UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

BYRON CHAPMAN,

Plaintiff,

v.

PIER 1 IMPORTS (U.S.), INC.,

Defendant.

NO. CIV. S-04-1339 LKK/DAD

O R D E R

Plaintiff brings claims under the Americans with Disabilities Act and California law challenging the accessibility of defendant public accommodation. Currently before the court is defendants motion to dismiss. For the reasons discussed below, defendants motion is granted in part and denied in part.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Plaintiff's Original (2004) Complaint

On July 13, 2004, plaintiff Byron Chapman ("plaintiff" or "Chapman") filed his original complaint against defendant Pier 1 Imports (U.S.). Inc. ("defendant" or "Pier 1"). Plaintiff alleged

1 that he "requires the use of a motorized wheelchair and a vehicle 2 with a lift system to transport his motorized wheelchair when 3 traveling . . . in public" due to a spinal cord injury. Compl., 4 Doc. No. 1, at ¶ 7. While plaintiff alleged that he encountered 5 architectural barriers that denied him full and equal access when 6 visiting the store, he did not identify any specific barriers that 7 he encountered. Id. at ¶ 18. Rather, plaintiff only provided the 8 following allegation: "Attached as Exhibit A is a true and accurate 9 list, to the extent known by Chapman, (with photos) of the barriers 10 that denied him access to the Store, or which he seeks to remove 11 on behalf of others" Id. at ¶ 19 (emphasis added). The use 12 of the word "or" in this sentence made it impossible to determine 13 which barriers, if any, denied plaintiff access to the store as 14 opposed to those that did not deny him access during his visits, 15 but for which he nonetheless sought injunctive relief.

16 B. Ninth Circuit Decision

17 On June 19, 2006, this court granted plaintiff's motion for 18 summary judgment as to seven barriers listed in a report of the 19 facilities and denied defendant's motion as to those barriers. Pier 20 1 appealed this decision arguing that plaintiff lacked standing as 21 to these seven barriers because he had not personally encountered 22 them and, consequently, they did not deter him from returning to 23 the store. Chapman v. Pier 1 Imports (U.S.) Inc., 631 F.3d 939, 944
24 (9th Cir. 2011) (en banc). A three-judge panel of the Ninth Circuit 25 reversed this court's grant of summary judgment and found plaintiff 26 lacked standing as to the barriers he had not personally

1 encountered. Id.

2 Thereafter, plaintiff petitioned for and was granted a 3 rehearing en banc. On January 7, 2011, the en banc panel issued an 4 opinion holding that an ADA plaintiff has standing to sue for 5 injunctive relief as to both encountered and unencountered barriers 6 related to his disability when that plaintiff suffers an injury-in-7 fact by encountering a barrier that deprives him of full and equal 8 enjoyment of the facility due to his particular disability. Id. The 9 panel confirmed the established rule that a plaintiff "must 10 demonstrate that he has suffered an injury-in-fact, that the injury 11 is traceable to [Pier 1]'s actions, and that the injury can be 12 redressed by a favorable decision." Id. at 946 (internal citation 13 omitted). The court further emphasized that, "to establish standing 14 to pursue injunctive relief, which is the only relief available to 15 private plaintiffs under the ADA, he must demonstrate a real and 16 immediate threat of repeated injury in the future." Id. (internal 17 quotation omitted). After recognizing that "the causation and 18 redressability elements of standing are not at issue," the Circuit 19 focused its inquiry on "whether Chapman has suffered an injury-in-20 fact and whether he has demonstrated a likelihood of future injury 21 sufficient to support injunctive relief." Id.

22 In order to demonstrate an injury-in-fact, the Circuit 23 explained, a disabled individual must encounter a barrier that 24 interferes with his "full and equal enjoyment" of a facility. Id.
25 at 947 (quoting 42 U.S.C. § 12182(a)). Standing is demonstrated 26 where plaintiff alleges a violation of the ADA Accessibility

1 Guidelines for Buildings and Facilities ("ADAAG") that relates to 2 his disability. Id. To demonstrate standing to pursue injunctive 3 relief, a plaintiff must also demonstrate "a sufficient likelihood 4 that he will again be wronged in a similar way." Id. at 948
5 (internal quotation omitted). In the context of a disability access 6 claim, a plaintiff can show such standing by "[d]emonstrating an 7 intent to return to a noncompliant accommodation . . . [or that] 8 he is deterred from visiting a noncompliant public accommodation 9 because he has encountered barriers related to his disability
10 there." Id. at 949. "If Chapman has standing to pursue injunctive 11 relief as to some of the barriers that he actually encountered, 12 then he has standing to seek an order requiring the removal of all 13 barriers at [Pier 1] that are related to his disability and that 14 he is likely to encounter on future visits." Id. at 951.

15 After confirming the standard for demonstrating standing for 16 disability access cases, the en banc panel found that Chapman
17 failed to allege the essential elements of Article III standing.
18 Id. at 954. The Circuit explained that,

19 Chapman leaves the federal court to guess which, if 20 any, of the alleged violations deprived him of the 21 same full and equal access that a person who is not 22 wheelchair bound would enjoy when shopping at Pier 23 One. Nor does he identify how any of the alleged 24 violations threatens to deprive him of full and equal 25 access due to his disability if he were to return to 26 the Store, or how any of them deter him from visiting the Store due to his disability. Although Chapman may establish standing as to unencountered barriers related to his disability, the list of barriers incorporated into his complaint does nothing more than perform a wholesale audit of the defendant's premises.

1 Id. at 955 (internal quotation omitted).

2 C. Plaintiff's First Amended (2011) Complaint

3 1. Allegations Concerning Encountered Barriers

4 The entire dispute as to whether plaintiff has alleged 5 standing concerns the sentence structure of his allegations 6 describing the barriers. For this reason, the court here quotes the 7 relevant paragraph of Chapman's complaint:

8 Chapman visited the store and encountered barriers 9 (both physical and intangible) that interfered with - 10 if not outright denied - his ability to use and enjoy 11 the goods, services, privileges, and accommodations 12 offered at the store. To the extent known by Chapman, 13 these barriers currently include the following:

- 14 • A customer service counter for disabled
15 patrons that is between 28 and 34 inches
16 above the floor, which has the requisite 17 clear space (i.e., not cluttered by 18 merchandise) and which is open at all times.
19 Because Chapman is in a wheelchair, he needs 20 an accessible counter to make purchases at 21 the store. Failing to provide such a counter 22 interferes with his ability to avail himself 23 of the store's goods and services.
- 24 • Aisles that are not a minimum of 36-inches 25 wide. Because Chapman is in a wheelchair, he 26 needs paths of travel that is [sic] at least 36-inches wide so that his wheelchair does not run into merchandise, other patrons, or the sides of the aisles themselves. Failure to provide a clear floor space interferes with his ability to traverse the store.

27 . . .
28 Chapman intends to return to Pier 1's store within a 29 year (for a shopping excursion); and anticipates 30 suffering, or has suffered (or both) objective
31 discrimination because the store lacks an accessible 32 counter and has aisles that are too narrow, which 33 create a real and immediate threat of future injury.

34 First Amended Complaint ("FAC"), Doc. No. 159, ¶¶ 11, 13 (emphasis 35 in original). The dispute concerns whether, from these allegations, 36 the court can reasonably infer that Chapman actually encountered

1 the customer service counter and aisles. Specifically, the question
2 is whether the use of the phrase, "To the extent known by Chapman," 3 and the term, "currently," prevents the court from making the 4 inference that Chapman encountered these identified barriers.

5 2. Allegations Concerning Discrimination through 6 Contract

7 In the FAC, plaintiff also adds allegations that, "Pier 1 8 executed a contract stating that they would provide and maintain 9 [certain] accessible elements. By failing to do so, Pier 1 has 10 breached its contract with Chapman, and discriminated against him 11 through the use of a contract." Id. at ¶ 12. Further, Chapman 12 represents to the court in his complaint that, "[T]he parties 13 agreed via a contract that Pier 1 would maintain the store in an 14 accessible manner; in exchange, Chapman agreed to a stipulated 15 judgment." Id. at ¶ 21 (emphasis in original). In a footnote to the 16 sentence, plaintiff alleges that, "The precise terms of the 17 contract are subject to a confidentiality provision and cannot be 18 repeated here." Id. at ¶ 21 n.1.

19 D. 2007 Joint Stipulation for Entry of Final Judgment

20 On June 19, 2007, after the court had issued the summary 21 judgment order that Pier 1 appealed, the parties filed a joint 22 stipulation for entry of final judgment. The parties stipulated 23 that Pier 1 was to remove certain barriers within one hundred and 24 twenty days and make a final modification within ninety days after 25 Pier 1's appeal is exhausted. Joint Stip., Doc. No. 115, ¶¶ 12, 13.
26 The court entered the stipulated final judgment on June 25, 2007.

1 Doc. No. 116. In this order, the court specifically retained 2 jurisdiction over the case for purposes of enforcing the final 3 judgment. Id.

4 Both plaintiff and defendant represented to the court in this 5 filing that,

6 This Stipulation and the attached Final Judgment 7 contain the entire agreement and understanding between 8 the parties concerning the subject civil action, and 9 supercedes and replaces all prior negotiations, 10 proposed agreements and agreements, written or oral.
11 Each of the parties acknowledges that no other party, 12 nor any agent or attorney of such party, has made any 13 promise, representation or warranty whatsoever, 14 expressed or implied, which is not contained in this 15 Stipulation or the attached Final Judgment, to induce 16 him or it to execute this Stipulation or the attached 17 Final Judgment. Each of the parties further 18 acknowledges that he or it is not executing this 19 Stipulation or the attached Final Judgment in reliance 20 on any promise, representation or warranty not 21 contained in this Stipulation or the attached Final 22 Judgment.

23 Joint Stip. at ¶ 4. This representation to the court is in direct 24 conflict with plaintiff's representation to the court in his FAC 25 that he agreed to the stipulated judgment in exchange for other 26 confidential terms.¹

27 II. STANDARDS

28 A. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b) (1) Motion to Dismiss

29 It is well established that the party seeking to invoke the 30 jurisdiction of the federal court has the burden of establishing 31 that jurisdiction exists. KVOS, Inc. v. Associated Press, 299 U.S.

32 ¹ The court does note that the joint stipulation references 33 a separately entered settlement agreement as to several issues not 34 addressed in the joint stipulation. Id. at ¶ 10.

1 269, 278 (1936); Assoc. of Medical Colleges v. United States, 217 2 F.3d 770, 778-779 (9th Cir. 2000). On a motion to dismiss pursuant 3 to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1), the standards that must be applied 4 vary according to the nature of the jurisdictional challenge.

5 Here, the challenge to jurisdiction is a facial attack. That 6 is, the federal defendants contend that the allegations of 7 jurisdiction contained in the complaint are insufficient on their 8 face to demonstrate the existence of jurisdiction. Safe Air for 9 Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004). In a Rule 10 12(b)(1) motion of this type, the plaintiff is entitled to 11 safeguards similar to those applicable when a Rule 12(b)(6) motion 12 is made. See Sea Vessel Inc. v. Reyes, 23 F.3d 345, 347 (11th Cir.
13 1994), Osborn v. United States, 918 F.2d 724, 729 n.6 (8th Cir.
14 1990); see also 2-12 Moore's Federal Practice - Civil § 12.30 15 (2009). The factual allegations of the complaint are presumed to 16 be true, and the motion is granted only if the plaintiff fails to 17 allege an element necessary for subject matter jurisdiction.
18 Savage v. Glendale Union High Sch. Dist. No. 205, 343 F.3d 1036, 19 1039 n.1 (9th Cir. 2003), Miranda v. Reno, 238 F.3d 1156, 1157 n.1
20 (9th Cir. 2001).

21 B. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) Motion to Dismiss

22 A Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion challenges a complaint's 23 compliance with the pleading requirements provided by the Federal 24 Rules. Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2), a pleading 25 must contain a "short and plain statement of the claim showing that 26 the pleader is entitled to relief." The complaint must give

1 defendant "fair notice of what the claim is and the grounds upon 2 which it rests." Bell Atlantic v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 3 (2007) (internal quotation and modification omitted).

4 To meet this requirement, the complaint must be supported by 5 factual allegations. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, ___ U.S. ___, ___, 129 S.
6 Ct. 1937, 1950 (2009). "While legal conclusions can provide the 7 framework of a complaint," neither legal conclusions nor conclusory 8 statements are themselves sufficient, and such statements are not 9 entitled to a presumption of truth. Id. at 1949-50. Iqbal and 10 Twombly therefore prescribe a two step process for evaluation of 11 motions to dismiss. The court first identifies the non-conclusory 12 factual allegations, and the court then determines whether these 13 allegations, taken as true and construed in the light most 14 favorable to the plaintiff, "plausibly give rise to an entitlement 15 to relief." Id.; Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89 (2007).

16 "Plausibility," as it is used in Twombly and Iqbal, does not 17 refer to the likelihood that a pleader will succeed in proving the 18 allegations. Instead, it refers to whether the non-conclusory 19 factual allegations, when assumed to be true, "allow[] the court 20 to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for 21 the misconduct alleged." Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1949. "The 22 plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' 23 but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has 24 acted unlawfully." Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557). A 25 complaint may fail to show a right to relief either by lacking a 26 cognizable legal theory or by lacking sufficient facts alleged

1 under a cognizable legal theory. Balistreri v. Pacifica Police
2 Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990).

3 III. ANALYSIS

4 A. Standing

5 As discussed above, the Ninth Circuit set forth what plaintiff 6 must allege to demonstrate standing. In short, to demonstrate that 7 he suffered an injury-in-fact, plaintiff must allege that he 8 encountered a barrier that interferes with his full and equal 9 enjoyment of the public accommodation. A plaintiff has demonstrated 10 such interference if the alleged barrier violates ADAAG standards 11 that relate to his disability.

12 Defendant raises two arguments as to why plaintiff has not 13 alleged sufficient facts to demonstrate standing. First, it 14 contends that plaintiff did not allege that he actually encountered 15 any barriers in its store. Second, Pier 1 argues that Chapman did 16 not allege that any of the listed barriers actually interfered with 17 his full and equal enjoyment of the store. The first dispute 18 entirely derives from plaintiff's ambiguous choice of words.
19 Instead of simply stating that he encountered the two identified 20 barriers, plaintiff muddled his allegation with an unnecessary 21 phrase and adjective. Specifically, instead of clearly stating, 22 "These barriers are" or "Chapman encountered the following 23 barriers," plaintiff alleged, "To the extent known by Chapman, 24 these barriers currently include the following." In his opposition, 25 plaintiff states that he can amend his complaint to remove this 26 ambiguity.

1 On August 17, 2011, the Ninth Circuit issued a further opinion
2 explicating its previous en banc decision. Specifically, in Oliver 3 v. Ralphs Grocery Company, the Circuit determined that similar 4 language in a complaint filed by the same plaintiff's counsel in 5 this action failed to specify which, if any, barriers the plaintiff
6 had personally encountered. ___ F.3d ___, No. 09-56447, at 10890 7 (9th Cir. Aug. 17, 2011). In Oliver, however, plaintiff had alleged 8 that, "To the extent known by Oliver, the barriers at Food 4 Less 9 included, but are not limited to" certain barriers. Id. at 10886.
10 Here, Chapan has not used the open-ended "included, but not limited 11 to" language, but nonetheless, incorporated the identical ambiguous 12 phrase, "To the extent known by [plaintiff]". Without finding that 13 plaintiff's obscure allegations fail to meet pleading requirements 14 to demonstrate standing to sue, the court nonetheless instructs 15 plaintiff to file a second amended complaint in which he clearly 16 and simply alleges which barriers he has encountered. Doing so will 17 avoid any future confusion and allow this case to proceed.

18 Defendant also contends that plaintiff has not alleged facts 19 from which the court can plausibly infer that plaintiff has alleged 20 that the identified barriers actually interfered with his full use 21 and enjoyment of Pier 1. Assuming that plaintiff corrects the 22 syntactic errors discussed above, the court considers whether 23 plaintiff's descriptions of the barriers are sufficient. As 24 discussed in the previous section, the Ninth Circuit found that a 25 plaintiff can allege interference with the full use and enjoyment 26 of a public accommodation by showing that the barrier violates

1 ADAAG standards for full and equal enjoyment if the standard 2 relates to plaintiff's disability. Plaintiff has alleged that the 3 customer service counter is not between 28 and 34 inches above the 4 floor and that the aisles are not a minimum of 36 inches wide. The 5 ADAAG sets forth the following technical requirements:

6 4.32.4 Height of Tables or Counters: The tops of 7 accessible tables and counters shall be from 28 in to 8 34 in (710 mm to 865 mm) above the finish floor or 9 ground.

8 4.3.3 Width. The minimum clear width of an accessible route shall be 36 in (915 mm) except at doors.

10 Plaintiff has alleged that these requirements relate to his 11 disability in that the required height and width allow him to 12 access the counter space and maneuver his wheelchair. Thus, 13 plaintiff has alleged facts sufficient for the court to plausibly 14 infer that the identified barriers, assuming the introductory 15 sentence is corrected to remove the ambiguity discussed above, 16 interfered with his full and equal enjoyment of Pier 1.

17 B. Discrimination Through Contract

18 Plaintiff also brings what appears to be a straightforward 19 breach of contract claim, but attempts to do so as a violation of 20 the ADA. He alleges that Pier 1 breached a contract with Chapman 21 that it would provide and maintain certain accessible elements. FAC 22 ¶¶ 12, 21. Instead of bringing a straightforward breach of contract 23 claim, however, plaintiff argues that by breaching this contract 24 Pier 1 has discriminated against him through the use of a contract.

25 The relevant section of the ADA provides that,

26 It shall be discriminatory to afford an individual or

1 class of individuals, on the basis of a disability or 2 disabilities of such individual or class, directly, or 3 through contractual, licensing, or other arrangements 4 with the opportunity to participate in or benefit from a good, service, facility, privilege, advantage, or accommodation that is not equal to that afforded to other individuals.

5 42 U.S.C. § 12182(b)(1)(A)(ii) (emphasis added). The plain meaning 6 of this statute does not allow for plaintiff's theory of recovery.
7 The language clearly prohibits a public accommodation from entering 8 into a contract to avoid its responsibilities under the act, and 9 does not provide any prohibition against breaching a contract to 10 remove barriers. Such an interpretation also conforms with the 11 legislative history of the section. H.R. Rep. No. 101-485(II) at 12 104, reprinted at 1990 U.S.C.C.A.N. 387 ("[T]he reference to 13 contractual arrangements is to make clear that an entity may not 14 do indirectly through contractual arrangements what it is 15 prohibited from doing directly under this Act."). Thus, plaintiff's 16 breach of contract claim is dismissed with prejudice insofar as it 17 is brought as a violation of the ADA.

18 C. Regular Breach of Contract Claim

19 While plaintiff has not stated a claim for discrimination
20 through the use of a contract under the ADA, he has alleged facts 21 to support a regular breach of contract claim. Under these 22 circumstances, the court would ordinarily instruct plaintiff to 23 file an amended complaint bringing a separate cause of action for 24 breach of contract. However, here there are several unusual 25 concerns that prevent such a conclusion.

26 First, the court must consider the implications of the Ninth

1 Circuit's finding that, "Chapman lacked standing at the outset of 2 this litigation to assert the ADA claims." If the court did not 3 have jurisdiction over this matter when filed, then the final 4 judgment order it entered approving the joint stipulation is also 5 vacated. See Newdow v. Rio Linda Union Sch. Dist., 597 F.3d 1007, 6 1041 (9th Cir. 2010) (holding that no precedential effect should 7 be given to the determination of an issue that should never have 8 been decided). Specifically, if the Ninth Circuit did not find that 9 this court lacked jurisdiction from the outset of the litigation 10 over plaintiff's claims, plaintiff could simply move to enforce the 11 stipulated judgment, jurisdiction over which was specifically 12 reserved by court order. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 13 511 U.S. 375, 381 (1994); Hagestad v. Tragesser, 49 F.3d 1430, 1433
14 (9th Cir. 1995). In this case, however, the Ninth Circuit 15 implicitly found that this court lacked jurisdiction to enter the 16 order approving the stipulated judgment and reserving jurisdiction 17 over enforcement of it and, thus, the order retaining jurisdiction 18 was implicitly vacated. Accordingly, the court must interpret the 19 joint stipulation as a standard settlement agreement. The court 20 also understands that the parties entered an additional private 21 settlement, which is referenced in the joint stipulation. A breach 22 of either agreement may constitute a breach of contract claim under 23 state law.

24 Second, the question still remains as to whether plaintiff
25 could bring such a state law claim in this court. "[P]endant 26 jurisdiction may be exercised when federal and state claims have

1 a 'common nucleus of operative fact' and would 'ordinarily be 2 expected to [be tried] all in one judicial proceeding." Osborn v.
3 Haley, 549 U.S. 225, 245 (2007) (quoting Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 4 U.S. 715, 725 (1966); see also 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a) ("[I]n any civil 5 action of which the district courts have original jurisdiction, the 6 district courts shall have supplemental jurisdiction over all other 7 claims that are so related to claims in the action within such 8 original jurisdiction that they form part of the same case or 9 controversy under Article III of the United States Constitution.")).
10 While clearly related, the contract claims do not share a common 11 nucleus of facts with the ADA claims. Specifically, they do not 12 concern whether plaintiff encountered certain barriers that 13 infringed upon his full and equal enjoyment of the accommodation.
14 Rather, the contract claims, the court assumes, would consist of 15 defendant's failure to perform certain obligations. For this 16 reason, the court finds that it would be futile to allow plaintiff 17 to file an amended complaint bringing a breach of contract claim.
18 This, of course, does not preclude plaintiff from bringing a new 19 action against defendant for breach of contract in state court or, 20 if there is a basis for jurisdiction, in federal court.²

21
22 ² The court must further note serious contradictions between 23 the FAC and the record in this case. Specifically, plaintiff has 24 alleged in the FAC that he entered a contract, whose terms are 25 subject to a confidentiality provision, in which Chapman agreed to 26 a stipulated judgment. The terms of the stipulation, which was filed in this case to persuade the court to enter judgment, however, explicitly state that it was not executed in reliance on any terms not contained in the stipulated judgment, which is not confidential. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 11, an attorney making any representation to the court "certifies that to the best of the

D. Supplemental Jurisdiction

Defendant lastly argues that this court should decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over plaintiff's state law claims premised upon the same factual allegations supporting his ADA claim because state law issues predominate.³ Assuming that plaintiff will amend his complaint to clearly allege that he encountered the challenged barriers, the court now considers the merits of this argument. Under 28 U.S.C. § 1367, a court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a related state claim if "(1) the claim raises a novel or complex issue of State law, (2) the claim substantially predominates over the claim or claims over which the district court has original jurisdiction, (3) the district court has dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction, or (4) in exceptional circumstances, there person's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after an inquiry under the circumstances . . . the factual contentions have evidentiary support or, if specifically so identified, will likely have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery." Here, it appears that either both parties made a knowingly false representation to the court when filing the joint stipulation or plaintiff made a knowingly false representation in his complaint. Nonetheless, the court declines to require further explanation from the parties because it is not granting plaintiff leave to add a breach of contract claim in this case. Thus, the court does not make any determination as to whether the representations made by the parties in this case are sanctionable under Rule 11.

³ Defendant also argues that the court should decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over these claims if the court dismisses plaintiff's ADA claim. The court does not discuss this question because it is granting plaintiff leave to amend his ADA claim.

1 are other compelling reasons for declining jurisdiction." Pier 1 2 cites to a few district court orders finding that state law issues
3 predominate in cases where ADA claims were brought with state law 4 claims. It refers the court to no precedential authority requiring 5 the court to follow their reasoning in the instant case.

6 Courts in this district, however, have routinely found that 7 the exercise of supplemental jurisdiction is proper in cases very 8 similar to the case at bar. See Johnson v. United Rental Northwest, 9 Inc., No. 2:11-CV-00204-JAM-EFB, 2011 WL 2746110, at *4 (E.D. Cal.

11 WL 2137130, at *3 (E.D. Cal. Jul. 15, 2009); Johnson v. Barlow, No.
12 CIV. S-06-01150 WBS GGH, 2007 WL 1723617, at *3 (E.D. Cal. June 9, 13 2007). These courts reasoned that declining to exercise 14 supplemental jurisdiction in these cases "would effectively 15 preclude a district court from ever asserting supplemental 16 jurisdiction over a state law claim under the Unruh Act [in an ADA 17 case]." Barlow, 2007 WL 1723617, at *3. They emphasized that the 18 burdens of proof and standards of liability are identical for both 19 ADA and Unruh Act claims. Id. This court here adopts this reasoning 20 and, therefore, exercises supplemental jurisdiction over 21 plaintiff's state law claims.

22 IV. CONCLUSION

23 For the foregoing reasons, the court ORDERS as follows:

- 24 (1) Defendant's motion to dismiss (Doc. No. 164) is granted 25 in part and denied in part.
- 26 (2) Defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's ADA claims for lack of standing is granted.

(3) Defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim breach of contract in violation of the ADA for failure to state a claim is granted. This claim is dismissed with prejudice.⁴

(4) Defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's state law claims is denied.

(5) Plaintiff is granted leave of twenty-one (21) days to file an amended complaint in which he may only amend allegations in his complaint concerning whether he encountered certain barriers and remove allegations concerning the breach of contract claim.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DATED: August 19, 2011.

LAWRENCE K. KARLTON
SENIOR JUDGE

⁴ The court is in no way precluding plaintiff from bringing a claim for breach of contract under state law in a separate action.
