

1 On July 29, 2009, this court heard the respective discovery motions¹ of plaintiffs and 2 defendants.² Attorney Daniel Baxter appeared on behalf of plaintiffs; Phillip Mastagni appeared 3 on behalf of defendants. For the reasons set forth herein and on the record, the court enters the 4 following order.

5 I. Plaintiffs' Motion to Compel Further Responses to Production Requests, and for Further 6 Document Production

7 Plaintiffs seek, in pertinent part, further responses and production of documents in 8 response to their Document Requests Nos. 31 and 52, propounded by plaintiff Brian Dawe on 9 November 7, 2007 (Requests for Production of Documents, Set No. One), upon defendant 10 Correction USA ("CUSA"). These requests sought the following:

11 • No. 31: All documents reflecting communications by any CUSA representative 12 to any other person or entity regarding Brian Dawe, Richard Loud, or Gary Harkins in relation to the claims at issue in this lawsuit.

13 • No. 52: All documents evidencing any investigation of Brian Dawe, Richard 14 Loud, or Gary Harkins by or at the behest of CUSA or CCPOA.

15 Defendants served their initial responses on December 20, 2007. On April 23, 2008, 16 pursuant to plaintiffs' motion to compel, the court issued an order which found these requests 17 relevant to claims and defenses in this action, and directed defendants to respond to them fully.
18 Dckt. No. 106, at 20. On April 28, 2009, pursuant to a subsequent motion filed by plaintiffs, the 19 court directed defendants' counsel to serve upon plaintiffs' counsel written certification that 20 defendants had conducted a diligent search and produced all responsive documents within their 21 custody and control. The order further provided that, "[t]his certification shall include, when 22 pertinent, reference to each responsive document, including Bates-stamped page numbers."

24 ¹ See Original Notices of Motions, Dckt. Nos. 172 and 181, consolidated and rescheduled several times, ultimately by a single amended motion, Dckt. No. 200; see also Jt.
25 Stmts., Dckt. Nos. 203, 211.

26 ² For present purposes, the court does not further designate the parties based on their cross- and counter- pleadings.

1 Dckt. No. 173, at 2-4.

2 On May 21, 2009, defendants served an “Amended Certification of Responses to Request 3 for Production of Documents, Set One.” In response to Request Nos. 31 and 52, defendants’ 4 certification broadly referenced every document produced by CUSA, as follows:

5 The responding party certifies, that after a diligent search, the responding party 6 has produced all documents in the responding party’s possession, control, and/or custody. CUSA000001-CUSA 031456.

7 Dckt. No. 211 at 5.

8 Plaintiffs seek an order of this court compelling defendants to particularize this 9 certification. Plaintiffs assert that defendants’ current certification violates this court’s April 28, 10 2009 order, and “affirmatively stymies Plaintiffs’ efforts to ensure that its discovery efforts have 11 been satisfied.” Dckt. No. 211, at 6. Defendants respond that their certification complies with 12 the court’s order, given the “extreme breadth” of the requests and the fact that all documents 13 produced by CUSA are indeed responsive to the requests as framed. Id. at 16-17.

14 The court’s April 28, 2009 order was intended to ensure, and to provide assurances to 15 plaintiffs, that defendants had produced all documents responsive to plaintiffs’ requests and, if 16 necessary, to provide a basis for challenging the later introduction of evidence not previously 17 disclosed through the discovery process. The same principles govern plaintiffs’ production of 18 documents to defendants. The court’s additional requirement – that defendants cite to 19 Bates-stamped page numbers “when pertinent” – was intended to reflect the court’s statement at 20 the April 1, 2009 hearing that a clear record would advance the interests of all parties should 21 production later be challenged.³ See, e.g., Transcript of April 1, 2009 Hearing, Dckt. No. 170, at 22 8-10.

24 ³ For example, the court stated: “[L]aw firms have different ways of doing this. I [had] 25 assumed that you took all of the documents that you’ve gone through and that you have 26 organized them in some way and Bates stamped them so that you have records of what it is that you’ve made available. . . . I’ll leave it to you to figure out how you’ll preserve your records and organize your records in a way where you can show later that you’ve produced what you say you produced.” Transcript (Apr. 1, 2009), Dckt. No. 170, at 8,10.

1 The court has given due consideration to the parties' respective positions, as addressed at 2 the hearing on this matter, and finds that defendants' certification in response to Request Nos. 31 3 and 52 is adequate. While the certification is broad, so are the requests. The court agrees with 4 defendants that to require greater particularity at this time would reveal defendants' assessment 5 of the relative importance of the various documents and thus defendants' litigation strategy, 6 impinging on work product.

7 Accordingly, plaintiffs' motion to compel defendants' further responses and production 8 of documents in response to Plaintiffs' Requests for Production of Documents, Nos. 31 and 52, 9 is denied.

10 II. Plaintiffs' Motion for Court Order to Prevent Spoilation of Evidence

11 Plaintiffs seek an order of this court requiring defendants to preserve and maintain all 12 recordings and other memorializations of meetings convened by CUSA and CCPOA; requiring 13 defendants to verify that no such items have been or will be destroyed, discarded, or altered 14 during the pendency of this litigation; authorizing plaintiffs' inspection of audio and other 15 recordings moved on April 21, 2009; and providing a mechanism for seeking sanctions in the 16 event such order is violated. For the following reasons, this motion will be denied.

17 This motion was precipitated by the following. On April 18, 2009, CCPOA held a State 18 Board meeting at the Red Lion Inn in Bakersfield, California. At that meeting, Donald 19 Baumann, CCPOA Chapter President and State Board Member, made a motion ("resolution"), 20 which passed (but was later amended), that endorsed the destruction of audio recordings of 21 CCPOA meetings after approval of the written minutes. Thereafter, on April 21, 2009, CCPOA 22 Chief Operating Officer (and General Counsel) David Sanders and CCPOA State Secretary 23 Perry Speth moved CCPOA recordings from one warehouse, not controlled by CCPOA, to 24 another warehouse that is controlled by CCPOA. The move was witnessed and assisted by Steve 25 Fournier, a CCPOA member who was present at the April 18 meeting, and who managed storage 26 at the first warehouse. Fournier states that he thereafter attended a meeting on April 25, 2009, of 1 retired correctional officers in Sacramento, where he was told by a third party that Sanders and 2 Speth had stated they were directed to destroy the recordings. See Fournier Decl., ¶¶ 4-9. This 3 hearsay led to plaintiffs’ concern that defendants had destroyed, or intended to destroy, evidence 4 relevant to this litigation.

5 Defendants have responded, with several supporting declarations, stating that the primary 6 purpose of the April 21, 2009 motion was to protect union members from disclosure of private 7 grievances, and was prospective only. Sanders Decl., ¶¶ 10-11; Baumann Decl., ¶ 15.
8 Moreover, in response to the instant motion, CCPOA passed an amended resolution on July 13, 9 2009, at CCPOA’s next regularly scheduled meeting, that expressly requires CCPOA to secure 10 and maintain the recordings of all its Board meetings, and to release no recordings unless 11 directed to do so by court order or a 3/4 majority vote of the Board. Sanders Decl., ¶ 39 and Ex.
12 “E” thereto. In addition, defendants state that the recordings were moved for the purpose of 13 bringing all recordings within CCPOA’s control in order to conduct required discovery.
14 Pursuant to the declarations of Sanders and CCPOA employee Steven Barefoot, defendants state 15 that they spent over 90 hours listening to every recording, which date from the 1980s, in order to 16 respond fully and accurately to all of plaintiffs’ discovery requests, thus providing all references 17 to CUSA, Dawe, Harkins, and Loud. Defendants represent that no recordings have been 18 destroyed, and all will remain secure pending resolution of this litigation.

19 At the hearing on this motion, the parties addressed the impact of CCPOA’s new 20 resolution requiring a court order for further disclosure of responsive material. While plaintiffs 21 contend, appropriately, that they should not be required to obtain a court order to obtain 22 responsive, relevant discovery, defendants maintain that all nonprivileged responsive 23 information has already been disclosed. Defendants seek to avoid again going through every 24 recording since the 1980s, most of which are “totally irrelevant, [] involve privacy of third 25 parties, [] union grievances, [and] [] privileges of litigation, and they have nothing to do with this 26 case.” Transcript of July 29, 2009 Hearing (hereafter, “Transcript”), Dckt. No. 224, at 26. As

1 this matter is not squarely presented to the court as a discovery dispute, the court does not reach 2 it. As the court stated at the hearing on this matter:

3 I'm simply going to direct you -- both of you to comply with the Federal Rules of 4 Civil Procedure as to preservation of evidence as well as discovery. If there's an 5 appropriate discovery request that's submitted or has been submitted for the 6 recordings, then you'll need to respond to that request. And if there is a proper 7 basis for a privilege, you'll have to prepare a privilege log and be prepared to 8 defend the assertion of the privilege.

9 Transcript, at 25.

10 Rather, as the court found at the hearing on this matter, passage of CCPOA's amended 11 resolution, coupled with defendants' representation that no information has been destroyed, or 12 will be destroyed during the pendency of this litigation, renders moot plaintiff's spoliation 13 concerns. Accordingly, plaintiffs' motion for a court order to prevent spoliation of evidence is 14 denied.

15 III. Defendants' Motion to Compel Further Responses to Production Requests, 16 and for Further Document Production

17 A. Brian Dawe

18 Defendants challenge plaintiff Dawe's responses to CUSA's Requests for Production, 19 Sets One and Two. Dawe provided responses to Set One on July 28, 2008, and to Set Two on 20 February 25, 2009; Dawe then provided supplemental responses and production on June 12, 21 2009, including tax filings and other financial documents previously withheld on privacy 22 grounds. Defendants challenge Dawe's objections based on irrelevance and privilege, without 23 providing a privilege log; and Dawe's failure to disclose responsive information from other 24 organizations with which Dawe is affiliated – specifically, American Correctional Officer 25 (“ACO”), which is a d/b/a of Dawe's, and American Correctional Officer Intelligence Network 26 (“ACOIN”), for which, plaintiffs' counsel surmises, Dawe may be the executive director

1 pursuant to an independent contract.⁴ Defendants assert that these organizations have responsive 2 information, as demonstrated by CUSA's own production, in response to Dawe's discovery 3 requests, of Dawe's e-mails to ACO and ACOIN.

4 Plaintiffs contest each of these challenges, relying on the parties' agreement that no 5 privilege log would be required for documents withheld on the basis of attorney-client privilege 6 or work product doctrine; and asserting that none of the disputed discovery requests seek 7 information relative to ACO or ACOIN.

8 For the reasons stated on the record, the court granted defendants' motion in part, and 9 directed the parties as follows:

10 1. Notwithstanding the parties' agreement to the contrary, from the date of the hearing 11 forward, any document withheld from discovery based on a claim of privilege, including 12 attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine, shall be specifically identified in a privilege 13 log that clearly sets forth the asserted basis for withholding the document.

14 2. Defendants shall propound additional interrogatories and requests for production that 15 are precisely drafted to obtain all relevant information concerning ACO and ACOIN (e.g., 16 including but not limited to their origin, purpose, structure and membership), as well as their 17 relationships and operating agreements with one another, Dawe, and/or Flat Iron Mountain

19 ⁴ Plaintiffs' counsel explained at the hearing:

20 Flat Iron used to be a partnership. It is now a Wyoming LLC. The principal of it 21 is essentially Brian Dawe. ACOIN is a d/b/a/ of Flat Iron. So essentially ACOIN 22 and Flat Iron can be viewed as one in the same. We -- I do represent Flat Iron and 23 therefore I do represent ACOIN. ACO is a separate entity. ACO, I believe, is a 24 New York nonprofit organization. It is not something that is run by Mr. Dawe. I 25 believe he holds a position with ACO, but it is not his organization in the same 26 vein as ACOIN. And again, I don't represent ACO. . . . [D]on't quote me on this, but I think he's executive director in some capacity of ACO. . . . [H]e is not the keeper of the documents. It's not his organization. He -- I believe he has an independent contractor relationship so his position, which again I think is executive director, is pursuant to an independent contract.

2 3. Dawe shall, within 20 days after service of these further discovery requests, respond 3 fully to the requests, and certify that he has produced, pursuant to a reasonable and diligent 4 search, all responsive documents within his possession, custody or control.

5 B. GARY HARKINS

6 1. Requests for Production, Including Laptop Inspection

7 Defendants seek further responses and production from Gary Harkin, including 8 inspection of the laptop computer currently in his possession. Harkin is a defendant (former 9 “officer, director and/or agent” of CUSA) and third-party plaintiff, alleging counterclaims 10 against CUSA and Baiardi. See Dckt. No. 204-3, at 76-81.

11 While the ownership of the computer is not presently at issue before this court, plaintiffs 12 explain that “Mr. Harkins initially purchased the computer in December of 2005 on his own 13 dime, and Defendant CUSA subsequently reimbursed him (in April 2006) for the acquisition 14 since Mr. Harkins occasionally used the computer in connection with his work on behalf of 15 CUSA (specifically, Mr. Harkins used the computer in part for CUSA business from April 2006 16 to September 11, 2006). After Mr. Harkins discontinued performing work for CUSA, he 17 reimbursed CUSA for the full initial payment amount. [.]” Jt. Stmt., Dckt. No. 203, at 23.

18 Defendants seek to inspect the computer and its contents pursuant their Request for 19 Production, Set Three, served upon Gary Harkins. At issue are Request Nos. 130-136,⁶ to which

21 ⁵ The court will duly consider the reasonable request of any party for leave to serve additional interrogatories beyond the 25 authorized by Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(a)(1).

22 ⁶ Defendants’ Request No. 130 provides: “Please produce for forensic inspection and 23 examination the Laptop Computer described above, referenced and identified in your letter of September 11, 2006, which is attached thereto as Attachment A.”

24 Defendants’ Request No. 131 seeks “in a reasonably usable electronic format . . . all electronically stored information with metadata intact contained on the laptop computer. . . .”

25 Defendants’ Request No. 132 seeks “any and all documents that evidence, reflect, reference and/or relate to said laptop computer. . . .”

26 Defendants’ Request No. 133 seeks “any and all documents that evidence, reflect, reference and/or relate to your personal ownership of said laptop computer, which is described,

1 Harkins objected.⁷ Defendants maintain that the computer contains information relevant to this 2 litigation, despite Harkins' declaration that he has produced all responsive, nonprivileged, 3 information. However, it is defendants' (CUSA's) position that information remains on the 4 computer relative to Harkins' alleged surreptitious trademarking of the CUSA name and logo, 5 and relative to an alleged conspiracy, dominated by plaintiff Dawe, his wife, and Flat Iron, to 6 take over CUSA and convert it from a nonprofit, to a for-profit, entity. See, e.g., Carr Decl., 7 Dckt. No. 204, and attached exhibits.

8 Plaintiffs respond asserting that “[t]he vast majority of any data on the computer has no 9 relation to Defendants or this litigation, and production of the computer would result in a 10 significant disclosure of personal information of Mr. Harkins and his family.” Moreover, 11 plaintiffs assert that Mr. Harkins has produced all responsive documents except “(a) the 12 documents listed in Mr. Harkins' privilege log [addressed infra]; (b) the documents containing 13 attorney-client communications and attorney work product [addressed supra regarding necessity 14 of providing a privilege log for documents withheld after the July 29, 2009 hearing]; and (c) 15 documents responsive to the categories for which Mr. Harkins specifically responded that he

16 _____
17 referenced and identified in your letter of September 11, 2006”

18 Defendants' Request No. 134 seeks “any and all documents that evidence, reflect, 19 reference and/or relate and/or identify to the purchase of said laptop computer. . . .”

20 Defendants' Request No. 135 seeks “any and all documents that evidence, reflect, 21 reference and/or relate and/or identify [] the purchase of any and all upgrades for said laptop 22 computer. . . .”

23 Defendants' Request No. 136 seeks “any and all documents that evidence, reflect, 24 reference and/or relate and/or identify [] the reimbursements that you claim you received from 25 CUSA related to said laptop computer. . . .”

26 ⁷ Harkins' responses to the disputed requests include his statement that he would not produce the computer because the request is overbroad, unduly burdensome, oppressive, harassing, irrelevant, etc. (Response to Request No. 130)), and based on his own privacy rights and the privacy rights of third parties (Response to Request No. 131); that Harkins would not disclose any related documents because they are in the possession of CUSA (Response to Request Nos. 131-136), and because “subject to privilege . . . including but not limited to attorney-client privilege and work product doctrine” (Response to Request Nos. 133-136), but that Harkin would nonetheless “comply with the unobjectionable portion of this request to the extent that responding party is in possession, custody, and control of non-privileged responsive documents” (Response to Request Nos. 133-136).

1 would not produce responsive documents [addressed presently].” Jt. Stmt., Dckt. No. 203, at 23-2 24; Harkins Decl., at 2.

3 For the reasons stated at the hearing, and set forth more fully herein, the court grants 4 defendants’ motion to compel inspection of the computer and its electronically stored 5 information (“ESI”), including metadata, subject to defendants bearing the initial costs 6 associated with retaining a forensic computer expert, and subject to plaintiffs’ threshold review 7 of the information and data in order to identify privileged information and prepare a privilege 8 log. However, if the inspection demonstrates that relevant, nonprivileged information has been 9 improperly withheld, defendants may move the court for an order shifting some or all of the 10 costs of inspection to plaintiffs.

11 The court is persuaded that relevant information, not previously disclosed, may be 12 obtained pursuant to inspection of the computer, including but not limited to documents and 13 communications contained therein. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) (“[p]arties may obtain discovery 14 regarding any nonprivileged matter that is relevant to any party’s claim or defense”),⁸ Fed. R.
15 Civ. P. 34(a)(1)(A), (b)(2)(E) (discoverable information includes electronically stored 16 information).⁹ Most persuasive is the level of contention and distrust that permeates this 17 litigation, and Harkins’ adamant refusal to permit even a limited inspection of the computer.

20 ⁸ Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1) provides in full: “Unless otherwise limited by court order, the 21 scope of discovery is as follows: Parties may obtain discovery regarding any nonprivileged 22 matter that is relevant to any party’s claim or defense--including the existence, description, 23 nature, custody, condition, and location of any documents or other tangible things and the 24 identity and location of persons who know of any discoverable matter. For good cause, the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. All discovery is subject to the limitations imposed by Rule 26(b)(2)(C).”

25 ⁹ “Rule 34(a)(1) is expansive and includes any type of information that is stored 26 electronically.” Advisory Notes to 2006 Amendments, Rule 34. “Rule 34 applies to information that is fixed in a tangible form and to information that is stored in a medium from which it can be retrieved and examined.” Id.

1 Also persuasive is defendants' representation that plaintiff Loud's computer had been 2 "forensically cleaned" prior to defendants' inspection. Transcript, at 59. Inspection intended to 3 reveal the computer's metadata is particularly important here, as it will likely include 4 information that may demonstrate whether there has been any transfer or deletion of information, 5 or other efforts to minimize, hinder or prevent access to information; and should provide a record 6 of all sites that have been accessed.

7 As with other forms of discovery, the inspection and production of electronically stored 8 information remains subject to considerations of burden, expense, and intrusiveness. See Fed. R.
9 Civ. P. 26(b)(2), 26(c). Balancing these factors, the court concludes that defendants should 10 initially bear the costs of inspection and retaining the forensic computer expert. However, this 11 allocation should be subject to a motion by defendants to shift some or all of these expenses in 12 the event the inspection demonstrates that relevant, nonprivileged, information has been 13 unreasonably withheld. The balancing of the parties' respective interests also requires that 14 plaintiffs be accorded, in the first instance, the opportunity to review the expert's data in order to 15 identify any privileged information and to prepare a privilege log specifying what information 16 plaintiffs seek to withhold, and on what basis. The expert shall verify by separate affidavit that 17 plaintiffs' privilege log accurately identifies the information sought to be withheld. The expert 18 shall then disclose to defendants all remaining information.

19 The parties shall agree upon the date, time, and place of inspection, and are free to 20 prepare, and stipulate to, a protective order pursuant to which the expert's search will be 21 conducted and the resulting information shared among the parties, including deadlines.
22 Following inspection of the subject computer, Mr. Harkin shall, contemporaneously with serving 23 his privilege log relative to the inspection, serve upon defendants his further supplemental 24 responses and any related production responsive to defendants' Request for Production, Set 25 Three, Request Nos. 130-136.

3 amended, provides in full:

12 *plaintiffs' counsel.*¹⁰

13 Defendants contend that attorney-client privilege does not protect communications 14 between parties, even if an attorney is "copied," and even if the communications include legal 15 advice; they argue that the disclosure constitutes a waiver of any privilege that may originally 16 have existed between attorney and client. Plaintiffs respond that these documents are privileged 17 because they transmit information provided by attorneys who have been jointly consulted 18 regarding possible litigation by and against CUSA.

19 The court has reviewed each of these documents in camera. California privilege law 20 guides the court's analysis in this diversity litigation. See, e.g., First Pacific Networks, Inc. v.

22 ¹⁰ The description of the first matter reflects the amended version submitted to the court 23 by plaintiffs' counsel on August 19, 2009; the letter accompanying the amendment states that a 24 copy of the revised privilege log was served on opposing counsel. As previously worded, the 25 description provided:

26 Email exchange between Gary Hawkins and Richard Loud (cc to attorney Barry Peck) re issues to address with corporate and employment attorneys and advice provided by California corporate attorney re removal and replacement of Board of Directors' members.

1 Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co., 163 F.R.D. 576, 576 (N.D. Cal. 1995).¹¹ Privileges under California
2 law are narrowly construed because they prevent the admission of relevant and otherwise 3 admissible evidence. People v. Sinohui, 28 Cal.4th 205, 212 (2004). Communications between 4 a lawyer and client which are intended to be confidential are protected from disclosure pursuant 5 to the attorney-client privilege.¹²

6 The first privilege log entry is a four-message e-mail string that is fairly described by the 7 privilege log. The initial (earliest in time/last in string) message, from Loud to Harkins, sets 8 forth several questions to be asked, respectively, of a “corporate attorney” and an “employment 9 attorney.” The message is a communication between parties, does not contain legal advice, and 10 is not subject to attorney-client privilege.

11 The second message, from Harkins to Loud, with a “cc” to Barry Peek (described to the 12 court as “another lawyer in this case,” Transcript, at 62, recounts Harkins’ discussion “with Mr.
13 May, a ca corporate attorney,” and the legal advice conveyed therein. This, again, is a 14 communication among parties. While the subject information was clearly protected when 15

16 ¹¹ Federal courts sitting in diversity look to the law of the forum state in making a choice 17 of law determination, Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Electric Manufacturing Co., 313 U.S. 487, 496 18 (1941); Theme Promotions, Inc. v. News America Marketing FSI, 546 F.3d 991, 1007 (9th Cir.
19 2008), including privileges for which state law supplies an element of a claim or defense, Fed. R.
20 Evid. 501; In re Geothermal Resources Intern., Inc., 93 F.3d 648, 653, n. 4 (9th Cir. 1996).

21 ¹² Cal. Evid. Code § 954 provides in pertinent part: “Subject to Section 912 (waiver of 22 privilege) . . . the client, whether or not a party, has a privilege to refuse to disclose, and to 23 prevent another from disclosing, a confidential communication between client and lawyer”

24 Cal. Evid. Code § 952 defines “confidential communication between client and lawyer” 25 as “information transmitted between a client and his or her lawyer in the course of that 26 relationship and in confidence by a means which, so far as the client is aware, discloses the information to no third persons other than those who are present to further the interest of the client in the consultation or those to whom disclosure is reasonably necessary for the transmission of the information or the accomplishment of the purpose for which the lawyer is consulted, and includes a legal opinion formed and the advice given by the lawyer in the course of that relationship.”

Cal. Evid. Code § 912 provides that the right to claim a privilege is waived “with respect to a communication protected by the privilege if any holder of the privilege, without coercion, has disclosed a significant part of the communication or has consented to disclosure made by anyone.”

1 conveyed by “Mr. May” to Harkins, Harkin’s communication (in which he transmits that 2 information) to third parties Dawe and Loud, notwithstanding that the information was 3 simultaneously “cc’d” to attorney Peek, has not been shown to be a privileged communication.
4 See, e.g., United States v. ChevronTexaco Corp., 241 F. Supp.2d 1065, 1075 (N.D. Cal. 2002)
5 (“[t]he mere fact that outside counsel was copied with the e-mail will not shield communications 6 not made for the purpose of securing legal advice”).

7 The court need not, however, reach these issues since the initial messages in the e-mail 8 string were, essentially, “attachments” to the final message between client and attorney. The 9 third message is a single question posed by Peek to Harkins, concerning the advice given by Mr.
10 May, while the fourth and last (most recent in time/first in string) e-mail message is Harkins’ 11 response to Peek, responding to the question. These last two messages are clearly protected by 12 attorney-client privilege, and while the application of privileges to email communications 13 remains an evolving area of the law, it appears that the current weight of authority favors 14 examination of the most recent communication as the means for characterizing the entire e-mail 15 string.

16 As the court found in United States v. ChevronTexaco Corp., 241 F.Supp.2d at 1075, n.
17 6: “Each e-mail /communication consists of the text of the sender’s message as well as all of the 18 prior e-mails that are attached to it. Therefore, [] assertion that each separate e-mail stands as an 19 independent communication is inaccurate. What is communicated with each e-mail is the text of 20 the e-mail and all the e-mails forwarded along with it. [However,] [i]f an e-mail with otherwise 21 privileged attachments is sent to a third party, . . . the privilege [is lost] with respect to that 22 e-mail and all of the attached e-mails.” See also Muro v. Target Corp., 250 F.R.D. 350, 363 23 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (citing ChevronTexaco, and finding that Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 26(b)(5)(A) does 24 not require separate itemization of e-mails in a privilege log. The court reasoned: “As Upjohn 25 Co. v. United States makes clear, the fact that non-privileged information was communicated to 26 an attorney may be privileged, even if the underlying information remains unprotected. 449 U.S.

1 383, 395-96 [(1981)). As applied in the e-mail discovery context, the court understands Upjohn
2 to mean that even though one e-mail is not privileged, a second e-mail which forwards that prior 3 e-mail to counsel might be privileged in its entirety. In this respect, the forwarded material is 4 similar to prior conversations or documents that are quoted verbatim in a letter to a party's 5 attorney.” Id. (fn. omitted).

6 Pursuant to these authorities, the court concludes that the first entry in Harkin’s privilege 7 log is indeed privileged and should remain confidential.

8 The second entry, also fairly described by the privilege log, is a single e-mail message 9 from Gary Harkins, to Brian Dawe and Richard Loud, repeating legal advice Harkins received 10 from his attorney. The legal information is specific to Harkins, even to the possible detriment of 11 Dawe and Loud. While the information contained therein was clearly protected by the attorney-12 client privilege when transmitted from Harkins’ attorney to Harkins, the essential question is 13 whether Harkins waived the privilege by transmitting it to third parties Dawe and Loud.

14 Plaintiffs argue that a “joint defense” privilege should apply, but fail to cite any authority, 15 do not identify the lawyer(s) consulted, nor demonstrate the absence of adverse interests among 16 these parties sharing the information in this complex litigation. However, “[t]here is no statute 17 providing for a common interest privilege in California. To the extent there exists a common 18 interest doctrine in this state, it is based generally upon waiver analysis or specifically upon 19 interpretation of the provisions of sections 952 [defining confidential communication between 20 client and lawyer] and 912, subdivision (d) [privilege not waived if disclosure is reasonably 21 necessary to accomplish the purpose for which the lawyer was consulted]. California Evidence 22 Code section 962 recognizes that a “joint client” privilege may apply to “two or more clients 23 have retained or consulted a lawyer upon a matter of common interest,” but the statute is 24 intended to emphasize that no such client “nor the successor in interest of any of them, may 25 claim a privilege under this article as to a communication made in the course of that relationship 26 when such communication is offered in a civil proceeding between one of such clients (or his

1 successor in interest) and another of such clients (or his successor in interest).” Cal. Evid. Code
2 § 962. Thus, parties may share privileged information when it furthers the attorney-client 3 relationship. But sharing the information destroys the privilege where the parties simply have 4 “overlapping interests.” Roush v. Seagate Technology, LLC, 150 Cal.App.4th 210, 223-224 (6th 5 Dist. 2007) (citations omitted). “An expectation of confidentiality . . . is not enough to avoid 6 waiver.” OXY Resources California LLC v. Superior Court, 115 Cal.App.4th 874, 889, 891 (1st 7 Dist. 2004) (emphasis added).

8 The “common interest privilege” was addressed by Magistrate Judge Hollows in DeFazio 9 v. Hollister, Inc., 2008 WL 4952481, *1-2 (E.D. Cal. 2008), which is instructive here.

10 Plaintiff has provided citations to a number of cases to support his argument for 11 protection of communications between co-plaintiffs in this case. Most of the cited 12 cases involve situations where the attorneys were present during the allegedly 13 protected communications. See United States v. Bergonzi, 216 F.R.D. 487, 496 14 (N.D.Cal.2003) (acknowledging that attorneys and clients working together can 15 exchange information among themselves without waiving the privilege); Imperial 16 Corporation of America v. Shields, 179 F.R.D. 286, 288 (S.D. Cal. 1998) (noting 17 communications at issue were between attorneys and creditors’ committee); 18 Avocent Redmond Corp. v. Rose Electronics, Inc., 516 F.Supp.2d 1199, 1202 19 (W.D. Wash. 2007) (involving protection of communications between attorneys 20 and another party); In re Mortgage & Realty Trust, 212 B.R. 649, 651 21 (Bankr.C.D.Cal.1997) (communication at issue was between individual and 22 attorneys); Berger v. Seyfarth Shaw, 2008 WL 4681834, *1 (N.D.Cal.2008) 23 (meeting at issue between third party, defendants and attorneys). But see 24 Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch & Lomb Inc., 115 F.R.D. 308 (N.D.Cal.1987)
25 (finding common interest protection without discussing whether attorney present 26 at communications); Nidec v. Victor Company of Japan, 249 F.R.D. 575 (N.D.
Cal. 2007) (not clear if attorney present but failing to find common interest protection, and noting other courts’ disagreement with Hewlett-Packard to extent that it protected commercial interest rather than legal advantage).

Based on these aforementioned cases, the court finds that the common interest privilege does not extend to communications between co-plaintiffs where counsel is not present, or at the very least, where the specific conversations of the co-parties at issue was not expressly directed by counsel.

DeFazio v. Hollister, Inc., *1-2 (emphasis added).

For these same reasons, Harkins waived the confidentiality of the information he obtained from his attorney when he then conveyed that information to Dawe and Loud. The court concludes, therefore, that the second entry in Harkins’ privilege log is not privileged.

1 Plaintiffs shall provide a copy of this e-mail to defendants within five days after this order is 2 filed.

3 C. Richard Loud

4 For the reasons stated on the record, plaintiffs were directed to produce, within two 5 weeks from the date of the hearing (or by August 12, 2009) all nonprivileged documents 6 responsive to defendants' discovery requests served upon Mr. Loud. As to the documents 7 withheld, plaintiffs are required to provide a privilege log consistent with the instructions 8 provided in this order.

9 IV. Parties' Respective Motions for Sanctions

10 The parties' respective requests for monetary sanctions are denied. As the undersigned 11 stated at the hearing:

12 [N]ow as to sanctions, it brings me back to where I started this hearing this 13 morning. It's – the level of animosity in this case is truly dismaying. If I were to 14 start imposing sanctions on these motions, everybody would end up being 15 sanctioned. . . . I think the appropriate sanction here is for each of you to have to go explain to your clients why they're being billed for all of this time in a discovery war rather than litigating this case. So all requests for sanctions are denied.

16 Transcript, at 65.

17 CONCLUSION

18 For the foregoing reasons, and pursuant to the terms set forth above, the parties' 19 respective motions for discovery and sanctions, consolidated in the amended motion at Docket 20 No. 200, are granted in part and denied in part.

21 SO ORDERED.

22 Dated: October 1, 2009.
