advising 8 Judge Bond of the changed circumstances because Mayorga and Myers’ unsuccessful attempt to 9 enter Cuba involved the pair truthfully advising Cuban authorities of their intent to obtain 10 information to be used during Petitioner’s trial. The second attempt to obtain the information 11 would not involve being forthright with Cuban authorities. Rather, the second attempt would 12 involve two persons, one everyone understood to be defense expert Gail McGarrity and an 13 unnamed investigator-interpreter, posing as tourists in order to avoid being refused admittance as 14 had Mayorga and Myers.

17 Petitioner claims prejudice by asserting Judge Bond was “obviously angry” and had 18 “already determined,” prior to summoning defense counsel to a hearing, that the funds would be 19 denied. The record does not support this position. There is no dispute that Judge Bond was 20 frustrated and perhaps even angry initially, but she heard from both Gable and Holmes and 21 obviously considered their arguments and reasoning, before ultimately concluding she could not 22 permit the funds to be expended where a ruse was to be employed in an admitted effort to 23 circumvent the Cuban authorities because those same authorities had previously denied 24 Petitioner’s representatives admittance. (SCT 42-64.) An average judge faced with these same 25 circumstances does not lead to a probability of actual bias “too high to be constitutionally 26 tolerable.” Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. at 47.

1 The undersigned briefly addresses Mr. Gable's declaration, submitted in support of this 2 claim and those related, to note that his declaration fails to address the reality of the basis for 3 Judge Bond's election to withdraw previously approved funds: the subterfuge the defense 4 intended to employ in order to gain entry to Cuba.

6 Petitioner did not overcome the presumption that Judges Lewis and Bond were neither 7 biased nor prejudiced. Rhoades v. Henry, 598 F.3d at 519. The judges' communications with 8 each other and their adverse rulings do not demonstrate bias. Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. at 9 555; Taylor v. Regents of Univ. of Calif., 993 F.2d at 712; Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 842 F.2d at 10 1046. Neither Judge Lewis nor Judge Bond's behavior was so fundamentally unfair as to violate 11 federal due process. Duckett v. Godinez, 67 F.3d at 740. Moreover, neither Lewis nor Bond had 12 a direct, personal or substantial pecuniary interest in reaching the conclusion each did, nor were 13 either embroiled in a running, bitter controversy with Petitioner, and neither acted as part of the 14 accusatory process. Crater v. Galaza, 491 F.3d at 1131.

15 16 For the foregoing reasons, the California Supreme Court's denial of this claim was 17 reasonable. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Furthermore, that court's denial of the claims on state habeas 18 could have reasonably concluded that fairminded jurists could disagree that any judicial 19 misconduct or bias occurred. Richter, 562 U.S. 101-03. Thus, the undersigned RECOMMENDS 20 that Claim V be DENIED.

21 22 Claim W: Judicial Misconduct

23 Petitioner complains that Judge Lewis' failure to recuse himself in light of the 24 circumstances surrounding this incident amounts to judicial misconduct because the judge 25 testified as an unsworn witness while hearing his complaints about interpreter breach of 26 confidentiality. (ECF No. 330 at 483-84, 495-96.) Respondent maintains the California 27 Supreme Court's denial of Petitioner's claim on direct appeal, and again in his second state 28

1 habeas petition, was neither unreasonable nor contrary to Supreme Court precedent, thereby 2 precluding habeas relief. (ECF No. 345 at 261-64.)

3 The California Supreme Court Determination

4 The state’s highest court denied the claim as follows:

6 Defendant then claims that Judge Lewis erred by denying his motion to recuse 7 himself from his other motions relating to his application for authorization to incur 8 expenses for a trip to Cuba.

9 As a general matter, an appellate court reviews a trial court’s ruling on a recusal 10 motion for abuse of discretion. (Cf. 2 Childress & Davis, Federal Standards of Review, 11 supra, § 12.05, pp. 12–35–12–40 [setting forth the standard of review under federal law].)

12 No such abuse appears. Judge Lewis was not unreasonable in declining to recuse 13 himself. Certainly, he was not required to do so. Defendant argues to the contrary. He 14 asserts that Judge Lewis had “personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts 15 concerning the proceeding” (Code Civ. Proc., § 170.1, subd. (a)(1))—including whether 16 he and Judge Bond communicated about his application for authorization to incur 17 expenses for a trip to Cuba—and hence might, and indeed did, serve as a “de facto” 18 witness. Judge Lewis cannot be deemed to have had “personal knowledge of disputed 19 evidentiary facts”: he removed such facts from dispute by resolving them for present 20 purposes in defendant’s favor, as through his implicit concession that he and Judge Bond 21 communicated about the application.

22 [FN] 36. Defendant claims in substance that, because Judge Lewis 23 committed reversible error under California law by denying his motion to recuse 24 himself, he thereby committed reversible error under the Fifth and Sixth 25 Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, he did not 26 commit any error under California law.

27 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 237-38.

28 Analysis

Recusal is required in those circumstances “in which experience teaches us that the probability of actual bias on the part of the judge...is too high to be constitutionally tolerable.” Caperton v. A.T. Massey Coal Co., Inc., 556 U.S. at 877. In performing this analysis, a court does not evaluate the actual judge harbored subjective bias but whether “the average judge in her position was likely to be neutral or whether there existed an unconstitutional potential for bias.” Hurles v. Ryan, 752 F.3d at 789. Put another way, the court must consider “whether ‘under a realistic appraisal of psychological tendencies and human weakness,’ the [judge’s] interest ‘poses

1 such a risk of actual bias or prejudgment that the practice must be forbidden if the guarantee of 2 due process is to be absolutely implemented.” Hurles, at 789 (citing Caperton, 556 U.S. at 883-3 84). The “risk of unfairness has no mechanical or static definition. It ‘cannot be defined with 4 precision’ because ‘[c]ircumstances and relationships must be considered.” Hurles, at 789 5 (quoting In re Murchison, 349 U.S. at 136).

7 When hearing and considering Petitioner’s motions, Judge Lewis assumed a breach of 8 confidentiality by the interpreter’s office had occurred. (28 RT 6502-03 [assuming breach by 9 Krewson & assuming Cook testified untruthfully].) He admitted calling Judge Bond to advise her 10 of his concerns about the defense team’s plans to travel to Cuba. Thus, when he stated for the 11 record the content of his conversations with Judge Bond and supervising interpreter Gladys Cook, 12 he was not doing so in a disputed-evidentiary-fact context, unlike the situation in Hurles v. Ryan.
13 Furthermore, the information Judge Lewis provided to Judge Bond did not relate directly to 14 Petitioner’s guilt. In re Murchison, 349 U.S. at 138. This is not an extreme or extraordinary case 15 that due process would prohibit Judge Lewis presiding over. Caperton, 556 U.S. at 876.
16

17 Judge Lewis’ interest was motivated by maintaining the trial’s schedule – a schedule 18 exceeding predictions. Judge Bond’s interest concerned the propriety of government funds 19 appropriated for preparation of the defense. Neither judge’s interest “poses such a risk of actual 20 bias or prejudgment that the practice must be forbidden” to guarantee due process. Hurles v.
21 Ryan, 752 F.3d at 789.

23 A review of this record reveals that the circumstances at play did not reveal a prohibited 24 interest or proceeding rendering the judge unable to maintain detachment; fair judgment was 25 possible. Caperton, at 876, 887-88; Liteky, 510 U.S. at 555; Mayberry v. Pennsylvania, 400 U.S.
26 455, 466 (1971). Hence, the California Supreme Court reasonably denied Petitioner’s claim. 28 27

28 ///

1 U.S.C. § 2254(d); Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-102. The undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim 2 W be DENIED.

3 Claim X: Deprivation of Due Process and Fair Trial for Failure to Take Sworn 4 Testimony of Prosecutor

5 Next, Petitioner asserts Judge Lewis failed to conduct an adequate hearing and violated 6 his rights to due process and a fair trial by not obtaining “sworn testimony establishing the impact 7 of Gladys Cook’s disclosure of privileged information to the prosecution.” (ECF No. 330 at 483, 8 496.) Respondent argues the state court’s adjudication of the claim was neither contrary to, nor 9 did it involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent, thereby precluding relief 10 in this proceeding. (ECF No. 345 at 264-65.)

12 Petitioner presented this claim in his direct appeal to the California Supreme Court and in 13 his second state habeas petition filed with that court. Because the claims were denied, they are 14 exhausted for purpose of federal habeas review.

15 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

16 The California Supreme Court reasoned as follows:

17
18 Defendant then claims that Judge Lewis erred by failing to require Prosecutor 19 Marlette to testify, sua sponte, as to his receipt of what we assume to be the improper 20 disclosure by at least one interpreter of information about the trip to Cuba by McGarrity and Santivanias. We disagree. Defendant’s premise is that Judge Lewis was under a duty to demand such testimony, even in the absence of a request. It is unsupported.

21 [FN] 37. Defendant claims in substance that, because Judge Lewis 22 committed reversible error under California law by failing to require Prosecutor 23 Marlette to testify sua sponte, he thereby committed reversible error under the 24 Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, Judge Lewis did not commit any error under California law.

25 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 238.

27 ////

28 ////

1                    Analysis

2                    Petitioner has not explained how the California Supreme Court’s ruling is unreasonable.
3 He offers no legal authority holding that the trial court had a sua sponte duty to take the 4 prosecutor’s sworn testimony.

5                    Further, the record arguably does not support Petitioner’s claim that Judge Lewis 6 permitted “the prosecutor to ‘testify’ about what Gladys Cook told him ....” (ECF No. 330 at 7 496.) The prosecutor merely stated information for purposes of making a record. Certainly, 8 defense counsel did not object to the statements nor did counsel make any request for formal 9 testimony by Prosecutor Marlette. (28 RT 6382-473; 29 RT 6479-507.) It is plain from this 10 record that the prosecutor was well informed by the defense team about its efforts to obtain 11 information from Cuba to be used in the penalty phase portion of the trial. (See 26 RT 5945-46, 12 5948-49; 27 RT 6052, 6177, 6186.)

13                    On July 7, 1989, in open court and outside the presence of the jury, this exchange 14 occurred:

15                    THE COURT: Now, it’s my understanding - - and I think Mr. Marlette is aware of 16 the basics of sending somebody to Cuba - -

17                    MR. GABLE: I don’t have any problem with it.

18                    THE COURT: Let me know if you think I’m disclosing something that should 19 have been in camera, but my understanding, you have this expert who has now, you have 20 a confirmed flight to Cuba, on Tuesday the 11th?

21                    MR. GABLE: That’s correct, your Honor.

22                    THE COURT: Okay.

23                    MR. GABLE: Actually it’s a confirmed flight to Mexico City on the 11th, the tour 24 is set, the details are worked out for confirmation for the flight to leave from Mexico City 25 on the 15th, the return to Mexico City into the United States is on the 22nd, so it’s all 26 confirmed for the time period that we discussed.

27                    THE COURT: Okay, a minor detail why is she going down to Mexico on the 11th, 28 assuming she’s going to be, is she going to paid this whole time, and if so, why is she going down five days or four days before?

                    MR. GABLE: Here’s how it works: It’s a tour package, that’s how you have to do it.

                    You have to go there three days in advance, you have to go to the Cuban embassy and get your passports in order, that’s just the way that they set it up.

1 (28 RT 6308-09.) At that point, as previously noted, three of the four travelers had already been 2 identified by name, if not profession, in open court.

3 On July 11, 1989, during the morning session, the prosecutor offered the following after 4 the court had advised the defense team about “what [its] participation was in” the matter:

5 MR. MARLETTE: Perhaps I should as well, because I’m outside that vale of 6 confidentiality.

7 There were a number of things I knew about the entire operation, and there was 8 one thing that I found out through Miss Cook, and what I had known before was that Rod 9 Mayorga and somebody else, who I didn’t know, was going to try to go down.

10 But I knew that before they went, I knew that they had hit Mexico City and then 11 turned around.

12 I knew after that, that they were gonna try and send somebody else again, and I 13 assumed there was a reauthorization for a second trip at that time.

14 I knew through conversations with Counsel just out in the custody hall or 15 wherever, that I guess some stuff here in open Court, as well, that the plan then was to 16 send a cultural anthropologist, and all that information I had from conversations with 17 Counsel or just listening when we were in open court.

18 The information that I got from Miss Cook, that was the first time I heard that there 19 was a second person or that the second person going on this current trip was identified to 20 me.

21 I don’t even recall what the woman’s name was, but then she told me some things 22 about her, and her situation and some problems that she this person who was going, and 23 her husband were having.

24 It’s my understanding however that this additional person, who also happens to be 25 like a junior grade interpreter or something, was not someone who’d been testifying in the 26 trial, or somebody who - - against who I could use the information Miss Cook conveyed to 27 me.

28 But save for that, identifying that extra person and telling me some things about that person’s background, there was as nothing else that I learned, other than through Counsel.

(28 RT 6393-94, emphasis added.) Finally, on July 24, 1989, the prosecutor stated the following:

MR. MARLETTE: I just have one comment. [¶] As this proceeds, I kind of learn more and more about it, and as crux of the 987 judge’s withdrawal of the authorization was the substitution of parties who were actually going to go to Cuba, that is something that for the record, I wanted to state, I don’t believe was confidential.

It has been disclosed to me, I was aware that it was not the same as the original parties, and I believe it had actually been discussed in open court.

(29 RT 6505.)

1           Given the foregoing, the California Supreme Court’s determination is not contrary to 2 Supreme Court precedent, nor does it involve an unreasonable application of such precedent. 28 3 U.S.C. § 2254(d). That court could have reasonably concluded that fairminded jurists could 4 disagree on the issue. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. As a result, the undersigned RECOMMENDS 5 that Claim X be DENIED as Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief.

7           Claim VV: Failure to Object to Prosecutor’s Testimony

8           Next, Petitioner complains that defense counsel were ineffective for failing to object to the 9 prosecutor’s “unsworn testimony and failed to object to the process whereby the prosecutor was 10 permitted to testify but was not subject to cross-examination.” (ECF No. 330 at 483, 498-501.) 11 In reply, Respondent contends the adjudication of the claim by the California Supreme Court was 12 reasonable, and, thus, precludes habeas relief. (ECF No. 345 at 266-68.) 13

14           Petitioner presented this claim in his direct appeal and in both state habeas petitions 15 considered by the California Supreme Court; the claim is exhausted.

16           The California Supreme Court’s Determination

17           On direct appeal, the state’s highest court concluded as follows:

18           Underlying all the foregoing points urged by defendant is a broad and somewhat 19 undefined claim of violation of the right to the assistance of counsel granted him by the 20 Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

21           A defendant’s Sixth Amendment right to the assistance of counsel includes a right 22 to effective assistance. (E.g., People v. Ledesma, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 215.) For present 23 purposes, “counsel” may embrace an attorney’s agent, such as an interpreter. (See Chacon 24 v. Wood (9th Cir. 1994) 36 F.3d 1459, 1463–65.)

25           To establish ineffective assistance of counsel entitling him to relief, a defendant 26 must demonstrate that counsel performed deficiently under an objective standard of 27 professional reasonableness and thereby caused prejudice under a test of reasonable 28 probability of an effect on the outcome. (E.g., People v. Ledesma, supra, 43 Cal.3d at pp.
215–18.)

          Defendant expressly attempts to establish ineffective assistance of counsel. He fails. We shall assume for argument’s sake that there was deficient performance on the part of at least one interpreter. (There would be no basis for a similar assumption about either Attorney Holmes or Attorney Gable.) We cannot, however, find prejudice. There is no reasonable probability of an effect on the outcome as a result of the withdrawal of authorization to incur expenses for a trip to Cuba. That is because, as explained above, 1 there is no reasonable possibility: with McGarrity herself stating that she was uncertain of 2 success, it is merely conjectural whether McGarrity and Santivanias would have made it 3 to Cuba, and if so, whether they would have discovered substantially more favorable 4 information than what McGarrity had already obtained, as through her telephonic 5 interview with defendant's father in Cuba, and if so, whether they would have made it 6 back to the United States in a timely fashion. Neither is there any reasonable probability 7 of an effect on the outcome on any other basis.

8 A defendant's Sixth Amendment right to the assistance of counsel also includes a 9 right to loyal assistance. (See, e.g., People v. Bonin (1989) 47 Cal.3d 808, 834 [holding 10 that included in the right to counsel "is 'a correlative right to representation that is free 11 from conflicts of interest ...'"].) For these purposes too, "counsel" may embrace an 12 attorney's agent, such as an interpreter.

13 To establish "disloyal" assistance of counsel entitling him to relief, a defendant 14 must demonstrate that counsel served an interest other than his (see Cuyler v. Sullivan 15 (1980) 446 U.S. 335, 350 [considering the right to conflict-free counsel]; People v. Bonin, 16 supra, 47 Cal.3d at pp. 834-35 [same]), and that, in so doing, "counsel 'pulled his 17 punches,' i.e., failed to represent [him] as vigorously as he might have" otherwise (People 18 v. Easley (1988) 46 Cal.3d 712, 725 [same]).

19 Defendant does not expressly attempt to establish "disloyal" assistance of counsel.
20 He speaks much about an "invasion[ ] of the defense camp" by the state (Barber v.
21 Municipal Court, supra, 24 Cal.3d at p. 760 (conc. and dis. opn. of Manuel, J.); accord, 22 United States v. Mastroianni (1st Cir.1984) 749 F.2d 900, 906 ["intrusion"]; United States 23 v. Seale (7th Cir. 1972) 461 F.2d 345, 364 [same]), which assertedly requires automatic 24 reversal or at least raises a presumption of prejudice. He does so inappropriately. There 25 was no true "invasion" or "intrusion" into the "defense camp." Rather, as he himself 26 recognizes at times, there was simply a "leak" therefrom. Beneath his talk about 27 "invasion" and "intrusion," he impliedly attempts to establish "disloyal" assistance of 28 counsel. Here, too, he fails. We shall assume for argument's sake that at least one interpreter served an interest other than his. (Here, too, there would be no basis for a similar assumption about either Attorney Holmes or Attorney Gable.) We cannot, however, find any "pulling" of "punches." The record on appeal is simply barren of any indication thereof.

People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 238-41.

Analysis

Initially, the undersigned notes Petitioner's misinterpretation of the record, to wit: attributing communication with or from Gladys Cook for the prosecutor's knowledge of "the entire history of the defendant's attempts to enter Cuba, including that an earlier team, comprised of an attorney, Rodrigo Mayorga, and an investigator, David Myers, had tried unsuccessfully to enter Cuba." (ECF No. 330 at 499.) A careful review and reading of the record makes clear the prosecutor was aware of many details of the Cuba trip from comments made in open court and as

1 a result of out-of-court discussions with defense counsel. (See 26 RT 5945-46, 5948-49; 27 RT 2 6052, 6177, 6186.) The only information he learned from Gladys Cook was the identity of the 3 “junior grade” interpreter and a few details of her personal life. (28 RT 6393-94.)

4 Even assuming for the sake of argument that defense counsel were deficient for failing to 5 object and demand an adversary hearing, prejudice did not occur. Petitioner contends that by 6 failing to object, thereby losing the opportunity to subject the prosecutor’s account to cross-7 examination, and without “knowing what the prosecutor learned, the defense was unable to make 8 a showing sufficient to convince Judge Lewis to grant a mistrial.” (ECF No. 330 at 500.)

9 Petitioner claims the information revealed to the prosecutor “involved a communication of 10 defense strategy to the prosecution.” (ECF No. 330 at 500.) That assertion is simply not so.

11 Again, this record plainly reveals the prosecutor was aware of the defense team’s strategy of 12 sending representatives to Cuba in an effort to gather information for use as mitigation evidence 13 in the penalty phase of the trial well before any breach of confidentiality by any member of the 14 interpreter’s office. That strategy was no secret. As a result, Petitioner’s reliance on United 15 States v. Danielson, 325 F.3d 1054, 1070 (9th Cir. 2002) (recorded conversations involving trial 16 strategy and defendant’s testimony revealed) and Weatherford v. Bursey, 429 U.S. 545, 558 17 (1977) (undercover officer attended meeting with defendant’s attorney wherein strategy was 18 discussed) are unavailing. To the degree the specific identity of one of the two would-be travelers 19 was revealed to the prosecutor, it simply does not serve to establish prejudice. There is no 20 reasonable probability that had defense counsel objected to the prosecutor’s statements and 21 demanded an adversarial hearing that the trial court would have granted Petitioner’s motion for 22 mistrial. Richter, 562 U.S. at 104, 111-13.

23 The California Supreme Court’s denial of the claim on direct appeal was neither contrary 24 to, nor involved an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

1 Further, to the degree the claim was supplemented by Mr. Gable’s declaration during state habeas 2 proceedings, that court could still have reasonably concluded that fairminded jurists could 3 disagree that defense counsel had rendered ineffective assistance of counsel on this basis.

4 Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. Therefore, the undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim VV 5 be DENIED.

7 Claim YY: Judges Lewis and Bond & Recusal for Receipt of Extra-Judicial Info

8 In the last of this related series of claims, Petitioner maintains that due to the receipt of 9 extra-judicial information, both the trial judge and the 987.9 judge should have recused 10 themselves. (ECF No. 330 at 483, 496-98.) Respondent disagrees and argues neither Judge 11 Lewis nor Judge Bond was unconstitutionally biased against Petitioner. (ECF No. 345 at 268-12 71.)
13

14 This claim was presented to the California Supreme Court in both of Petitioner’s habeas 15 petitions filed in that court. On each occasion the claim was denied on its merits. Hence, for the 16 court’s purposes the claim is exhausted.

17 Applicable Legal Standards

18 To briefly reiterate, establishing a due process violation based on judicial bias requires a 19 petitioner to overcome a strong presumption against judicial bias or prejudice. Rhoades v. Henry, 20 598 F.3d at 519. Absent actual bias, the presumption may be rebutted by evidence that “the 21 probability of actual bias on the part of [an average judge under the same circumstances]” was 22 constitutionally intolerably high. Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. at 47. And, allegations that state 23 courts erred do not demonstrate judicial bias. Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. at 555. Only 24 where the “state trial judge’s behavior rendered the trial so fundamentally unfair as to violate 25 federal due process” will habeas relief be warranted. Duckett v. Godinez, 67 F.3d at 740.

Analysis

To support his claim concerning Judge Bond, Petitioner complains the judge’s receipt of extra-judicial information caused the withdrawal of funds set aside for the defense trip to Cuba. Elsewhere in these findings the hearing before Judge Bond has been excerpted in large part and will not be repeated here. Suffice to say, a review of the entire transcript from the hearing (RT § 987 Proceedings 65-86) does not support Petitioner’s argument that the judge’s decision was based on “gossip and innuendo that had no place in her decision-making.” (ECF No. 330 at 497.) The withdrawal of funds was not based on any gossip or innuendo, but rather on the reality that the defense team planned to perpetrate a ruse against the Cuban authorities by sending representatives posing as tourists to circumvent an anticipated refusal by the Cuban government, as admitted by defense counsel:

[THE COURT]: I mean, you’re really asking - - mean what you’re really telling me is that they’re going in under a subterfuge. I never authorized that. I did authorize, initially, Mr. Mayorga and Mr. Myers to go there aboveboard for the purpose for which they’re being sent. I did not authorize anybody to create some sort of a subterfuge to get into a country which we do not have any relations on false pretenses and then go off and do investigations.

(RT § 987 Proceedings 72.) Mr. Gable admitted there was no intent to “tell the Cuban authorities” about the true purpose for the visit. (RT § 987 Proceedings 73, 74 [Gable: “but we don’t have to tell the Cuban government that”], 75 [Gable: “You can’t tell the Cuban government that, they won’t let you in”].) Mr. Gable’s admission itself does not involve either gossip or innuendo.

After a brief recess, Judge Bond continued to express her concerns, none of which were based on gossip or innuendo:

THE COURT: Now the way you have this set up, it’s a subterfuge, and I just don’t think the Court or the state ought to be a party to that. You’re talking about an international incident here. You’re not talking about, you know, going into Georgia. You’re talking about going into a foreign country, with which the United States does not have diplomatic relations, under a guise that’s not true. And I - - you want the state to do

1 that with the state's money and, you know, I just can't authorize that. I'm not going to do 2 that.

3 (RT § 987 Proceedings 77-78, 80.) When Mr. Gable advised Judge Bond he hoped she could 4 "appreciate that" they "weren't trying to put the court" in a position of being part of a subterfuge, 5 he also stated he thought there had "been a breach of confidentiality between the court 6 interpreters" (RT § 987 Proceedings 83), and the following colloquy occurred:

7 THE COURT: Wait a minute. I authorized Rod Mayorga and Mr. Myers. Now, 8 the fact that Judge Lewis fortuitously discovered you were sending an anthropologist and 9 someone else, he didn't know it, and I didn't discuss it with him, he just called to see if 10 I've authorized it, and if I did, he wanted me to look at that again. And as I said, he is fully 11 aware of the provisions - -

12 MR. GABLE: I'm not pointing to Judge Lewis.

13 THE COURT: - - and so am I.

14 But you had an obligation to come to me and tell me this has changed because 15 what I authorized is not what you were intending to do. I did not authorize you to go in in 16 some surreptitious manner.

17 MR. GABLE: I couldn't do that because I was going to be a little concerned about 18 making the Court a party.

19 THE COURT: Don't you - - what I'm saying to you, Mr. Gable, is that the 20 authorization I gave you initially for Mr. Mayorga and Mr. Myers was predicated on the 21 idea that they were going to go down there and be honest about why they were going in, at 22 least to the extent they had to go visit the family, and as far as I'm concerned, good cause 23 for them to be permitted to go in. Now, if the Cuban government feels differently, that's 24 fine. But this Court can't be party to some sort of subterfuge.

25 MR. GABLE: I know that.

26 THE COURT: Okay.

27 MR. GABLE: I do know that.

28 (RT § 987 Proceedings 83-84.) Again, the record demonstrates the reason for the withdrawal of funds had nothing to do with gossip or innuendo. Neither did it involve any communication regarding Petitioner's application for funding. Interestingly, the undersigned finds it could not have involved the contents of Petitioner's application since no application involving McGarrity or Santivanias as travelers was apparently ever made. It had everything to do with the court's very real concern about the dishonesty associated with the defense team's substitute, and unauthorized, plan. In effect, by his argument, Petitioner seeks to gain from the interpreter's office breach of confidentiality, ignoring the reality of the § 987.9 judge's ruling.

1 To support his claim concerning Judge Lewis, Petitioner contends the judge’s “bias and 2 antagonism ... pervades[s] the record,” and goes on to provide a series of examples. (ECF No.
3 330 at 497.) However, “expressions of impatience, dissatisfaction, annoyance, and even anger” 4 do not establish bias or partiality. Likety v. United States, 510 U.S. at 555-56. “A judge’s 5 ordinary efforts at courtroom administration—even a stern and short-tempered judge’s ordinary 6 efforts at courtroom administration—remain immune.” Id. at 556.

8 Specifically, Petitioner contends Carmen Krewson’s breach exacerbated the ill will Judge 9 Lewis already harbored and resulted in the judge’s “personal interest in the case and motive to 10 make” Petitioner “look as bad as he possibly could.” (ECF No. 330 at 497-98.) The 11 undersigned’s review of the record finds no personal interest or motive on the part of Judge Lewis 12 to make Petitioner “look ... bad,” nor does the undersigned agree with Petitioner’s claim that any 13 antagonism pervades the record. One could also conclude from this record that Judge Lewis was 14 patient and fair.

16 Petitioner concludes his argument with a citation to Liteky for the proposition that “[a] 17 judge who, because of extra-judicial information or even because of acts adduced or events 18 occurring at trial, finds himself so ill-predisposed toward a defendant that a fair judgment is no 19 longer possible, should recuse himself.” (ECF No. 330 at 498.) That statement is legally 20 accurate, but it simply does not apply here. The undersigned’s review of this record reveals no 21 such ill-predisposition precluding fair judgment. Liteky also reads as follows:

23 The judge who presides at a trial may, upon completion of the evidence, be 24 exceedingly ill disposed towards the defendant, who has been shown to be a thoroughly 25 reprehensible person. But the judge is not thereby recusable for bias or prejudice, since his 26 knowledge and the opinion it produced were properly and necessarily acquired in the 27 course of the proceedings, and are indeed sometimes (as in a bench trial) necessary to 28 completion of the judge’s task. As Judge Jerome Frank pithily put it: “Impartiality is not gullibility. Disinterestedness does not mean child-like innocence. If the judge did not form judgments of the actors in those court-house dramas called trials, he could never render decisions.” In re J.P. Linahan, Inc., 138 F.2d 650, 654 (CA2 1943).

1 Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. at 550–51. Any ill will disposed toward Petitioner could have 2 legitimately arisen from the completion of evidence or during the course of the proceedings 3 themselves. Petitioner did not overcome any presumption that Judges Bond and Lewis were 4 neither biased nor prejudiced. Rhoades v. Henry, 598 F.3d at 519; see also Withrow v. Larkin, 5 421 U.S. at 47.

7 For the foregoing reasons, the California Supreme Court’s denial of this claim was not 8 unreasonable. That court could have reasonably concluded that fairminded jurists could disagree 9 that recusal was required of Judge Lewis and of Judge Bond given the circumstances. Richter, 10 562 U.S. at 101-03. Thus, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim YY be DENIED.

12 Claim A: Illegal Arrest

13 Petitioner argues that the trial erred in denying his motion to suppress evidence 14 concerning the stop in Mississippi because the Fourth Amendment requires certain tests be met, 15 and the roadblock implemented in Mississippi did not pass constitutional muster. More 16 specifically, Petitioner asserts the Mississippi troopers acted in the absence of supervisory 17 approval, or with unregulated discretion, when they set up a roadblock to check driver’s licenses, 18 vehicle registration and inspection stickers. Additionally, Petitioner complains the decision to set 19 up the roadblock was not made pursuant to any guidelines. (ECF No. 330 at 502-04.)

20 Respondent replies this claim is not reviewable in federal habeas corpus proceedings pursuant to 21 Stone v. Powell, 428 U.S. 465 (1976), and must be denied on that basis. And, in any event, 22 Respondent argues the California Supreme Court’s resolution of this claim was neither contrary 23 to nor an unreasonable application of clearly established federal law, nor did its resolution involve 24 an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented. (ECF No. 345 at 25 272-75.)

26 27 28 Petitioner raised this claim in his direct appeal to the California Supreme Court and 1 reasserted it in state habeas proceedings before that court. Therefore, it is exhausted.

3 Relevant Background & The California Supreme Court’s Determination

4 The state court record includes Petitioner’s motion to suppress evidence pursuant to 5 California Penal Code section 1538.5, including an exhibit referred to as “[a] portion of Officer 6 Sinclair’s report . . .,” and the People’s opposition thereto. (4 CT 773-83, 846-54.) It further 7 includes the testimony of a Mississippi law enforcement officer, the argument considered by the 8 trial court, and its ruling on the motion. (2 RT 68-121 [testimony]; 11 RT 2214-21 & 12 RT 9 2571-73 [argument]; 13 RT 2574-75 [ruling].)

10 11 The California Supreme Court determined the superior court properly considered whether 12 the Mississippi checkpoint stop was reasonable in light of the Fourth Amendment’s prohibition 13 against unreasonable searches and seizures, discerning no error as to the applicable legal 14 principle. That court further determined the superior court’s application of the law to the facts 15 was supported by substantial evidence and reasonable in light of the evidence presented. More 16 specifically, that court held:

18 “In People v. Washburn (1968) 265 Cal.App.2d 665, 668, 670 (hereafter Washburn)—on 19 which the superior court expressly relied—the court held in substance that a stop of a vehicle 20 by a law enforcement officer is generally a reasonable seizure for Fourth Amendment 21 purposes, if it is made at a checkpoint for routine license and registration inspection of all 22 passing vehicles. In Delaware v. Prouse (1979) 440 U.S. 648, 663, the United States Supreme 23 Court suggested as much. Indeed, on Professor LaFave’s reading, the court “manifest [ed] 24 approval of the ‘[q]uestioning of all oncoming traffic at roadblock-type stops.’” (4 LaFave, 25 Search and Seizure (3d ed. 1996) § 10.8(a), p. 679, quoting Delaware v. Prouse, supra, 440 26 U.S. at p. 663.) The stop of Slatten’s Taurus by the MHSP troopers was a reasonable seizure 27 inasmuch as it was made at the highway 24 checkpoint for routine license and registration 28 inspection of all passing vehicles. It was not rendered otherwise by any of the circumstances peculiar to the incident, including the fact that it was established on the initiative of an officer in the field. Tried by the Fourth Amendment’s “touchstone” of “reasonableness” (Florida v.
Jimeno (1991) 500 U.S. 248, 250), it is not found wanting.

In arguing against the denial of his motion to suppress, defendant attacks the vitality of Washburn. He is unsuccessful. In Ingersoll v. Palmer (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1321, a so-called “sobriety checkpoint” decision on which he relies perhaps most heavily, we indicated our approval of Washburn. (Ingersoll v. Palmer, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 1333 [citing Washburn for the proposition that “[r]egulatory inspections and stops have ... been permitted under

1 decisions of ... the California courts ... in ... license and registration inspection checkpoints”].)
2 We did not withdraw our approval in any of the cases that followed, including People v.
3 Banks (1993) 6 Cal.4th 926, another “sobriety checkpoint” case. We will not do so here.
4 Contrary to defendant’s implication, the fact that Washburn does not anticipate the kind of 5 analysis set out in Ingersoll and followed in Banks is not fatal.

6 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 184-85 (fns. Omitted).

7 Analysis

8 As Respondent correctly notes, violations of the Fourth Amendment’s exclusionary rule 9 are not cognizable under federal habeas review. Stone v. Powell, 428 U.S. 465. Where the state 10 has provided an opportunity for full and fair litigation of a Fourth Amendment claim, a state 11 prisoner may not be granted habeas corpus relief on the grounds that evidence obtained in an 12 unconstitutional search or seizure was introduced at his trial. See Stone, 428 U.S. at 494; 13 Newman v. Wengler, 790 F.3d 876, 878 (9th Cir. 2015) (Stone survived the passage of the 14 AEDPA and bars a Fourth Amendment claim on federal habeas review where a petitioner had a 15 full and fair opportunity in state court to litigate such claim). “The relevant inquiry is whether the 16 petitioner had the opportunity to litigate his claim, not whether he did in fact do so or whether the 17 claim was correctly decided.” Ortiz-Sandoval v. Gomez, 81 F.3d 891, 899 (9th Cir. 1996) 18 (internal citations omitted).

19 Here, the trial court considered Petitioner’s written motion to suppress and the opposition 20 thereto, the arguments presented, and the testimony offered at the hearing on the motion. Thus, 21 Petitioner was afforded a full and fair opportunity to litigate this claim in the state courts.
22 Moormann v. Schriro, 426 F.3d 1044, 1053 (9th Cir. 2005); Ortiz-Sandoval v. Gomez, 81 F.3d at 23 899; Gordon v. Duran, 895 F.2d 610, 613 (9th Cir. 1990). Petitioner’s assertion that his claim is 24 cognizable because the trial court prevented defense counsel from eliciting certain testimony is a 25 challenge to the correctness of the court’s decision. Accordingly, federal habeas corpus review of 26 the warrantless search of the vehicle Petitioner was operating at the time of the stop in Mississippi 27 28

1 is precluded.

2 In any event, the California Supreme Court's decision was neither contrary to, nor did it 3 involve an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law. Nor was that decision 4 based upon an unreasonable determination of the facts as presented in the state court.

6 The testimony in the state court

7 Mississippi Highway Patrolman John Wayne Leggett testified that he and two other 8 officers were on duty at about 8:30 p.m. on May 27, 1987, on Highway 24, east of Liberty, 9 Mississippi. (2 RT 68-70.) He and Officers Ricky Sinclair and Albert Johnson set up a 10 roadblock, stopping traffic in both directions, in order to check driver's licenses, vehicle 11 registration and inspection stickers. (2 RT 70.) A marked patrol vehicle was parked on the 12 shoulder of the two-lane highway with its flashing blue light operating; the officers were standing 13 in the roadway with flashlights. (2 RT 70-71.) The roadblock could be seen by approaching 14 vehicles in both directions, "for a long distance" or "a long way." (2 RT 72.)

15 16 In Mississippi, vehicles are inspected once a year to ensure the vehicle is roadworthy. The 17 inspection includes checking the operation of the headlights and turn signal lights. (2 RT 72.)
18 The annual inspection sticker is displayed on the windshield on the driver's side. (2 RT 72-73.)

19 Officer Leggett explained that when a vehicle approached the roadblock, an officer would 20 flag down the vehicle with their flashlight, check for the inspection sticker on the windshield and 21 registration tag on the license plate, and ask to see the operator's driver license. (2 RT 73.) If the 22 proper sticker, tag and license are displayed and provided, the stop is brief, and the driver is not 23 asked to step out of the vehicle. (2 RT 74.)

24
25 When a light-colored Ford Taurus approached the roadblock heading east, Officer Leggett 26 approached the vehicle and made contact with the driver, later identified as Petitioner. (2 RT 74-27 75.) The officer asked Petitioner for his driver's license; Petitioner felt around as if retrieving a 28

1 license, but then indicated he could not find it. (2 RT 76.) Officer Leggett directed Petitioner to 2 pull over, out of the traffic lane. (2 RT 76.) After having done so, Petitioner handed the officer a 3 driver's license belonging to his passenger. (2 RT 76.) When Officer Leggett explained to 4 Petitioner that he needed to see Petitioner's driver's license, Petitioner stated he had left his 5 license at work. (2 RT 76-77.)

7 During his conversation with Petitioner, Officer Leggett noticed signs of intoxication. (2 8 RT 77.) The officer asked Petitioner to exit the vehicle. Petitioner acted as though he were about 9 to comply, but instead slammed the driver's side door, "cranked up [the engine] and took off." (2 10 RT 77.) His passenger jumped out. (2 RT 78.)

11 Officers Leggett, Sinclair and Johnson pursued Petitioner in their marked vehicle, 12 ultimately locating the vehicle and Petitioner in a store parking lot and placing him under arrest.
13 (2 RT 78-80.) A search of the Ford Taurus revealed two marijuana cigarettes, "a fillet-type 14 knife," in a "black sheath" under the car seat, and a sawed-off shotgun, assorted women's 15 clothing, a suitcase, and another license plate in the trunk. A check of the Colorado license plate 16 and name provided by Petitioner produced no matches. The vehicle identification number 17 revealed the Ford Taurus had been reported stolen in California. (2 RT 81-86.) 18

19 On cross-examination, Officer Leggett explained the decision to set up the roadblock to 20 check for license, registration and inspection stickers was initiated by senior Officer Sinclair. (2
22

23 The type of checkpoint or roadblock 24

25 In Delaware v. Prouse, 440 U.S. 648 (1979), the United States Supreme Court held that 26 random spot checks of either the vehicle or its occupant, in the absence of at least articulable and 27 reasonable suspicion, are unreasonable under the Fourth Amendment. The Court also expressly 28 stated that its holding did "not preclude the State of Delaware and other States from developing

1 methods for spot checks that involve less intrusion or that do not involve the unconstrained 2 exercise of discretion. Questioning of all oncoming traffic at roadblock-type stops is one possible 3 alternative.” Delaware, at 663.

4 Officer Leggett’s testimony is clear and without contradiction: the purpose of the 5 checkpoint or roadblock on Highway 24 near Liberty, Mississippi was a routine check of driver 6 licenses, registration tags and inspection stickers wherein every vehicle was checked, whether it 7 was traveling east or west on the roadway. This type of roadblock or checkpoint is permissible as 8 it involved less intrusion than the random spot checks at issue in Prouse and is limited so as to 9 avoid an “unconstrained exercise of discretion” by law enforcement. Delaware v. Prouse, 440 10 U.S. at 663 & n.26.

11 The California Supreme Court’s reference to Washburn arises in the context of its holding 12 in Ingersoll v. Palmer, 43 Cal.3d 1321 (1987), wherein that court expressly cited the Second 13 District Court of Appeal’s Washburn holding for the propriety of regulatory-type inspections and 14 stops such as the one at issue in this case.<sup>51</sup> Ingersoll involved the challenge to the propriety of 15 sobriety checkpoints on Fourth Amendment grounds by California taxpayers. Ingersoll, 43 16 Cal.3d at 1325. The court concluded that because the purpose of the sobriety checkpoint was “to 17 promote public safety by deterring intoxicated persons from driving on the public streets and 18 highways,” such stops are not “traditional criminal investigative stops” but are “investigative 19 detentions and inspections conducted as part of a regulatory scheme in furtherance of an 20 administrative purpose.” Id., at 1328.

21 Noting that administrative screening is “measured against the constitutional mandate of 22 reasonableness” (Ingersoll, 43 Cal.3d at 1328), and must be “carried out pursuant to a plan 23 embodying explicit, neutral limitations on the conduct of individual officers” (id., at 1329), the 24 court discussed several of its prior decisions concerning seizures that did not require a reasonable 25 suspicion (id., at 1330-33), as well as the United States Supreme Court holding in United States v.

---

26 <sup>51</sup> In People v. Washburn, 265 Cal.App.2d 665, 668 (1968), the defendant was stopped at a 27 checkpoint at Crescent Junction by a Utah Highway Patrolman who was conducting a routine 28 check of driver’s license and registration on all vehicles. Id., at 668. Defendant showed a registration certificate, but the numbers did not match the vehicle he was operating. Id., at 668.

1 Martinez-Fuerte, 428 U.S. 543 (1976), involving an immigration checkpoint. Ingersoll, 43 Cal.3d
2 at 1333-34. The court in Ingersoll cited to Delaware v. Prouse, 440 U.S. 648, noting that the high 3 court was careful to point out that its holding would not preclude states from performing “spot 4 checks that involve less intrusion or that do not involve the unconstrained exercise of discretion,” 5 but are conducted pursuant to certain “predetermined neutral criteria.” Ingersoll, at 1335.

6 For the foregoing reasons, the California Supreme Court’s decision was not contrary to, 7 nor did it involve an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law as determined by 8 the United States Supreme Court. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1). Nor did its decision involve an 9 unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the trial court. 28 10 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2). Accordingly, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim A be DENIED.

11 Claims B, C & NN: Improper Joinder

12 In this series of claims, Petitioner asserts he was denied a fair trial by the improper joinder
13 of the rape charge (Claim B) and the improper joinder of his trial with that of co-defendant Ross’s 14 (Claim C), resulting in his inability to present a defense (Claim NN). (ECF No. 330 at 504-09.)
15 Respondent maintains the California Supreme Court’s adjudication of these claims was neither 16 contrary to, nor did it involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. Thus, 17 Respondent contends federal habeas relief is barred. (ECF No. 345 at 275-80.)

18 Claims B and C were presented on direct appeal and reasserted in habeas proceedings 19 before the state’s highest court. Claim NN was presented in both Petitioner’s first and second 20 state habeas petitions. The claims are thus exhausted for this court’s purposes.

21 Claim B – Joinder of Charges

22 Petitioner asserts he was deprived of a fair trial because the rape count involving Sandra 23 Stramaglia was erroneously joined with the remaining counts against him. (ECF No. 330 at 505-24 06.)

25 Applicable Legal Standards

26 There is no clearly established Federal law which holds that joinder or consolidation of 27
28

1 charges may violate the Constitution. In United States v. Lane, 474 U.S. 438, 446 n.8 (1986), the 2 Supreme Court stated in a footnote that “[i]mproper joinder does not, in itself, violate the 3 Constitution. Rather, misjoinder would rise to the level of a constitutional violation only if it 4 results in prejudice so great as to deny a defendant his Fifth Amendment right to a fair trial.”

5 However, in Young v. Pliler, the Ninth Circuit stated:

6 Lane considered only the effect of misjoinder under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7 8, and expressly stated that no constitutional claim had been presented. See Lane, 474 8 U.S. 438, 446 & n.9 (1986). Thus, Lane’s broad statement - found in a footnote without 9 citation to any legal authority - that misjoinder could only rise to the level of a 10 constitutional violation if it was so prejudicial as to violate due process, was probably 11 dictum. Only Supreme Court holdings are controlling when reviewing state court holdings 12 under 28 U.S.C. § 2254; Court dicta and circuit court authority may not provide the basis 13 for granting habeas relief. Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 71–72 (2003).

14 Young, 2008 WL 1757564 at *n.1 (9th Cir. 2008) (unpublished); see also Collins v. Runnels, 603 15 F.3d 1127, 1132–33 (9th Cir. 2010).

16 To determine “clearly established Federal law,” this court must look to the “holdings, as 17 opposed to the dicta, of [the Supreme Court’s] decisions as of the time of the relevant state-court 18 decision.” Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. at 412. “In other words, ‘clearly established Federal 19 law’ under § 2254(d)(1) is the governing legal principle or principles set forth by the Supreme 20 Court at the time the state court renders its decision.” Id. Given that there is no clearly 21 established Federal law in this instance, the court cannot grant relief because habeas relief is 22 triggered only when the state court adjudication runs afoul of clearly established federal law. See 23 Moses v. Payne, 555 F.3d 742, 754 (9th Cir. 2009) (absent a Supreme Court decision that 24 squarely addresses the issue it “cannot be said, under AEDPA, there is ‘clearly established’ 25 Supreme Court precedent...and so we must defer to the state court’s decision”).

26 Relevant Background & The California Supreme Court’s Adjudication

27 Petitioner filed his Motion for Order Severing Counts on April 12, 1988. (2 CT 437-43.)
28 The People filed an opposition on May 11, 1988. (2 CT 457-67.) Following argument on May 29 24, 1988, the trial court denied Petitioner’s motion. (3 CT 509; 1 RT 62-69.)

30 ////

1 The California Supreme Court, after summarizing the motion and argument before the 2 trial court, and the standards of its review, held as follows:

4 After review, we believe that the superior court did not abuse its discretion by 5 denying defendant's motion to sever and thereby refusing to sever trial of the Sandra S.
6 rape from the trial of the Birkman robbery and murder, the Glidewell vehicle theft, and the 7 Slatten robbery.

8 At the outset, the superior court's implicit conclusion that the Sandra S. rape was 9 properly joined under Penal Code section 954 with the Birkman robbery and murder, the 10 Glidewell vehicle theft, and the Slatten robbery survives de novo scrutiny.

11 The Sandra S. rape is "of the same class of ... offenses" as the Birkman robbery 12 and murder and the Slatten robbery. Rape is an assaultive crime against the person, as are 13 robbery and murder. [Citation.] Defendant states that this analysis "does not apply where, 14 as here, multiple defendants are charged in the same information." His assertion, 15 however, is without basis and must therefore be rejected.

16 Also, the Sandra S. rape was "connected in [its] commission" with the Glidewell 17 vehicle theft. As shown by the evidence introduced at the preliminary examination – 18 which was similar to that later introduced at trial – the rape occurred very close in time 19 and place to the theft of the vehicle, and the theft of the vehicle may have been motivated 20 by a desire to avoid apprehension for the rape. Defendant admits the close temporal and 21 spatial relationship. He could not do otherwise. But he denies the possible linkage by 22 motive as speculative. True, there was no direct evidence on this matter. There was, 23 however, sufficient circumstantial evidence to support what the superior court rightly 24 considered a "fair inference."

25 Further, the superior court's implicit determination that the Sandra S. rape did not 26 require separation from the Birkman robbery and murder, the Glidewell vehicle theft, and 27 the Slatten robbery in the interests of justice was not an abuse of discretion. Its reason, 28 which is set out above, is indeed reasonable. Defendant simply failed to show "sufficient [potential] prejudice." He argues now, as he argued then, that the relatively "weak" evidence of the Sandra S. rape might improperly be amplified by the relatively "strong" evidence of the Birkman robbery and murder, and that the rape might inflame the jury against him with regard to the robbery and murder. He does not persuade us, as he did not persuade the superior court. His premise is unsupported by the record on appeal: the evidence was not relatively "weak" as to the Sandra S. rape and relatively "strong" as to the Birkman robbery and murder; and the rape was not potentially inflammatory as to the robbery and murder."

23 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 188-89 (fn. omitted).

24 Analysis

25 The evidence concerning the rape of Stramaglia and the theft of Glidewell's Camaro is 26 cross-admissible to the robbery and murder of Birkman four days later. This link is so because 27 ///

28 ///

1 the vehicle theft occurred so close in both time and location to the rape,<sup>52</sup> and because the vehicle 2 stolen on May 13 was used during the commission of the robbery and murder on May 17 and 3 spoke to the suspect's identity. See Cal. Evid. Code, § 1101(b) (evidence that person committed 4 crime admissible to prove fact other than disposition to commit act).

5 Petitioner argued the consolidation resulted in joinder of a weak case (the rape of Sandra 6 S.) and a strong case (robbery and murder of Birkman). Here, however, the California Supreme 7 Court reasonably concluded the evidence was not unequal.

8 The evidence concerning the rape included Sandra S.'s testimony (13 RT 2614-87) and 9 that of Anthony Simpkins (16 RT 3534-605), which, if believed, was compelling. Simpkins' 10 testimony largely corroborated that of Sandra S. The jury apparently found the testimony of 11 Sandra S. and Mr. Simpkins more credible than the claimed impeachment of that same testimony 12 coupled with Petitioner's own testimony or that of Mr. Spence. See Bruce v. Terhune, 376 F.3d 13 950, 954 (9th Cir. 2004) (a jury's credibility determinations are entitled to deference on federal 14 habeas review). The undersigned's review of that same testimony finds nothing unreasonable 15 about such a determination.

16 As Respondent points out, the jury was instructed pursuant to CALJIC No. 17.02. As 17 given in this case, that instruction provides as follows: "Each count charges a distinct offense.
18 You must decide each count separately. The defendant may be found guilty or not guilty of [any 19 or all] of the offenses charged. Your finding as to each count must be stated in a separate 20 verdict." (5 CT 1244; 25 RT 5639-40.) A jury is presumed to follow its instructions. Richardson 21 v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200, 211 (1987).

22 The undersigned agrees with the California Supreme Court that the evidence of the rape 23 involved the same class of offenses as the murder and robberies, and that the rape was connected 24 to the Glidewell vehicle theft. Further, the undersigned agrees the evidence against Petitioner 25

26 <sup>52</sup>Petitioner's motion notes the rape occurred at "approximately 11:45 a.m. on May 13, 1987," 27 whereas the vehicle theft occurred at approximately 12:15 p.m." that same date. (2 CT 438.) The 28 California Supreme Court decision expressly notes that Petitioner admitted "the close temporal and spatial relationship" between the two crimes, and that "[h]e could not do otherwise." People
v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 188.

1 concerning the rape was not as weak as he alleges. Even assuming that the Supreme Court's 2 footnote in Lane could be considered clearly established Federal law, no constitutional violation 3 occurred because the prejudice was not so great as to deny Petitioner his right to a fair trial. Lane, 4 474 U.S. at 446, n.8.

5 Hence, the state court's resolution of this claim is not contrary to, nor does it involve an 6 unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Therefore, the 7 undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim B be DENIED.

8 Claims C & NN

9 Petitioner complains that he was compelled to go to trial with a co-defendant whose entire 10 defense was premised on convicting him of homicide and attempted robbery despite his defense 11 that he was not even present at the scene. He argues his constitutional rights to a fair trial were 12 violated when the trial court denied his motion to sever his trial from that of codefendant Ross, 13 claiming his defense and Ross's defense were conflicting and that certain evidence concerning 14 Ross's claimed fear of Petitioner would not have been admissible in a separate trial. (ECF No.
15 330 at 507-09.) Respondent maintains the California Supreme Court's determination of the claim 16 was not contrary to, nor did it involve an unreasonable application of federal law or an 17 unreasonable determination of the facts. (ECF No. 345 at 278-79.)

18 By presenting Claim C on direct review and in state habeas proceedings, and Claim NN in 19 state habeas proceedings, Petitioner has exhausted his claims for purposes of federal review.

20 The Record & The California Supreme Court's Determination

21 Co-defendant Ross filed a Motion to Sever Trials of Defendants Pursuant to Penal Code 22 Section 1098 on April 11, 1988. (2 CT 383-406.) On or about April 15, 1988, Petitioner filed his 23 own motion seeking severance of his trial from that of codefendant Ross. That motion asserted 24 severance was appropriate because (1) Petitioner and Ross were facing different penalties; 25 (2) both had conflicting considerations for purposes of jury selection; and (3) Ross's statement 26 could not be sanitized for purposes of the jury's consideration. (2 CT 419-26.) On May 11, 27 1988, the People filed their opposition to the trial severance motions. (2 CT 468-82.) Petitioner 28 filed supplemental points and authorities in support of his motion on or about May 19, 1988. (2

1 CT 498-500.) Codefendant Ross also filed supplemental points and authorities in support of her 2 motion. (3 CT 501-07.) Oral arguments were heard, and the motions were denied on May 24, 3 1988. (1 RT 69-93; 3 CT 509.)

4 Petitioner’s claim was considered on direct review to the California Supreme Court. That 5 court determined, in relevant part, as follows:

7 Prior to trial, Ross moved the superior court to sever her trial from defendant’s. In 8 like manner, defendant then moved the superior court to sever his trial from hers.
9 Relying, in part, on the evidence introduced at the preliminary examination, each claimed, 10 inter alia, that the superior court should separate the trial because his or her defense would 11 conflict with the other’s – defendant’s would be alibi and misidentification, Ross’s would 12 be lack of the requisite mental state. ... The superior court denied the motions, concluding, as pertinent here, that there was an insufficient showing that defendant and Ross would present conflicting defenses and that, even if there had been such a showing, it would not require separate trials: “the mere fact that [they] may well be pointing fingers at each other doesn’t justify necessarily severance.”

13 .....
14 An appellate court reviews a trial court’s ruling on a motion for separate trials for an abuse of discretion. [Citations.]

15 We find no such abuse here. Under Penal Code section 1098<sup>53</sup>, a trial court must 16 order a joint trial as the “rule” and may order separate trials only as an “exception.” 17 [Citation.] The superior court not unreasonably conformed to the rule and avoided the 18 exception. Its conclusion – that separation was not required even if there had been a 19 sufficient showing that defendant and Ross would present conflicting defense and might 20 each attempt to shift responsibility to the other – anticipated People v. Cummings (1993) 4 21 Cal.4th 1233, 1287, in which we held to that very effect. (Cf. Zafiro v. United States
22 (1993) 506 U.S. 534, 538 [] [decided under Fed. Rules Crim. Proc., rules 8(b) and 14, 18 23 U.S.C., which are similar to Pen.Code, § 1098: declining “to adopt a bright-line rule, 24 mandating severance whenever codefendants have conflicting defenses”].)

25 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 189-90.

26 _____
27 <sup>53</sup> California Penal Code § 1098 states the following: 28

When two or more defendants are jointly charged with any public offense, whether felony or misdemeanor, they must be tried jointly, unless the court orders separate trials. In ordering separating trials, the court in its discretion may order a separate trial as to one or more defendants, and a joint trial as to the others, or may order any number of the defendants to be tried at one trial and any number of others at different trials, or may order a separate trial for each defendant; provided, that where two or more persons can be jointly tried, the fact that separate accusatory pleadings were filed shall not prevent their joint trial.

1 Analysis

2 Here, the California’s Supreme Court’s finding that Petitioner’s alibi and misidentification 3 defenses and Ross’ lack of mental state defense were not so conflicting as to require severance is 4 not unreasonable or contrary to controlling federal precedent.

5 The jury heard Petitioner’s testimony: that while he had been in the company of co-6 defendant Ross prior to the Birkman incident, he denied being with Ross at the time of the 7 robbery and assault of Birkman. The jury also heard Ross’ testimony that she did not know that 8 Petitioner intended to rob or assault Birkman. Conflicting or antagonistic defenses do not require 9 severance per se; therefore, Petitioner is required to show actual prejudice. United States v.
10 Tootick, 952 F.2d 1078, 1083 (9th Cir. 1991). This he cannot do.

11 The testimony of Charles Kosobud, Gail Patterson, and Edwin Glidewell is circumstantial 12 evidence placing Petitioner at the scene of the murder, as is the testimony of Greta Slatten 13 concerning events occurring shortly thereafter. (13 RT 2689-90, 2694-97, 2702, 2711-12 14 [Glidewell]; 13 RT 2801-03, 2807-09, 2817, 2831, 2834-36 [Kosobud]; 14 RT 2978-90, 3015, 15 3096 [Patton]; 14 RT 3116-21 [Slatten].) The foregoing testimony is independent evidence 16 pertaining to locations and timelines, as well as suspect identity, concerning the circumstances of 17 the Birkman murder, and demonstrating Petitioner’s guilt. People v. Letner and Tobin, 50 Cal.4th 18 99, 150 (2010) (antagonistic defenses support severance where the acceptance of a party’s 19 defense precludes the other’s acquittal; severance not required where sufficient independent 20 evidence demonstrates guilt); People v. Carsaj, 44 Cal.4th 1263, 1296, 1298 (2008). Severance 21 was not required here because there was sufficient independent evidence of Petitioner’s guilt.

22 Also, the jury was instructed with CALJIC No. 17.00. That instruction provided as 23 follows: “In this case, you must decide separately whether each of the [two] defendants is guilty 24 or not guilty as to counts one and two. If you cannot agree upon a verdict as to [both] the 25 defendants, but do agree upon a verdict as to one of them, you must render a verdict as to the one 26 upon which you agree.” (5 CT 1243; 25 RT 5639.) Again, a jury is presumed to have followed 27 its instructions. Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. at 211.

28 There was no “prejudice so great as to deny” Petitioner his right to a fair trial. United

1 States v. Lane, 474 U.S. at 446, n.8. Nor was the jury prevented from making a reliable judgment
2 concerning Petitioner’s guilt or innocence. See, e.g., Zafiro v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 538 3 (1993) (holding where multiple defendants have been properly joined under Federal Rules of 4 Criminal Procedure, severance is proper only if a joint trial would present a “serious risk” to a 5 “specific trial right of one of the defendants, or prevents the jury from making a reliable judgment 6 about guilt or innocence”).

7 The California Supreme Court’s determination is not contrary to, nor does it involve an 8 unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law. As a result, the undersigned 9 RECOMMENDS that Claim C be DENIED.

10 Claim NN

11 Because the California Supreme Court reasonably denied Claim C on its merits, Claim 12 NN necessarily fails. There can be no denial of the right to present a defense where the court did 13 not err in denying the severance motion upon which this claim depends. Therefore, for the 14 reasons explained above, the California Supreme Court’s denial of this claim on its merits in state 15 habeas proceedings is not contrary to, nor does it involve an unreasonable application of, 16 Supreme Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d); Richter, 562 U.S. at 101, 103. Thus, the 17 undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim NN be denied.

18 Claims E & LL: Shackling

19 20 Petitioner’s claim that he was unjustifiably shackled during trial was rejected on direct 21 appeal when the California Supreme Court found the trial court was justified in ordering the use 22 of a security chair and other restraint devices, and that Petitioner’s own actions revealed the 23 presence of the shackles to the jury. Petitioner’s shackling claim – that it was excessive and 24 prejudicial and deprived him of the right to be present at trial - was again rejected by the 25 California Supreme Court in both his first and second state habeas petitions. As a result, the 26 claim is exhausted for our purposes.

27 In a related claim, Petitioner argues trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance of counsel 28 by failing to object to the shackling imposed by the trial court. This claim is also exhausted, 1 having been presented to the California Supreme Court in a habeas corpus petition.

2 Respondent maintains the California Supreme Court's decisions are not contrary to, nor do 3 they involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent, thus precluding 4 Petitioner's requested relief.

5 Claim E

6 The California Supreme Court's Determination

7 The California Supreme Court considered Petitioner's unjustified shackling claim on 8 direct review. It held as follows:

10 Prior to trial, defendant moved the superior court to limit, inter alia, the physical 11 restraints to which it would subject him in the presence of the jury. After a hearing on the 12 motion, it granted his request not to be placed in fetters. It also stated its intention to cause 13 him to sit in a "security chair" both at counsel table and on the witness stand, and to cause 14 him to be put into, and removed from, such chair outside the jury's presence. The chair in 15 question was generally similar to others in the courtroom; it was different only in that it 16 allowed a chain encircling his waist to be attached at its back and prevented the chain 17 from being seen so long as he placed his clothing properly. The superior court asked, "Is 18 there any objection to that procedure?" Defense counsel responded, "No." It commented 19 that, in the absence of an objection, "it is not necessary ... to specifically state good 20 cause...." Nevertheless, it "stat[ed] ... for the record" that it had obtained information to 21 the effect that, not two months earlier, defendant had been found in possession of an 22 "explosive device" in jail, "apparently consistent with what's commonly called a match 23 bomb," which was, specifically, a "device approximately four inches long wrapped tightly 24 in plastic," containing "match heads" and "several nitroglycerine pills," with a "paper-25 wrapped fuse protruding from one end of it." Defendant did not dispute the information.

26 Subsequently, in the course of jury selection, the superior court ordered defendant 27 placed in manacles that could be concealed in his lap. It did so because it impliedly 28 determined that he might attempt to escape or at least might injure someone if he became displeased with events as they transpired. It based its determination on information such as the following: He had attempted to saw through his waist chain; he had tried to take contraband into jail; he had drawings in his cell for the fashioning of a realistic "gun" out of soap; he had engaged in misconduct in jail on several occasions, including "threatening officers, fighting with other inmates, starting fires, [and] possessing weapons of various sorts"; he had exhibited "little if any control over his emotions and little, if any, respect for authority or anyone's rules"; and he had previously been convicted of an escape from prison, which, although executed without force or violence, had been somewhat elaborately planned. It stated for the record that he had exposed his manacles to prospective jurors. It told him: "[T]hat's your choice. If you don't care that they see that, that's fine." It reiterated: "Again, it's your choice. If it doesn't bother you that they see that, then that's fine with the Court." Before long, it modified its order to allow his right hand to be free.

Later, at the guilt phase, the superior court noted outside the presence of the jury

1 that defendant, who was then on the witness stand, had made no attempt to conceal his 2 waist chain at any point during the proceedings. It offered to give a curative admonition—3 such as a statement, which it acknowledged was not “entirely true,” that it was “simply 4 flat Court policy” to so restrain a defendant at a death penalty trial. Defendant declined.
5 On reconsideration, it determined that, because the waist chain had been visible, it was 6 required to give an admonition under People v. Duran (1976) 16 Cal.3d 282, 292, to the 7 effect that “such restraints should have no bearing on the determination of the defendant’s 8 guilt.” It stated that it would in fact give an admonition of this sort unless defendant 9 should object. It further stated that, in giving such an admonition, it would say “something 10 that is not the truth,” such as, “this is standard procedure in all homicide cases or in all 11 death penalty cases, to so restrain the defendant.” Defendant objected. Defense counsel 12 expressed a view that an admonition that restraints should have no bearing on guilt draws 13 “undue attention” to the restraints themselves. He stated that defendant would probably 14 request an instruction on the matter. The superior court proceeded not to give an 15 admonition.

16 Finally, after defendant did in fact make a request, the superior court instructed 17 the jury as follows: “In your deliberations, the fact that a defendant has been subjected to 18 physical restraints during the trial is not to be discussed or considered by you. There is no 19 connotation of guilt of any kind because a defendant was restrained. Such restraints are a 20 part of the normal procedures in a case of this nature and should have no bearing on your 21 determination of a defendant’s guilt or innocence.”

22 Defendant now contends that the superior court erred by denying his motion to 23 limit physical restraints.

24 We reject the claim at the threshold. The superior court did not in fact deny 25 defendant’s motion. Rather, it granted what he sought. He asked it to limit physical 26 restraints. It indeed limited such restraints. It ordered no fetters. It ordered only 27 confinement to a security chair. It questioned whether he objected. Through defense 28 counsel, he answered no.

We would also reject the claim on the merits. An appellate court reviews a trial court’s ruling on a motion to limit physical restraints for abuse of discretion. (See, e.g., People v. Duran, supra, 16 Cal.3d at p. 293.) Even if we were to deem that the superior court denied defendant’s motion—which we do not—we could not conclude that it erred thereby. In view of the undisputed information it had obtained about such matters as his possession of a “match bomb” in jail, it could have determined, not at all unreasonably, that confinement to a security chair was appropriate.

[FN] 7. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court committed reversible error under California law by denying his motion to limit physical restraints, it thereby committed reversible error under the Fifth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, the superior court did not deny the motion and hence did not commit any error under California law.

To the extent that defendant claims that the superior court erred by subjecting him, or continuing to subject him, to any or all physical restraints after its ruling on his motion, he has not preserved the point for review. He had to make a motion against such restraints. (See People v. Tuilaepa (1992) 4 Cal.4th 569, 583, affd. sub nom.
Tuilaepa v. California (1994) 512 U.S. 967.) He did not do so. Insofar as he complains about the visibility of such restraints, he will not be heard. On that score, he has only 1           himself to blame.

2       People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 190-92.

3                               Analysis Concerning Direct Review

4           Initially, Petitioner complains it is unclear what law the state court applied on appeal, and 5       that because the state court denied the habeas petitions summarily, “there is no telling what law 6       the court applied to those claims either.” (ECF No. 330 at 524.) The state court’s actions are 7       plain.

8           A review of Appellant’s Opening Brief and the resulting California Supreme Court 9       opinion indicates that court did not expressly find the restraints had been seen by the jury despite 10      Petitioner’s assertion “the trial court acknowledged that appellant’s waist chain was visible to the 11      jury.”

12          To begin, the California Supreme Court determined in the first instance that the trial court 13      did not err by denying Petitioner’s motion to limit restraints. Instead, it held the trial court 14      “granted what he sought,” and that defense counsel acquiesced to the trial court’s orders to 15      employ a security chair. The trial court briefly addressed the issue of physical restraints with 16      defense counsel at the parties’ initial appearance before the judge who would try the case. (2 RT 17      9-11.) Five days later, it ordered that Petitioner would be restrained in a security chair and that 18      leg shackles would not be employed, as expressly agreed to by defense counsel. (2 RT 26-29.) 19      On February 23, 1989, Judge Lewis noted the defense motion to limit physical restraints was 20      “mooted by agreement.” (2 RT 203.) Hence, the record supports the California Supreme Court’s 21      initial determination, and, as a result, does not involve either an unreasonable application of 22      clearly established federal law, nor is it based upon an unreasonable determination of the facts 23      presented.

24          Next, the California Supreme Court held it would reject Petitioner’s claim on the merits, 25      in any event. It concluded confinement to a security chair in light of the information available to 26      the trial court - that Petitioner possessed a “‘match bomb’ in jail” - was not an unreasonable. The 27      state court determined the trial court was justified in ordering Petitioner be confined to the 28      security chair in early February when it considered the motion to limit restraints, before voir dire

1 had even commenced. Therefore, at that time, the visibility of those restraints was not an issue.
2 And where restraints are not seen by the jury, any error regarding the use of restraints in that 3 circumstance is not considered to be one of a constitutional magnitude and is therefore tested 4 under the state’s Watson standard for prejudice; however, where the jury has seen the restraints, 5 any unjustified restraints are subjected to the federal Chapman standard. See People v. Jackson, 6 14 Cal.App.4th 1818, 1829-30 (1993). Here, because the California Supreme Court did not 7 consider Petitioner’s claim to involve shackling seen by the jury, its citation to Duran wherein the 8 Watson standard was employed for purposes of a prejudice analysis, does not indicate it was 9 unreasonably applying federal law, nor was it relying on an unreasonable determination of the 10 facts. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

11 In footnote seven, the California Supreme Court explained that Petitioner had failed to 12 preserve any claims that the superior court had erred by subjecting him or continuing to subject 13 him to restraints after it ruled on his motion to limit restraints, because he made no motion against 14 those subsequent or continuing restraints, citing to its decision in People v. Tuilaepa, 4 Cal.4th 15 569, 584 (1992) (failure to object to restraints and to make a record below waives the claim). The 16 footnote concluded as follows: “Insofar as he complains about the visibility of such restraints, he 17 will not be heard. On that score, he has only himself to blame.” This finding also does not 18 involve an unreasonable application of federal law, nor does the holding rest upon an 19 unreasonable determination of the facts presented in the state court. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

20 Arguably, there was no indication then that the jury actually saw the restraints absent the 21 court and defense counsels’ presumptions in that regard. Petitioner’s citations to the record in 22 Appellant’s Opening Brief indicate only that the judge noted, outside the presence of the jury, that 23 it was possible for the jury to see the restraints, and later that due to Petitioner’s having moved his 24 chair the jurors must have seen the restraints.

25 More specifically, Petitioner’s opening brief cited to pages “4109-4111” of the reporter’s 26 transcript on appeal. There, the trial judge stated that when Petitioner turned to speak with the 27 interpreter while on the witness stand, the judge thought it was “obvious to the jurors there’s a 28 chain around his waist,” but he did not “know for sure.” (18 RT 4109.) He further stated, “the

1 fact throughout this trial he doesn't stand up, I think ultimately the jurors are going to know he is 2 chained down." (18 RT 4109.) The judge offered to "make a statement" to the jury, essentially 3 advising them that such restraints were "Court policy" in a death penalty matter despite the fact 4 that statement was not "entirely true." (18 RT 4109.) Defense counsel then observed Petitioner 5 from the jurors' perspective and Holmes indicated the waist chain could "definitely" be seen. He 6 also indicated counsel would "think about" the court's offer of a statement to the jury. (18 RT 7 4110.) The judge concluded by stating, "there has been no attempt by Mr. Alvarez or Counsel to 8 really try to make an effort to cover up the chains" (18 RT 4110) and that during voir dire 9 proceedings Petitioner had moved his chair in such a manner that "it was very obvious that the 10 jurors saw it at that time." (18 RT 4111.) Thereafter, defense counsel did not move the court to 11 remove the restrains or otherwise limit the use of physical restraints; the record supports this 12 finding.

13 Petitioner also cited to "4429-4430" of the reporter's transcript on appeal in support of his 14 argument in the opening brief. There, the judge indicated that he had "walked up into the jury 15 box" and that it appeared to him "it's quite obvious that there is a chain around [Petitioner's] 16 waist." (19 RT 4429-30.) The trial court then stated, "so unless Counsel object to it, I will 17 instruct the jury that they are to disregard the fact of this restraint," believing it had a sua sponte 18 duty to so instruct in the absence of an objection. (19 RT 4430-31.) Continuing on the following 19 page, the trial court advised defense counsel that unless they objected, he would "give the jury 20 some instruction on that, in that regard; however, if you and your client desire that I not do that, 21 then I will not do it." Further, the court advised that if counsel did not object to such an 22 admonition, it would welcome counsels' "input into what type of an admonition should be given 23 to the jury ...." (19 RT 4431.) Gable initially replied that, in his opinion, giving such an 24 admonition would result in "undue attention to" the restraints, but then changed course and 25 indicated he "probably would submit ... an instruction for the Court's consideration ...." (19 RT 26 4431.) Defense counsel did not file a motion with the court objecting to the apparently visible 27 restraints. Thus, again, the California Supreme Court was referencing a lack of objection on the 28 part of Petitioner resulting in a waiver of the issue of restraint visibility for purposes of appeal. In

1 light of the foregoing, the state court’s decision involved neither an unreasonable application of 2 Supreme Court precedent, nor did it rely upon an unreasonable application of the facts as the 3 decision was predicated upon the doctrine of invited error by way of a failure to object. 28 4 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

5 Petitioner’s shackling claims presented in two state habeas petitions to the California 6 Supreme Court were also summarily denied. Most recently, on July 13, 2011, that court denied 7 the habeas petition filed in September 2006. Specifically, the shackling claim was denied on the 8 merits, as well as on the following bases: it was untimely; it was raised and rejected on appeal; 9 and, it could have been raised in the prior petition for writ of habeas corpus. Richter, 562 U.S. at 10 99 (“[w]hen a federal claim has been presented to a state court and the state court has denied 11 relief, it may be presumed that the state court adjudicated the claim on the merits in the absence 12 of any indication or state-law procedural principles to the contrary”).

13 When presented with a state court decision that is unaccompanied by a rationale for its 14 conclusions, a federal court must conduct an independent review of the record to determine 15 whether the state court decision is objectively reasonable. See Delgado v. Lewis, 223 F.3d 976, 16 982 (9th Cir. 2000). This “[i]ndependent review ... is not de novo review of the constitutional 17 issue, but rather, the only method by which [a federal court] can determine whether a silent state 18 court decision is objectively unreasonable.” See Himes v. Thompson, 336 F.3d at 853. “Where a 19 state court’s decision is unaccompanied by an explanation, the habeas petitioner’s burden still 20 must be met by showing there was no reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief.” See 21 Richter, 562 U.S. at 98.

22 Following an independent review, the undersigned finds the state court’s decision to be 23 objectively reasonable. Petitioner is not entitled to relief on this claim for the reasons explained 24 below.

25 Applicable Legal Standards

26 The Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution assure a criminal 27 defendant the right to a fair trial. See Estelle v. Williams, 425 U.S. 501, 503 (1976). Visible 28 shackling of a criminal defendant during trial “undermines the presumption of innocence and the 1 related fairness of the factfinding process” and ““affront[s]’ the ‘dignity and decorum of judicial 2 proceedings that the judge is seeking to uphold.”” Deck v. Missouri, 544 U.S. 622, 630-31 (2005)

3 (quoting Illinois v. Allen, 397 U.S. 337, 344 (1970)); see also Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d 4 1057, 1062 (9th Cir. 2008). The Supreme Court has therefore held that “the Fifth and Fourteenth 5 Amendments prohibit the use of physical restraints visible to the jury absent a trial court 6 determination, in the exercise of its discretion, that they are justified by a state interest specific to 7 a particular trial.” Deck, 544 U.S. at 629. Those interests include “physical security,” 8 “courtroom decorum” and “courtroom security.” Id. at 624, 628. Accordingly, criminal 9 defendants have “the right to be free of shackles and handcuffs in the presence of the jury, unless 10 shackling is justified by an essential state interest.” Ghent v. Woodford, 279 F.3d 1121, 1132 11 (9th Cir. 2002). See also Jones v. Meyer, 899 F.2d 883, 884 (9th Cir. 1990); Wilson v.
12 McCarthy, 770 F.2d 1482, 1484 (9th Cir. 1985).

13         Shackling is not unconstitutionally prejudicial per se. Illinois v. Allen, 397 U.S. at 343-14 44; Duckett v. Godinez, 67 F.3d at 748 (“shackling is inherently prejudicial, but it is not per se 15 unconstitutional”). Unjustified shackling does not rise to the level of constitutional error unless 16 the defendant makes a showing that he suffered prejudice as a result. Ghent, 279 F.3d at 1132 17 (citing United States v. Olano, 62 F.3d 1180, 1190 (9th Cir. 1995), & United States v.
18 Halliburton, 870 F.2d 557, 561-62 (9th Cir. 1989)); see also Larson, 515 F.3d at 1064 (state trial 19 court’s violation of the petitioner’s due process rights in requiring him to wear security leg brace 20 during trial, found to be harmless). The Ninth Circuit has held that “the greater the intensity of 21 shackling and the chains’ visibility to the jurors, the greater the extent of prejudice.” Spain v.
22 Rushen, 883 F.2d 712, 722 (9th Cir. 1989). Thus, it has been recognized that “physical restraints 23 such as a waist chain, leg irons or handcuffs may create a more prejudicial appearance than more 24 unobtrusive forms of restraint.” Larson, 515 F.3d at 1064.

25         In Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2008), the jury saw the defendant’s leg 26 shackles, and, when the shackles were removed in the midst of the trial, the Court commented to 27 the jury that the defendant had previously been wearing the shackle for security reasons, and he 28 would no longer be wearing it, due to a leg impairment of the defendant. Id. at 1062. Because

1 the record reflected no justification for the visible leg shackle to be used during the first two days 2 of trial, the Ninth Circuit agreed that the defendant’s “due process rights were violated when the 3 trial court failed to make a finding on the record justifying the necessity of physical restraints....”
4 Id. at 1063. The Ninth Circuit went on to determine, however, that, based on the record, the error 5 did not have a substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury’s verdict under 6 the harmless error standard articulated in Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. at 623.

7 In Ghent v. Woodford, 279 F.3d 1121, issued before the Supreme Court’s decision in 8 Deck, the Ninth Circuit determined that, “[i]n order for a defendant to prevail on a claim of this 9 nature, a court must find that the defendant was indeed physically restrained in the presence of the 10 jury, that the shackling was seen by the jury, and that the physical restraint was not justified by 11 state interests.” Id. at 1132. In addition, the defendant must show prejudice (harmful error). Id.
12 After reviewing the evidentiary hearing transcript on appeal and considering the arguments of the 13 parties in Ghent, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit determined:

14 15 The evidence suggests that a few jurors at most glimpsed Ghent in shackles in the 16 hallway and as he was entering the courtroom. The jury’s “brief or inadvertent glimpse” 17 of a shackled defendant is not inherently or presumptively prejudicial, nor has Ghent 18 made a sufficient showing of actual prejudice.

19 Id. at 1133. See also Williams v. Woodford, 384 F.3d at 592 (“Even if we assume that 20 Williams’s physical restraints at trial were unjustified, we conclude that the district court properly 21 held that the error was harmless. When the jury never saw the defendant’s shackles in the 22 courtroom, we have held that the shackles did not prejudice the defendant’s right to a fair trial.”).

23 In a federal habeas corpus proceeding such as this one, the federal court must determine 24 whether any error had a “substantial and injurious effect” on the jury’s verdict. Brecht v.
25 Abrahamson, 507 U.S. at 623; Larson, 515 F.3d at 1064. See also Frye v. Pliler, 551 U.S. 112, 26 121-22 (2007) (Brecht harmless error review applies whether or not the state court recognized the 27 error and reviewed it for harmlessness). In this context, a federal habeas court is to “determine 28 whether what [the jurors] saw was so inherently prejudicial as to pose an unacceptable threat to

1 defendant's right to a fair trial." Holbrook v. Flynn, 475 U.S. 560, 572 (1986). In the Ninth 2 Circuit, "only the most egregious kind of shackling has been found ... to deny due process."
3 Castillo v. Stainer, 983 F.2d 145, 148 (9th Cir. 1991).

4 Discussion

5 To review, Petitioner argues he was unjustifiably, visibly shackled throughout the guilt 6 and penalty phases of his trial in violation of his rights to a fair trial, due process, his right to be 7 present and to the effective assistance of counsel, and to a fair penalty phase proceeding. (ECF 8 No. 330 at 509-37.) Respondent contends the use of physical restraints was justified; therefore, 9 due process was satisfied. Further, respondent asserts counsel was not ineffective, nor would the 10 California Supreme Court have found counsel's performance to be deficient because there was no 11 reasonable probability the trial court would have imposed any lesser restraints in light of the 12 security risk Petitioner posed, nor would that court have found prejudice. (ECF No. 345 at 280-13 88.)

14 The Relevant Proceedings

15 On February 2, 1989,<sup>54</sup> the first day of the proceedings before the Honorable Darrel W.
16 Lewis to whom the trial of this matter was assigned,<sup>55</sup> the subject of restraints was addressed 17 during a conversation between the court and all counsel concerning various pretrial motions and 18 other matters (2 RT 2-9; see also 4 CT 771-72):

20 <sup>54</sup> Petitioner's Notice of Motion to Limit Security was filed February 2, 1989. It sought to limit 21 the number of security personnel or law enforcement officers present in the courtroom during 22 trial, citing a Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals case and California Penal Code § 1044. (3 CT 666-23 69.) Following the motion pleading in the Clerk's Transcript is a copy of an Information (and 24 although largely an illegible reproduction, it appears to involve two counts related to possession 25 of an explosive device), endorsed December 13, 1988, as well as a number of documents pertaining to Petitioner's criminal history, including a December 12, 1988, violation of California Penal Code § 4574, subdivision (a), for possession of an explosive device in jail. Among this documentation is a notation that Petitioner was classified an "escape risk." (3 CT 670-91.)

26 <sup>55</sup> The matter was assigned to Judge Lewis by Judge James T. Ford on February 2, 1989, at 8:30 27 a.m. More particularly, that court ordered the matter "trail to TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1989, 28 at 9:00 a.m., for trial in Department 15, the Honorable Darrel W. Lewis presiding." (3 CT 770.)
Nevertheless, at 10:00 a.m. on February 2, 1989, proceedings commenced before Judge Lewis.
(3 CT 771-72.)

2 MR. MARLETTE: I expect perhaps our next meeting, Counsel will be moving for 3 some lessening of the restrictions on Mr. Alvarez, and between now and then I'll be 4 looking to see if there are any problems.

I also ask the bailiffs to check with their office - -

5 THE COURT: Excuse me a second. [¶] Mr. Alvarez, you have an interpreter. The 6 purpose of the interpreter is to assist you in understanding what's going on.

7 If you need to talk to your attorney, then raise your hand or something and let me 8 know that you need to talk to your attorney, but when you are talking back and forth with 9 the interpreter, you can't at the same time understand what is going on and she can't talk 10 to you at the same time to interpret what everybody else is saying.

11 THE INTERPRETER: Okay.

12 THE COURT: Thank you.

13 MR. MARLETTE: So between now and our next meeting I'll be looking into it.
14 I'd ask the bailiffs to look into it as well, see if there are any problems.

15 [DEFENSE COUNSEL HOLMES]: Your Honor, that is one of the motions that I 16 have, and but I assume we have these chairs, they can do the chain or wherever is 17 necessary in the back.

18 THE COURT: Yes.

19 MR. HOLMES: Security chairs, whatever they call them, and he was concerned 20 about having his hands free, you know, to get the paperwork and so forth.

21 THE COURT: At the very least, we'll have the security chair here for the next 22 appearance, and he will either be shackled in the security chair or in a chair and not 23 shackled at all, depending on -

24 MR. HOLMES: I can tell the Court right now, I've represented Mr. Alvarez for 25 about a year and a half, I don't think we've had one single outburst from him, so I don't 26 see any problems.

27 THE COURT: Okay, we'll take up that matter next time.

28 MR. HOLMES: Okay.

(2 RT 9-11.) When the proceedings next resumed on the afternoon of February 7, 1989, the court noted the defense had filed seventeen pretrial motions. (2 RT 16, 18; 4 CT 786.) The following then occurred:

THE COURT: It's my intention in this case to have, as usual, which is one custody officer for each defendant and the courtroom bailiff, which is standard, and in addition for Mr. Alvarez, I intend to use the security chair, which is a chair which is similar in color and design to most of the other chairs in the courtroom.

The chairs used by Counsel happen to be different from the others, because we acquired those strictly for the use of Counsel and staff, but defendants' chairs are similar to the other chairs in the courtroom, including other chairs in front of the bar and in the audience portion, with the only exception, with the security chair has a vinyl flap covering the rear portion of the chair, right around a person's buttocks.

That is normally open in the other chairs, and that vinyl flap is covering a fastening device, an eye, so to speak and then a chain is placed around the defendant's

1 waste [sic] and attached to that eye.

2 If the clothing is properly placed around the chain, the chain is not visible to 3 anyone.

4 MR. HOLMES: Your Honor, on this same matter, I note right now that the 5 defendant has the ankle shackles, or whatever they call them, at this time.

6 I don't have any real problem, unless they're uncomfortable to Mr. Alvarez at this 7 time, but when the jury comes in, what I don't want is to have the jurors sit over and see 8 Mr. Alvarez has his legs shackled and [see codefendant Ross] does not, and suddenly get 9 the distinction that there's two different classes of defendants here in this case.

10 THE COURT: Yes. Unless something else comes to the Court's attention, I will 11 not require the ankle shackles.

12 And, also, the courtroom doors have windows that are about four feet long and 13 eight inches wide, a window in each door.

14 Those are now covered, so that when the defendants are brought into the 15 courtroom and seated and secured, jurors and other people outside the courtroom cannot 16 see that process. When the defendants are either brought in or taken out of the courtroom, 17 that's not visible from the hallway.

18 Also, if and when the defendant chooses to testify, the witness chair is also set up 19 as a security chair, and he would then be escorted to the witness stand outside the presence 20 of the jury and be fastened to that chair, in a similar manner as I've just described.

21 Is there any objection to that procedure?

22 [DEFENSE COUNSEL GABLE]: No.

23 MR. HOLMES: No objection, your Honor.

24 THE COURT: Okay. I have reviewed some reports, even though there's no 25 objection, and I should, perhaps, state for the record, my bailiff sought out some 26 information on Mr. Alvarez from the Sheriff's Department.

27 Included in that information is a report where Mr. Alvarez is accused of having an 28 explosive device in the county jail on December the 9th, 1988, apparently consistent with what's commonly called a match bomb - - apparently had a device approximately four inches long wrapped tightly in plastic, a paper-wrapped fuse protruding from one end of it, and that contained inside the plastic was match heads that had been removed from the stick or paper, and also had a small glass pill bottle containing nitroglycerine pills.

Now, I'm just stating for the record, because since there's no objection to the security proceedings that I've just outlined, it is not necessary for the Court to specifically state good cause; however, that's what was brought to the Court's attention.

22 (2 RT 26-29.)

23 On February 23, 1989, the trial court provided its rulings on a number of the pending 24 defense motions, including one pertaining to Petitioner's request to limit courtroom security:

25 "Number four regarding security, that motion is mooted by agreement of counsel to the 26 procedures that the Court outlined. [¶] And as long as there are no disruptions, that's the 27 procedure that will be followed throughout the trial." (2 RT 203.)

1 On March 15, 1989, the morning session began as follows:

3 THE COURT: It's nine minutes after 9:00, we're in session, although [counsel for codefendant Ross] is not here at this moment because he's in another Court.

4 However, I've been informed of several things this morning regarding Mr.
Alvarez, and at this time, I'm directing the security officers to place Mr. Alvarez's hands 5 back in the handcuffs and put them down in his lap.

6 [DEFENSE COUNSEL] HOLMES: Your Honor, could we, for the record, have a little information as far as what happened?

7 THE COURT: Yes, we're going to. [¶] If there's some way his shirt can be pulled down over the cuffs or something can be put somehow, just sit up close to the table, 8 then the cuffs won't show.

9 THE DEFENDANT ALVAREZ: It's okay, it's okay.

10 THE COURT: Sergeant Robinson, would you explain in open court what you explained to me in in chambers just a moment ago? Go ahead and show to the attorneys, what you showed to me.

11 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: I was assigned to bring out, on Monday - - [¶]
I was originally assigned to escort Mr. Alvarez up here last Monday, my first day in court 12 with him. I, the belly chains, if you understand how they go on they go around the waist, in this fashion, the crotch chain comes up, is locked together back here, and leaves a 13 pigtail. The pigtail, as a rule, is secured to the security chair.

14 MR. HOLMES: Okay.

15 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: Mr. Alvarez, after the first recess, insisted the he didn't have enough room to move, being chained by the pigtail, and he wanted this brought up and chained, the padlock onto this.

16 You follow that?

17 MR. GABLE: Uh-huh.

18 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: That drew suspicion as to why would he be willing to sit on this. It's uncomfortable; nobody else wants to do it. Why would he want to do it?

19 There's other things. He wanted to carry his legal work down the day that I talked him out of it, on these recesses. He had his hands in front of him he was continually, 20 would continually flip this in a nervous manner.

21 So yesterday, at 5:00 o'clock, I decided, Well, I'm gonna check the belly chains, just to see if there's something wrong with them.

22 I found the cut. It's been done with a string or dental floss, cut almost all the way through.

23 THE COURT: What he's showing is the weld on the link - -

24 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: See that?

25 THE COURT: - - has obviously been worn down, over halfway through.

26 MR. HOLMES: I don't think it's halfway through, I think maybe it's closer to a third.

27 THE COURT: It's worn to the point you can obviously see it.

28 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: That didn't fall out - -

MR. HOLMES: Officer, are these the same?

THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: He wore these for two days, and the reason I can testify to that is the fact that one of these cuffs, you have a hard time getting the key in and 1 out of. It's the same set, identical same set, he'd worn for two days.

2 MR. GABLE: Just for the record, I notice that on the other link that's attached to 3 this big ring, you have some of the same type of, what appears to be cracking or 4 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: Cutting.

5 MR. GABLE: So they're on both of these.

6 THE COURT: It's shown on at least three links, I believe.

7 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: Here is another link that goes around the belly itself.
8 You see where that's cut? Down inside here?

9 Okay, the significance is - - the reason - -

10 THE COURT: You still have more to say, gentlemen? [¶] Did he request to have 11 this same set?

12 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: When I took these off him at 5:00 o'clock and 13 replaced it with another set, he questioned me why, why couldn't he have these back.

14 I told him I found a bent link, and we were gonna have it fixed. Earlier, he 15 requested [of] Pat Falge to wear the same set of belly chains, that were another set, he 16 wanted to stay, remain in those all the time.

17 He's requesting to wear these all the time.

18 THE COURT: Also yesterday he took his pencil with him when he left the court.
19 He took his pencil and that was noticed, and called down. It was confiscated from him, 20 downstairs.

21 MR. HOLMES: I discussed the pencil situation with Mr. Alvarez. He indicated to 22 me that what happened there was that he, they had him chained up, had him handcuffed 23 before he could get his pencil out of his materials, so [it] ended up in his materials.

24 THE COURT: All he had to do was tell somebody. He knows he's not supposed 25 to have it.

26 THE INTERPRETER: They were saying it was time for me to leave.

27 THE COURT: That doesn't make any difference; you don't take contraband in the 28 jail.

MR. GABLE: Tell us first.

([Counsel for co-defendant Ross] now present)

(Interpreter conferring with Mr. Holmes and Mr. Gable)

MR. HOLMES: Your Honor, I appreciate your giving us the time on this - - the only significant thing I can think we have here is that Mr. Alvarez says he has different sets of chains Monday, Tuesday and today; he's had three different sets of chains.

THE COURT: Well, that's a difference of opinion. Now - - [¶] Officer Robinson, anything else?

THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: That's it.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE BAILIFF FALGE: Your Honor, I might put something on the record, in this same regard.

I escorted Mr. Alvarez two weeks ago, because we were in recess for this past week.

It was the week prior to that, and I was assisting the holding officer, when Mr.
Alvarez was changing into his court clothes, and another inmate was also, that was in the belly chains, was also dressing out at the same time, and when we replaced the chains.

I put a different set on him, more or less inadvertently, it wasn't necessarily on purpose, and he quickly asked for the same set that he wore over. And I just told him, no, you wear what we put on you.

1 The next day, I purposely switched chains, and he again immediately requested the 2 set that he had wore over from the jail, and I relayed this information to Officer Robinson.

3 THE COURT: Okay. [¶] One of you this morning said there was something 4 about, some additional reports from jail about making a gun out of soap or something like 5 that?

6 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: That's the information I have received, I heard it 7 numerous times through the courthouse here. Apparently he fashioned a gun out of soap, 8 used something to make it look blue like a gun, had a silencer on it.

9 THE COURT: Sergeant Beers?

10 THE BAILIFF BEERS: Your Honor, I spoke with - - I'm [S]eargeant Sam Beers, 11 court security. I went with Sergeant Owens over at the jail the day watch sergeant, just a 12 few minutes ago, after learning about the problem with the chains.

13 He did not have a gun carved out of soap in his cell. There was a gun, handgun 14 carved out of soap found at the jail, and he had plans for making a gun out of soap, and 15 those were found in Mr. Alvarez's cell.

16 THE COURT: Mr. Alvarez had some written plans?

17 THE BAILIFF BEERS: Some kind of drawings or plans actually in his cell for 18 making a gun out of soap.

19 THE COURT: Do you know where those plans are now?

20 THE BAILIFF BEERS: I would have to call back to the jail and ask him, to ask 21 Sergeant Owens if he can, if those were booked as evidence or what, what's being done 22 about those.

23 THE COURT: Okay, I would like Sergeant Owens to come over here sometime 24 today, and speak to me directly about that.

25 THE BAILIFF BEERS: I can have him bring the entire file, all the problems that 26 have arisen.

27 [THE PROSECUTOR]: Just as a background, your Honor. [¶] The Court is 28 probably aware of this, but to refresh your recollection, Mr. Alvarez does have an escape conviction.

That was out of C.M.C. East. He was incarcerated in prison, and I believe it was two other felons made up dummies and put them into their beds, and then apparently walked away. There was no force involved, but was quite elaborately planned.

THE COURT: Okay. We'll look into this further. [¶] For the time being, he's going to remain the way he is right now. ...

(6 RT 988-95; 4 CT 975.) Later that same afternoon, further information was provided to the trial court:

THE COURT: ... Officer Ernie Owens from the jail - - Officer Owens, you tell me what you have to offer concerning any security risks of Mr. Alvarez.

OFFICER OWENS: I have the jail information package and write-ups concerning his conduct while in custody at the Sacramento County main jail, which also includes - - This was handed out by the facility commander.

THE COURT: Okay. Is there anything in there relating to a gun made out of soap?

OFFICER OWENS: No, sir, there is not.

THE COURT: May I see the entire file?

THE COURT: All right. Rather than going into any lengthy hearing at this time, what I'm going to do is ask Officer Owens to make me a copy of these reports that he has just shown me, and then we can go into it in a little more detail at a later time.

MR. HOLMES: Your Honor, on that same line, on behalf of Mr. Alvarez, we would like to make a motion at this time for discover[y] of those same documents.

It seems to me that they would be relevant at this time on other possible things, such as there's the 190.3 allegations, concerning making of a bomb, a match bomb in jail. For all we know, there may be some documents on that that may pertain to that - -

THE COURT: All right. I'll get a copy, and we will all look at it in detail.

OFFICER OWENS: Your Honor, Mr. Alvarez should have copies of each one of those documents that you've just read.

THE COURT: Okay. If you will, please, make a copy of the entire set for me in the next day or so.

OFFICER OWENS: You'll have them today, sir.

THE COURT: All right, fine.

(6 RT 1074-75; see also 4 CT 975, 996-1000.) Finally, before proceedings concluded on March 15, 1989, the trial court stated the following:

THE COURT: ... Okay. I gave each side a copy of a set of - - of incident reports. I don't know if there are any other records but the records from the sheriff's department. So you can look at those. I'll look at them. We can discuss them further if necessary.

I noticed later this afternoon, that Mr. Alvarez is sitting back and has the handcuffs exposed to the potential jurors.

Mr. Alvarez, that's your choice. If you don't care that they see that, that's fine. But that's why we initially - - We talked about having you scoot up close to the table so that your wrists would not be exposed or covering them with the sleeves of your shirt or covering them up somehow. And I notice that you resisted that and told the officer not to do that.

Again, it's your choice. If it doesn't bother you that they see that, then that's fine with the Court.

(A brief discussion was held off the record between the Interpreter and Mr. Gable.)

THE COURT: Thank you.

(6 RT 1189.)

On March 16, 1989, about two hours into voir dire proceedings, the following colloquy occurred:

MR. HOLMES: Your Honor, on behalf of Mr. Alvarez, we would request the Court consider that we go back to the same security precautions we had before, that is, the hands be free.

The reason I say this, we've had a chance to talk with him a little bit, as far as what the officer showed us yesterday, what looked like the links of the chains, where they came together, looked like it had been worked down a little bit.

Mr. Gable and I took a look at the chains that he had on yesterday, which were the,

1 different than the ones the officer held up and even those we saw, what, one link or two.

2 MR. GABLE: One link.

3 MR. HOLMES: One link which was right at the area where the crotch chain 4 comes up, and it has the same thing, and remember we put on record yesterday about one 5 chain, where it had been apparently filed down or at least it was about a third of that area 6 in the sought are [sic: solder] or the welded portion was missing, it's exactly the same 7 thing with the chain he had on yesterday.

8 I think Mr. Gable would agree with me that it was approximately a third of the 9 way through, so I'm no expert in this, I don't know whether somebody's taken something 10 and filed these things down, or whether that's what happens then these things are 11 soldered, something about the manufacturer of them, or whatever, whether somebody else 12 did it -- I [have] represented to Mr. Alvarez for, gosh, almost a year and a half now, and 13 I've never seen him make any pretense of trying to do anything violent in court or make 14 any actions towards trying to escape or anything of that nature.

15 I just think what we're doing here, I appreciate the officers and [their] trying to 16 comply with security, but I just think it's excessive keeping this man sitting here.

17 He can't move his hands; it's obviously uncomfortable.

18 I think with the waist chain and chained to the back, three or four officers in the 19 court at all times, I don't think we have any problems at all. I think we can release his 20 hands and let him go back to where we were.

21 THE COURT: You say three or four officers in court at all times?

22 We have just the standard one officer for each defendant and then the bailiff is 23 here, but she is going outside and doing other things, so we don't have three or four 24 officers in court at all times.

25 I'm concerned about Mr. Alvarez, particularly after reading the reports that I 26 received yesterday.

27 I'm not going to read them all into the record, but I will put them into the file.

28 He has repeated instances of misconduct, involving threatening officers, fighting with other inmates, starting fires, possessing weapons on various sorts, one of them the same thing twice, the same type of thing, that is, taking a newspaper and rolling it up so that, and covering it with plastic. Each time he said it was, that he had it to use to depress the - -

MR. HOLMES: Keep the water faucet on.

THE COURT: Or something like that, but he was told after the first time that was not allowed, and he was not to have that, but yet he did it again, and the records that I've reviewed indicate that he has little if any control over his emotions and little, if any respect for authority or anyone's rules.

MR. HOLMES: Your Honor, if the Court is going to continue with the order to keep him chained to where he is, I'm not sure what Mr. Alvarez is thinking at this point, but he's indicated to Mr. Gable and I earlier that he was perhaps going to ask to absent himself during the jury selection portion.

I'm not sure what he still feels that way or not.

I would recommend he stay here, so he can assist us in picking the jury and so forth, but maybe we should inquire at this time, what he feels on that.

THE COURT: It's his choice.

THE INTERPRETER: I want to stay other there, I don't want to come here for anything.

[THE PROSECUTOR]: Your Honor, I would object to Mr. Alvarez not being 1 present.

2 I think that the right of confrontation, well, according to recent decisions, it works 3 in a number of different ways, but I think the People have a right, too, particularly during 4 this voir dire process.

5 Part of my questioning has to do with people taking personal responsibility and 6 spending time in this courtroom with the defendant and then having the personal 7 conviction to vote for the death penalty for him.

8 I think that this is a minor matter with Mr. Alvarez, and he's being further 9 manipulative by his request.

10 It's not something that is necessary, and I would request it be denied, unless it 11 becomes necessary.

12 THE COURT: I don't see where technically the right of confrontation comes in 13 during jury selection.

14 It may be handy to have somebody to point to, but I don't think there's any 15 requirement of that, and if after discussing it with his attorneys further he wants to absent 16 himself from the jury selection process, I think that's fine.

17 Unless I'm presented with some authority otherwise, I will grant that, and let's 18 finish today, and Monday, then we'll make a final decision on it on Monday.

19 MR. HOLMES: Your Honor, could we at this time maybe inquire of the officers 20 whether they feel like it's still a potential problem here that would require the cuffs on his 21 hands?

22 THE COURT: Officer Robinson?

23 THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: Well, I don't know this individual's whole 24 background, but what I've heard and what I found here at the courthouse, I would say that 25 he needs to be kept in some type of restraints.

26 I feel that he's a danger to the people at the Court and him. There's a danger of 27 this guy getting up and walking out of Court.

28 Obviously that's what he attempted to do.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, that's what he attempted to do?

THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: I feel this is what Mr. Alvarez [is] attempting to do, is to break those restraints and leave this courtroom.

THE COURT: I understand what you mean.

THE BAILIFF ROBINSON: And I feel that it's a risk to not restrain him further than locking him in that chair.

THE COURT: Have there been any problems in transporting him back and forth from the holding cell or any problems in him getting dressed in the morning, anything like that?

THE BAILIFF: Not that I know of.

To my knowledge, and from what I've heard, he's been very talkative and I think he's been manipulating the officers.

MR. HOLMES: Your Honor - -

THE COURT: Okay. If you have, Mr. Alvarez, I guess, if he's right handed, if he had his right hand free, then he could write. Is that why he wants his hands free?

MR. HOLMES: Well, for comfort for one thing, and yes, if the Court wants to go with one hand free, we would certainly prefer that over two hands cuffed, but I've been through these before, and the last death penalty case I had with Gary Hines, he was a potential problem almost every day and still didn't get to the point of handcuffs on his hands.

THE COURT: Last death penalty trial we had, we gave the defendant coffees every day and let him have coffee along with everybody else. Each one is different.

MR. HOLMES: I appreciate that.

THE COURT: This is by no means a standard policy by this Court. This Court takes each case on its own merits, and this defendant's background gives me great concern.

The fact that he, again, these reports indicate that he has had various weapons of his own making, including a match bomb and he seems to have excuse[s] for various things, well, I had this for that reason, this for that reason, but he also at one time had a sheet metal screw, which obviously has no legitimate purpose and even he come up with a legitimate reason for having something like that.

Those things are legitimate things for me to take into consideration in deciding whether not he's an escape risk, or even, if not an escape risk, a risk of injuring somebody, if he should decide something is happening in this Court he doesn't like.

He's been in fights with two other inmates, he picked up a television and threatened an officer with it, and has at other times threatened to, quote, kick your ass, to officers in the jail, and threatened to get them out on the street, various things like that. I don't need that type of conduct in my courtroom. I don't need to have to go through this whole thing all over again because some of his conduct, and if I need to take measures to make sure that that doesn't happen, that's what I'm gonna do. I'd rather prevent it than try to cure it.

MR. HOLMES: Can we go along with your original idea as far as having a hand free that he writes with?

THE COURT: I'll consider that.

MR. HOLMES: Appreciate that.

THE COURT: We're in recess.

(7 RT 1250-56; see also 4 CT 981.)

Prior to recess of the day's proceedings, defense counsel Holmes raised the issue again:

MR. HOLMES: Your Honor, earlier in the day, we were discussing this matter with regard to the security of Mr. Alvarez, and the Court said you were going to consider maybe releasing his hands.

The reason I bring this up again is Mr. Alvarez has made several comments here. I passed him a note, and he was trying to respond to me. And I think he's getting frustrated; in fact, that's what he told Mr. Gable here, because he would like to write some notes to us, over some other matters that we're discussing now. And he's feeling very frustrated that he can't do this.

If the Court would consider, at least, releasing his writing hand so he could at least write notes to us during the trial and he could assist us, and we could go back and forth in communication there.

THE COURT: Okay. Okay, unless there's some further incident, then Monday he may have his right hand released.

MR. HOLMES: Okay. Thank you.
Are you right-handed?

THE DEFENDANT: Yeah.

1 THE COURT: But I tell you right now, if there are any further instances, even in 2 the jail, then it's back the way you are. Okay?
3 We're in recess until 9:00 o'clock, Monday morning.

4 (7 RT 1348-49.)

5 During the morning recess on May 3, 1989, more than six weeks later, while Petitioner 6 was on the stand testifying in his own defense and after the jury had been excused (18 RT 4108), 7 the trial court noted as follows:

8 [THE COURT]: The other thing I wanted to discuss with Counsel is, I know you 9 have some chart paper there, and when Mr. Alvarez turns, and when he turns to talk to the 10 interpreter, I think it's obvious to the jurors there's a chain around his waist.

11 Now, I don't know for sure, but I don't - - and the fact throughout this trial he 12 doesn't stand up, I think ultimately the jurors are going to know he is chained down.

13 Now, if you want me to make a statement about that, to tell them something that 14 isn't entirely true, that is, that that's just simply flat Court policy that when somebody's 15 charged in a death penalty trial, then that's the policy, that they are to be confined, so I'm 16 simply bringing this to your attention.

17 If you want me to make some kind of statement whether it be totally true or not, I 18 will. If you want to just simply ignore it, then we'll ignore it, but the jurors are common, 19 ordinary people and they figure things out very quickly.

20 MR. HOLMES: Before we make a decision on that, could I have him turn right 21 now, and see - -

22 THE COURT: Officer, if you'll stand to the side, please.

23 MR. HOLMES: Manny, turn around toward the chart there.

24 THE COURT: Turn like you're talking to the interpreter.

25 MR. HOLMES: You can definitely see it, especially in the back row.

26 MR. GABLE: He doesn't even have to turn too much.

27 MR. HOLMES: You can see it all the time.

28 MR. HOLMES: We'll think about it.

THE COURT: Yeah. Normally, when somebody's wearing just a sweater or something, like pull it down to cover it up, but throughout this trial, there has been no attempt by Mr. Alvarez or Counsel to really try to make an effort to cover up the chains, when he first had his - - I recall the day, during voir dire, that when he first had his hands cuffed down, I shouldn't say intentionally, but he obviously moved his chair back and was sitting so it was very obvious that the jurors saw it at that time.

I don't think it's any secret, but anyway, the point is, you want me to say something? If so, you tell me what you want me to say. If it's reasonable, I'll say it.

MR. GABLE: We appreciate that, your Honor.

(18 RT 4109-11.) When asked at the end of the day's testimony<sup>56</sup> whether any decision had been

---

<sup>56</sup> Petitioner's testimony did not extend beyond the lunch break due to illness. (18 RT 4163; 5 CT 1112.)

1 made about a statement to the jury addressing the restraints, Mr. Gable indicated he would “have 2 an answer for [the court] first thing in the morning.” (18 RT 4162.)

3 The following morning, May 4, 1989, Petitioner resumed testifying on direct; no decision 4 by defense counsel was proffered prior to testimony. (19 RT 4164-65.) Trial was recessed for 5 the period between the afternoon of May 4 and the morning of May 15, 1989. (5 CT 1113.)

6 During an afternoon recess on May 15, 1989, between cross examination and redirect of 7 Petitioner, the following colloquy occurred:
8

9 THE COURT: We’re in session outside the presence of the jury.

10 Counsel, as you came into chambers to tell me that you would like some time to 11 talk to your client before you redirected, I mentioned to you I was - - just had run across a 12 cite which, the quotation I had, People v. Lewis and I gave you a cite, stood for the 13 proposition that the Court has a sua []sponte responsibility to admonish the jury whenever 14 extra security measures are used, and the jury becomes aware of those extra security 15 measures.

16 I looked at that case in the few minutes before we convened, and the case doesn’t 17 stand for that. That case dealt with a defendant being removed from the courtroom, so the 18 source that I had, which cites the proposition of increased security is simply - - simply 19 isn’t there, so I again will leave it up to you to decide whether or not you want me to give 20 any type of an admonition to the jury regarding the fact that Mr. Alvarez is restrained to 21 his chair.

22 MR. GABLE: At this time, I think it’s on the record, but I would indicate again 23 that, at this time, we’re not asking the Court to give such an admonition.

24 If for some reason, we decide differently during the course of the trial, we’ll 25 certainly make that - - advise the Court and make that request.

26 THE COURT: Okay. At this time, we’re taking a recess then so that you can 27 consult with your client before conducting redirect.

28 MR. GABLE: Okay.

THE COURT: I would ask all other Counsel and court reporter and staff to vacate the courtroom.

(Recess)

THE COURT: We’re in session, outside the presence of the jury.

During recess, I read People v. Lewis more carefully, and it does have one sentence in there, and cites back to People versus Duran, at 16 Cal. 3d 282.

Duran is a case directly on point, which is on the point of using additional restraints, and states at page 291 that in those instances when visible restraints must be imposed, the Court shall instruct the jury sua []sponte that such restraints should have no bearing on the determination of the defendant’s guilt.

Just before we convened, I walked up into the jury box, and particularly from the closest four or five seats, when Mr. Alvarez turns to the side to address the interpreter or to turn around to write on the wall, on the charts behind him, it appears to me it’s quite obvious that there is a chain around his waist.

1           And if it hadn't been described for the record earlier, when Mr. Alvarez is seated 2 both at counsel table and in the witness stand, he does have a chain around his waist, and 3 it also goes between his legs and meets in the back and is padlocked to a hidden I-bolt in 4 the back of the chair.

5           So the portion that is visible is just a portion of the chain somewhere, either that 6 you can see either around his waist or the portion that goes down to his crotch, so unless 7 Counsel object to it, I will instruct the jury that they are to disregard the fact of this 8 restraint.

9           And I will - - I would even go further than that, as I think I said earlier, and tell the 10 jury something that is not the truth; that is, that this is standard procedure in all homicide 11 cases or in all death penalty cases, to so restrain the defendant.

12           This is the sheriff's policy that they have to have additional security, merely 13 because of the nature of the charges, and rather than having two or three officers seated in 14 the courtroom throughout the entire trial, it's the Court's policy to use these type of 15 restraints, feel that this, that type of restraint is less - - I want to say less prejudicial, but 16 I'll think of a better word, than having two or three officers seated right behind the 17 defendant.

18           But anyway, again, I will leave it up to your discretion, Counsel. I think it's clear 19 that it is sua [ ]sponte, so unless you and your defendant object, I will give the jury some 20 instruction on that, in that regard, however, if you and your client desire that I not do that, 21 then I will not do it.

22           And exactly what, if you don't object to the Court giving some admonition, I will 23 certainly take your input into what type of admonition should be given to the jury and 24 when it should be given, and again, whether it's something you want the Court to instruct 25 on or it's something, if you would prefer, to even handle it during your argument, simply 26 point out that you, yourself, can admonish the jury they're not to infer anything from it; 27 however you want to do it is - - but I'm satisfied the Court has an obligation to do 28 something, unless you affirmatively object to it.

          MR. GABLE: Your Honor, just for clarity of the record, the objection to giving an admonition at this time is, it would draw, in my opinion, undue attention to the fact Mr.
Alvarez is restrained.

          On the other hand, however, I think and upon further reflection, probably would submit that, an instruction for the Court's consideration to be given with the instruction packet, to the extent that the defendant is in custody, as the jury is well aware, and that to the extent that he has been restrained or has probably been obvious, the jury should not infer anything from that, in that fashion since it would be contained with the balance of the instructions I think the prejudicial effect of that kind of a - - an instruction would be lessened and that would be the desire that I have at this time, and that would be to request of the Court in the package of instructions, an instruction which I would provide, unless I determine that I didn't want to do that, in which case, we would get waivers from the defendant as well as Counsel.

          THE COURT: All right, that's fine.

          Perhaps we can just incorporate it into the standard instruction, which says that you shall not draw any inference from the fact that the defendants have been arrested, charged and brought to trial and work in something at that point regarding restraints or custody.

1 (19 RT 4428-32; 5 CT 1115.) Eventually, Petitioner’s proposed instruction number 4 was read to 2 the jury:

3           In your deliberations, the fact that a defendant has been subjected to physical 4 restraints during the trial is not to be discussed or considered by you. There is no
5 connotation of guilt of any kind because a defendant was restrained. Such restraints are a 6 part of the normal procedures in a case of this nature, and should have no bearing on your determination of a defendant’s guilt or innocence.

7 (25 RT 5596; 5 CT 1171.)

8                           Analysis

9           To the degree Petitioner was visibly shackled during the trial, such a restraint is inherently 10 prejudicial. But inherent prejudice alone is not enough to warrant relief. Petitioner must first 11 show the restraints were not justified. Secondly, Petitioner must prove prejudice. He cannot do 12 so on this record.

13   Justification

14           Petitioner filed a pretrial motion entitled “Notice of Motion to Limit Security” on 15 February 2, 1989. The written motion sought to limit the number of courtroom security personnel 16 present in the courtroom. (3 CT 666.) No mention was made of physical restraints in the 17 pleading. At those initial pretrial proceedings held on February 2nd, defense counsel Holmes 18 raised the issue of the use of a security chair as a preferred physical restraint, noting Petitioner’s 19 concern “about having his hands free” during trial. (2 RT 10.) The trial court indicated that a 20 security chair would be available at the next court appearance should it be necessary following its 21 consideration of the motion on that future date. (2 RT 10-11.)

22           When the court and counsel met next on February 7, 1989, the subject of courtroom 23 security was considered. (2 RT 26-28.) The trial court concluded that Petitioner did not require 24 ankle shackles and discussed the use of a security chair during trial, including during any 25 testimony by Petitioner. Consideration was also given to Petitioner’s transportation to and from 26 27 28

1 the courtroom while restrained so that the jury did not see the restraints employed for that 2 purpose. (2 RT 26-28.) When the trial court expressly asked defense counsel for Petitioner 3 whether there was any objection to the procedures it described, both responded there was no 4 objection. (2 RT 28.) The trial court then proceeded to make a record of the necessity of the 5 courtroom security procedures despite defense counsels' lack of any objection, expressly 6 referring to the information before it that Petitioner had recently been in possession of an 7 explosive device while in the county jail facility. More particularly, "a match bomb ... a device 8 approximately four inches long wrapped tightly in plastic, a paper-wrapped fuse protruding from 9 one end of it, and that contained inside the plastic was match heads that had been removed from 10 the stick or paper, and also had a small glass pill bottle containing nitroglycerine pills." (2 RT 11 28-29.)
12

14 Petitioner argues that because he was cooperative during court appearances, "[e]ven 15 accepting the findings of the trial court that [he] had been a disciplinary problem at the jail," the 16 "disciplinary problems in the jail are insufficient to justify visible shackling," citing to Illinois v.
17 Allen and Estelle v. Williams. (ECF No. 330 at 528.)
18

19 At the time of the trial in this matter, the Supreme Court defined shackling as "the sort of 20 inherently prejudicial practice that ... should be permitted only where justified by an essential 21 state interest specific to each trial." Holbrook v. Flynn, 475 U.S. at 568–69. Those interests 22 include "physical security," "courtroom decorum" and "courtroom security." Deck v. Missouri, 23 544 U.S. at 624, 628. The determination of an essential state interest "turns on the facts of the 24 case." Hedlund v. Ryan, 854 F.3d 557, 568 (9th Cir. 2017). The trial court "may of course take 25 into account the factors that courts have traditionally relied on in gauging potential security 26 problems and the risk of escape at trial." Deck, 544 U.S. at 629.
27

28 The essential state interest specific to this case involved the trial court's knowledge that

1 even prior to the commencement of trial, Petitioner was found to be in possession of an explosive 2 device while housed in the county jail. He was also considered an escape risk. (3 CT 670-91.)
3 Hence, because the possession of an explosive device and the possibility of escape both concern 4 courtroom security, the trial court was justified in imposing the requirement of restraints.

6 As the Ninth Circuit held in Crittenden v. Ayers, “[a]lthough his escape history stemmed 7 from a time ‘long before commencement of trial’ and he was cooperative in his previous court 8 appearances, these arguments and their factual basis were before the trial court at the time it 9 decided to impose restraints. Crittenden has not presented any new evidence to warrant a 10 different conclusion.” Crittenden v. Ayers, 624 F.3d 943, 971 (9th Cir. 2010). Similarly, 11 Petitioner herein did not present any new evidence to warrant a different conclusion. What the 12 court knew on February 7, 1989, justified the imposition of restraints during the then-forthcoming 13 trial. Notably, no prospective juror was present at any proceeding held in February 1989 because 14 jury selection began March 1, 1989.

15
16 When the trial court ordered Petitioner’s restraints increased on the morning of March 15, 17 1989, to include handcuffs, over and above the security chair that had been employed after 18 February 7, it again had an essential state interest in doing so, to wit: continued courtroom 19 security.

20 21 On that date, the trial court had been advised by transportation staff and courtroom bailiffs 22 of their collective concern that Petitioner had been attempting to escape custody by cutting 23 through the links in the belly chains used to restrain him. (6 RT 988-95.) On that same date, the 24 trial court was provided with copies of documentation relating to Petitioner’s status as a security 25 risk in the county jail. (6 RT 1074-75, 1189; see also 4 CT 975, 996-1000.)

26
27 The following morning, about two hours into the day’s voir dire proceedings, defense 28 counsel asked the court to consider returning to its previous “security precautions” because

1 Petitioner could not “move his hands” and was “uncomfortable.” The court indicated it was 2 concerned about security and recited a number of reasons for that concern, including Petitioner’s 3 repeated instances of misconduct in the jail, threats to jail staff and other inmates, possession of 4 weapons inside the jail, and a lack of respect for authority, among others. The trial court agreed 5 to consider allowing Petitioner’s right hand to be freed of the additional restraint so that he could 6 communicate with counsel in writing during the proceedings. (7 RT 1250-56.) Ultimately, at the 7 conclusion of the day’s proceedings, the trial court permitted Petitioner to have his right hand 8 free. (7 RT 1348-49.)

10 The trial court had evidence and information before it that Petitioner was actively working 11 to escape his restraints by cutting through the links of the waist chain used to transport him to and 12 from the jail facility and the courtroom during trial. And it already had information that 13 Petitioner had significant behavioral issues warranting his label as a security and escape risk 14 during his period of confinement at the county jail. The foregoing circumstances more than 15 justify the imposition of the restraints employed. Deck, 544 U.S. at 628-29; Hedlund v. Ryan, 16 854 F.3d at 568; Crittenden v. Ayers, 624 F.3d at 971.

18 Next, prior to the start of the penalty phase of the trial, the trial court received a letter from 19 Sacramento County Sheriff Glen Craig regarding Petitioner. The letter indicated that in the period 20 between October 17, 1987, and May 15, 1989, Petitioner had received “13 major incident 21 reports,” involving fighting, possession of a weapon, assaults on staff, threats against staff, 22 starting a fire, attempted escape and possession of contraband. Sheriff Craig noted no other 23 inmate had received more incident reports than Petitioner. (5 CT 1141-43.) The letter was filed 24 and distributed to counsel on June 5, 1989. (5 CT 1144.)

26 Petitioner’s argument that the trial court should have considered less restrictive 27 alternatives to shackling is unavailing. (ECF No. 330 at 533.) In Deck, the high court clarified 28

1 that the requirement to consider less restrictive alternatives was not clearly established Supreme 2 Court precedent at that time, nor has it ruled on the issue since. Crittenden v. Ayers, 624 F.3d at 3 971-72. Hence, “even if the trial court did not weigh the benefits and burdens of shackling or 4 consider less restrictive alternatives, ... clearly established federal law did not require it to do so.”
5 Id. at 972. As was in the case in Crittenden, at the time of Petitioner’s trial, the Supreme Court 6 did not require consideration of less restrictive alternatives and therefore the trial court was not 7 required to do so.

9 Petitioner also suggests the trial court’s procedures in this case reflected a regular routine 10 without regard to the particular matter before it. That is simply not the case. As discussed above, 11 the trial court considered the facts and circumstances particular to this case when determining the 12 restraints it believed were justified. Further, the undersigned notes the trial court’s comments that 13 restraints are “by no means a standard policy” in its courtroom and that each trial “is different,” 14 calling for different measures, some less restrictive than others. (7 RT 1255-56.) In any event, a 15 review of the entire record reveals the restraints imposed upon Petitioner here were not the result 16 of a routine practice of the trial court in the absence of a specific determination of need. Deck v.
17 Missouri, 544 U.S. at 633; Holbrook v. Flynn, 475 U.S. at 568.

18 Visibility

19 20 21 Petitioner complains the restraints employed by the trial court were visible to the jury “on 22 a continuing basis.” (ECF No. 330 at 528-30.) Respondent attacks the juror declarations 23 submitted by Petitioner in support of his claims by way of state habeas petitions and argues that 24 even where the truth of the declarations is assumed, the restraints were justified and thus did not 25 violate his due process rights. (ECF No. 345 at 285-86.)

26 Assuming Petitioner’s shackles were visible to the jury throughout the trial proceedings 27 commencing March 1, 1989, without specifically addressing any challenge to the declarations of 28

1 the jurors, as well as that of Mr. Gable, and taking them as true, the undersigned concludes 2 Petitioner was not prejudiced.

3 Prejudice

4 In this review, harmless error analysis is conducted pursuant to Brecht v. Abrahamson, 5 507 U.S. 619. See Bains v. Cambra, 204 F.3d 964, 977 (9th Cir. 2000). And in conducting such 6 a review, the undersigned finds that any errors, presumed or otherwise, did not have “a substantial 7 and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury’s verdict. Bains, at 977-78.

9 To determine whether the imposition of physical restraints constitutes prejudicial 10 error, we have considered the appearance and visibility of the restraining device, the 11 nature of the crime with which the defendant was charged and the strength of the state’s 12 evidence against the defendant. [T]he greater the intensity of the shackling ... the greater 13 the extent of prejudice, because elaborate physical restraints are more likely to create the 14 appearance of the defendant’s dangerousness. Hence, physical restraints such as a waist 15 chain, leg irons or handcuffs may create a more prejudicial appearance than more unobtrusive forms of restraint. Similarly, if the defendant is charged with a violent crime, then the risk of prejudice increases, because shackling essentially brand[s] [him] as having a violent nature. Concerns about prejudice may be mitigated, however, if the state’s evidence against the defendant was overwhelming.

16 Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d at 1064 (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

17 Appearance and Visibility

18 As previously noted, originally the trial court ordered Petitioner be restrained using a 19 security chair. The belly or waist chain worn by Petitioner was to be secured to a chair in the 20 courtroom and was concealed by way of a flap or cover at the back of the chair. Later, in light of 21 additional security concerns, the trial court ordered that Petitioner also be handcuffed, yet it later 22 modified that order to allow his writing hand to be free.<sup>57</sup> Thus, to the degree the waist chain or 23 handcuffs were observable to the jury, a greater extent of prejudice was present.

24 Regarding Petitioner’s complaint that his codefendant was not shackled making Petitioner 25 appear more dangerous, the United States Supreme Court has never ruled that a defendant has a 26 _____

27 <sup>57</sup> Use of the handcuffs was of a very limited duration because the trial court modified its own 28 order within two days’ court time, permitting the release of Petitioner’s writing hand. Larson v.
Palmateer, 515 F.3d at 1064; Spain v. Rushen, 883 F.2d at 722. The trial court did so against the bailiff’s suggestion Petitioner remained fully handcuffed.

1 right to a restrained co-defendant. And a review of the record reveals no mention whatsoever of 2 any need to restrain codefendant Ross. Obviously, codefendant Ross's constitutional rights 3 cannot be infringed upon in order to make Petitioner appear less dangerous.

4 Nature of Crimes

5 In this case, Petitioner was charged with several violent crimes, including murder and 6 robbery, thereby increasing the risk of prejudice where the restraints used were visible to the jury.
7 And capital murder trials always involve violent crimes. Elmore v. Sinclair, 799 F.3d 1238, 1248 8 (9th Cir. 2015), citing Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d at 1063.

9 Strength of the Evidence

10 The strength of the state's case was significant. Petitioner's prints were found on the 11 stolen vehicle used during the attempted robbery and murder of Alan Birkman. He was identified 12 by the owner of that vehicle as having stolen it on the street in the owner's presence a few days 13 prior to the murder. Further, Petitioner was identified by the victim of the rape occurring 14 immediately prior to the theft of the vehicle. And very shortly after the Birkman incident 15 occurred, the evidence established that codefendant Ross and Petitioner returned to Ross's 16 friend's apartment in possession of a knife. When police knocked on the woman's door to ask 17 her about the vehicle parked nearby that was used by the suspects at the time of the murder, 18 Petitioner was asked to leave her apartment shortly thereafter. Petitioner was also identified by 19 Greta Slatten, the victim of another robbery occurring just after the Birkman murder. Petitioner 20 was then apprehended in Mississippi, driving the vehicle stolen from Slatten. Also, at the time of 21 his arrest, Petitioner was in possession of a knife or knives similar to the knife used to kill 22 Birkman. And, the jury heard testimony that Petitioner admitted the killing while in custody in 23 Mississippi. Notably too, Petitioner's testimony was simply not worthy of belief. The 24 aforementioned evidence was strong, mitigating the other concerns.

25 Petitioner argues the rape evidence was weak, inferring the case as a whole was weak.
26 The undersigned does not agree. The jury's credibility determination understandably favored the 27 victim over Petitioner. The victim's profession and lifestyle may have made this allegation of 28 rape more of a he said/she said contest than others, but Stramaglia's testimony was convincing,

1 and thus, worthy of belief.

2 The undersigned concludes that the evidence against Petitioner was so overwhelming that 3 any bias created by the visible shackles had no prejudicial effect on the jury's guilty verdicts. See 4 Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d at 1064 (unconstitutional shackling results in prejudice only if the 5 evidence of guilt is not overwhelming).

6 The aforementioned conclusion is bolstered by the length of the jury's deliberations.<sup>58</sup> As 7 it pertains to the guilt phase,<sup>59</sup> involving the various crimes against both Petitioner and his 8 codefendant, after hearing testimony for approximately 26 days,<sup>60</sup> the jury deliberated for less 9 than 25 hours. (5 CT 1139-40; 6 CT 1271, 1273-74, 1281.) Their deliberations are unlike those 10 cases wherein the jury struggled to reach a verdict after lengthy deliberations, arguably out of 11 proportion to the length of the trial proceedings.

12 The decisions by the California Supreme Court rejecting Petitioner's shackling claims are 13 not contrary to or involve an unreasonable application of United States Supreme Court authority, 14 nor are they "so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended 15 in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement." Richter, 562 U.S. at 103.
16 Accordingly, Petitioner is not entitled to federal habeas relief.

17 Claim LL

18 The Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

19 Relatedly, Petitioner contends that trial counsel were ineffective for failing to object to the 20 shackling. His claim was raised and rejected in state habeas petitions to the California Supreme 21

22 <sup>58</sup> The jury was instructed that physical restraints were not evidence and that they were to 23 completely disregard those restraints in making their determination. (25 RT 5596.) Jurors are 24 presumed to have followed instructions. Kansas v. Marsh, 548 U.S. 163, 179 (2006); Richardson
v. Marsh, 481 U.S. at 211; Fields v. Brown, 503 F.3d 755, 782 (9th Cir. 2007).

25 <sup>59</sup> In the penalty phase, the jury deliberated for less than five hours after hearing eight days of 26 testimony and argument. (6 RT 1285, 1291, 1294-95, 1344-47, 1406.) This was simply not a close case.

27 <sup>60</sup> Testimony in the guilty phase commenced April 11, 1989, and the jury heard evidence and 28 argument over the course of 26 days, through June 1, 1989. (See CT 1075, 1081, 1083, 1086, 1089, 1095, 1097, 1101, 1104, 1107, 1109, 1111-13, 1115, 1118, 1121, 1129-31, 1133, 1135-39.)

1 Court, where it was summarily denied on the merits.

2 Where the state court decision is unaccompanied by an explanation, “the habeas 3 petitioner’s burden still must be met by showing there was no reasonable basis for the state court 4 to deny relief.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 98. The United States Supreme Court stated that “a habeas 5 court must determine what arguments or theories supported or ... could have supported, the state 6 court’s decision; and then it must ask whether it is possible fair-minded jurists could disagree that 7 those arguments or theories are inconsistent with the holding in prior decision of this Court.”
8 Richter, at 101-03 (emphasis added). Petitioner bears the burden of demonstrating there was no 9 reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief. Richter, 562 U.S. at 98. “Crucially, this is not 10 a de novo review of the constitutional question,” as “even a strong case for relief does not mean 11 the state court’s contrary conclusion was unreasonable.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 102; see also 12 Murray v. Schriro, 745 F.3d 984, 996-97 (9th Cir. 2014).

13 When reviewing the California Supreme Court’s summary denial of a petition, this court 14 must consider that the California Supreme Court’s summary denial of a habeas petition on the 15 merits reflects that court’s determination that

17 the claims made in th[e] petition do not state a prima facie case entitling the petitioner to 18 relief. It appears that the court generally assumes the allegations in the petition to be true, 19 but does not accept wholly conclusory allegations, and will also review the record of the 20 trial ... to assess the merits of the petitioner’s claims.

21 Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 181, n.12 (quoting In re Clark, 5 Cal.4th at 770); see also Johnson v.
22 Williams, 568 U.S. 289 (2013) (holding that even where the state court does not separately 23 discuss a federal claim there is a presumption that the state court adjudicated the federal claim on 24 the merits). Thus, if this court finds Petitioner has unarguably presented a prima facie case for 25 relief on a claim, the state court’s summary rejection of that claim would be unreasonable. Taylor 26 v. Maddox, 366 F.3d 992, 1000 (9th Cir. 2004); Nunes v. Mueller, 350 F.3d 1045, 1054-44 (9th 27 Cir. 2003).

1           The Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel, applicable to the states
2 through the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, applies through the sentencing 3 phase of a trial. U.S. Const. amend. VI; U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1; see also Gideon v.
4 Wainwright, 372 U.S. at 343–45; Silva v. Woodford, 279 F.3d 825, 836 (9th Cir. 2002); Murray, 5 745 F.3d at 1010–11.

7           The clearly established federal law for ineffective assistance of counsel claims is 8 Strickland, 466 U.S. 668. In a petition for writ of habeas corpus alleging ineffective assistance of 9 counsel, the court must consider two factors. First, the petitioner must show that counsel’s 10 performance was deficient, requiring a showing that counsel made errors so serious that he or she 11 was not functioning as the “counsel” guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment. Strickland, 466 U.S.
12 at 687. The petitioner must show that “counsel’s representation fell below an objective standard 13 of reasonableness,” and must identify counsel’s alleged acts or omissions that were not the result 14 of reasonable professional judgment considering the circumstances. Richter, 562 U.S. at 104 15 (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688).

16
17           Petitioner must show that counsel’s errors were so egregious as to deprive him of a fair 18 trial, one whose result is reliable. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688. Judicial scrutiny of counsel’s 19 performance is highly deferential, and the habeas court must guard against the temptation “to 20 second-guess counsel’s assistance after conviction or adverse sentence.” Id. at 689. Instead, the 21 habeas court must make every effort “to eliminate the distorting effects of hindsight, to 22 reconstruct the circumstances of counsel’s challenged conduct, and to evaluate the conduct from 23 counsel’s perspective at the time.” Id.; see also Richter, 562 U.S. at 106–08. A court indulges a 24 “‘strong presumption’ that counsel’s representation was within the ‘wide range’ of reasonable 25 professional assistance.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 104 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687); see also 26 Sanders v. Ratelle, 21 F.3d 1446, 1456 (9th Cir. 1994) (same). This presumption of 27
28

1 reasonableness means that not only do we “give the attorneys the benefit of the doubt,” we must 2 also “affirmatively entertain the range of possible reasons [defense] counsel may have had for 3 proceeding as they did.” Pinholster, 563 U.S. at 196.

4 The Supreme Court has “declined to articulate specific guidelines for appropriate attorney 5 conduct and instead ha[s] emphasized that “[t]he proper measure of attorney performance remains 6 simply reasonableness under prevailing professional norms.” Wiggins v. Smith, 539 U.S. at 521 7 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688).

9 Second, the petitioner must demonstrate prejudice, that is, he must show that “there is a 10 reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result ... would have been 11 different.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. “It is not enough ‘to show that the errors had some 12 conceivable effect on the outcome of the proceeding.’” Richter, 562 U.S. at 104 (quoting 13 Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693). “Counsel’s errors must be ‘so serious as to deprive the defendant of 14 a fair trial, a trial whose result is reliable.’” Richter, 562 U.S. at 104 (quoting Strickland, 466 15 U.S. at 687). Under this standard, we ask “whether it is ‘reasonably likely’ the result would have 16 been different.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 112 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 696).

18 That is, only when “[t]he likelihood of a different result [is] substantial, not just 19 conceivable,” has the defendant met Strickland’s demand that defense errors were “so serious as 20 to deprive the defendant of a fair trial.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 103–05 (quoting Strickland, 466 21 U.S. at 687). A court need not determine whether counsel’s performance was deficient before 22 examining the prejudice suffered by the petitioner as a result of the alleged deficiencies.
23 Strickland, 466 U.S. at 697. Because the petitioner must affirmatively prove prejudice, any 24 deficiency that does not result in prejudice must necessarily fail.

25 26 Under AEDPA, the court does not apply Strickland de novo. Rather, the court must 27 determine whether the state court’s application of Strickland was unreasonable. Richter, 562 U.S.
28

1 at 100–01. Establishing that a state court’s application of Strickland was unreasonable under 28
2 U.S.C. § 2254(d) is very difficult. See Richter, 562 U.S. at 102 (on deferential (2254(d)) review 3 relief is granted only for “extreme malfunctions” in the state criminal justice system, not for 4 ordinary errors that can be corrected on appeal).

6 Accordingly, because the standards created by Strickland and § 2254(d) are both “highly 7 deferential,” when the two are applied in tandem, review is “doubly so.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 102 8 (quoting Knowles v. Mirzayance, 556 U.S. at 123). Further, because the Strickland rule is a 9 “general” one, courts have “more leeway ... in reaching outcomes in case-by-case determinations” 10 and the “range of reasonable applications is substantial.” Id. at 101; see also Premo v. Moore, 11 562 U.S. at 122–23.

12
13 The undersigned need not determine whether Holmes and/or Gable acted deficiently 14 before examining the issue of prejudice. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 697. The court considers 15 whether counsels’ errors, assuming deficiency for the sake of the analysis, are “so serious as to 16 deprive the defendant of a fair trial, a trial whose result is reliable,” asking “whether it is 17 ‘reasonably likely’ the result would have been different.” Richter, 462 U.S. at 104, 112. For the 18 reasons that follow, the undersigned concludes that the California Supreme Court reasonably 19 decided that Petitioner was not prejudiced under Strickland.

20 21 The Guilt Phase

22 During the guilt phase, the restraints involved here were a security chair, and, for a brief 23 period of time, handcuffs. The security chair was employed from the beginning, and the 24 handcuffs were added when Petitioner’s conduct during trial (in the form of allegedly attempting 25 to file through the waist chain used to restrain him during transport and in court) increased the 26 trial court’s concerns over courtroom security. As indicated previously, the record reveals that 27 during the course of the trial proceedings Petitioner allegedly attempted to escape by altering or 28

1 filing several links of the waist chains used to transport him to and from the courtroom. Those 2 same waist chains are what is used to fasten him to the security chair during the proceedings.
3 Typically, “physical restraints such as a waist chain, leg irons or handcuffs may create a more 4 prejudicial appearance than more unobtrusive forms of restraint.” Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d 5 at 1064. Nevertheless, that is not the sole factor for consideration.

7       Significantly, “a verdict or conclusion only weakly supported by the record is more likely 8 to have been affected by errors than one with overwhelming record support.” Strickland, 466 9 U.S. at 696. Here, as previously discussed, the strength of the state’s evidence was significant.

10       Briefly stated, Petitioner’s fingerprints were found on the stolen vehicle used during the 11 attempted robbery and murder of Alan Birkman. Petitioner was identified by the owner of that 12 vehicle as having recently stolen it in the owner’s presence. Further, Petitioner was identified by 13 the victim of the rape occurring immediately prior to the theft of the vehicle. He was also 14 identified by Greta Slatten, the victim of the robbery occurring just after the Birkman murder.
15 Petitioner was thereafter apprehended in Mississippi, driving the vehicle stolen from Slatten after 16 the Birkman murder. Also, at the time of his arrest, Petitioner was in possession of a knife or 17 knives similar to the knife used to kill Birkman. And, the jury heard testimony that Petitioner 18 admitted the killing while in custody in Mississippi. Petitioner’s own testimony was often 19 incredible and inconsistent.
20

22       The trial court had significant justification to employ physical restraints and the evidence 23 of Petitioner’s guilt could reasonably be said to be overwhelming. There is no reasonable 24 probability or likelihood that had defense counsel objected to the shackling employed by the trial 25 court that the result would have been different. Richter, 562 U.S. at 112. While it may be 26 conceivable that an objection or objections by defense counsel would have had an effect on the 27 proceedings, any error was not so serious as to deny Petitioner a fair trial. Richter, 562 U.S. at 28

1 104.

2 The Penalty Phase

3 The question of prejudice in the penalty phase “has two layers, but they form a single 4 inquiry: whether the California Supreme Court was (1) reasonable in concluding that (2) it is not 5 reasonably probable that [Petitioner] would have avoided the death penalty had his counsel 6 objected to the shackle.” Walker v. Martel, 709 F.3d 925, 944 (9th Cir. 2013).

8 Here, Petitioner was convicted of rape, vehicle theft, robbery and murder in the course of 9 an attempted robbery. More specifically, after raping Sandra Stramaglia, Petitioner fled her 10 apartment and stole a nearby vehicle belonging to Edwin Glidewell. Four days later, the vehicle 11 belonging to Glidewell was involved in and used to facilitate the attempted robbery and murder of 12 Alan Birkman. About two hours later, Greta Slatten was physically assaulted and knocked 13 unconscious outside a convenience store; her purse and vehicle were stolen. Ten days thereafter, 14 Petitioner was apprehended in Mississippi, driving Slatten’s stolen vehicle. Slatten identified 15 Petitioner as the individual using the phone just prior to her assault.
16

17 In aggravation, the jury learned that Petitioner had been previously convicted of the 18 crimes of voluntary manslaughter and assault with a deadly weapon in 1982. More specifically, 19 the jury heard the testimony of witnesses concerning the circumstances of those crimes. The jury 20 also learned that Petitioner was convicted of escape from state prison without the use of force in 21 1983. Finally, in addition to the foregoing convictions, the jury heard testimony concerning 22 separate assaults involving Petitioner and other Sacramento County jail inmates. In mitigation, 23 the jury heard testimony from several witnesses, including: (1) that Petitioner offered no 24 resistance at the time of his apprehension following an escape from state prison; (2) that 25 Petitioner helped to care for and was devoted to a girlfriend’s handicapped son; (3) expert 26 testimony concerning Cuban emigration and its impact on refugees; (4) testimony from a Virginia 27
28

1 attorney who provided Petitioner with housing and employment assistance as a church sponsor to 2 Cuban refugees; and (5) expert testimony from a social anthropologist with a specialty in Latin 3 America and the Spanish-speaking Caribbean, who interviewed Petitioner, other Cuban 4 immigrants familiar with the boat lifts of which Petitioner was a part, and Petitioner's father and 5 friends; from that information, the expert opined that Petitioner suffered from emotional and 6 psychological problems as a child, and from culture shock following his arrival to the United 7 States.

9 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that the jury's knowledge 10 of the waist chain and/or handcuffs was trivial in relation to the magnitude of Petitioner's crimes 11 and the circumstances presented in aggravation, as compared to those in mitigation. Simply put, 12 the evidence of Petitioner's guilt was strong and the circumstances in aggravation were 13 compelling. See Walker v. Martel, 709 F.3d at 944. The length of the jury's deliberations during 14 the penalty phase is significant and also weighs against a finding of prejudice. The jury 15 deliberated for less than five hours after hearing eight days of testimony and argument during the 16 penalty phase. (6 CT 1285, 1291, 1294-95, 1344-47, 1406.) The California Supreme Court could 17 have reasonably concluded it was not reasonably probable that had Gable and/or Holmes objected 18 to the shackling employed in this case that Petitioner would have avoided the death penalty.
19 20

21 Conclusion

22 In the ineffective assistance of counsel context, considering the nature of the restraints 23 employed, the strength of the evidence against Petitioner, and the circumstances in aggravation 24 and mitigation, there are reasonable bases upon which the California Supreme Court could deny 25 relief. That court's decision is not contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, United States 26 Supreme Court precedent. As a result, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim LL be 27 DENIED.
28

1                   Claims H, I, L, M and N: Erroneous Admissions of Certain Evidence

2                   In this next series of claims, Petitioner argues certain evidence admitted during the guilt 3 phase violated his federal due process rights to a fair trial entitling him to habeas relief. (ECF No.
4 330 at 537-40.) Respondent maintains that the California Supreme Court’s determinations of the 5 claims are neither unreasonable nor contrary to Supreme Court precedent, thus proscribing habeas 6 relief. (ECF No. 345 at 288-99.)

7                   Legal Standards Applicable to the Series

8                   A state court’s admission of evidence under state evidentiary law will form the basis for 9 federal habeas relief only where the evidentiary ruling “so fatally infected the proceedings as to 10 render them fundamentally unfair” in violation of a petitioner’s due process rights. Jammal v.
11 Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d 918, 919 (9th Cir. 1991). “[F]ailure to comply with the state’s rules of 12 evidence is neither a necessary nor a sufficient basis for granting habeas relief.” Id.

13                   The United States Supreme Court has “defined the category of infractions that violate 14 ‘fundamental fairness’ very narrowly,” Dowling v. United States, 493 U.S. 342, 352 (1990), and 15 “has made very few rulings regarding the admission of evidence as a violation of due process.”
16 Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d 1091, 1101 (9th Cir. 2009). It has opted not to hold that 17 evidence of other crimes or bad acts “so infused the trial with unfairness as to deny due process of 18 law.” Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. at 75 & n.5 (noting that the Court “express[ed] no opinion on 19 whether a state law would violate the Due Process Clause if it permitted the use of ‘prior crimes’ 20 evidence to show propensity to commit a charged crime”). Moreover, the Supreme Court “has 21 not yet made a clear ruling that admission of irrelevant or overtly prejudicial evidence constitutes 22 a due process violation sufficient to warrant issuance of the writ.” Holley, 568 F.3d at 1101 23 (citing Carey v. Musladin, 549 U.S. at 77). In the absence of clearly established law that 24 admission of even overtly prejudicial evidence constitutes a due process violation, the court 25 26 27 28

1 cannot conclude that the state court’s ruling was an “unreasonable application.” Id.; see also 2 Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d at 1066 (holding that because the Supreme Court has expressly 3 reserved the question of whether using evidence of a defendant’s past crimes to show that he has 4 a propensity for criminal activity could ever violate due process, the state court did not 5 unreasonably apply clearly established law in determining that the admission of defendant’s 6 criminal history did not violate due process). A federal court is “without power” to grant a 7 habeas petition based solely on the admission of evidence. Id.

9 Even setting aside the issue of clearly established federal law, “[a] habeas petitioner bears 10 a heavy burden in showing a due process violation based on an evidentiary decision.” Boyde v.
11 Brown, 404 F.3d 1159, 1172 (9th Cir. 2005), as amended, 421 F.3d 1154 (9th Cir. 2005). Again, 12 “[t]he admission of evidence does not provide a basis for habeas relief unless it rendered the trial 13 fundamentally unfair in violation of due process.” Holley, 568 F.3d at 1101. “Only if there are 14 no permissible inferences the jury may draw from evidence can its admission violate due 15 process.” Alcala v. Woodford, 334 F.3d 862, 887 (9th Cir. 2003) (emphasis in original); Houston 16 v. Roe, 177 F.3d 901, 910 n.6 (9th Cir. 1999). “Even then, the evidence must ‘be of such quality 17 as necessarily prevents a fair trial.’” Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d at 920 (citation omitted).
18 Such an outcome can only occur if the admission of the evidence had a “substantial and injurious 19 effect or influence in determining the jury’s verdict.” Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. at 623 20 (quoting Kotteakos v. United States, 328 U.S. 750, 776 (1946)).

23 Claims H & I: Statements by Leslie Colyer

24 Petitioner maintains the trial court erred by admitting Leslie Colyer’s statement that she 25 told Petitioner, during a telephone conversation between the two when Petitioner was incarcerated 26 in a Mississippi jail, that Petitioner “had killed a police officer.” (ECF No. 330 at 537, 538.) 27 Further, he contends it erred by admitting Colyer’s statement that police told her Petitioner was 28

1 wanted for homicide. (ECF No. 330 at 537-38.) Respondent disagrees. (ECF No. 345 at 289-2 91.)

3 The California Supreme Court's Determination

4 At the guilt phase, Charles Robinson testified on behalf of the People that, while in 5 jail in Mississippi, defendant told him that "he had killed a police officer in California."
6 Allen Birkman was not a police officer, but rather a civilian identification technician for a 7 police department. At defendant's request, the superior court admonished the jury to the 8 effect that Birkman was not a police officer, and that his homicide was the only one at 9 issue.

10 In advance of the People calling Leslie Colyer to the witness stand, defendant 11 moved the superior court, in limine, to preclude them from eliciting certain testimony as 12 inadmissible hearsay—viz., that, in the course of a telephone conversation soon after the 13 Birkman homicide, she told him that the victim was a police officer. Expressly 14 determining that the testimony was not hearsay, it denied the motion.

15 Later, Colyer testified in substance that, in the course of a telephone conversation 16 soon after the Birkman homicide, she told defendant that the victim was a police officer.
17 In line with his motion to bar such testimony, defendant objected on the basis of hearsay; 18 in line with its denial of that motion, the superior court overruled the objection. Colyer 19 also testified that, earlier, the police had inquired of her as to his whereabouts. She then 20 testified that they advised her they were seeking him in connection with a homicide.
21 Defendant objected on the basis of hearsay; impliedly determining that the testimony was 22 not hearsay, the superior court overruled the objection.

23 Defendant contends that the superior court erred by denying his motion to 24 preclude, as inadmissible hearsay, Colyer's testimony that she told him the victim of the 25 homicide was a police officer and also by overruling his hearsay objection to her 26 testimony that the police advised her they were seeking him in connection with a 27 homicide.

28 As stated, an appellate court reviews any ruling by a trial court as to the admissibility of evidence for abuse of discretion. Specifically, it scrutinizes a decision on a motion to bar the introduction of evidence as inadmissible hearsay for such abuse: it does so because it so examines the underlying determination whether the evidence was indeed hearsay. (People v. Rowland, supra, 4 Cal.4th at pp. 262–64.) It follows that it gives the same level of scrutiny for the same reason to the passing on a hearsay objection.

We believe that the superior court did not abuse its discretion by denying defendant's motion to preclude, as inadmissible hearsay, Colyer's testimony that she told him the victim of the homicide was a police officer. Hearsay is evidence of an out-of-court statement that is offered by its proponent to prove what it states. Colyer's testimony was not such. Manifestly, it was not offered by the People to prove that Birkman was a police officer: he was not. Rather, it was offered by them to prove that, in admitting that he had killed a "police officer," defendant effectively admitted he had killed Birkman, who he had been told was a police officer. The superior court was not unreasonable in expressly determining that the testimony was not hearsay. Indeed, it would have been unreasonable had it determined otherwise.

We also believe that the superior court did not abuse its discretion by overruling defendant's hearsay objection to Colyer's testimony that the police advised her they were 1 seeking him in connection with a homicide. This testimony too was not hearsay. It was not 2 offered by the People to prove the existence of a police investigation into his whereabouts.

3 Rather, it was offered by them to prove the source of the information she obtained and 4 then communicated to him—in order to prove that, in admitting he had killed a “police 5 officer,” he effectively admitted he had killed Birkman. The superior court was not 6 unreasonable in impliedly determining that the testimony was not hearsay.

7 [FN] 14. To the extent that defendant claims that the superior court erred 8 by denying his motion and by overruling his objection on such grounds as that 9 Colyer’s testimony was irrelevant and, if relevant, unduly prejudicial, he has not 10 preserved his point for review. He did not comply with the general rule requiring a 11 “specific” and “timely” objection below, except as to hearsay. No exception covers 12 his noncompliance. In any event, he fails on the merits. The testimony had a 13 tendency in reason to prove a disputed fact bearing on a material issue, viz., the 14 identity of Birkman’s killer: in admitting he had killed a “police officer,” he 15 effectively admitted he had killed Birkman. Further, the testimony cannot be 16 considered insufficiently probative in light of, inter alia, the risk to the fairness of 17 the proceedings or the reliability of the outcome. (Evid.Code, § 352.) Any such 18 risk was nullified by the superior court’s admonition that Birkman was not a police 19 officer and that his homicide was the only one at issue.

20 Defendant may be understood to argue that irrelevant evidence—such as he 21 now asserts Colyer’s testimony to be—is, by that very fact, hearsay evidence. That 22 is not the case. Evidence is hearsay if it is offered in the form of an out-of-court 23 statement to prove what it states. By contrast, evidence is irrelevant if it has no 24 tendency in reason to prove or disprove a disputed fact bearing on a material issue; 25 it need not be offered in the form, or for the purpose, specified for hearsay.

26 Defendant may also be understood to argue that Colyer’s testimony 27 somehow undermined the superior court’s admonition that Birkman was not a 28 police officer and that his homicide was the only one at issue. Not at all. It merely, and properly, allowed or supported an inference that, in admitting he had killed a “police officer,” he effectively admitted he had killed Birkman.

People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 202-03.

Analysis

A review of the record reveals that witness Charles Robinson testified that, while the two were incarcerated in Mississippi, Petitioner told him “he had killed a police officer in California.” (15 RT 3250, 3251.) At the completion of his testimony, the jury was admonished as follows:

THE COURT: ... Ladies and gentlemen, the statement that Mr. Robinson has attributed to Mr. Alvarez was that he had killed a police officer in California.

Now, first of all, I’m not trying to give any greater credibility to the statement or make any connections for you, that’s up to you to decide whether that statement has any bearing on this case or if so, what weight you should give to it.

I simply want to clarify that.

As you recall, Mr. Birkman was an employee of the police department, and that there are no charges nor are there any inferences of any other killing.

Before Leslie Colyer took the stand in the People’s case, Mr. Holmes indicated to the court he had “an in limine motion ... to make” concerning her anticipated testimony. (15 RT 3328-29.) He objected to the anticipated statement as hearsay and that it was more prejudicial than probative. (15 RT 3329-30.) The trial court ruled “it’s clearly not hearsay to offer something that, in fact, is not true, but would go to his state of mind of what information he was given, assist in tying in the previous statement about killing a cop.” (15 RT 3330.)

Colyer then testified that she was contacted by Sergeant Twilling of the Sacramento Police Department May 18, 1987, at about 1:00 a.m., inquiring into Petitioner’s whereabouts. (15 RT 3334.) Twilling advised Colyer “[t]hey were trying to locate [him] in connection with some homicide.” (15 RT 3336.) Mr. Holmes’ hearsay objection was overruled. (15 RT 3336.) Because she had been in contact with Petitioner at that time, Colyer “told him that the papers said that he was being sought in connection with the death of an officer, although, I knew it was not an officer, you know, I did say that.” (15 RT 3337.) She agreed she “knew from the police, from the newspaper articles, that the man who had been killed was actually a civilian employee of the police department.” (15 RT 3337.) But Colyer did tell Petitioner “that the man who had been killed was a police officer” when he called her from Texas. (15 RT 3337-39.)

Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief because United States Supreme Court precedent does not clearly establish that admission of this type of evidence violates due process. See Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d at 1101.

In any event, the California Supreme Court’s determination was not unreasonable. It determined the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defense counsel’s motion

1 because the statement was not hearsay as it was not offered for its truth. That court explained the 2 statement was not offered to prove Birkman was a police officer, but that Petitioner was told that 3 Birkman was a police officer before telling Robinson that he had killed a police officer, thereby 4 implicating himself in the homicide. Colyer’s testimony itself referenced the fact Birkman was 5 not a police officer. Petitioner was not denied due process or a fair trial. Colyer’s testimony did 6 not “so fatally infect the proceedings as to render them unfair.” Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926
7 F.3d at 919; see also Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. at 67–68; Kealohapauole v. Shimoda, 800 F.2d 8 1463, 1466 (9th Cir. 1986) (noting admission of evidence violates due process only when it 9 “rendered the trial fundamentally unfair”).

11 Further, the determination that Colyer’s testimony concerning what she was told by 12 Sergeant Twilling was not hearsay is not unreasonable. Whether the police were investigating 13 Petitioner’s whereabouts was not the basis for offering the testimony. Instead, the testimony was 14 offered to show that Petitioner had certain information from his communication with Colyer prior 15 to the time he purportedly told Robinson he had killed a police officer in California. Again, the 16 trial court’s evidentiary rulings did not “so fatally infect[] the proceedings as to render them 17 fundamentally unfair.” Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d at 919.

19 Moreover, Petitioner cannot show the admission of Colyer’s testimony had any 20 “substantial and injurious effect” on the verdict. Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. at 637-38.
21 There was other evidence of Petitioner’s guilt regarding the Birkman murder, including, for 22 example, the testimony of his co-defendant Belinda Ross and witness Charles Kosobud.

24 In sum, the California Supreme Court’s rejection of Petitioner’s argument was neither 25 contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law as determined by 26 the Supreme Court. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Therefore, he is not entitled to habeas relief. The 27 undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claims H and I be DENIED.

1                   Claim L: Hawkins’ Statements on Cross-Examination

2                   Here, Petitioner complains the trial court violated his due process rights when it permitted 3 the prosecution to “elicit a host of statements made from Neetelfer Hawkins on cross-examination 4 that she made to the police, despite the fact these statements were not relevant,” prejudicial and 5 undermining. (ECF No. 330 at 537-39.) Respondent disagrees. (ECF No. 345 at 292-94.)

7                   The California Supreme Court’s Determination

8                   Regarding Petitioner’s objection to the cross-examination of Neetelfer Hawkins, the 9 state’s highest court found as follows:

10                   In his case, defendant called Neetelfer Hawkins to the witness stand. On direct 11 examination, he elicited testimony that she welcomed him to stay at her home in March, 12 April, and May of 1987—apparently, other evidence suggested, as a lover. He also elicited 13 testimony in an attempt to support his alibi defense: at 7:00 a.m. on May 17, 1987—the 14 date of the charged robbery and murder of Allen Birkman and the charged robbery of Greta Slatten—he placed a telephone call to her and made an (evidently) unsuccessful request of her to pick him up.

15                   On cross-examination, the People sought to inquire, for purposes of impeachment, 16 into an interview that officers of the Sacramento Police Department conducted with 17 Hawkins about 10:00 p.m. on May 17. Defendant objected on the grounds that any 18 responsive testimony would be irrelevant and also inadmissible hearsay. Outside the 19 presence of the jury, the People made an offer of proof: in the course of the interview, the 20 officers posed specific questions to Hawkins about defendant and her contacts with him, 21 and she gave detailed answers in response, but failed to mention any telephone call that 22 day; if she did not admit the omission on cross-examination, they would call one of the 23 officers in their case in rebuttal to establish it as a fact. Defendant then effectively 24 objected to the People’s inquiry into specific questions by the officers and detailed 25 answers by Hawkins as lacking in foundation, in advance of their introduction of evidence 26 that she indeed failed to mention any call that day. The superior court overruled all 27 defendant’s objections.

28                   On cross-examination, the People inquired into the May 17 interview. Hawkins testified to specific questions by the officers and detailed answers by her in response. But she denied that she failed to mention any telephone call from defendant that day.

                  Subsequently, taking the witness stand on his own behalf, defendant testified, inter alia, that sometime early in the morning of May 17, he placed a telephone call to Hawkins and made an (evidently) unsuccessful request of her to pick him up. He further testified that, about 11:30 or 11:40 a.m. that same day, he placed another call and made another unsuccessful request.

                  In their case-in-rebuttal, the People called Hawkins. She restated that, on May 17, defendant placed a telephone call to her at 7:00 a.m. She added that, on that day, to her knowledge he did not place any other call to her at any other time.

1           The People also called Sergeant Ralph Coyle. He was one of the police officers 2 who interviewed Hawkins on May 17. He testified that she failed to mention any 3 telephone call from defendant that day.

4           Defendant now contends that the superior court erred by overruling his lack-of-5 foundation objection to the People’s inquiry into specific questions by the officers and 6 detailed answers by Hawkins in the course of the May 17 interview, in advance of their 7 introduction of evidence that she failed to mention any telephone call from him that day.

8           As a general matter, an appellate court reviews a trial court’s ruling as to the order 9 of proof for abuse of discretion. That is because, as a general matter, the trial court has 10 authority to “regulate the order of proof” in the exercise of “its discretion.” (Evid.Code, 11 § 320.)

12           We examine the superior court’s passing on defendant’s lack-of-foundation 13 objection for abuse of discretion. We do so inasmuch as it amounts to the kind of ruling as 14 to the order of proof that is generally entrusted to its discretion.

15           After such examination, we discern no abuse of discretion. The superior court was 16 not unreasonable in allowing the People’s inquiry into specific questions by the officers 17 and detailed answers by Hawkins in the course of the May 17 interview, in advance of 18 their introduction of evidence that she failed to mention any telephone call from defendant 19 that morning. They had made an offer of proof of her omission. Defendant did not contest 20 the issue. Through the testimony of Sergeant Coyle, they subsequently furnished the 21 proof. We do not see any basis for a conclusion that the superior court’s regulation of 22 these matters was wanting in any particular.

23 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 206-207.

24 Analysis

25           Initially, it is noted that the California Supreme Court’s factual summary of the relevant 26 record is accurate. (See 18 RT 3953-96; 22 RT 5121-37; 23 RT 5180-87, 5199-200.) Even so, as 27 noted in Holley v. Yarborough, the “admission of evidence does not provide a basis for habeas 28 relief unless it rendered the trial fundamentally unfair in violation of due process.” Holley, 568
F.3d at 1101.

          In Holley, the petitioner was charged with multiple felony counts of lewd and lascivious acts on a child under fourteen; he challenged the trial court’s admission of a lewd matchbook and several sexually explicit magazines seized from his bedroom. Holley, 568 F.3d at 1096. The Ninth Circuit denied habeas relief because the Supreme Court “has not yet made a clear ruling that admission of irrelevant or overtly prejudicial evidence constitutes a due process violation sufficient to warrant issuance of the writ.” Id. at 1101. “Absent such ‘clearly established Federal 1 law,” the Ninth Circuit in Holley could not “conclude that the state court’s ruling was an 2 unreasonable application” of federal precedent. Id. (quoting Carey v. Musladin, 549 U.S. at 77).

3 It was not fundamentally unfair for the trial court to permit the admission of this evidence 4 where the testimony proffered raised issues of impeachment of the witness. There was no 5 fundamental unfairness by virtue of the admission of the complained of evidence, even if it 6 lacked foundation. And, as explained in the claims addressed immediately above in this series, 7 any error could not have had a “substantial and injurious effect or influence on the jury’s 8 verdict.” Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. at 623 (quoting Kotteakos v. United States, 328 U.S.
9 at 776).

10 11 For the foregoing reasons, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim L be DENIED.

12 Claim M: Co-defendant Ross’ Testimony Concerning Hawkins & Petitioner

13 14 Petitioner next avers that by allowing co-defendant Ross to testify about a fight she 15 witnessed between Neetlefer Hawkins and Petitioner, the trial court violated his due process right 16 to a fair trial. (ECF No. 330 at 537, 539-40.) Respondent disagrees. (ECF No. 345 at 294-97.)

17 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

18 Concerning Petitioner’s claim, the state’s highest court determined:

19 20 On direct examination, defendant gave testimony in which he presented an alibi 21 for the time and place of the charged robbery and murder of Allen Birkman. In the course 22 of cross-examination by the People, he denied that he had acted violently during an 23 argument with Neetelfer Hawkins at the latter’s home on May 16, 1987, the day before the 24 crimes in question.

25 In her case, Ross took the witness stand in her own defense. On direct 26 examination, in an effort to shift responsibility for the charged robbery and murder off her 27 shoulders and onto defendant’s, she testified in substance that she did not even suspect 28 what he had evidently intended, but had accompanied him out of fear.

On cross-examination by the People, Ross was asked, “Why were you afraid of him?,” and answered, “Because I had just witnessed what he did to ... Miss Hawkins.”

Later in the People’s cross-examination, Ross was asked, “What was the thing at Neetlefer’s [sic ] that made you afraid of [him]?” but was prevented from answering by defendant’s objection that any response would be irrelevant.

At defendant’s request, the People then made an offer of proof outside the presence of the jury, by taking Ross on voir dire: She testified about defendant’s argument

1 with Hawkins as a “lover’s quarrel type of thing,” in the course of which she screamed 2 and swore at him and he forcibly covered her mouth almost to the point of stifling and 3 handled her roughly, she telling him she was going to call the police and he threatening 4 her he would kill her if she did.

5 Defendant restated his objection that any response by Ross to the People’s 6 question about his argument with Hawkins would be irrelevant. In addition, he raised 7 objections that such response would be unduly prejudicial and would amount to 8 inadmissible character evidence, i.e., evidence of his character or a trait of his character 9 offered to prove his conduct on the specified occasion of the charged robbery and murder 10 (Evid.Code, § 1101, subd. (a)).

11 After a hearing, at which it ultimately appears to have accepted the People’s 12 position that whether Ross was afraid of defendant was the “nut” of her defense and why 13 she was afraid of him was crucial thereto, the superior court generally overruled all 14 defendant’s objections to Ross’s expected response to the People’s question about his 15 argument with Hawkins, but sustained that based on undue prejudice as to any threat to 16 kill.

17 Subsequently, on cross-examination by the People, Ross was asked about 18 defendant’s argument with Hawkins, and she answered in accordance with her testimony 19 on voir dire, making plain that he had acted violently, but without mentioning his threat to 20 kill Hawkins.

21 Later, in their case-in-rebuttal, the People called Hawkins and Sergeant Coyle.
22 Hawkins denied that defendant had acted violently during the argument. Sergeant Coyle 23 asserted that she had told him the opposite.

24 Defendant now contends that the superior court erred by generally overruling his 25 irrelevance, undue prejudice, and inadmissible character evidence objections to the 26 People’s question to Ross about his argument with Hawkins.

27 As stated, an appellate court reviews a trial court’s passing on an objection based 28 on irrelevance for abuse of discretion. The same is true for an objection based on undue prejudice. (See People v. Gordon, supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1239.) Likewise, for an objection based on inadmissible character evidence. (People v. Memro, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 864.)

There was no abuse of discretion.

The superior court was not unreasonable in impliedly determining that Ross’s expected response about defendant’s argument with Hawkins would be relevant. It had a tendency in reason to prove a disputed fact bearing on a material issue, viz., the relative responsibility of defendant and Ross for the charged robbery and murder. To the extent that his argument with Hawkins would show a supported fear of him on her part, it might be able to diminish her culpability over against his. But to the extent that it would not, it might not. Defendant argues the evidence was irrelevant: insofar as it would favor Ross’s position vis-à-vis the People, it could be presented by her but not elicited by them. He furnishes no support for his assertion, and we find none. Relevance does not depend on the identity of the evidence’s proponent. Neither does admissibility. With exceptions not applicable here, “all relevant evidence is admissible.” ([E]vid.[C]ode, § 351, italics added.)

[FN] 18. Underlying defendant’s argument seems to be a concern that, if a party introduces relevant evidence favorable to his opponent, he may be doing so in the hope that it will be used by the jury to draw a forbidden inference. A limiting instruction, however, can prevent such an eventuality. No instruction of this sort was sought by defendant. No complaint may therefore be raised.

2 Neither was the superior court unreasonable in impliedly determining that Ross's
3 expected response about defendant's argument with Hawkins would not be unduly 4 prejudicial (except as to his threat to kill her). Certainly, even though it could be 5 considered somewhat collateral and would (and in fact did) lead to rebuttal testimony by 6 Hawkins and Sergeant Coyle, it did not threaten substantial harm to the fairness of the 7 proceedings, as by confusing the issues or misleading the jury. In contrast, it promised 8 substantial benefit to the reliability of the outcome. It arguably constituted the strongest 9 evidence supporting Ross's fear of defendant. Evidence in support was indeed needed: 10 Ross's fear could not be accepted at face value. Defendant argues the evidence was 11 unduly prejudicial. At most, he shows that his argument with Hawkins might have been 12 used by the jury to draw a forbidden inference. That is not enough.

13 [FN] 19. Again, a limiting instruction could have prevented such an 14 eventuality. No instruction of this sort was sought by defendant. No complaint 15 may therefore be raised.

16 Lastly, the superior court was not unreasonable in impliedly determining that 17 Ross's expected response about defendant's argument with Hawkins would not amount to 18 inadmissible character evidence. True, it might have provided an indication of a 19 propensity toward violence on his part. But it was not offered to prove his conduct on the 20 specified occasion of the charged robbery and murder. Defendant argues the evidence was 21 inadmissible character evidence. Here, as above, the most that he shows is that it might 22 have been used by the jury to draw a forbidden inference. Here, as above, that is not 23 enough.

24 [FN] 20. Yet again, a limiting instruction could have prevented such an 25 eventuality. No instruction of this sort was sought by defendant. No complaint 26 may therefore be raised.

27 Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court committed 28 error under California law by ruling as it did, it thereby committed error under the Fifth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, the superior court did not commit error under California law.

To the extent that defendant claims that the superior court erred under either California law or the United States Constitution by failing to reconsider his motion to sever his trial from Ross's sua sponte, he does not succeed. Contrary to his implication, the superior court was not under a duty to reconsider in the absence of a request.

Even if the superior court had, in fact, erred by overruling any of defendant's objections to the People's question to Ross about his argument with Hawkins—which it did not—reversal would not be called for. "It is the general rule for error under [California] law"—which we believe is applicable here—"that reversal requires prejudice and prejudice in turn requires a reasonable probability of an effect on the outcome" under People v. Watson (1956) 46 Cal.2d 818. (People v. Gordon, supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1253.)
Such a probability does not appear. In view of all the evidence that was properly admitted on each of the charged crimes, Ross's testimony concerning the "lover's quarrel" between defendant and Hawkins was of no marginal significance.

People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 213-16.

1                   Analysis

2                   The undersigned notes the California Supreme Court’s factual summary of the relevant
3 record is accurate. (See 18 RT 4127-55, 4359-66, 4563-79, 4593, 4629-30, 4642-62, 4684-93.)

4                   To recap, the United States Supreme Court has not clearly established that admission of 5 this type of evidence violates due process. Holley, 568 F.3d at 1101. In any event, the California 6 Supreme Court’s determination that the evidence was relevant, not unduly prejudicial or 7 inadmissible character evidence was not unreasonable.

8                   The testimony was not irrelevant for it spoke to Ross’ defense. It bore on whether she 9 feared Petitioner and whether, regardless, she was involved in the crimes charged. The evidence 10 was not unduly prejudicial where it concerned and spoke to the reliability of Ross’ defense and 11 did not confuse the issues or mislead the jury. (Cal. Evid. Code, § 352.) The conclusion that the 12 evidence did not amount to inadmissible character evidence was not unreasonable either. That 13 information was not offered to prove Petitioner’s conduct on a specific occasion, but rather that 14 Ross had reason to fear Petitioner as a result of having witnessed the incident. (Cal. Evid. Code, 15 § 1101.)

16                   The Supreme Court has declined to find that evidence of other crimes or bad acts evidence 17 amounted to a due process violation in Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. at 75 & n.5. Further, there is 18 no clear ruling that the admission of irrelevant or overtly prejudicial evidence constitutes a due 19 process violation. Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d at 1101 (citing Carey v. Musladin, 549 U.S. at 20 77). The trial court’s ruling regarding the admission of this evidence cannot be said to have “so 21 fatally infected the proceedings as to render them fundamentally unfair,” in violation of 22 Petitioner’s due process rights. Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d at 919. And, a habeas court 23 cannot conclude a state court’s ruling was an unreasonable application of clearly established 24 federal law in the absence of clearly established law that the admission of such evidence 25 26 27 28

1 constitutes a due process violation. Holley, 568 F.3d at 1101; Larson v. Palmateer, 515 F.3d at 2 1066.

3 For reasons previously explained, even if error is presumed, it was not substantial, nor did 4 it have an injurious effect or influence on the jury's verdict in light of the other evidence 5 presented. Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. at 623. Accordingly, the undersigned hereby 6 RECOMMENDS that Claim M be DENIED.

8 Claim N: Prosecutorial Misconduct During Petitioner's Cross-examination

9 In the last claim of this series, Petitioner contends the prosecutor committed misconduct 10 "by flagrantly disregarding the trial court's limiting instruction regarding cross-examination of 11 [him] about his use of Greta Slatten's credit cards." (ECF No. 330 at 537-38, 540.) Respondent 12 disagrees. (ECF No. 345 at 297-99.)
13

14 The California Supreme Court's Determination

15 Regarding this claim, the California Supreme Court held the following:

16 On direct examination, defendant gave testimony in which he presented an alibi 17 for the time and place of the charged robbery of Greta Slatten. He stated, inter alia, that he 18 had gotten possession of Slatten's Taurus the day of the robbery by giving some cocaine 19 in trade to a young man who called himself "J.R."; in the automobile, he found a purse, 20 which evidently belonged to Slatten; he drove south and eventually arrived in Fresno; 21 there, he disposed of the purse.

22 Outside the presence of the jury, defendant moved the superior court to preclude 23 the People from inquiring into whether he used certain credit cards in Slatten's purse. His 24 basis included that any response would be unduly prejudicial, i.e., insufficiently probative 25 in light of, inter alia, the risk to the fairness of the proceedings or the reliability of the 26 outcome. On that basis, the superior court ruled as follows: the People could ask whether 27 he used the credit cards; if he answered yes, they could not go any further; if he answered 28 no, they could.

29 In the course of cross-examination, the prosecutor asked whether he used any of 30 Slatten's credit cards, and defendant answered yes; the prosecutor asked if he kept the 31 credit cards after he disposed of the purse or disposed of the purse after he used them, and 32 he answered he used a gasoline company credit card and then disposed of the purse; the 33 prosecutor asked whether he disposed of the purse and all the other credit cards, and he 34 answered yes; the prosecutor asked if the only credit card he used was that of the gasoline 35 company, and he answered yes.

36 At this point, defendant objected that the prosecutor's questions violated the 37 superior court's ruling. The superior court overruled the objection.
38

1           Thereupon, the prosecutor asked whether he used a chain-store credit card 2 belonging to Slatten, and defendant answered no; he asked whether he went into one of 3 the stores in the chain, and he answered no.

4           Defendant contends in substance that the superior court erred by effectively 5 determining that the prosecutor did not commit misconduct by asking all but the initial 6 question on his use of Slatten's credit cards.

7           As a general matter, an appellate court reviews a trial court's ruling on 8 prosecutorial misconduct for abuse of discretion. (Cf. 2 Childress & Davis, Federal 9 Standards of Review (2d ed. 1992) § 12.01, pp. 12–1 to 12–16 [setting forth the standard 10 of review under federal law].)

11           We believe that the superior court did not abuse its discretion. ““In general, a 12 prosecutor commits misconduct by the use of deceptive or reprehensible methods to 13 persuade either the court or the jury.” [Citation.] His ‘good faith vel non’ is not ‘crucial.’
14 [Citation.] That is because the standard in accordance with which his conduct is evaluated 15 is objective.” (People v. Berryman (1993) 6 Cal.4th 1048, 1072.) Under this rule, the 16 superior court was not unreasonable in impliedly concluding that the prosecutor did not 17 commit misconduct. For it was not unreasonable in impliedly finding that he did not use 18 any method of persuasion that may be deemed deceptive or reprehensible. Defendant 19 argues that, by asking all but the initial question on his use of Slatten's credit cards, the 20 prosecutor violated the superior court's ruling. Plainly, to judge from its overruling of his 21 objection, the superior court discerned no substantial violation. Neither do we. As noted, 22 the prosecutor asked whether he used any of the credit cards, and defendant answered yes.
23 The prosecutor then turned from the matter of “use” to that of “time,” asking if he kept the 24 credit cards after he disposed of the purse or disposed of the purse after he used them. Of 25 his own accord, defendant returned to the matter of “use,” answering he used a gasoline 26 company credit card and then disposed of the purse. By following where defendant led, 27 the prosecutor cannot be held to have substantially violated the superior court's ruling.

Applicable Legal Standards

          Allegations of prosecutorial misconduct are governed by the standard set forth by the Supreme Court in Darden v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 168, 181 (1986); see Parker v. Matthews, 567 U.S. at 45 (identifying Darden as “[t]he ‘clearly established Federal law’” relevant to claims of prosecutorial misconduct arising from prosecutor's closing arguments). In Darden, the Supreme Court explained that prosecutorial misconduct does not rise to the level of a constitutional violation unless it ““so infected the trial with unfairness as to make the resulting conviction a denial of due process.”” Darden, 477 U.S. at 181 (quoting Donnelly v. DeChristoforo, 416 U.S.
637, 643 (1974)); Comer v. Schriro, 480 F.3d 960, 988 (9th Cir. 2007). To determine whether a 1 prosecutor's comments amount to a due process violation, the reviewing court must examine the 2 entire proceedings so that the prosecutor's remarks may be placed in their proper context. Boyde 3 v. California, 494 U.S. at 384–85.

4 In making this determination, the reviewing court must be mindful that the standard set 5 forth in Darden is a “very general one.” Parker v. Matthews, 567 U.S. at 48. Consequently, it 6 “leav[es] courts more leeway ... in reaching outcomes in case-by-case determinations.” Id.
7 (citations & internal quotations omitted). Thus, to establish that a state court's application of the 8 Darden standard is unreasonable, the petitioner must show that the state's decision “was so 9 lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law 10 beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.” Parker v. Matthews, 567 U.S. at 47.
11 Assuming, however, that a petitioner can establish that the prosecutor engaged in misconduct, 12 habeas relief nevertheless is unwarranted unless the petitioner can show that the misconduct had a 13 substantial and injurious impact on the jury's verdict. Karis v. Calderon, 283 F.3d 1117, 1128 14 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Brecht, 507 U.S. at 638).

17 Analysis

18 The undersigned notes the California Supreme Court’s factual summary of the relevant 19 record is accurate. (See 19 RT 4190-201, 4234-39.)

20 21 Petitioner complains the prosecution violated his due process rights by “flagrantly 22 disregarding” the trial court’s limiting instruction concerning the prosecutor’s cross-examination 23 of Petitioner regarding the use of Greta Slatten’s credit cards. However, examining the record in 24 context regarding the complained of exchange reveals there is no due process violation.

25 Petitioner effectively testified he did not rob Greta Slatten because he purchased the 26 vehicle owned by Slatten from a man named “J.R.” in exchange for a quantity of drugs. Slatten’s 27 purse was in the vehicle when Petitioner took possession of it from J.R. When the prosecutor 28

1 sought to cross-examine Petitioner about the credit cards in Slatten’s purse,<sup>61</sup> the defense objected
2 and the court ultimately determined the prosecutor could ask Petitioner whether he used the credit 3 cards. If Petitioner replied affirmatively, that was to be the end of the matter.

4 The testimonial exchange went as follows:

5 [THE PROSECUTOR]: Mr. Alvarez, did you use any of the credit cards that were 6 in Miss Slatten’s purse?

7 [PETITIONER]: Yes, I did.

8 Q. Had you kept them when you dumped the purse or did you dump the purse after you used them?

9 A. I believe that I grabbed the Shell, I think it was the Shell for gasoline or something like that, and I used that one, after I used it - - I just dumped it.

10 Q. Then you dumped the rest of the cards and the purse?

11 A. Everything, dump, you know, I can’t use the other ones, no matter what.

12 Q. The only cards of Miss Slatten’s you used was the Shell card?

13 A. Shell card.

14 Q. In fact, didn’t you - -

15 MR. GABLE: Your Honor, I’m going to object to, that this goes beyond the scope of the Court’s ruling.

16 THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

17 (19 RT 4238-39.) Petitioner thereafter denied using Slatten’s Sears credit card at a Sears store in 18 Fresno. (19 RT 4239.)<sup>62</sup>

19 “[T]he touchstone of due process analysis in cases of alleged prosecutorial misconduct is 20 the fairness of the trial, not the culpability of the prosecutor.” Smith v. Phillips, 455 U.S. 209, 21 219 (1982). The high court’s decision in Parker addressed such a claim. In Parker, the Court of 22 Appeals for the Sixth Circuit had granted habeas relief on a claim that the prosecutor committed 23 misconduct in closing argument by suggesting that the petitioner had colluded with his lawyer 24 and expert witness to create an “extreme emotional disturbance” defense. Applying the AEDPA 25 standard of review, the United States Supreme Court reversed the Sixth Circuit. Id. at 47-48. The 26 <sup>61</sup> Outside the jury’s presence, the prosecutor advised the court there was evidence Petitioner used each of Slatten’s credit cards. (See 19 RT 4234-38.)

27 <sup>62</sup> Greta Slatten testified that her purse contained a Weinstocks, Penney’s, Sears and Shell credit 28 cards on May 17, 1987, and that charges were made on those cards following the theft of her car and purse. (14 RT 3123.)

1 Supreme Court reasoned that, even if the prosecutor’s comments had directed the jury’s attention 2 to inappropriate considerations, Matthews had not shown that the Kentucky state court’s rejection 3 of the prosecutorial misconduct claim was “so lacking in justification that there was an error well 4 understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded 5 disagreement.”” Parker v. Matthews, 567 U.S. at 47 (quoting Richter, 562 U.S. at 103).

7 Here, the prosecutor’s alleged misconduct in eliciting excluded evidence did not render 8 Petitioner’s trial fundamentally unfair. The challenged evidence did not, as the California 9 Supreme Court noted, pertain to Petitioner’s use of the cards once he answered affirmatively.
10 Rather, the questions posed thereafter concerned the timing of that usage. The trial court 11 accorded no limitation in that regard. Petitioner himself returned the inquiry to one of use. The 12 undersigned disagrees with Petitioner’s assertion that the prosecutor acted “flagrantly,” 13 deceptively or reprehensibly. Even if a court could hold otherwise, the California Supreme 14 Court’s determination is not “so lacking in its justification that there was error well understood 15 and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.” Parker, 16 567 U.S. at 47. Thus, under the circumstances, that determination did not render Petitioner’s trial 17 fundamentally unfair. See Parker, 567 U.S. at 47-48; Darden, 477 U.S. at 181; 28 U.S.C.
18 § 2254(d).

21 For the same reasons, the alleged misconduct did not have any “substantial and injurious 22 effect or influence in determining the jury’s verdict. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38; Shaw v.
23 Terhune, 380 F.3d 473, 478 (9th Cir. 2004) (Brecht applies to claim of prosecutorial misconduct).
24 Accordingly, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim N be DENIED.

25 Claim J: Birkman’s Statements to Kosobud & Lim

26 Arguing the California Supreme Court unreasonably applied Supreme Court precedent, 27 Petitioner argues the admission of victim Allen Birkman’s statements to Charles Kosobud and 28

1 Officer Calvin Lim was a violation of his constitutional right to confrontation because “[n]either 2 of the statements in question” involve “a moment of excitement” or was “made in the course of 3 procuring medical treatment.” (ECF No. 330 at 540-41.) Respondent replies the California 4 Supreme Court’s rejection of the claim was neither unreasonable nor contrary to then-existing 5 Supreme Court precedent. (ECF No. 345 at 299-302.)

7 Petitioner’s claim is exhausted for this court’s purposes as it was raised and rejected on its 8 merits in both his direct appeal and a state habeas petition filed in the California Supreme Court.

9 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

10 On direct appeal, the California Supreme Court denied Petitioner’s claim, reasoning as 11 follows:

12 Prior to trial, defendant moved the superior court, in limine, to preclude the People 13 from introducing certain evidence on the ground that it was inadmissible hearsay. Ross 14 joined therein. The evidence in question comprised statements by Allen Birkman.

15 Hearsay, of course, is evidence of an out-of-court statement offered by its 16 proponent to prove what it states. (Evid.Code, § 1200, subd. (a).) Unless it comes within 17 an exception, it is inadmissible. (Id., § 1200, subd. (b).) One such exception is for 18 spontaneous declarations, which: (1) “[p]urport[ ] to narrate, describe, or explain an act, 19 condition, or event perceived by the declarant” (id., § 1240, subd. (a)); and (2) were 20 “made spontaneously” (id., § 1240, subd. (b)), even if in response to questioning (People 21 v. Poggi (1988) 45 Cal.3d 306, 319), “while the declarant was under the stress of 22 excitement caused by such perception” (Evid.Code, § 1240, subd. (b)).

23 At an evidentiary hearing, Charles Kosobud testified, in pertinent part, to the 24 following effect: On May 17, 1987, late in the morning, he was near the Golden 1 Credit 25 Union; a man later identified as Birkman called for help; within seconds, Kosobud went to 26 his aid; Birkman—who was stipulated to have suffered a stab wound to the heart—was 27 holding his right hand to his chest, and had blood flowing through his fingers; he had a 28 wallet in his left hand; he was swaying; steadying him, Kosobud asked if they had robbed him; Birkman responded, “No, but they tried”; Kosobud asked who; Birkman responded, “Two blacks”; he soon collapsed onto the ground. Officer Calvin Lim of the Sacramento Police Department testified, in pertinent part, to the following effect: When he arrived at the Golden 1 Credit Union, Birkman was already receiving emergency medical aid; within several minutes, he was placed in an ambulance for transport to a hospital; Lim rode along; Birkman was semiconscious, had difficulty breathing, was very tense, and appeared to be in extreme pain; he said he felt numbness or tingling all over his body; Lim asked if he knew who had attacked him; he responded, “a male black, approximately six foot tall,” who “had gotten into a Camaro”; within several more minutes, they arrived at the hospital—where it was stipulated he died the next day.

1 The superior court denied the motion. It impliedly determined that evidence of 2 Birkman’s statements was indeed hearsay. But it expressly determined that it came within, 3 among other exceptions, that for spontaneous declarations. In this connection, it stated that 4 it “recognized” that Kosobud and Officer Lim “asked questions of” Birkman, and “it 5 wasn’t something that [he] just blurted out. However, the law is very clear that that 6 doesn’t negate the spontaneity required for spontaneous declarations.”

7 At the guilt phase, Kosobud and Officer Lim testified as to Birkman’s statements 8 in substantially the same terms as they had testified at the evidentiary hearing.

9 Defendant contends that the superior court erred by denying his motion to preclude 10 evidence of Birkman’s statements.

11 Unlike below, here defendant does not argue that the evidence in question was 12 inadmissible hearsay. Indeed, he all but concedes that it came within the exception for 13 spontaneous declarations. Unsurprisingly so.

14 Instead, defendant argues that the evidence in question was barred by the 15 confrontation clause of the Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

16 Defendant has not preserved his claim for review. “It is, of course, ‘the general 17 rule’”—to which we find no exception here—“that questions relating to the admissibility 18 of evidence will not be reviewed on appeal in the absence of a specific and timely 19 objection in the trial court on the ground sought to be urged on appeal.” (People v.
20 Benson (1990) 52 Cal.3d 754, 786, fn.7, quoting People v. Rogers (1978) 21 Cal.3d 542, 21 548.) There was neither a “specific” nor “timely” objection below predicated on the Sixth 22 Amendment’s confrontation clause. True, there was a bare reference to the “confrontation 23 rule” (capitalization deleted) in moving papers submitted by defendant. But that was all.
24 And that was not enough.

25 In any event, defendant’s claim is lacking in support in the law. His argument is, in 26 substance, that, even if evidence of Birkman’s statements came within the exception for 27 spontaneous declarations, it still violated the Sixth Amendment’s confrontation clause.
28 “But where ... hearsay ... come[s] within a firmly rooted exception ..., the Confrontation Clause is satisfied.” (White v. Illinois (1992) 502 U.S. 346, 356.) Among such “firmly rooted” exceptions is that for spontaneous declarations. (Id. at p. 355, fn.8.)

[FN] 4. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court committed error under the confrontation clause of the Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution, it thereby committed error under the confrontation clause of article I, section 15 of the California Constitution. In the text, we have rejected his Sixth Amendment point as not preserved for review and as legally unsupported. Here, we reject his article I, section 15 point on the same basis.
Defendant also claims in substance that the superior court’s error under the Sixth Amendment’s confrontation clause entails error under the Eighth Amendment’s cruel and unusual punishments clause. We have found no Sixth Amendment error.
Hence, we find no Eighth Amendment error.

People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 186-87.

1 where the declarant knows a false statement may cause misdiagnosis or mistreatment, carries 2 special guarantees of credibility that a trier of fact may not think replicated by courtroom 3 testimony.” Id. at 356.

4           When Officer Lim arrived on scene, Birkman was receiving medical aid. Minutes later, 5 during an ambulance ride to the hospital, a semiconscious Birkman - who was then experiencing 6 difficulty breathing and appeared to be in extreme pain, reporting numbness and tingling of the 7 body - replied to Lim’s question about whether he knew his attacker with “a male black, 8 approximately six foot tall” who “had gotten into a Camaro.”

9           Petitioner’s claim that neither of Birkman’s statements were spontaneous within the 10 meaning of White because “both were made in response to leading questions, not ‘offered in a 11 moment of excitement’” (ECF No. 330 at 541) is not well-taken. Certainly, those things are not 12 mutually exclusive, and he offers no authority for the proposition that a leading question asked in 13 a moment of excitement violates his rights under the Confrontation Clause.

14           In each of the contexts in which Birkman made statements to Kosobud and Lim, applying 15 the holdings of White v. Illinois, it was not unreasonable in any way for the California Supreme 16 Court to conclude the proffered hearsay had sufficient guarantees of reliability and had come 17 within a firmly rooted exception to the hearsay rule. As stated in White, “[t]o exclude such 18 probative statements under the strictures of the Confrontation Clause would be the height of 19 wrongheadedness, given that the Confrontation Clause has a basic purpose of promotion of the 20 ‘integrity of the factfinding process.’ [Citation.]” White v. Illinois, 502 U.S. at 356-57.

21           The undersigned therefore concludes the California Supreme Court’s determination did 22 not involve an unreasonable application of Supreme Court precedent and thus RECOMMENDS 23 that Claim J be DENIED.

1                    Claims K & HH: Photo Lineup Shown to Greta Slatten

2                    Claims K and HH relate to victim Greta Slatten’s identification of Petitioner as the man 3 using the telephone in the 7-Eleven parking lot immediately prior to her assault and the robbery 4 of her vehicle and purse. Petitioner contends the trial court erroneously precluded him from 5 questioning Detective Darrell Edwards and from presenting the expert testimony of Dr. Robert 6 Shomer concerning the manner of putting “together the photo array;” he relatedly contends that 7 the photo lineup was unduly suggestive and that trial counsel were ineffective for failing to 8 challenge the photo lineup on that basis. (ECF No. 330 at 541-45.) Respondent argues the 9 California Supreme Court’s determinations are neither contrary to nor involve an unreasonable 10 application of clearly established Supreme Court precedent, thus barring relief. (ECF No. 345 at 11 302-05.)
12

13
14                    Petitioner presented Claim K in his direct appeal to the California Supreme Court, as well 15 as in both state habeas petitions. Claim HH was presented in both his first and second state 16 habeas petitions. The claims are thus exhausted.

17                    The California Supreme Court’s Determination

18                    As noted above, Claim K was presented in Petitioner’s direct appeal. The California 19 Supreme Court determined as follows:
20

21                    At the guilt phase, in their case-in-chief, the People called Greta Slatten to the 22 witness stand. On direct examination, she testified that she was robbed, and identified 23 defendant as the perpetrator. On cross-examination by defendant, who inquired into the 24 reliability of the identification, she stated in substance as follows: Not long after the 25 robbery, she saw a photograph, which proved to be defendant’s, accompanying an article 26 in a local newspaper about the homicide of Allen Birkman; she believed it depicted the 27 robber; Detective Darrell Edwards of the Sacramento Sheriff’s Department came to her 28 home; she showed him the newspaper photograph and told him her belief; he then showed her a display of photographs—which she described on defendant’s inquiry; she selected one, which turned out to be defendant’s; she thought the newspaper and display photographs of defendant might have derived from the same source.

                  In his case, defendant called Detective Edwards. On direct examination, Edwards testified that he went to Slatten’s home to show her the photographic display in order to determine whether she could identify defendant as the robber; before he could show her

1 the display photographs, she showed him the newspaper photograph and said she believed 2 it depicted the robber; he then showed her the display photographs—which he then 3 described on defendant’s inquiry; she selected defendant’s; the newspaper and display 4 photographs of defendant did in fact derive from the same source.

5 Defendant then asked Detective Edwards how he prepared the photographic 6 display. The People objected that any response would be irrelevant. Determining that the 7 appearance of the display might have some tendency in reason to prove or disprove a 8 disputed fact bearing on a material issue, viz., the identity of the robber, but that its 9 genesis would not, the superior court sustained the objection. Edwards did not respond.

10 Defendant apparently expressed an intention to question Robert Shomer, Ph.D., a 11 psychologist, as to how one should prepare a photographic display. The superior court 12 stated that it would sustain an objection that any response would be irrelevant for the same 13 reason.

14 Defendant called Dr. Shomer. On direct examination, Dr. Shomer gave expert 15 testimony on the suggestiveness of photographic displays in general and also on the 16 suggestiveness of the photographic display in this cause in particular. More broadly, he 17 gave similar testimony on the unreliability of identification by eyewitnesses in general and 18 also on the unreliability of the identification by Slatten in particular.

19 Defendant now contends that the superior court erred by sustaining the People’s 20 objection that any response by Detective Edwards as to how he prepared the photographic 21 display would be irrelevant, and also by stating that it would sustain a similar objection 22 concerning any response by Dr. Shomer as to how one should prepare such a display.

23 An appellate court reviews a trial court’s passing on an objection based on the 24 irrelevance of evidence for abuse of discretion. That is because, as we have stated, it so 25 scrutinizes the underlying determination whether the evidence is indeed irrelevant.

26 We find no abuse of discretion here. As to both Detective Edwards and Dr.
27 Shomer, the superior court could have determined, not at all unreasonably, that the genesis 28 of the photographic display had no tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact bearing on a material issue. Defendant’s contrary argument is that the display might have been unduly suggestive. But that fact, if it is a fact, turns on its appearance. He was not prevented from inquiring into that matter. Indeed, he did so inquire, in his cross-examination of Slatten, his direct examination of Detective Edwards, and his direct examination of Dr. Shomer. He was not entitled to more.

[FN]15. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court committed error under California law by ruling as it did, it thereby committed error under the Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, the superior court did not commit error under California law.

People v. Alvarez 14 Cal.4th at 204-06.

Analysis

Evidence of the method or procedure used to create the photo lineup was not relevant in these circumstances. Significantly, Slatten’s identification of Petitioner occurred prior to her

1 viewing the photo lineup and in the absence of any involvement by law enforcement. Slatten was 2 shown a photograph and newspaper article by her daughter after the May 17 incident and before 3 Detective Edwards visited Slatten. Therefore, the manner in which Detective Edwards created 4 the photographic lineup he showed to Slatten does not prove or disprove the identity of Slatten's 5 attacker. Thus, the trial court's limitation in this regard concerning the testimony the defense 6 proffered when it called Detective Edwards and its expert Dr. Shomer to the stand was not error.

8 The Supreme Court has recognized "a due process check on the admission of eyewitness 9 identification, applicable when the police have arranged suggestive circumstances leading the 10 witness to identify a particular person as the perpetrator of a crime." Perry v. New Hampshire, 11 565 U.S. 228, 232 (2012). "[D]ue process concerns arise ... when law enforcement officers use 12 an identification procedure that is both suggestive and unnecessary." Id. at 724.
13

14 An identification infected by improper police influence, our case law holds, is not 15 automatically excluded. Instead, the trial judge must screen the evidence for reliability 16 pretrial. If there is 'a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification,' the 17 judge must disallow presentation of the evidence at trial. But if the indicia of reliability 18 are strong enough to outweigh the corrupting effect of the police-arranged suggestive 19 circumstances, the identification evidence ordinarily will be admitted, and the jury will 20 ultimately determine its worth.

21 Perry, 565 U.S. at 232 (citing Simmons v. United States, 390 U.S. 377, 384 (1968)). When "the 22 'indicators of [a witness'] ability to make an accurate identification' are 'outweighed by the 23 corrupting effect' of law enforcement suggestion, the identification should be suppressed." Id. at 24 239 (citation omitted). The factors to be considered in evaluating a witness' ability to make an 25 accurate identification include "'the opportunity of the witness to view the criminal at the time of 26 the crime, the witness' degree of attention, the accuracy of his prior description of the criminal, 27 the level of certainty demonstrated at the confrontation, and the time between the crime and the 28 confrontation.'" Id. at 239, n.5 (citations omitted).

1           The California Supreme Court’s adjudications finding no due process violation here are 2 reasonable and are not contrary to Supreme Court precedent. First, there can be no unduly 3 suggestive identification procedure when the police were not involved in arranging any 4 suggestive circumstance leading to Slatten’s initial identification of Petitioner. Slatten identified 5 Petitioner before Detective Edwards showed her the lineup he had prepared. No state action or 6 improper law enforcement activity was involved in Slatten’s identification of Petitioner from a 7 newspaper article and its accompanying photograph of Petitioner reporting on the Birkman 8 murder. Thus, the Supreme Court has determined that in that situation, “it suffices to test 9 reliability through the rights and opportunities generally designed for that purpose, notably, ...
10 vigorous cross-examination, protective rules of evidence, and jury instructions on both the 11 fallibility of eyewitness identification and the requirement that guilt be proved beyond a 12 reasonable doubt.” Perry v. New Hampshire, 565 U.S. at 233.
13

14 15           Defense counsel cross-examined Slatten concerning her identification of Petitioner and 16 was not prevented in any way in that challenge to the reliability of her identification. (14 RT 17 3129-38, 3140-41.) The defense then called Detective Edwards, eliciting testimony on direct 18 examination concerning Slatten’s identification and its reliability, particularly where that 19 identification involved the same photograph of Petitioner that Detective Edwards had selected to 20 employ in the photo lineup. (17 RT 3733-45, 3755-56, 3810-12.) Defense expert Dr. Shomer 21 testified concerning the various factors to be considered in an eyewitness identification, and 22 addressed those factors as they related to Slatten’s identification of Petitioner. (21 RT 4810-85, 23 4908-10, 4916-31.) Dr. Shomer acknowledged that by his testimony he was not offering any 24 opinion as to the credibility of any witness. (21 RT 4900-01.) The jury was instructed regarding 25 eyewitness identification and that guilt must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. (25 RT 5606-26

27 ///

1 09; 5 CT 1192-95.) Petitioner thus challenged the reliability of Slatten’s identification in the 2 manner to which he is entitled.

3           Again, Slatten’s identification of Petitioner occurred prior to any presentation of a police 4 lineup preventing any claim of improper suggestibility by law enforcement. Notably too, that 5 initial identification followed Slatten’s six to seven-minute observation of Petitioner at the scene
6 of the incident before she lost consciousness. (14 RT 3140-41.) See Perry, 565 U.S. at 239, n.5 7 (factors to consider including time between the crime and confrontation and opportunity to view 8 the suspect at the time of the crime).

10           Despite Petitioner’s claim of prejudice where he was prevented from asking Detective 11 Edwards and Dr. Shomer about methodology concerning the preparation of a photo lineup, even 12 assuming the trial court’s limitation was erroneous, Petitioner cannot show substantial and 13 injurious effect. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-638. It is plain from the record that Petitioner was still 14 permitted to challenge the reliability of Slatten’s identification absent the inquiries regarding 15 procedure or methodology. And the record contains other evidence of Petitioner’s guilt that serve 16 to lessen if not wholly negate any showing of a substantial or injurious effect on the jury’s 17 verdict.
18

19           For many of the same reasons, the denial of Petitioner’s claim of ineffective assistance of 20 counsel was not unreasonable or contrary to Supreme Court precedent. As explained, Slatten’s 21 identification of Petitioner did not involve an unduly suggestive photo lineup prepared by law 22 enforcement. There was no “corrupting effect” via state action present. Further, Slatten was 23 certain about her identification of Petitioner and she had a significant period of time within which 24 to observe him at the convenience store where his appearance had gained her attention from the 25 beginning and caused her to briefly delay exiting her car and entering the store. Defense 26 counsels’ performance did not fall below an objective standard of reasonableness, and for the 27
28

1 reasons expressed throughout these findings, Petitioner cannot establish prejudice because there is 2 no reasonable probability that, but for counsels' errors, the result of the proceeding would have 3 been otherwise. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687-88, 694.

4 Given the above, the California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that 5 fairminded jurists could disagree on this issue. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03. Thus, the 6 undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim K be DENIED.

8 Claims P & Q: Competency

9 These claims concern Petitioner's arguments that he was incompetent to testify "due to the 10 influence of medications" and that the trial court failed to conduct a hearing on his competency in 11 violation of his due process rights. (ECF No. 330 at 545-48.) Respondent maintains the 12 California Supreme Court's adjudication of the claims are reasonable, and are not contrary to 13 controlling Supreme Court authority, precluding Petitioner's requested relief. (ECF No. 345 at 14 306-08.)
15

16 Both claims were presented in Petitioner's direct appeal to the state's highest court, as 17 well as in both state habeas petitions considered by that same court. Hence, they are exhausted 18 for purposes of this court's consideration.

19 The California Supreme Court's Determinations

20 Here follows the California Supreme Court's consideration and decision: 21

22 By the end of his first day on the witness stand, defendant had not completed his 23 testimony on direct examination. The next day, before the morning session commenced, 24 he commented that he had not been administered certain medication that had been 25 prescribed. The superior court asked, "You feel okay today?," and he answered, "Yeah, 26 I'm feeling okay." It stated, "Let's get started. We'll talk about this later," and he added, 27 "Fine." His direct examination resumed. The morning recess was called. During its 28 course, he was administered his medication. His direct examination resumed again. The lunch recess was called. Before the afternoon session was to commence, the superior court stated that it had been informed by defense counsel that defendant was "groggy" from his medication. Defendant gave confirmation. He also remarked that he had not eaten anything that day. The superior court gave him an opportunity to have some food and drink. Afterwards, it asked, "Okay, ... how do you feel now?," and he answered, "I feel

1 much better.” It then asked, “Do you feel like continuing on and testifying for another 2 hour?,” and he answered, “My—my tongue feel [sic ] kind of thick.” Defense counsel 3 requested a continuance of trial until the next day. The superior court granted what he 4 sought, stating to defendant that “I’m satisfied ... by the expression of your face and the 5 sound of your voice that you’re not as alert as you should be.” It then asked defense 6 counsel, “Do you want me to tell the jury that he’s taking medication or that he just 7 simply isn’t feeling well? [¶] Maybe the best thing is simply tell them that he just isn’t 8 feeling well, and we gave him an opportunity to have a little food and see if that helped, 9 and it just really didn’t.” Defense counsel answered, “That would be fine.” The superior 10 court so informed the jury. The next day, defendant’s direct examination resumed. At its 11 opening, he was asked, “[A]re you feeling better today?,” and answered, “Yes, I do.”

12 Defendant contends that the superior court erred: (1) by failing to strike, sua 13 sponte, the testimony he gave immediately after he was administered his medication; (2) 14 by failing to admonish the jury, sua sponte, not to consider such testimony; (3) by failing 15 to inform the jury, sua sponte, that he had been administered medication and had been 16 affected thereby; and (4) by failing to admonish the jury, sua sponte, not to consider the 17 demeanor he displayed while he gave the testimony in question.

18 We reject the claim. Defendant’s premise is that the superior court was under a 19 duty to intervene, even in the absence of a request, because, in the period of time 20 immediately after he was administered his medication, he was “disqualified to be a 21 witness,” under Evidence Code section 701, subdivision (a)(1), on the ground that he was 22 “[i]ncapable of expressing himself ... concerning the matter so as to be understood...” It 23 fails. The superior court was not under a duty because he was not disqualified. The record 24 on appeal does not show that he was incapable of expression. Indeed, it does not even 25 raise any such suggestion. That is true as to the period of time immediately after he was 26 administered his medication. It is true as well as to the point at which the superior court 27 granted defense counsel’s request for a continuance. Perhaps, as the superior court 28 commented, defendant was then “not as alert as [he] should be.” But that is all. Contrary to defendant’s implication, the superior court did not grant defense counsel’s request because it found any incapability of expression on his part. Rather, it did so simply to accommodate his indisposition.

[FN] 17. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court committed error under the Evidence Code by failing to do what he asserts it should have done sua sponte, it thereby committed error under the Fifth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution and also under article I, section 15 of the California Constitution. As explained in the text, the superior court did not commit error under the Evidence Code.

[ ] Defendant’s Testimony: Mental Competence to Stand Trial

Defendant contends that the superior court erred by failing to order a hearing under Penal Code sections 1367 et seq., sua sponte, in order to determine whether he was mentally incompetent to stand trial, that is, whether, “as a result of mental disorder or developmental disability,” he was “unable to understand the nature of the criminal proceedings or to assist counsel in the conduct of a defense in a rational manner” (Pen.Code, § 1367, subd. (a)).

We disagree. A trial court is not under a duty to order a hearing on a defendant’s mental incompetence to stand trial, in the absence of a request, unless it has been 1 presented with “substantial evidence of mental incompetence,” i.e., “evidence that raises a 2 reasonable doubt on the issue.” (People v. Howard, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 1163.) The 3 superior court was not presented with any such evidence whatsoever. Defendant did not 4 display any mental disorder or developmental disability of any kind. Neither did he reveal 5 any inability to understand the criminal proceedings or to give his assistance to defense 6 counsel. The most that can be said is that, because of anger and other emotions, he was 7 sometimes unwilling to participate. To say that, however, is to say too little.

8 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 211-12.

9 Applicable Legal Standards

10 A criminal defendant may not be tried unless he is competent and he may not waive his 11 right to counsel or plead guilty unless he does so competently and intelligently. Godinez v.
12 Moran, 509 U.S. 389, 396 (1993). The conviction of a defendant while legally incompetent 13 violates due process. Cacoperdo v. Demosthenes, 37 F.3d 504, 510 (9th Cir. 1994). The test for 14 competence to stand trial is whether the defendant demonstrates the ability “to consult with his 15 lawyer with a reasonable degree of rational understanding” and a “rational as well as factual 16 understanding of the proceedings against him.” Godinez, 509 U.S. at 396; Douglas v. Woodford, 17 316 F.3d 1079, 1094 (9th Cir. 2003). The question “is not whether mental illness substantially 18 affects a decision, but whether a mental disease, disorder or defect substantially affects the 19 prisoner’s capacity to appreciate his options and make a rational choice.” Dennis v. Budge, 378 20 F.3d 880, 890 (9th Cir. 2004).

21 Due process requires a trial court to order a psychiatric evaluation or conduct a 22 competency hearing sua sponte if the court has a good faith doubt concerning the defendant’s 23 competence. Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. 375, 385 (1966); Cacoperdo, 37 F.3d at 510. This 24 responsibility continues throughout trial. Drope v. Missouri, 420 U.S. 162, 181 (1975). A good 25 faith doubt about a defendant’s competence arises if ““a reasonable judge, situated as was the trial 26 court judge whose failure to conduct an evidentiary hearing is being reviewed, should have 27 experienced doubt with respect to competency to stand trial.”” Maxwell v. Roe, 606 F.3d at 568 28

1 (quoting de Kaplany v. Enomoto, 540 F.2d 975, 983 (9th Cir. 1976) (en banc)); see, e.g., Stanley
2 v. Cullen, 633 F.3d at 860-61 (not unreasonable for trial court to conclude there is not enough 3 evidence before it to raise a doubt about defendant’s competence such that it should have held a 4 hearing sua sponte where, on the one hand, defendant made some questionable choices in strategy 5 and acted oddly but, on the other hand, defense counsel specifically informed trial court several 6 times that they had no doubt about defendant’s competency to assist them, defendant was 7 coherent in his testimony and colloquies with the court, state court judges indicated his demeanor 8 in courtroom did not raise a doubt about his competency, and the trial court had very little clinical 9 or psychiatric evidence regarding defendant’s mental health history).

11 Several factors are relevant to determining whether a hearing is necessary, including 12 evidence of a defendant’s irrational behavior, his demeanor at trial, and any prior medical opinion 13 on competence to stand trial. Drope, 420 U.S. at 180. Even one of these factors standing alone 14 may, in some circumstances, be sufficient to create a reasonable doubt regarding the defendant’s 15 competence. Id. The failure of petitioner or his attorney to request a competency hearing is not a 16 factor in determining whether there is a good faith doubt in the defendant’s competency.
17 Maxwell v. Roe, 606 F.3d at 574 (trial judge has an “independent duty” to hold competency 18 hearing if there is a good faith doubt).

21 Courts generally have found sufficient evidence of incompetence in lengthy histories of 22 acute psychosis and psychiatric treatment, see, e.g., Moore v. United States, 464 F.2d 663, 665 23 (9th Cir. 1972) (defendant repeatedly hospitalized for acute mental illness and hallucinations), or 24 extremely erratic and irrational behavior during the course of the trial, see, e.g., Tillery v. Eyman, 25 492 F.2d 1056, 1057-58 (9th Cir. 1974) (defendant screamed throughout nights, laughed at jury, 26 made gestures at bailiff, disrobed in courtroom and butted his head through glass window), or 27 both, see Maxwell, 606 F.3d at 569-70 (defendant’s attempted suicide, strained communication 28

1 with defense counsel, mental health problems, violent outbursts in courtroom, antipsychotic 2 medications, and psychiatric detentions would have raised a doubt in a reasonable judge and 3 warranted a second follow-up competency hearing even though petitioner had been found 4 competent in an earlier hearing prior to trial). A defendant's disagreement with his attorneys and 5 inability to control his temper in the courtroom are not enough to create bona fide doubt as to 6 defendant's competence. United States v. White, 670 F.3d 1077, 1084-85 (9th Cir. 2012) (judge 7 did not abuse discretion in failing to hold second competency hearing sua sponte, despite report 8 that defendant suffered from delusions, had angry outbursts, and refused to communicate with 9 attorneys, because judge presented with certification of competency from doctors as well as 10 opinion of defendant's attorney that defendant was competent to stand trial).

11 Analysis

12 Claim P

13 14 15 Despite Petitioner's claim, the record does not reveal that Petitioner was incompetent to 16 testify. The record establishes that when Petitioner complained of missing a medication dosage, 17 the court asked him how he felt, and Petitioner expressly indicated he was okay. He also 18 indicated he was fine with resuming his testimony. Further, the record establishes that when the 19 medication was administered during a break and Petitioner's grogginess thereafter became 20 apparent, the court offered food and drink before ultimately suspending proceedings for the day.
21 Petitioner was not so negatively influenced that he was incapable of testifying.

22
23 Further, a review of the record citations relied upon by Petitioner do not demonstrate that 24 his testimony was "entirely unresponsive" or incapable of being understood. For example, the 25 same page wherein Mr. Gable advises the court that Petitioner did not receive his medication that 26 morning includes Petitioner's acknowledgment that two weeks prior he was refusing to take the 27 medication furnished to him. More significantly, however, Petitioner did not state, nor did 28

1 counsel assert, that Petitioner felt any effects of missing the medication dosage. (18 RT 4067.)
2 Another citation relied upon by Petitioner to assert his testimony that morning was nonsensical 3 involves characters or symbols that appear to relate to court reporting or transcription-recording 4 notations that in and of themselves alter the testimony. Simply stated, this record does not reveal 5 that Petitioner was incompetent as a result of any issue concerning his medications or their 6 influence. (18 RT 4064-155.) At most, the record establishes that when Petitioner was 7 administered his medication on an empty stomach, he experienced some minor side effect that did 8 not substantially affect his competence. No mental disease, disorder or defect appears to have 9 substantially affected his ability to make rational choices, nor can a finding that Petitioner 10 demonstrated an ability to consult rationally with counsel and to understand the proceedings 11 against him be said to be unreasonable. Godinez v. Moran, 509 U.S at 396; Dennis v. Budge, 378 12 F.3d at 890.

15 In sum, this record does not serve to establish that the California Supreme Court's 16 determination of the claim was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, Supreme 17 Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Therefore, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim 18 P be DENIED.

19 Claim Q

20 21 Petitioner claims his "testimony and courtroom behavior indicated that he was suffering 22 from a serious mental disturbance" (ECF No. 330 at 547) that required the trial court to hold a 23 hearing to assess his competence.

24 A state appellate court's finding that the evidence before the trial court did not require a 25 competency hearing is a finding of fact. Davis v. Woodford, 384 F.3d 628, 644 (9th Cir. 2004); 26 Torres v. Prunty, 223 F.3d 1103, 1105 (9th Cir. 2000). Thus, the court must defer to it unless it 27 was "unreasonable" within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2). Davis, 384 F.3d at 644; 28

1 Torres, 223 F.3d at 1105. Section 2254(d)(2) constitutes a “particularly deferential” standard and 2 requires reversal only if a federal court, after reviewing the state court record, “determines that 3 the state court was not merely wrong, but actually unreasonable.” Taylor v. Maddox, 366 F.3d at 4 999. In other words, the reviewing court “must be convinced that an appellate panel, applying the 5 normal standards of appellate review, could not reasonably conclude that the finding is supported 6 by the record.” Id. at 1000.

8         Here, there is no substantial evidence of mental incompetence or developmental disability 9 in the record. Petitioner’s courtroom behavior and demeanor, including his testimony, do not 10 evidence something more than bizarre statements and behavior sufficient to raise a doubt about 11 his competency. A few nonsensical or less than responsive answers do not amount to 12 demonstration of an inability to understand the nature and object of the proceedings, consult with 13 counsel and assist in his defense. See Stanley v. Cullen, 633 F.3d at 860-61 (defendant’s 14 unreasonable insistence on untenable alibi defense, repeatedly making and withdrawing requests 15 to remove his counsel, mental instability, anxiety, and alcohol and methamphetamine abuse were 16 insufficient to raise a doubt regarding his competence when he testified coherently during 17 hearings, behaved normally in the courtroom, and there was little evidence of mental health 18 history); Boag v. Raines, 769 F.2d 1341, 1343 (9th Cir. 1985) (five suicide attempts, repeated 19 head injuries, incident of bizarre behavior, and alcoholism were insufficient to raise a bona fide 20 doubt; head injuries and alcoholism were “properly discounted,” because defendant did not show 21 that they caused mental impairment at the time of the trial); de Kaplany v. Enomoto, 540 F.2d at 22 983-85 (no bona fide doubt of competency despite two emotional and inappropriate outbursts at 23 trial, expert testimony characterizing defendant as severely disturbed and suffering from paranoid 24 schizophrenia, and a bizarre and gruesome crime).

25 26 27 28

1           Petitioner’s behavior and demeanor are unlike those wherein the circuit court has found a 2 competency hearing was required: Tillery v. Eyman, 492 F.2d at 1057-58 (defendant displayed 3 erratic and irrational behavior at the time of trial, such as screaming throughout the night, 4 laughing at the jury, gesturing to the bailiff, ripping off his tie and shirt in the courtroom, and 5 butting his head through a glass window); and Odle v. Woodford, 238 F.3d 1084, 1088 (9th Cir.
6 2001) (section of defendant’s brain was removed and he had a long history of psychotic 7 episodes). Deference is accorded to the state court’s finding that the trial court was not required 8 to hold a hearing because the record does not reveal that finding to be unreasonable. Davis v.
9 Woodford, 384 F.3d at 644; Torres v. Prunty, 223 F.3d at 1105.

11           In sum, there is nothing in this record to show that Petitioner exhibited behavior or 12 demeanor indicative of serious mental disturbance requiring the trial court to hold a competency 13 hearing. Hence, the California Supreme Court’s determination was not contrary to, nor did it 14 involve an unreasonable application of, federal law as established in Drope v. Missouri or Pate v.
15 Robinson. § 2254(d). Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief. Thus, the undersigned 16 RECOMMENDS that Claim Q be DENIED.

18           Claims R, S and WW: Instructional Error Affecting Intent

19           Petitioner presents a series of claims asserting instructional error amounting to federal 20 constitutional error. (ECF No. 330 at 548-54.) Claims R and S were presented in his direct appeal 21 and were reasserted in his state habeas petitions to the California Supreme Court. Claim WW 22 was presented in Petitioner’s first and second state habeas petitions. Therefore, the claims are 23 exhausted.
24

25           Respondent maintains that the California Supreme Court’s denials of all claims on their 26 merits are neither contrary to nor an unreasonable application of United States Supreme Court 27 precedent. (ECF No. 345 at 309-12.)
28

1 erroneous failure to instruct on the concurrence of act and “specific intent” “was 2 not prejudicial....” Subsequently, in People v. Germany, supra, 42 Cal.App.3d at 3 page 419, the court concluded, without citing Chapman, that a like error “was 4 harmless.” Despite what its language may be read to suggest, the Turner court did 5 not hold that the error in question was of federal constitutional dimension or even 6 that the general rule for error of this sort was applicable. The Germany court all 7 but expressly avoided such a holding.

8 Next, we conclude that the superior court did not err insofar as its instruction on 9 the concurrence of act and “specific intent” did not include the felony-murder-robbery 10 special circumstance. By its very terms, this instruction applies only to “crimes” and not 11 to special circumstances.

12 Any such error, however, would not require reversal. There was no prejudice 13 because there was no reasonable probability of an effect on the outcome. An instruction 14 on the felony-murder-robbery special circumstance substantially covered the concurrence 15 of act and “specific intent.” It declared that “it must be proved” both that defendant 16 “committed” the “murder” either “while he was engaged in the commission or attempted 17 commission of a robbery” or “during the immediate flight” thereafter and that he 18 “intended to kill.” (Brackets omitted.) Not only did this instruction impliedly require the 19 concurrence of act and “specific intent,” it expressly required intent to kill.

20 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 219-21.

21 Applicable Legal Standards

22 Claims of error in state jury instructions are generally matters of state law and thus do not 23 usually invoke a constitutional question. See Gilmore v. Taylor, 508 U.S. 333, 343 (1993). And, 24 the federal court is bound by a state appellate court’s interpretation of California state law. See 25 Waddington v. Sarausad, 555 U.S. 179, 192 n.5 (2009) (“we have repeatedly held that it is not the 26 province of a federal habeas court to reexamine state-court determinations on state law 27 questions”).

28 To merit federal habeas relief when an allegedly erroneous jury instruction is given, or an instruction is omitted, a petitioner must show that the ailing instruction by itself so infected the entire trial that the resulting conviction violates due process. See Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. at 71-72; Henderson v. Kibbe, 431 U.S. 145, 155 (1977); see also Dunckhurst v. Deeds, 859 F.2d 110, 114 (9th Cir. 1988) (state court’s failure to give jury instruction “does not alone raise a ground cognizable in a federal habeas corpus proceeding”).

1 In a criminal trial, a jury instruction violates due process if it fails to give effect to the 2 requirement that the State prove every element of the offense. Middleton v. McNeil, 541 U.S.
3 433, 437 (2004) (citing Sandstrom v. Montana, 442 U.S. 510, 520-21 (1979)); see also Keating v.
4 Hood, 191 F.3d 1053, 1061 (9th Cir. 1999) (instruction that relieves state of burden of proving 5 mens rea beyond reasonable doubt contradicts presumption of innocence and invades function of 6 jury, thereby violating due process), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 824 (2000), abrogated on other 7 grounds by Mancuso v. Olivarez, 292 F.3d 939, 944 n.1 (9th Cir. 2002) (citation omitted).
9 Claims of instructional error must be evaluated in the context of the instructions as a whole, not in 10 artificial isolation. Estelle, 502 U.S. at 72; United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. at 169. Moreover, a 11 petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief unless an error had a “substantial and injurious effect or 12 influence in determining the jury’s verdict.” See Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38; see also Clark v.
13 Brown, 450 F.3d 898, 905 (9th Cir. 2006) (“A habeas petitioner must show that the alleged 14 instructional error ‘had substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury’s 15 verdict’”), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1027 (2006).

17 Analysis

18 A review of the jury instructions and the record reveals the California Supreme Court’s 19 determinations of Claims R and S to be reasonable. Specifically, as to Claim R, the state court’s 20 determination that the trial court’s error involving “its instructions on the concurrence of act and 21 ‘specific intent’” was harmless or error not requiring reversal, was reasonable because it was not 22 reasonably probable the error had an effect on the outcome. As that court noted, CALJIC No.
23 8.10 “substantially covered the subject.” (See 5 CT 1211; 25 RT 5617.) “[N]ot every ambiguity, 24 inconsistency, or deficiency in a jury instruction rises to the level of a due process violation. The 25 question is whether the ailing instruction ... so infected the entire trial that the resulting 26 conviction violates due process.” Middleton v. McNeil, 541 U.S. at 437 (internal citation & 27
28

1 quotation marks omitted). And, instructions to the jury are to be viewed as a whole rather than in 2 isolation. Boyde v. California, 494 U.S. at 378. Because the instruction regarding murder plainly 3 required the jury to find specific intent, the trial court’s isolated error cannot be said to have 4 infected the entire trial, or to have had a substantial or injurious effect or influence on the jury’s 5 verdict. Middleton v. McNeil, at 437; Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38.

7 It was also reasonable for the court to conclude that because CALJIC No. 3.31 “[b]y its 8 very terms” applies only to “crimes” rather than to a finding regarding special circumstances, the 9 trial court did not err “insofar as its instruction on the concurrence of act and specific intent. (See 10 5 CT 1207-08 [“in each of the crimes charged”]). CALJIC No. 8.81.17 covered specific intent 11 and concurrence of act and the jury heard it as well. (5 CT 1221; 25 RT 5624-25.) Instructions 12 are not to be viewed in isolation. Boyde v. California, 494 U.S. at 1378. Even assuming error for 13 the sake of argument, giving CALJIC No. 3.31 did not have a substantial and injurious effect on 14 the verdict in light of the giving of CALJIC No. 8.81.17. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38.

16 Given the instructions as a whole, it was not unreasonable for the California Supreme 17 Court to deny Petitioner’s claim because it cannot be shown the ailing instruction by itself so 18 infected the entire trial. Estelle, 502 U.S. at 71-72. Therefore, Petitioner is not entitled to habeas 19 relief. The undersigned thus RECOMMENDS that Claim R be DENIED.

21 As to Claim S, the California Supreme Court’s determination that the trial court did not 22 err by failing to modify the definition of malice aforethought, thereby creating a conflict with the 23 special circumstance intent to kill requirement, was not unreasonable. The record confirms that 24 the special circumstance instruction on felony murder-robbery expressly requires an intent to kill.
25 (See 25 RT 5624-25; 5 CT 1221.) In contrast, no such express requirement is called for in 26 CALJIC No. 8.11, or the definition of malice aforethought. (See 25 RT 5617-18; 5 CT 1212.)
27 Even assuming error, Petitioner is not entitled to relief. The instructions as a whole are in no way 28

1 ambiguous. Boyde v. California, 494 U.S. at 378. For those same reasons, Petitioner cannot 2 establish prejudice. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38.

3 Accordingly, the California Supreme Court’s determination is not contrary to, nor does it 4 involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).
5 Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief. The undersigned thus RECOMMENDS that Claim S be 6 DENIED.

8 Finally, regarding Claim WW, it was not unreasonable for the state’s highest court to deny 9 the claim on state habeas. That court could have determined that trial counsels were not 10 ineffective for failing to request a modification to CALJIC No. 8.11 for the reasons expressed and 11 explained in its earlier determinations regarding Claim S. In other words, because other 12 instructions adequately covered the subject matter, counsel cannot be said to have performed 13 deficiently, nor would a court find prejudice applying the Strickland standard.
14

15 The undersigned declines Petitioner’s invitation to take Mr. Holmes “silence regarding 16 Claim WW” in his 1999 declaration “as a concession that ... no strategic reason” existed for 17 “failing to request a modified implied malice instruction.” (ECF No. 330 at 552; see also ECF 18 No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136.) It could have simply been an oversight.

19 Ultimately, it is possible that fairminded jurists could disagree on the correctness of the 20 decision. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101. Petitioner has not shown that the California Supreme Court’s 21 ruling “was so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended 22 in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.” Id. at 103. Accordingly, the 23 undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim WW be DENIED.
24

25 Claim T: Instructional Error Regarding Causation

26 Here, Petitioner contends the trial court erred by failing to modify the jury instructions 27 concerning causation of Allen Birkman’s death. (ECF No. 330 at 555-56.) Respondent maintains 28

1 that the California Supreme Court’s determination of the claim was reasonable. (ECF No. 345 at 2 312-15.) This claim is exhausted for this court’s purposes by its presentation to the state’s highest 3 court in Petitioner’s direct appeal, and again in both state habeas petitions filed with that court.

4 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

5 The state’s highest court considered the claim and determined as follows:

7 In accordance with the pattern instruction set out as CALJIC No. 8.10 (5th ed.
8 1988), the superior court told the jury that, in order to be “guilty of the crime of murder,” 9 a person must “unlawfully kill[] a human being with malice aforethought or during the 10 commission or attempted commission of” an enumerated felony, here “robbery.” (Certain 11 brackets omitted.) It defined murder of the first degree under the theory of willful, 12 deliberate, and premeditated killing. It also defined murder of the first degree under the 13 theory of felony-murder robbery or attempted robbery. Specifically, in conformity with 14 the pattern instruction of CALJIC No. 8.21 (5th ed. 1988), it stated that the “unlawful 15 killing of a human being, whether intentional, unintentional or accidental, which occurs 16 during the commission or attempted commission of” an enumerated felony, here 17 “robbery,” “is murder of the first degree when the perpetrator had the specific intent to 18 commit such” felony. (Brackets omitted.)

19 Defendant contends, in substance, that the superior court erred by assertedly 20 failing to instruct on causation as to the crime of murder.

21 Against a claim of this kind, which involves the determination of applicable legal 22 principles, an appellate court reviews a trial court’s instruction independently.

23 There was no error. The superior court did not fail to instruct on causation as to the 24 crime of murder. It did indeed instruct thereon. Moreover, it did so adequately. It did not 25 allow guilt to turn on the perpetrator’s unrelated act and the victim’s unrelated death.
26 Rather, by requiring the perpetrator to kill the victim, it required the act to cause the death.

27 [FN] 26. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court 28 committed error under California law, it thereby committed error under, apparently, the Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, the superior court did not commit error under California law.

In part, defendant argues to the effect that the superior court should have amplified its instructions: In defining murder pursuant to CALJIC No. 8.10, he says, it should have referred to, and explained, proximate cause. Had he desired such an amplification, he should have requested it of the superior court. He made no request of this sort. Indeed, defense counsel stated, “I’m not gonna make any issue out of the proximate cause....”
Because defendant did not request amplification of the otherwise adequate instructions below, he may not complain here. (E.g., People v. Sanders (1995) 11 Cal.4th 475, 533.)

[FN] 27. In the course of his argument, defendant asserts that the superior court should have referred to, and explained, proximate cause in accordance with the pattern instruction set out as CALJIC No. 8.55 (5th ed. 1988): “To constitute

1 ... murder ... there must be, in addition to the death of a human being, an unlawful 2 act which was a proximate cause of the death. [¶] A proximate cause of a death is a 3 cause which, in natural and continuous sequence, produces the death, and without 4 which the death would not have occurred.” We note in passing that, in light of our 5 all but express disapproval in People v. Roberts (1992) 2 Cal.4th 271, 311-13, 6 CALJIC No. 8.55 was revised in 1992 to remove “proximateness”: “To constitute 7 ... murder ... there must be, in addition to the death of a human being, an unlawful 8 act which was a cause of that death.”

10 In other part, defendant argues to the effect that the superior court should have 11 clarified its instructions: In defining murder of the first degree under the theory of felony-12 murder robbery or attempted robbery pursuant to CALJIC No. 8.21, he says, it should 13 have referred not to an unlawful killing occurring “during the commission or attempted 14 commission of ... [a] robbery,” but rather to one occurring “as a direct causal result” 15 thereof. Had he desired such a clarification, he should have requested it of the superior 16 court. He made no request of this sort. Indeed, defense counsel acquiesced in the 17 “unclarified” instruction containing the during-the-commission language instead of the as-18 a-direct-causal-result alternative. The reasons are plain. The first is “legal.” An unlawful 19 killing is deemed to occur during the commission or attempted commission of an 20 enumerated felony so long as the fatal blow is struck in its course, even if death does not 21 then result. (2 LaFave & Scott, Substantive Criminal Law (1986) Felony Murder, § 7.5(f), 22 p. 223, fn. 88.) Even though Allen Birkman did not die until the next day, he was fatally 23 stabbed during the commission or attempted commission of a robbery. The second reason 24 is “factual.” Since Birkman died the day after he was fatally stabbed, the during-the-25 commission language was more favorable than the as-a-direct-causal-result alternative: 26 the jury would readily find that Birkman was killed “as a direct causal result” of the 27 commission or attempted commission of a robbery, but might hesitate to find that he was 28 killed “during [its] commission or attempted commission.” (Italics added.) Because defendant did not request clarification of the otherwise adequate instructions below, he may not complain here. (E.g., People v. Sanders, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 533.)

19 [FN] 28. In the course of his argument, defendant cites the first paragraph 20 of the Use Note to CALJIC No. 8.21: “If the death occurs substantially 21 contemporaneously with the commission of the crime, use [the during-the-22 commission language] and [not the as-a-direct-causal-result alternative]. On the 23 other hand, if death occurs at a later period, use [the as-a-direct-causal-result 24 language] and [not the during-the-commission alternative].” He asserts that 25 Birkman’s death did not occur “substantially contemporaneously” with the 26 commission or attempted commission of a robbery, but rather “at a later period.”
27 He then concludes that the superior court should have used the as-a-direct-causal-28 result language instead of the during-the-commission alternative. His unstated premise is that use notes, like the one here, have the force of law. They do not.

26 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 221-23.

27 ///

28 ///

1 Further, the surgical intervention or treatment that Birkman received did not “interfere” or 2 otherwise cross over the stab wound inflicted to his chest. (14 RT 2936-37.)<sup>63</sup>

3 The jury understood it was tasked with determining whether Petitioner was guilty of 4 murdering Birkman, and as a part of that task, it was required to find Petitioner was the cause of 5 Birkman’s death. In light of the record and the instructions given, Petitioner cannot show any 6 substantial or injurious effect on the jury’s verdict. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38.

8 In sum, the California Supreme Court’s determination that there was no instructional error 9 as it concerned causation was not an unreasonable application of, nor was it contrary to, Supreme 10 Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Because Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief, the 11 undersigned RECOMMENDS that Claim T be DENIED.

12 13 Claim Y: Withdrawal of Penalty Phase Investigative Funding

14 In yet another claim regarding the defense team’s attempts to travel to Cuba in order to 15 obtain mitigating evidence to be presented at the penalty phase, Petitioner asserts: the trial court 16 violated his rights to prepare and present a defense; to a fair trial; to a reliable determination of 17 his eligibility for the death penalty; and to equal protection of the law. (ECF No. 330 at 556-60.)
18 Respondent contends the California Supreme Court’s denial of this claim was reasonable and not 19 in contravention of federal law, precluding habeas relief. (ECF No. 345 at 315.)

20 21 Petitioner presented this claim in his direct appeal and again in state habeas proceedings 22 filed with the California Supreme Court; thus the claim is exhausted.

23 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

24 Defendant now presents a number of contentions relating to his application for 25 authorization to incur expenses for a trip to Cuba.

26 At the threshold, defendant claims that Judge Bond erred by withdrawing authorization to incur expenses for the trip to Cuba by McGarrity and Santivanias.

27 <sup>63</sup> Petitioner did not present any expert testimony contradicting Dr. Stuart’s opinion as to 28 Birkman’s cause of death nor any expert testimony that any pre-existing condition of Birkman’s contributed to his death or that he received inferior medical treatment.

1 An appellate court reviews a trial court’s ruling on an application for authorization 2 to incur expenses to prepare or present a defense for abuse of discretion. (See, e.g., People
3 v. Daniels (1991) 52 Cal.3d 815, 851; People v. Mattson (1990) 50 Cal.3d 826, 847.)

4 We find no such abuse here. Judge Bond was not unreasonable in authorizing the 5 “aboveboard” trip to Cuba by Mayorga and Myers, of which she had been informed, for 6 the purpose of compiling defendant’s social history: The end was proper and so were the 7 means. But neither was she unreasonable in withdrawing authorization for the 8 “surreptitious” trip to Cuba by McGarrity and Santivanias, of which she had not been 9 informed: although the end remained proper, the means had become otherwise, 10 threatening harm to international relations and also to the two travelers. Defendant argues 11 in substance that, at least on the facts of a case like this, a judge may not withdraw 12 authorization for improper means. Because he did not offer such an argument below—13 indeed, Attorney Gable agreed that a judge could do so—he may not offer any to that 14 effect here. He also argues that Judge Bond did not in fact withdraw authorization for 15 improper means, but did so for her own improper reasons. The record on appeal is 16 otherwise.

17 Even if error had occurred, it would not entail reversal. It is the general rule for 18 error under California law bearing on the penalty of death—which includes the one 19 asserted here—that reversal requires prejudice and prejudice in turn requires a reasonable 20 possibility of an effect on the outcome under People v. Brown (1988) 46 Cal.3d 432.
21 (People v. Ashmus, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 983; People v. Gordon, supra, 50 Cal.3d at p.
22 1267.) No such possibility appears as a result of the withdrawal of authorization to incur 23 expenses for a trip to Cuba. McGarrity herself stated that she was uncertain of success.
24 Hence, it is merely conjectural whether McGarrity and Santivanias would have made it to 25 Cuba, and if so, whether they would have discovered more favorable information than 26 what McGarrity had already obtained, as through her telephonic interview with 27 defendant’s father in Cuba, and if so, whether they would have made it back to the United 28 States in a timely fashion.

[FN] 32. Defendant claims in substance that, because Judge Bond committed reversible error under California law by withdrawing authorization to incur expenses for the trip to Cuba by McGarrity and Santivanias, she thereby committed reversible error under the Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, the superior court did not commit any error under California law.

People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 234-35.

Analysis

Preliminarily, the undersigned hereby fully incorporates his findings and recommendations concerning related Claims U, V, W, X, FF, PP, UU, VV and YY.

Before withdrawing the investigative funds at issue, Judge Bond conducted a hearing wherein defense counsel fully aired their concerns. Ultimately however, the judge determined

1 that the surreptitious nature of the then-scheduled second-attempt by the defense team to enter 2 Cuba did not comport with her prior or initial approval concerning those funds. In other words, 3 she did not authorize the use of those funds where Cuban authorities would be ignorant of the true 4 purpose of McGarrity and Santivanias' visit. (RT § 989.7 Proceedings 65-86.)

6 As the California Supreme Court reasonably found, Judge Bond was concerned with the 7 potential for an international incident and the uncertainty of the planned effort's success.
8 Petitioner's argument that another capital defense team successfully traveled to Cuba employing 9 the same method his team sought to employ does not make Judge Bond's determination or the 10 state court's holding of no error unreasonable. As the California Supreme Court correctly found, 11 the record supports Judge Bond's concerns regarding uncertainty because there was no guarantee 12 that the team representatives would gain access to the records they sought given the secretive 13 nature of their visit. And, Petitioner's argument that the defense team should have been given 14 sufficient time to conduct the investigation is not well taken for the reasons discussed previously 15 in related claims.
16

17 The record does reveal that McGarrity herself could not say with any certainty that the 18 planned trip to Cuba would be successful. The record as a whole further reveals the defense 19 team's efforts to obtain information from and travel to Cuba have always been uncertain.
20

21 Moreover, the California Supreme Court's finding that the information sought was largely 22 presented to the jury in the form of McGarrity's testimony was not unreasonable. The defense 23 expert testified concerning Petitioner's childhood, including medical, psychological, legal, 24 military, social and educational matters, as related by Petitioner and his family members. (29 RT 25 6580-674; 30 RT 6682-780; 31 RT 6837-55; see also 31 RT 6823-26 [Myers testimony re 26 exhibits 144 & 145].) Therefore, even assuming error, there was no prejudice because Petitioner 27

28 ///

1 cannot show a substantial and injurious effect or influence on the jury's verdict where it 2 considered this evidence. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38.

3           Petitioner was not denied his right to due process by Judge Bond's decision to withdraw 4 funds related to his efforts to obtain mitigating evidence from Cuba for the reasons explained 5 above and in incorporated findings of the related claims. The California Supreme Court's 6 determination was not contrary to nor did it involve an unreasonable application of Supreme 7 Court precedent; neither did it involve an unreasonable factual determination. 28 U.S.C. § 2254.
8 As a result, Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief. Therefore, the undersigned 9 RECOMMENDS that Claim Y be DENIED.

10 11           Claim EE: Insufficient Evidence of Use of Deadly Weapon

12           Petitioner argues that there was insufficient evidence of his use of a deadly weapon during 13 the course of the robbery of Greta Slatten. (ECF No. 330 at 560-61.) Respondent disagrees.
14 (ECF No. 345 at 316-17.) Because Petitioner's claim was presented to the state's highest court, it 15 is exhausted for purposes of federal habeas review.

16
17           The California Supreme Court's Determination

18           The California Supreme Court held as follows:

19           Defendant contends that the evidence is insufficient to support the finding that he 20 personally used a deadly weapon in the robbery of Greta Slatten. The question is whether, 21 after viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier 22 of fact could have found the elements of the underlying enhancement beyond a reasonable 23 doubt. (People v. Dominguez (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 410, 421; People v. Jacobs (1987) 24 193 Cal.App.3d 375, 380.) The answer is yes. Contrary to defendant's claim, such a trier 25 of fact could have determined to the requisite degree of certainty that whatever it was that 26 he personally used in the crime was indeed a deadly weapon: it could have inferred from the nature and extent of the injuries that Slatten suffered—which required suturing with 20 stitches, prevented her from opening her mouth, and blackened the left side of her face from her hairline down through her neck—that it was a blunt instrument that caused them and that such instrument was in fact capable of inflicting death.

27 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 224-25.

28 ////

1 v. Terhune, 376 F.3d at 957. When the factual record supports conflicting inferences, the federal 2 court must presume that the trier of fact resolved the conflicts in favor of the prosecution, and 3 must defer to that resolution. Jackson, 443 U.S. at 326.

6 Greta Slatten testified that as a result of the robbery assault, she received “20 stitches” in 7 her head, from the top toward the left ear, her face was “black” from the hair line down through 8 her neck and jaw on the left side, and she “could not open” her mouth. (14 RT 3124-25.) The 9 jury also heard Slatten testify that Petitioner was carrying a knapsack, that he was the only person 10 present in the parking lot, and that after she passed him at telephone booth heading toward her 11 car, she had no further recollection until she regained consciousness during medical treatment.
12 (14 RT 3116-17, 3119-21; see also 14 RT 3132-33, 3137, 3142.) The jury plainly credited 13 Slatten’s testimony, including her testimony about the significant injuries she sustained, and their 14 determination is “entitled to near-total deference.” Bruce v. Terhune, 376 F.3d at 957.

15
16 A rational juror could readily conclude from this evidence that Petitioner used a deadly 17 weapon against Slatten, whether that weapon was his hand or fist, the telephone receiver, or some 18 object he had removed from his knapsack. The fact Slatten did not observe a weapon does not 19 change that finding. The jury was instructed on personal use of a deadly or dangerous weapon 20 pursuant to CALJIC No. 17.16; it reads, in pertinent part, that “[a] deadly or dangerous weapon 21 means any weapon, instrument, or object that is capable of being used to inflict great bodily 22 injury or death” and that “use” includes “intentionally” striking or hitting “a human being with 23 it.” (5 CT 1245; 25 RT 5640-41.)
24

25 There is no reason to overturn the California Supreme Court’s finding for it comports with 26 federal precedent and is in no way unreasonable. A rational trier of fact could have concluded 27 Petitioner used a deadly weapon when assaulting Slatten from behind in the convenience store 28

1 parking lot. Coleman v. Johnson, 566 U.S. at 651; Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. at 318-19; 28 2 U.S.C. § 2254(d). As a result, the undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim EE be
3 DENIED.

4 Claim QQ: Delay of Penalty Phase Investigative Funding

5 Withholding the disbursement of investigatory funds for travel to Cuba deprived 6 Petitioner of his right to put on a “guilt phase mental health defense,” he argues, violating his 7 constitutional rights to prepare and present a defense, to a fair trial, a reliable determination of his 8 eligibility for the death penalty, and to equal protection of the law. He further contends trial 9 counsel were ineffective for “failing to sufficiently advise Judge Bond of the need to conduct the 10 necessary investigation in order to evaluate and prepare a defense during the guilt phase.” (ECF 11 No. 330 at 561-62.) Respondent maintains the California Supreme Court’s determination of this 12 claim was reasonable, precluding habeas relief. (ECF No. 345 at 317-18.)

13 14
15 This claim was presented to the California Supreme Court in Petitioner’s state habeas 16 petitions and denied on its merits, among other reasons, on both occasions. It is exhausted for 17 purposes of federal habeas review.

18 Analysis

19 As above, the undersigned hereby fully incorporates his findings and recommendations 20 concerning related Claims U, V, W, X, Y, FF, PP, UU, VV and YY. Petitioner’s claim here relies 21 upon the success of those arguments; however, the undersigned has recommended the 22 aforementioned claims be denied.

23
24 Again, in the absence of a reasoned opinion, this court “must determine what arguments 25 or theories supported or, as here, could have supported, the state court’s decision; and then it must 26 ask whether it is possible fairminded jurists could disagree that those arguments or theories are 27 inconsistent with the holding in a prior decision of this Court.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 102. Relief 28

1 will not be granted unless a petitioner can “show that the state court’s ruling on the claim being 2 presented in federal court was so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood 3 and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.” Id. at 4 103.

6 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that Judge Bond’s order 7 that the travel funds to Cuba be disbursed once the matter was assigned a courtroom for trial did 8 not deny Petitioner of his right to investigate and present a mental health defense at the guilt 9 phase. The record establishes that the defense team had already received, and apparently 10 expended, funds pertaining to a mental health defense for purposes of the guilt phase. (RT 11 § 989.7 Proceedings 8-14 [6/8/88: funds sought for psychiatric evaluation] & 15-24 [11/21/88:
12 efforts were underway to assess whether Petitioner suffered brain damage as a result of events 13 occurring in Cuba].) The fact a mental health defense was not presented does not mean Petitioner 14 was precluded from investigating or presenting the defense; its omission was a tactical decision 15 by the defense team rather than any error that can be attributed to the court.<sup>64</sup>

16
17 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that the Due Process 18 Clause does not operate to allow Petitioner and his defense team to expend investigatory funds for 19 a trip to Cuba that was to be undertaken via subterfuge, or where the Cuban government was not 20 made aware of the true basis for McGarrity and Santivanias’ trip, particularly where the Cuban 21 government did not permit an earlier team comprised of Messrs. Mayorga and Myers to enter 22 when it was apprised of that team’s true intent. As for Petitioner’s allegations that but for the 23 delay associated with Judge Bond’s order, the information could have been obtained and 24 presented, Respondent persuasively points out, it took years and years, rather than mere weeks or 25 even months, for present habeas counsel to successfully obtain the sought-after information and 26

1 documentation from Cuba. One can reasonably infer that even had more time been granted, or 2 even had there been no time limitation as to the disbursement of the funds, it would not have 3 made for a different outcome. For those same reasons, Petitioner cannot show, assuming error, 4 that it had a substantial and injurious effect upon the jury's verdict. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-38.

6 To conclude, fairminded jurists could disagree that the delay of the disbursement of 7 certain investigative funds resulted in a violation of Petitioner's constitutional rights to prepare 8 and present a defense, to a fair trial, to equal protection and to a reliable determination of his 9 eligibility for the death penalty. Fairminded jurists could also disagree that the defense team was 10 ineffective for "failing to sufficiently advise" the court of its need to conduct such an 11 investigation. The record contains the many efforts of the defense team to advise the court of the 12 importance of its efforts to travel to Cuba and the evidence it hoped to gain by doing so.

13
14 Hence, Petitioner has failed to show the California Supreme Court's denial of his claim 15 was "so lacking in justification" so as to be "error well understood and comprehended in existing 16 law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement." Richter, 562 U.S. at 102-03. The 17 California Supreme Court's determination was not contrary to, nor did it involve an unreasonable 18 application of, Supreme Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). The undersigned hereby 19 RECOMMENDS that Claim QQ be DENIED.

20 21 Claim TT: Harassment & Abuse at the County Jail

22 In this claim, Petitioner asserts he was subjected to harassment and abuse at the 23 Sacramento County Jail during the trial, interfering with his right to be present at critical stages 24 and to be competent; he also complains trial counsel provided ineffective assistance of counsel.
25 (ECF No. 330 at 563-80.) Respondent, on the other hand, contends the California Supreme 26 Court's denial of this claim is neither unreasonable nor involves a contrary application of federal 27 precedent, precluding relief. (ECF No. 345 at 318-37.)
28

1 This claim was presented to the state’s highest court in both Petitioner’s first and second 2 state habeas petitions. Hence, it is exhausted.

3 Applicable Legal Standards

4 A criminal defendant may not be tried unless he is competent, and may not plead guilty 5 unless he does so competently and intelligently. Godinez v. Moran, 509 U.S. at 396. The 6 standard for competence to stand trial is whether a defendant has sufficient ability to consult with 7 his lawyer with a reasonable degree of rational understanding and has a rational as well as factual 8 understanding of the proceedings against him. Id. at 396 (citations omitted); Clark v. Arnold, 769
9 F.3d at 719.

10 A claim regarding incompetence to stand trial may implicate either substantive due 11 process or procedural due process. The trial or conviction of a person who is legally incompetent 12 is a substantive due process violation. See Cooper v. Oklahoma, 517 U.S. at 354; Maxwell v.
13 Roe, 606 F.3d at 568 (“It is undisputed that ‘the conviction of an accused person while he is 14 legally incompetent violates due process’” (quoting Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. at 378). A 15 “substantive” competency claim focuses on whether the defendant was actually incompetent at 16 trial. Boyde v. Brown, 404 F.3d at 1165.

17 A competency claim may also implicate procedural due process. A state may presume 18 that a defendant is competent and may require him or her to prove otherwise by a preponderance 19 of the evidence. Cooper v. Oklahoma, 517 U.S. at 355 (citing Medina v. California, 505 U.S.
20 437, 449 (1992)). However, procedural due process requires a trial court to hold a competency 21 hearing if there is sufficient evidence before the court to give rise to a substantial and bona fide 22 doubt regarding a defendant's competence. Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. at 385; Miles v. Stainer, 23 108 F.3d 1109, 1112 (9th Cir. 1997) (“Due process requires a trial court to hold a competency 24 hearing sua sponte whenever the evidence before it raises a reasonable doubt whether a defendant 25 26 27 28

1 is mentally competent”); Stanley v. Cullen, 633 F.3d at 860 (competency hearing not required 2 unless substantial evidence of incompetence raises “bona fide” doubt whether defendant is 3 competent to stand trial). This obligation exists irrespective of whether defense counsel seeks a 4 hearing. See Odle v. Woodford, 238 F.3d at 1087 (stating that “a trial judge must conduct a 5 competency hearing whenever the evidence before him raises a bona fide doubt about the 6 defendant's competence to stand trial, even if defense counsel does not ask for one”).

8 In reviewing whether a state trial judge should have ordered a competency evaluation, a 9 federal court may consider only the evidence that was before the trial judge. United States v.
10 Lewis, 991 F.2d 524, 527 (9th Cir. 1993). Although no particular facts signal a defendant's 11 incompetence, suggestive evidence includes the defendant's demeanor before the trial judge, 12 irrational behavior, and available medical evaluations of the defendant's competence to stand trial.
13 Drope v. Missouri, 420 U.S. at 180; Miles v. Stainer, 108 F.3d at 1112. A state appellate court's 14 finding that no competency hearing was required is a factual determination entitled to deference 15 unless it is unreasonable within the meaning of § 2254(d)(2). Mendez v. Knowles, 556 F.3d 757, 16 771 (9th Cir. 2009); Davis v. Woodford, 384 F.3d at 644.
17

18 “Counsel's failure to move for a competency hearing violates the defendant's right to 19 effective assistance of counsel when ‘there are sufficient indicia of incompetence to give 20 objectively reasonable counsel reason to doubt the defendant's competency, and there is a 21 reasonable probability that the defendant would have been found incompetent to stand trial had 22 the issue been raised and fully considered.’” Stanley v. Cullen, 633 F.3d at 862 (citation 23 omitted); Hibbler v. Benedetti, 693 F.3d at 1149–50.

Procedural Due Process

Despite Petitioner’s characterization of a record “replete” with evidence that Petitioner suffered “serious abuse,” the record reveals otherwise. In fact, the record before Judge Lewis could be characterized as one involving minor complaints about missing shower or shaving privileges, and phone or exercise privileges, in the absence of any evidence that those instances -- or even the one counsel raised on March 28, 1989, alleging an assault by jail staff<sup>65</sup> -- interfered with Petitioner’s ability to consult with counsel with a reasonable degree of rational understanding, or his ability to understand the proceedings against him. Godinez v. Moran, 509 U.S. at 396; Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. at 385; Odle v. Woodford, 238 F.3d at 1087.

The California Supreme Court, reviewing the record as it existed before Judge Lewis, could have reasonably concluded that a competency hearing was not required because Petitioner did not show there was a substantial and bona fide doubt regarding his competence. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101; Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. at 385. Petitioner cannot show that the California Supreme Court’s denial of this claim “was so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.” Richter, at 103.

Substantive Due Process

With a focus on whether the defendant was actually incompetent, a review of the record again supports the California Supreme Court’s adjudication of the claim, even considering the evidence presented to that court during habeas proceedings, as addressed below.

_____

<sup>65</sup> A careful review of the record reveals that Mr. Holmes advised the court that Petitioner “was a victim of an assault last night” (9 RT 1738), never referencing jail staff. Petitioner himself advised the trial court that jail staff “assaulted” him, that comment seeming to take Mr. Holmes by surprise. (See 9 RT 1739.)

Counsels' Declarations

Petitioner often repeats the assertion that trial counsel should have been aware of his incompetence because counsel were “alerted” to the issue in various ways. Mr. Holmes’ September 1999 declaration addresses this notion:

Claim TT, the claim of abuse and harassment in the Sacramento County jail. I have little or no recollection of this. I do know, from this trial and previous trials in front of Judge Lewis, that he has “taken-on” the Sheriff’s Office much more than any other trial judge. I also observed no physical evidence of the claims Mr. Alvarez is now making - - injuries inflicted by the jail staff, lack of sleep attributed to the jail staff, or an unshaven appearance in court because the jail staff prevented him from shaving.

(ECF No. 302, Vol. XXVI, Ex. 136 at 5258 (italics added).) Notably, neither Mr. Gable’s declaration of November 2004 nor his declaration of April 2009 make any mention of an issue relative to Petitioner’s competence, nor any mention of harassment or abuse to Petitioner by jail staff. (ECF No. 302, Vol XXII, Ex. 63 & ECF No. 320, Ex. 160.)

Because “defense counsel will often have the best-informed view of the defendant's ability to participate in his defense,” Medina v. California, 505 U.S. at 450, Mr. Holmes’ declaration strongly supports the conclusion that Petitioner was competent and that there was no reason that a reasonable trial judge would have entertained a bona fide doubt as to Petitioner's competence. See Stanley v. Cullen, 633 F.3d at 861 (“Trial counsel's assurances to the court are relevant because ‘a defendant's counsel is in the best position to evaluate a client's comprehension of the proceedings’“ [citation omitted]); Brown v. Boyde, 404 F.3d at 1167 (most telling evidence petitioner was competent at trial was that defense counsel did not even hint that petitioner might be incompetent); Williams v. Woodford, 384 F.3d at 608 (“We find especially relevant defense counsel's opinion that Williams was competent to stand trial”); Hernandez v. Ylst, 930 F.2d 714, 718 (9th Cir. 1991) (“Hernandez's own counsel stated that Hernandez was competent. While the

1 opinion of Hernandez's counsel certainly is not determinative, a defendant's counsel is in the best 2 position to evaluate a client's comprehension of the proceedings”).

3 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded that Petitioner was not 4 incompetent given Mr. Holmes’ informed view of Petitioner and his abilities to comprehend the 5 proceedings. Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-03.

7 Defense Investigator Robert Wilcox

8 Exhibits 53 and 54 pertain to defense investigator Robert Wilcox and his experience 9 during a visit to Petitioner wherein he was subjected to a search of his person, and an undated 10 transcript of a conversation Wilcox had with Petitioner. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Exs. 53-54.)

11 The California Supreme Court could have reasonably concluded the exhibits do not speak 12 to any lack of competence on Petitioner’s part. In fact, Exhibit 54 is the lengthy conversation 13 between Wilcox and Petitioner that references a “shoulder sprain” having been diagnosed by a 14 physician at the jail and some back pain. It also chronicles Petitioner’s complaints about housing 15 or cell moves, tier “shakedowns,” the staff “messing” with his legal paperwork, their bad attitudes 16 and Petitioner’s numerous denials that he caused any of the problems of which he complained. In 17 Petitioner’s opinion, the jail staff were “picking on” him due to his having befriended a “white 18 supremacist” or “A.B.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 54.) In Exhibit 53, particularly regarding 19 Petitioner, investigator Wilcox’s letter to defense attorneys Holmes and Gable references 20 Petitioner complaining of “a very bad headache,” Petitioner’s frustration regarding a lack of 21 access to his notes, and being “bothered so much by jail officers that he cannot concentrate on 22 anything regarding his trying to help defend himself.” (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 53.) 23 24

25 Notably missing from this evidence is any indication that Petitioner complained to 26 investigator Wilcox that he was being subjected to repeated beatings by jail staff angry that he 27

28 ///

1 recalls an occasion wherein officers rushed into Petitioner's cell "and proceeded to beat him," 2 hearing "scuffling sounds" and "yelling and screaming." Jones declared Petitioner "never struck 3 back at the officers" like other inmates because he "never saw Manny do any of that." (ECF No.
4 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 48.) Mr. Jones' declaration, even if considered accurate, is lacking for 5 personal observation of any beating by jail staff. At most he witnessed Petitioner being dragged 6 from his cell. He had no personal knowledge of any "elevator ride" to which Petitioner may have 7 been subjected, and made only inferences, reasonable or otherwise, about the cause of reported 8 bruises and welts on Petitioner.

10 Mary Jones, Clay Jones' mother, declared that her son advised her "there was one inmate 11 who the guards hated," identifying that inmate as Petitioner. In telephone conversations with 12 Petitioner, he would cry; he told Ms. Jones the guard "beat him so bad that he couldn't take it and 13 he wanted to end his life." Ms. Jones visited Petitioner in jail and offered consolation and faith, 14 finding Petitioner to be "always sad and on the verge of tears" and not understanding "why the 15 guards beat and mistreated him." (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 49.) Ms. Jones did not witness 16 any abuse or mistreatment of Petitioner. Rather, she observed his demeanor, concluding he was 17 depressed and sad. Even assuming the truth of her declaration, it is not evidence of incompetence 18 to stand trial.
19

20 Thomas D. Richardson also served time at the Sacramento County Jail with Petitioner.
21 He declared the "guards were mean and very difficult to get along with," beating "everybody," 22 but in particular Petitioner; the guards "hated him because they believe that he had killed a cop."
23 Richardson recounted occasions wherein Petitioner's requests for phone privileges were ignored 24 or cut short, guards refused to "give him his legal mail" and would "constantly" yell at him in an 25 effort to "provoke Manny, but he would never fight them." He too saw guards enter Petitioner's 26 cell, observed him being dragged out, then heard screaming; he observed Petitioner's "face 27
28

1 lumped up” with cracked and bleeding lips and “eyes swollen.” Richardson declared the guards 2 harassed Petitioner by moving him to “different locations in the jail at all hours” a lot, causing 3 Petitioner to cry. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 50.) Taking Mr. Richardson’s declaration as true, 4 it too is lacking for personal observation of any beating by jail staff. At most he witnessed 5 Petitioner being dragged from his cell, and made only inferences, reasonable or otherwise, about 6 the cause of reported facial injuries to Petitioner.

8 Next, Marc Love served alongside Petitioner in both the old and new jails. Love declared 9 Petitioner was moved frequently, was “the target of constant harassment from the jail guards” 10 who “would try and create reasons to mess with” Petitioner. Love witnessed Petitioner being 11 made to stand with his face to the wall with “his hands down the front of his pants,” and being 12 poked in the head. Love claims the guards “were always messing with” Petitioner’s legal mail 13 and although they would bring Petitioner a phone, they would then “turn it off.” He also claims 14 guards made Petitioner “live in a very dirty cell” by refusing supplies or providing dirty linens, 15 and denying showers. Love also claims the guards interfered with Petitioner’s “food and 16 canteen;” he “heard the guards draw up their spit in their mouth and then spit it out” onto 17 Petitioner’s food tray. He claims the guards would not let Petitioner sleep by leaving the lights on 18 in his cell because Love could see the light coming through the bars of Petitioner’s cell. (ECF 19 No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 51.) Mr. Love’s declaration, even taken as true, is lacking for personal 20 observation of any beating by jail staff. He may have personally observed other actions, but none 21 that rises to the level a preponderance sufficient to overcome the presumption of competency.
22

23 Finally, Ralph Cutchens declared he was housed in the jail in 1989, “two cells down 24 from” Petitioner. He declares the guards “harassed” Petitioner by messing with his legal mail, 25 phone calls, and canteen orders; they provided him with dirty linens. The day after the incident 26 involving dirty linens, Cutchens observed “little bites” on Petitioner, who told him “the bites were 27
28

1 from crabs that were in the sheets.” The guards also left the light on in Petitioner’s cell and 2 “would mess” with him when he unscrewed it. He reported seeing Petitioner “after the guards 3 beat on him after going into his cell in the middle of the night.” He also declared observing “five 4 guards” rush out of the control booth and into Petitioner’s cell; when Cutchens tried to “help 5 Manny out,” he was told to stay out of it. The guards beat up Manny,” he declared and indicated 6 he observed Petitioner bloody and “beaten all over his face” “for no reason.” On another 7 occasion, Cutchens believes guards splashed the contents of a mop bucket into Petitioner’s cell 8 that “smelled like piss and rotten food” because he “heard the splash” “at about 3 in the 9 morning.” Further, Cutchens claims the guards beat him up for defending Petitioner on one 10 occasion, taking him “out to the handball court because there was a blind spot from the cameras” 11 in that area. (ECF No. 302, Vol. XXI, Ex. 52.) Mr. Cutchens’ declaration, even taken as true, is 12 lacking for personal observation of any beating of Petitioner by jail staff, despite any inferences 13 that can be made. He may have personally observed other actions, but none of those personal 14 observations rises to the level of a preponderance sufficient to overcome the presumption of 15 competency.
16

18 Overall, the inmate declarations are unpersuasive for reasons other than the lack of 19 personal observation of any physical assault. The declarants also make numerous assumptions 20 about intent on behalf of jail staff. Significantly, their descriptions of physical injuries to 21 Petitioner are in direct conflict with both the trial record and attorney Holmes’ declaration. In 22 other words, Holmes declared he never observed physical injuries on or to Petitioner during the 23 trial; Gable did not allege otherwise. And the trial record itself is silent in this regard – no party 24 or participant ever noted any injuries to Petitioner’s face, and the record establishes that Petitioner 25 had no difficulty making his various complaints or requests known to the court during the trial 26 27

28 ///

1 give attorneys Holmes and/or Gable a reason to doubt Petitioner's competence to stand trial, and 2 there was no reasonable probability that Petitioner would have been found incompetent to stand 3 trial had attorneys Holmes and/or Gable renewed the original motion. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 4 687-88, 694; Stanley v. Cullen, 633 F.3d at 862; Hibbler v. Benedetti, 693 F.3d at 1149-50.

6 Finally, any allegation that the California Supreme Court's adjudication rests upon an 7 unreasonable determination of the facts is not persuasive. The facts before that court, for the 8 reasons explained above, do not require relief be granted.

9 Conclusion

10 In conclusion, the trial court did not have a sua sponte duty to hold a competency hearing 11 because there was no evidence before it giving rise to a substantial and bona fide doubt regarding 12 Petitioner's competence. Moreover, Petitioner was not convicted while legally incompetent in 13 violation of his substantive due process rights. Lastly, trial counsel were not ineffective for 14 failing to renew an original challenge. The California Supreme Court's adjudication of was 15 neither contrary to, nor did it involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent.
16 Nor did it rest upon any unreasonable determination of facts. 28 U.S.C § 2254(d). As a result, 17 Petitioner is not entitled to relief and the undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim TT be 18 DENIED.
19

20 21 Claim Z: Improper Fact-Finding in Penalty Phase

22 Petitioner asserts he was deprived of his constitutional rights to due process and a reliable 23 sentencing proceeding when the trial court refused to instruct the jury not to consider any guilt-24 phase evidence after two guilt-phase jurors were replaced with alternates during the penalty 25 phase. (ECF No. 330 at 581-82.) Respondent contends the California Supreme Court's 26 adjudication of this claim was not contrary to, nor an unreasonable application of, controlling 27 Supreme Court precedent. (ECF No. 345 at 337-39.)
28

1           The claim was presented to the state’s highest court both on direct appeal and in state 2 habeas; therefore, it is exhausted for this court’s purposes.

3                           The California Supreme Court’s Determination

4           On direct appeal, the California Supreme Court held the following:

5                           In the course of the penalty phase, the superior court discharged two of the jurors 6 who had sat on the jury when it rendered its verdicts and made its findings at the guilt 7 phase, and put two alternates in their place. By stipulation of the People and defendant, it 8 discharged one because of unavoidable scheduling conflicts. By necessity, it discharged 9 the other because of death.

10                          Defendant moved the superior court to instruct the jury not to consider the guilt 11 phase evidence. He relied on Penal Code section 190.4, subdivision (d), which provides 12 that, “[i]n any case in which the defendant may be subject to the death penalty, evidence 13 presented at any prior phase of the trial ... shall be considered at any subsequent phase of 14 the trial, if the trier of fact of the prior phase is the same trier of fact at the subsequent 15 phase.” The superior court refused.

16                          Defendant contends that the superior court erred thereby.

17                          Against a claim of this kind, which involves the determination of applicable legal 18 principles, an appellate court reviews a trial court’s instruction independently.

19                          After such review, we find no error. Penal Code section 190.4, subdivision (d), 20 declares in substance that, if the trier of fact at the penalty phase is the same as that at the 21 guilt phase, it must consider the guilt phase evidence. Here, the trier of fact at the penalty 22 phase was the same as that at the guilt phase. It was a jury. Indeed, it was the same jury: it 23 was not rendered otherwise by the substitution of jurors with alternates. (See People v.
24 Green (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 524, 528.) It therefore had to consider the guilt phase 25 evidence. Had it been instructed not to, as requested by defendant, error would have been 26 committed.

27           People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 242-43.

28                           Applicable Legal Standards

          The defendant in a criminal case in which the punishment is within the discretion of the trial jury “has a substantial and legitimate expectation that he will be deprived of his liberty only to the extent determined by the jury in the exercise of its statutory discretion, and that liberty interest is one that the Fourteenth Amendment preserves against arbitrary deprivation by the State.” Hicks v. Oklahoma, 447 U.S. 343, 346 (1980) (citations omitted).

          California Penal Code § 190.4 provides, in relevant part:

1 (c) If the trier of fact which convicted the defendant of a crime for which he may 2 be subject to the death penalty was a jury, the same jury shall consider any plea of not 3 guilty by reason of insanity pursuant to Section 1026, the truth of any special 4 circumstances which may be alleged, and the penalty to be applied, unless for good cause 5 shown the court discharges that jury in which case a new jury shall be drawn. The court 6 shall state facts in support of the finding of good cause upon the record and cause them to 7 be entered into the minutes.

8 (d) In any case in which the defendant may be subject to the death penalty, 9 evidence presented at any prior phase of the trial, including any proceeding under a plea 10 of not guilty by reason of insanity pursuant to Section 1026 shall be considered an any 11 subsequent phase of the trial, if the trier of fact of the prior phase is the same trier of fact 12 at the subsequent phase.

13 In People v. Green, 15 Cal.App.3d 524, 528 (1971), the Fifth District Court of Appeal 14 noted that “the substitution of an alternate juror for one of the original jurors does not change the 15 character of the jury,” noting too “that a verdict by 12 jurors, one of whom was originally an 16 alternative juror, is a verdict of the jury originally sworn to try the case.” Id., at 528 (internal 17 quotation marks omitted). The court in Green found no error where “the trial judge excused one 18 of the original jurors at her request from attendance during the sanity and penalty phases of the 19 trial on the basis that she was moving from the State of California.” Id., at 529.

20 Analysis

21 The undersigned is bound by the California Supreme Court’s interpretation of California 22 Penal Code § 190.4. Bradshaw v. Richey, 546 U.S. 74, 76 (2005) (federal court is bound by “a 23 state court’s interpretation of state law”). It expressly held the statute requires consideration of 24 the guilt phase evidence by the “same jury” and that a jury comprised of alternate members in the 25 penalty phase is in fact the “same jury” as that comprised in the guilt phase. Considering the 26 absence of error here, Petitioner cannot show an “arbitrary deprivation” by the trial court’s action.
27 Hicks v. Oklahoma, 447 US. at 346.

28 The undersigned did not identify any Supreme Court precedent, nor did the parties reference any, requiring a penalty phase jury to be comprised of the exact same persons or jurors that comprised the guilty phase jury, requiring the elimination of an aggravating factor or a 1 redetermination where alternates are required to be employed between the two phases of trial.

2 The Seventh and Eleventh Circuits have addressed somewhat similar issues in the context of 3 federal statutes. United States v. Johnson, 223 F.3d 665, 669-71 (7th Cir. 2000); Battle v. United 4 States, 419 F.3d 1292, 1301-02 (11th Cir. 2005). Both circuits concluded the district court’s 5 substitution of an alternate for penalty phase deliberations did not violate the Federal Death 6 Penalty Act. Johnson, 223 F.3d at 670; Battle, 419 F.3d at 1302. Notably, the Johnson court 7 opined that “the issues of guilt and punishment are sufficiently distinct that the alternate didn’t 8 have to hear the [guilt phase] deliberations ... in order to be able to participate meaningfully in 9 the [penalty phase] deliberations .... [The alternate] had sat through the entire trial which is the 10 important thing.” Johnson, 223 F.3d at 670. As the Ohio Supreme Court noted in State v.
11 Hutton, 53 Ohio St. 3d 36, 47, 559 N.E.2d 432, 445 (1990):

14 although the issue of guilt or innocence is relevant to sentencing, it is not the only issue in 15 the penalty phase, as it is in the guilt phase. [A] defendant can avoid the death penalty 16 even though the trier of fact does not doubt his guilt at all. [Citation.] With regard to the 17 evidence and arguments adduced in the penalty phase, an alternative juror who was 18 present through the trial and during the whole of the penalty deliberations would be able 19 to take as full and productive a part in those deliberations as any of the original jurors. The 20 substitution “does not change the character of the jury.” [Citation.] Thus, the Fields court 21 “recognize[d] that unforeseen circumstances may require substitution of a juror at the 22 penalty phase of a capital trial, even though the alternate did not take part in the guilt 23 phase deliberations.” [People v.] Fields, [35 Cal.3d 329], 351, 197 Cal.Rptr. [803], 817, 24 673 P.2d [680], 693, fn. 9 [(1983)], citing Green, [15 Cal.App.3d 524].

25 In any event, the California Supreme Court’s adjudication cannot be said to be contrary to, 26 or an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. The California Supreme Court 27 could have reasonably concluded that the trial court’s denial of Petitioner’s motion pursuant to 28 California Penal Code § 190.4(d) (31 RT 6829-31, 6975) did not arbitrarily deprive Petitioner of an important state procedural protection in violation of his due process rights and liberty interests.
Hicks v. Oklahoma, 447 U.S. at 346. Nor did it violate the Eighth Amendment by lessening the required heightened reliability in sentencing based on the evidence contained in the record.

1 Johnson v. Mississippi, 486 U.S. 578, 584 (1988). 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d); Richter, 562 U.S. at 101, 2 103. Thus, the undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim Z be DENIED.

3 Claim AA: Use of Rape as an Aggravating Circumstance

4 In this claim, Petitioner maintains the trial court erred by allowing the jury to consider the 5 rape as a circumstance of the capital crime under California Penal Code § 190.3(a), violating his 6 Eighth Amendment rights and requiring reversal of the penalty. (ECF No. 330 at 582-83.)
7 Respondent replies that the California Supreme Court’s denial of his claim was not unreasonable 8 or contrary to Supreme Court precedent, precluding any relief. (ECF No. 345 at 339-41.)

10 By presenting his claim on direct appeal and in a subsequent state habeas petition, 11 Petitioner has exhausted the claim for this court’s consideration.

12 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

13
14 On direct appeal, the California Supreme Court held as follows:

15 In accordance with the pattern instruction set out as CALJIC No. 8.85 (5th ed.
16 1988)—and ultimately with Penal Code section 190.3—the superior court told the jury 17 that, in choosing between the penalty of death and life imprisonment without possibility of 18 parole, it should be guided by certain factors, if applicable, including “[t]he circumstances 19 of the crime of which the defendant was convicted in the present proceeding....”

20 Defendant contends that the superior court erred by delivering its instruction on 21 the “circumstances of the crime.”

22 Here too, against a claim that involves the determination of applicable legal 23 principles, an appellate court reviews a trial court’s instruction independently.

24 Here too, we find no error. Penal Code section 190.3 impliedly requires a superior 25 court to instruct “on any factor that is applicable on the record of the individual case” 26 (People v. Marshall (1990) 50 Cal.3d 907, 932–33 (italics omitted)—which always and 27 everywhere includes the “circumstances of the crime.” The superior court here complied.

28 [FN] 39. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court committed error under California law, it thereby committed error under the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, the superior court did not commit error under California law.

Defendant argues that the superior court should have clarified its instruction on the “circumstances of the crime” (1) to specify that the “crime” referred to was the capital offense involving the murder of Allen Birkman, and (2) to state<sup>[40]</sup> that its “circumstances” did not embrace the rape of Sandra S., which was assertedly unrelated.

1 Had he desired such a clarification, he should have requested it of the superior court. He 2 made no request of this sort below. Hence, he may not raise a complaint here.

3 [FN] 40. Contrary to certain—unobjected-to—comments in the 4 prosecutor’s summation.

5 [FN] 41. Pursuant to Penal Code section 190.3, the Stramaglia rape was 6 relevant to one or the other of two issues material to the question of penalty, viz., 7 the “nature and circumstances of the present [capital] offense”—if it was deemed 8 related thereto—or the “presence or absence of other criminal activity by the 9 defendant which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or which 10 involved the express or implied threat to use force or violence”—if it was not so 11 deemed. Pursuant to that same provision, it could be considered under one or the 12 other of two parallel factors, viz., the “circumstances of the crime of which the 13 defendant was convicted in the present proceeding ...” and the “presence or 14 absence of criminal activity by the defendant which involved the use or attempted 15 use of force or violence or the express or implied threat to use force or violence.” 16 Had the superior court’s instructions suggested otherwise, they would have been 17 erroneous—against the People, and not defendant.

18 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 243-44.

19 Analysis

20 During the penalty phase, the jury was instructed pursuant to CALJIC No. 8.85 regarding 21 factors for its consideration. (6 CT 1353-54; 31 RT 6859-62.) On direct review, the California 22 Supreme Court concluded the giving of the instruction without modification or clarification was 23 not error. Its finding is binding here. Bradshaw v. Richey, 546 U.S. at 76.

24 In California, imposing the death penalty on a criminal defendant requires a determination 25 of death eligibility and an additional death qualification judgment performed by the factfinder.
26 For death-eligibility, a jury must not only convict a defendant of a charged first-degree murder for 27 which the death penalty is a proportionate punishment, but also must additionally find at least one 28 of the special circumstances enumerated in California Penal Code § 190.2 to be true. See Tuilaepa v. California, 512 U.S. at 972. If the jury does so, the trial proceeds to a penalty phase where the jury must then take a separate list of sentencing factors into consideration under California Penal Code § 190.3 and make an individualized determination of the punishment based on considerations including the circumstances of the crime as well as the defendant's history and

1 character. Id. at 972–73. In fact, the 1978 California statute is also comparable in composition 2 and effect to several state statutes upheld as constitutional by the United States Supreme Court.
3 See Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153 (1976); Profitt v. Florida, 428 U.S. 242 (1976); Jurek v.
4 Texas, 428 U.S. 262 (1976) (capital statutes found to sufficiently narrow the class of defenders 5 eligible for the death penalty through either aggravating factors or by the definition of capital 6 offenses, properly considered mitigation, and guided the discretion of the sentencer).<sup>66</sup> California 7 juries are “free to consider a myriad of factors to determine whether death is the appropriate 8 punishment.” California v. Ramos, 463 U.S. 992, 1008 (1983).

10 Even if the trial court erred as alleged, the California Supreme Court reasonably could 11 have found the error was not prejudicial because it did not have a substantial and injurious effect 12 or influence in determining the jury’s verdict. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637. The aggravating evidence 13 presented by the prosecution even without the challenged “circumstances of the crime” factor as 14 it related to subdivision (a) of section 190.3, included many relevant and proper factors for the 15 jury’s consideration under subdivision (b) concerning Petitioner’s “use of force or violence.”

17 Ultimately, because California’s statutory scheme is constitutional, and because the rape 18 could be properly considered pursuant to that section, Petitioner cannot show a “reasonable

23 that are labeled neither as mitigating nor as aggravating.... [T]he jury itself must determine the 24 side of the balance on which each listed factor falls”); Harris v. Pulley, 465 U.S. at 51, 52 n.14 25 (“Assuming that there could be a capital sentencing system so lacking in other checks on 26 arbitrariness that it would not pass constitutional muster without comparative proportionality

28 does not separate aggravating and mitigating circumstances”); Williams v. Calderon, 52 F.3d 1465, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995) (holding that the 1977 statute’s “failure to label aggravating and mitigating factors is constitutional”); Babbitt v. Calderon, 151 F.3d at 1178 (rejecting a California habeas petitioner’s argument that the trial court’s instruction to the jury on the current California death penalty statute “was erroneous because the jury was not specifically told which factors it could consider as extenuating”).

1 likelihood that the jury has applied the challenged instruction in a way that prevents the 2 consideration of constitutionally relevant evidence.” Boyde v. Brown, 494 U.S. at 380.

3 The California Supreme Court’s adjudication of this claim is not contrary to, nor does it 4 involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).
5 Accordingly, the undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim AA be DENIED.

7 Claim CC: Prosecutorial Misconduct in Penalty-Phase Closing Argument

8 Petitioner asserts his due process right to a fair trial was violated by certain comments 9 made by the prosecutor during closing argument in the penalty phase. (ECF No. 330 at 583-84.)
10 Respondent maintains the California Supreme Court’s rejection of the claim “was not at all 11 unreasonable or contrary to Supreme Court precedent,” precluding habeas relief. (ECF No. 345 12 at 341-42.)

13
14 By presenting his claim on direct appeal and in a subsequent state habeas petition, 15 Petitioner has exhausted the claim for this court’s consideration.

16 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

17 On direct appeal, the California Supreme Court held as follows:

18 In the course of his summation, the prosecutor made comments characterizing 19 defendant, including remarks to the effect that he was a “creep,” was worse than a 20 “predator[ ]” because he “enjoy[ed] ... unnecessary violence,” was “your worst nightmare, 21 ... society’s worst nightmare.” Defendant objected to such comments as “disparaging.”
22 Finding in substance that the remarks were not “[i]nflaming the jury,” the superior court 23 overruled the objection.

24 Defendant contends in substance that the superior court erred by effectively 25 determining that the prosecutor did not commit misconduct.

26 As a general matter, an appellate court reviews a trial court’s ruling on 27 prosecutorial misconduct for abuse of discretion.

28 There was no such abuse here. The superior court was not unreasonable in effectively determining that the prosecutor did not commit misconduct. For it was not unreasonable in impliedly finding that he did not use any method of persuasion that may be deemed deceptive or reprehensible, including inflammatory comments. Such remarks as those quoted above did indeed characterize defendant in negative terms. Although perhaps unnecessarily colorful, they were consistent with the evidence. Hence, they were not improper. (See, e.g., People v. Berryman, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1076.) Defendant 1 argues that “the prosecutor in fact was testifying on behalf of his recommendation of 2 death.” The assertion is unsupported. It may be rejected out of hand.

3 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 241-42.

4 Applicable Legal Standards

5 In California, prosecutors are generally granted broad leeway in arguing their case to the 6 jury and may even use “such epithets as are warranted by the evidence, as long as these 7 arguments are not inflammatory and principally aimed at arousing the passion and prejudice of 8 the jury.” People v. Tully, 54 Cal.4th 952, 1021 (2012). As the Tully court explained, “a 9 prosecutor is not ‘required to discuss his [or her] view of the case in clinical or detached detail,’” 10 and “the use of derogatory epithets to describe a defendant is not necessarily misconduct.” Id.
11 at 1021; see, e.g., People v. Friend, 47 Cal.4th 1, 32 (2009) (defendant described as “living like a 12 mole or the rat that he is”); People v. Young, 34 Cal.4th 1149, 1195 (2005) (no misconduct 13 where prosecutor characterized crimes as “serial killing,” & “terrorizing and killing” people 14 [italics omitted]); People v. Jones, 17 Cal.4th 279, 308–09 (1998) (no ineffective assistance of 15 counsel for failure to object to prosecutor's characterization of defendant's crime as a “terrorist 16 attack” and comparison of defendant to “[t]errorists”); People v. Pensinger, 52 Cal.3d 1210, 17 1250–51 (1991) (no misconduct where prosecutor referred to defendant as a “perverted 18 maniac”). Relying on these cases, the Tully court found no misconduct in the prosecutor's 19 statements referring to the defendant as “a despicable excuse for a man,” a “despicable 20 individual,” “garbage” and “a sucker.” Id. at 1021.

21
23 The United States Supreme Court has made clear that prosecutors must “refrain from 24 improper methods calculated to produce a wrongful conviction.” Berger v. United States, 295 25 U.S. 78, 88 (1935). To prevail on a claim of prosecutorial misconduct, a habeas petitioner must 26 demonstrate that the prosecutor's conduct or remarks “so infected the trial with unfairness as to 27 make the resulting conviction a denial of due process.” Donnelly v. DeChristoforo, 416 U.S. at 28

1 643; see also Darden v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. at 181; Parker v. Matthews, 567 U.S. at 45 2 (confirming that Donnelly/Darden is the proper standard). And, because “the Darden standard is 3 a very general one,” courts have “more leeway...in reaching outcomes in case-by-case 4 determinations.” Parker, 567 U.S. at 48 (internal quotation marks omitted).

6 Assuming a petitioner can establish that the prosecutor engaged in misconduct, habeas 7 relief nevertheless is unwarranted unless the petitioner can show that the misconduct had a 8 substantial and injurious impact on the jury’s verdict. Karis v. Calderon, 283 F.3d at 1128 (citing 9 Brecht, 507 U.S. at 638).

10 Analysis

11 Despite his claims, a review of the portions of the record about which Petitioner 12 complains of amount to prosecutorial misconduct (31 RT 6898-907) actually finds support for the 13 California Supreme Court’s holding.
14

15 The prosecutor’s comments during his closing argument of the penalty phase (31 RT 16 6883-929) were all comments upon and consistent with the evidence adduced at trial. As a result, 17 those comments did not “so infect the trial with unfairness” so as to deny Petitioner due process.
18 Donnelly, 416 U.S. at 643; Darden, 477 U.S. at 181; see also Parker, 567 U.S. at 45, 48.

19 Even assuming for the sake of argument the comments amounted to misconduct, 20 Petitioner cannot establish that the prosecutor’s remarks had a substantial and injurious impact on 21 the jury’s verdict. The jury considered evidence that established Petitioner killed an unarmed 22 man in an attempt to rob him of funds withdrawn from an ATM, robbed and assaulted an 23 unarmed elderly woman, and prior to those crimes raped a woman and stole a vehicle in an effort 24 to escape that crime. The jury also properly considered Petitioner’s earlier convictions for 25 voluntary manslaughter, assault with a deadly weapon, and escape without force. Hearing the 26 27

28 ///

1 prosecutor use derogatory comments or names would have had little impact in comparison to the 2 aforementioned evidence. Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637.

3 In sum, the California Supreme Court’s adjudication of this claim was neither contrary to, 4 nor an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). Accordingly, 5 the undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim CC be DENIED.

7 Claim DD: Improper Denial of Motion to Modify Sentence

8 Petitioner argues the trial court misconstrued the evidence and the law governing his 9 automatic motion for modification of sentence, resulting in a deprivation of his constitutional 10 rights to due process and a reliable sentencing proceeding. (ECF No. 330 at 585-87.) In contrast, 11 Respondent avers the California Supreme Court’s rejection of this claim was neither contrary to, 12 nor did it involve an unreasonable application of, Supreme Court precedent. (ECF No. 345 at 13 342-44.)
14

15 The state’s highest court rejected Petitioner’s claim on direct appeal and again in state 16 habeas proceedings. Thus, it is exhausted for this court’s consideration.

17 The California Supreme Court’s Determination

18 In considering Petitioner’s argument, the California Supreme Court determined as 19 follows:
20

21 Defendant made an application for modification of the verdict of death under 22 Penal Code section 190.4, subdivision (e). After a hearing, the superior court denied the request.

23 Defendant contends that the superior court erred thereby.

24 We review a superior court’s ruling on a verdict-modification application independently. (E.g., People v. Berryman, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1106.)

25 After such review, we find no error. The superior court did all it was required to do. That is to say, it effectively “review[ed] the evidence”; “consider[ed], [took] into 26 account, and [was] guided by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances”; “ma[d]e a determination” that “the jury’s findings and verdicts” were not “contrary to law or the evidence presented”; “state[d] on the record the reasons for [its] findings,” and also “set 27 forth the reasons for [its] ruling” and “direct[ed] that they be entered on the Clerk’s minutes” (Pen.Code, § 190.4, subd. (e)).
28

1 In arguing to the contrary, defendant makes a “formal” challenge. He attacks on 2 four fronts.

3 First, defendant asserts that, before making its ruling on his verdict-modification 4 application, the superior court read a probation report, and thereby failed to anticipate our 5 statement in People v. Lewis (1990) 50 Cal.3d 262, 287, that the “preferable procedure” is 6 not to do so. But we presume that it was not improperly influenced by the report. (E.g., 7 People v. Berryman, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1106.) Our presumption is not rebutted by 8 anything in the record on appeal.

9 Second, defendant asserts that, in making its ruling on his verdict-modification 10 application, the superior court undertook to independently determine whether the penalty 11 of death was appropriate, and did in fact so determine, instead of simply proceeding to 12 assess whether the jury’s choice was contrary to the law or the evidence. He is right in 13 stating that such an assessment is required and that an independent determination of this 14 sort is not called for. (E.g., People v. Berryman, supra, 6 Cal.4th at pp. 1105–06.) He is 15 wrong, however, in implying that he has any cause for complaint. For if we assume, as he 16 claims, that the superior court undertook to independently determine that the penalty of 17 death was appropriate, and did in fact so determine, we must conclude that it necessarily 18 found that the jury’s choice was not contrary to the law or the evidence.

19 Third, defendant asserts that, in making its ruling on his verdict-modification 20 application, the superior court “review[ed] the evidence” (Pen.Code, § 190.4, subd. (e)) in 21 an improper manner. He says that it was required to, but did not, “employ the same type 22 of analysis the jury would have done [sic] under the instructions.” He fails to provide any 23 support for the existence of such a requirement. We find none. To the extent that he 24 maintains that it could not consider the evidence of the rape of Sandra S. or the robbery of 25 Greta Slatten, he is incorrect. Indeed, in his verdict-modification application, he expressly 26 conceded that it could. Correctly so. The Sandra S. rape and the Slatten robbery were each 27 relevant to one or the other of two issues material to the question of penalty under Penal 28 Code section 190.3, viz., the “nature and circumstances of the present [capital] offense”— if it was deemed related thereto—or the “presence or absence of other criminal activity by the defendant which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or which involved the express or implied threat to use force or violence”—if it was not so deemed.

[FN] 42. See footnote 41, ante.

Fourth, defendant asserts that, in making its ruling on his verdict-modification application, the superior court was not sufficiently specific in the “reasons” it “state[d]” and “set forth” (Pen.Code, § 190.4, subd. (e)). It was. The proof is apparent on the face of the record on appeal: the reporter’s transcript contains six pages of “reasons,” and the clerk’s transcript incorporates them by reference.

In addition to his “formal” challenge, defendant makes a “substantive” challenge.
He attacks on only a single front.

Defendant asserts that the superior court’s ruling on his verdict-modification application is unsound as a matter of law. He says that the evidence is insufficient to support the finding of the felony-murder-robbery special circumstance, on which death eligibility rests. We have concluded to the contrary. (See, ante, at p. 428–29.)

[FN] 43. Defendant claims in substance that, because the superior court committed error under California law by denying his verdict-modification

1 application, it thereby committed error under the Eighth and Fourteenth 2 Amendments to the United States Constitution. As explained in the text, the 3 superior court did not commit error under California law.

4 People v. Alvarez, 14 Cal.4th at 244-46.

5 Analysis

6 Initially, it is noted the California Supreme Court’s decision is binding here as it involves 7 a state law determination. Bradshaw v. Richey, 546 U.S. at 76. Hence, Petitioner’s procedural 8 due process argument is a non-starter. Id.; Hicks v. Oklahoma, 447 U.S. at 343.

9 California Penal Code § 190.4(e) provides:

10 11 In every case in which the trier of fact has returned a verdict or finding imposing 12 the death penalty, the defendant shall be deemed to have made an application for 13 modification of such verdict or finding pursuant to Subdivision 7 of Section 11.[] In ruling 14 on the application, the judge shall review the evidence, consider, take into account, and be 15 guided by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances referred to in Section 190.3, and 16 shall make a determination as to whether the jury’s findings and verdicts that the 17 aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances are contrary to law or 18 the evidence presented. The judge shall state on the record the reasons for his findings.

19 On September 14, 1989, the trial court considered Petitioner’s application or modification 20 of the jury’s verdict imposing death. (6 CT 1480-82; see also 6 CT 1408-19 [defense motion for 21 new trial or reduction of penalty].)

22 A review of the relevant reporter’s transcript reveals the trial court complied with the 23 applicable California statute by reviewing and considering “the evidence” and that it was “guided 24 by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances referred to in Section 190.3,” ultimately 25 determining the jury’s findings and verdicts that the aggravating circumstances outweighed those 26 in mitigation were in no way contrary to the law or the evidence it heard. (32 RT 7051-56.)

27 Further, the California Supreme Court’s specific holdings – (1) that the presumption the 28 trial court was not improperly influenced by the probation report is not rebutted by the record, (2) that even if the superior court undertook to independently determine whether the penalty was

1 appropriate versus assessing whether the jury's choice was contrary to the law or evidence, in so 2 doing it necessarily found the jury's choice as contrary to law or evidence, (3) that the trial court 3 did not improperly review the evidence pertaining to the rape and Slatten robbery because those 4 crimes were relevant for purposes of section 190.3, (4) that the trial court's ruling was sufficiently 5 specific; and finally, (5) that the superior court's ruling is sound as a matter of law because the 6 evidence in support of the felony-murder-robbery special circumstances is sufficiently supportive 7 – do not contravene the Sixth, Eighth or Fourteenth Amendments, or any holding of the United 8 States Supreme Court. See Pulley v. Harris, 465 U.S. at 51-54; Hicks v. Oklahoma, 447 U.S. at 9 343. Notably, no clearly established federal law requires that, in order to pass muster under the 10 Eighth Amendment, a state's death penalty scheme must provide independent review of the death 11 verdict by the trial judge.

12
14 In sum, the California Supreme Court adjudication of Petitioner's claim is neither contrary 15 to, nor an unreasonably application of, Supreme Court precedent. See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d); 16 Richter, 562 U.S. at 101, 103. The undersigned hereby RECOMMENDS that Claim DD be 17 DENIED.

18 19 Claim AAA: Ineffective Assistance of Appellate Counsel

20 In this claim, Petitioner alleges appellate counsel were ineffective “insofar as any of the 21 meritorious claims set forth in his petition were apparent from the record” where those claims 22 were not raised on direct appeal and were subsequently determined to be procedurally defaulted 23 on state habeas. (ECF No. 330 at 587-89.) Respondent maintains habeas relief must be denied 24 because the California Supreme Court's denial of the claim, in both his first and second state 25 habeas petitions, was not unreasonable or contrary to controlling Supreme Court precedent. (ECF 26 No. 345 at 345-46.) Claim AAA is exhausted for purposes of this court's consideration.

27
28 ////

1 882 F.2d 1428, 1434 (9th Cir. 1989). The relevant inquiry is not what counsel could have done;
2 rather, it is whether the choices made by counsel were reasonable. Babbitt v. Calderon, 151 F.3d 3 at 1173. Even if petitioner could demonstrate his appellate attorney acted unreasonably, he must 4 still show prejudice. Smith v. Robbins, 528 U.S. at 285–86. Habeas relief for ineffective 5 assistance of counsel may only be granted if the state-court decision unreasonably applied the 6 Strickland standard. Knowles v. Mirzayance, 556 U.S. at 122.

8 Analysis

9 Initially, to the degree Petitioner refers to Claims FF, PP and UU in support of the present 10 claim, the undersigned hereby incorporates his findings and recommendations as to Claims FF, 11 PP and UU.

12 Petitioner asserts he is entitled to relief because appointed counsel Terrence V. Scott and 13 Andrew E. Rubin failed to raise “any of the meritorious claims set forth in his” habeas petitions 14 presented to the California Supreme Court, wherein those claims were denied pursuant to In re 15 Dixon, 41 Cal.2d 756, 759 (1953). (ECF No. 345 at 587.) Notably, in his first state habeas 16 petition filed in the California Supreme Court, this claim read in its entirety: “Insofar as any of 17 the claims set forth in this petition were apparent from the record, appellate counsel was 18 ineffective in failing to raise them on the direct appeal.” In his second state habeas petition filed 19 with that court, the claim asserted, as follows, in its entirety: 20 21

22 Insofar as any of the meritorious claims set forth in this petition were apparent 23 from the record, appellate counsel was ineffective in failing to raise them on the direct 24 appeal. Appellate counsel’s performance was unreasonable, and Mr. Alvarez was 25 prejudiced by appellate counsel’s failure to raise issues properly for this Court’s review.
26 Such ineffective assistance of counsel violated Mr. Alvarez’s right to due process and 27 equal protection as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States 28 Constitution.

27 Significantly however, the claims identified by Petitioner in his points and authorities (S073670 28 [A, B, E, F, G, L M, O & S] & S146501 [L, HH, II, LL, MM, NN, QQ, SS, TT & YY]) were also

1 denied on their merits. Hence, even ignoring the conclusory nature of the claims as asserted, 2 Petitioner cannot establish ineffective assistance of appellate counsel where none of the claims 3 asserted in his state habeas petitions were meritorious. See, e.g., Miller v. Keeney, 882 F.2d at 4 1434, n.9 (petitioner must demonstrate that, but for counsel's errors, he probably would have 5 prevailed on appeal).

7 Here, Petitioner has failed to explain how, or to demonstrate that, appellate counsel would 8 have prevailed on any such claim on appeal had those claims been presented. Accordingly, his 9 claim of ineffective assistance of appellate counsel should be rejected on that basis alone. Jones 10 v. Gomez, 66 F.3d 199, 204 (9th<sup>h</sup> Cir. 1995); James v. Borg, 24 F.3d at 26.

11 In any event, given the insufficient showing of misconduct and prejudice, appellate 12 counsels' purported failure to raise certain issues on direct appeal did not constitute ineffective 13 assistance of counsel where those same issues were adjudicated to be without merit. Boag v.
14 Raines, 769 F.2d at 1344 (noting that failure to raise a meritless argument does not constitute 15 ineffective assistance). Hence, Petitioner has not shown that the state court's denial of the claim 16 "was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law."
17 See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1); Richter, 562 U.S. at 101, 103. As a result, the undersigned hereby 18 RECOMMENDS that Claim AAA be DENIED.

19 20 21 Claim CCC: Cumulative Error

22 Finally, Petitioner contends "the cumulative effect of all of the errors set forth in the 23 petition violated" his constitutional rights. He claims because the "summary denials of all of 24 petitioner's other claims" were unreasonable, it follows that this claim was also "unreasonably 25 rejected." (ECF No. 330 at 589.) On the other hand, Respondent maintains the California 26 Supreme Court's adjudication of this claim "reasonably concluded in accordance with Supreme 27 Court precedent, the cumulative effect of any errors did not deprive Petitioner of a fair trial" 28

1 where those claims were “either meritless or entirely harmless.” (ECF No. 345 at 346-47.) Claim 2 CCC was presented in both habeas petitions filed with the state’s highest court; hence, the claim 3 is exhausted.

4 Analysis

5 “While the combined effect of multiple errors may violate due process even when no 6 single error amounts to a constitutional violation or requires reversal, habeas relief is warranted 7 only where the errors infect a trial with unfairness.” Peyton v. Cullen, 658 F.3d at 896–97 (citing 8 Chambers v. Mississippi, 401 U.S. at 298, 302–03). Such “infection” occurs where the combined 9 effect of the errors had a “substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury’s 10 verdict.” Brecht, 507 U.S. at 623. In other words, where the combined effect of individually 11 harmless errors renders a criminal defense “far less persuasive than it might [otherwise] have 12 been,” the resulting conviction violates due process. See Chambers, 401 U.S. at 294.

13 As discussed throughout these finding and recommendations, however, Petitioner does not 14 allege any claims that amount to error, and thus he demonstrates no errors that can accumulate to 15 a level of a constitutional violation. See Mancuso v. Olivarez, 292 F.3d at 957. Accordingly, 16 Petitioner is not entitled to relief on his cumulative error claim. The undersigned hereby 17 RECOMMENDS that Claim CCC be DENIED.

18 Claims BB, MM & BBB

19 Petitioner concedes that Claims BB and MM – pertaining to penalty phase bias 20 instructions and the loss of peremptory challenges – do not satisfy § 2254 so as to entitle him to 21 federal habeas relief. Additionally, Petitioner elects to withdraw Claim B alleging incompetence 22 to be executed. (ECF No. 330 at 543-44.)

23 As to Claims BB, MM and BBB, the undersigned RECOMMENDS that Petitioner’s 24 concessions and withdrawal be accepted.

CONCLUSION

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that the second amended petition be DENIED as to Claims D, GG, FF, PP, UU, KK, XX, ZZ, II, JJ, G, RR, F, O, OO, SS, U, V, W, X, VV, YY, A, B, C, NN, E, LL, H, I, L, M, N, J, K, HH, P, Q, R, S, WW, T, Y, EE, QQ, TT, Z, AA, CC, DD, AAA and CCC.

IT IS HEREBY FURTHER RECOMMENDED that Petitioner’s concessions regarding Claims BB and MM, and withdrawal of Claim BBB, be accepted.

These findings and recommendations are submitted to the United States District Judge assigned to the case, pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). Within sixty days after being served with these findings and recommendations, any party may file written objections with the court and serve a copy on all parties. Such a document should be captioned “Objections to Magistrate Judge’s Findings and Recommendations.” The parties are advised that failure to file objections within the specified time may waive the right to appeal the District Court’s order. Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 1153 (9th Cir. 1991).
