Attorney gets jail for revealing Kamehameha settlement amount

By Associated Press

HONOLULU (AP) _ A Big Island attorney has been sentenced to eight days in jail.

John Goemans was also fined $4,000 for revealing the amount of a 7 million dollar settlement Kamehameha Schools reached with a woman and her son last year.

The confidential settlement ended a lawsuit filed on behalf of the non-Hawaiian student to settle a discrimination lawsuit over Kamehameha's admissions policy favoring Native Hawaiians.

Goemans had planned and started the legal action about four years ago against the schools.

He disclosed terms of the settlement in February, saying the amount was important public information about a charitable institution given tax-exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service.

Goemans says he has no memory of being informed of a court order to keep the settlement amount secret.
