IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

GILBERT ESCOBEDO,

Petitioner,

No. 2:09-cv-0566 GEB JFM (HC)

vs.

CLAUDE FINN, Warden,

Respondent.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Petitioner is a state prisoner proceeding pro se with an application for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Petitioner claims that his federal constitutional right to due process was violated by a 2008 decision of the California Board of Parole Hearings to deny him a parole date.<sup>1</sup>

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In 1981, petitioner was convicted of kidnapping for robbery with use of a deadly weapon and sentenced to seven years to life in prison plus a one year enhancement. See Petition

<sup>1</sup> To the extent that any of petitioner’s claims are based on state law, including but not limited to Board rules, they are not cognizable in this federal habeas corpus action. Federal habeas corpus relief is available under 28 U.S.C. § 2254 only on the basis of some transgression of federal law binding on the state courts. Middleton v. Cupp, 768 F.2d 1083, 1085 (9th Cir. 1985)

1 for Writ of Habeas Corpus, filed February 27, 2009, at 1. On January 17, 2008, petitioner
2 appeared before the Board for a subsequent parole consideration hearing. See Ex. C to Petition,
3 at 3. Petitioner appeared at and participated in the hearing. See Ex. C to Petition. Following 4 deliberations held at the conclusion of the hearing, the Board announced their decision to deny 5 petitioner parole and the reasons for that decision. Id. at 80-87.

6 ANALYSIS

7 I. Standards for a Writ of Habeas Corpus

8 Federal habeas corpus relief is not available for any claim decided on the merits in 9 state court proceedings unless the state court's adjudication of the claim:

10 (1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an 11 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or 12 (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable 13 determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

14 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

15 Under section 2254(d)(1), a state court decision is “contrary to” clearly 16 established United States Supreme Court precedents if it applies a rule that contradicts the 17 governing law set forth in Supreme Court cases, or if it confronts a set of facts that are materially 18 indistinguishable from a decision of the Supreme Court and nevertheless arrives at different 19 result. Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 7 (2002) (citing Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 405-406 20 (2000)).

21 Under the “unreasonable application” clause of section 2254(d)(1), a federal 22 habeas court may grant the writ if the state court identifies the correct governing legal principle
23 from the Supreme Court’s decisions, but unreasonably applies that principle to the facts of the 24 prisoner’s case. Williams, 529 U.S. at 413. A federal habeas court “may not issue the writ
25 simply because that court concludes in its independent judgment that the relevant state-court
26 decision applied clearly established federal law erroneously or incorrectly. Rather, that

1 application must also be unreasonable.” Id. at 412; see also Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 75
2 (2003) (it is “not enough that a federal habeas court, in its independent review of the legal
3 question, is left with a ‘firm conviction’ that the state court was ‘erroneous.’”) (internal citations 4 omitted).

5           The court looks to the last reasoned state court decision as the basis for the state
6 court judgment. Avila v. Galaza, 297 F.3d 911, 918 (9th Cir. 2002). Where the state court 7 reaches a decision on the merits but provides no reasoning to support its conclusion, a federal 8 habeas court independently reviews the record to determine whether habeas corpus relief is 9 available under section 2254(d). Delgado v. Lewis, 223 F.3d 976, 982 (9th Cir. 2000).

10 II. Petitioner’s Claim

11           As noted above, petitioner claims that the denial of parole violated his federal 12 constitutional right to due process of law. The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth 13 Amendment prohibits state action that deprives a person of life, liberty, or property without due 14 process of law. A litigant alleging a due process violation must first demonstrate that he was 15 deprived of a liberty or property interest protected by the Due Process Clause and then show that 16 the procedures attendant upon the deprivation were not constitutionally sufficient. Kentucky 17 Dep’t of Corrections v. Thompson, 490 U.S. 454, 459-60 (1989).

18           A protected liberty interest may arise from either the Due Process Clause of the 19 United States Constitution “by reason of guarantees implicit in the word ‘liberty,’” or from “an 20 expectation or interest created by state laws or policies.” Wilkinson v. Austin, 545 U.S. 209, 21 221 (2005) (citations omitted). See also Board of Pardons v. Allen, 482 U.S. 369, 373 (1987).
22 The United States Constitution does not, of its own force, create a protected liberty interest in a 23 parole date, even one that has been set. Jago v. Van Curen, 454 U.S. 14, 17-21 (1981); 24 Greenholtz v. Inmates of Neb. Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 7 (1979) (There is “no constitutional or 25 inherent right of a convicted person to be conditionally released before the expiration of a valid
26 sentence.”). However, “a state’s statutory scheme, if it uses mandatory language, ‘creates a

1 presumption that parole release will be granted' when or unless certain designated findings are 2 made, and thereby gives rise to a constitutional liberty interest." Greenholtz, 442 U.S. at 12. See 3 also Allen, 482 U.S. at 376-78.

4 California's parole statutes give rise to a liberty interest in parole protected by the 5 federal due process clause. Swarthout v. Cooke, 562 U.S. ____ (2011), No. 10-333, 2011 WL
6 197627, at *2 (Jan. 24, 2011). In California, a prisoner is entitled to release on parole unless 7 there is "some evidence" of his or her current dangerousness. In re Lawrence, 44 Cal.4th 1181, 8 1205-06, 1210 (2008); In re Rosenkrantz, 29 Cal.4th 616, 651-53 (2002). However, in 9 Swarthout the United States Supreme Court held that "[n]o opinion of [theirs] supports 10 converting California's 'some evidence' rule into a substantive federal requirement." Swarthout, 11 2011 WL 197627, at *3. Rather, the protection afforded by the federal due process clause to 12 California parole decisions consists solely of the "minimal" procedural requirements set forth in 13 Greenholtz, specifically "an opportunity to be heard and . . . a statement of the reasons why 14 parole was denied." Id. at *2-3.

15 Here, the record reflects that petitioner was present at the 2008 parole hearing, 16 that he participated in the hearing, and that he was provided with the reasons for the Board's 17 decision to deny parole. According to the United States Supreme Court, the federal due process 18 clause requires no more. Accordingly, petitioner's application for a writ of habeas corpus should 19 be denied.

20 Pursuant to Rule 11 of the Rules Governing Section 2254 Cases in the United 21 States District Courts, "[t]he district court must issue or a deny a certificate of appealability when 22 it enters a final order adverse to the applicant." Rule 11, 28 U.S.C. foll. § 2254. A certificate of 23 appealability may issue under 28 U.S.C. § 2253 "only if the applicant has made a substantial 24 showing of the denial of a constitutional right." 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). The court must either 25 issue a certificate of appealability indicating which issues satisfy the required showing or must 26 state the reasons why such a certificate should not issue. Fed. R. App. P. 22(b). For the reasons

1 set forth in these findings and recommendations, petitioner has not made a substantial showing of 2 the denial of a constitutional right. Accordingly, no certificate of appealability should issue.

3 For the foregoing reasons, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that:

- 4 1. Petitioner's application for a writ of habeas corpus be denied; and
- 5 2. The district court decline to issue a certificate of appealability.

6 These findings and recommendations are submitted to the United States District
7 Judge assigned to the case, pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). Within fourteen 8 days after being served with these findings and recommendations, any party may file written 9 objections with the court and serve a copy on all parties. Such a document should be captioned 10 "Objections to Magistrate Judge's Findings and Recommendations." Any response to the 11 objections shall be filed and served within fourteen days after service of the objections. The 12 parties are advised that failure to file objections within the specified time may waive the right to 13 appeal the District Court's order. Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 1153 (9th Cir. 1991).
