IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JUAN ECHEVARRIA,

Petitioner,

No. 2:09-cv-1822 JAM JFM (HC)

vs.

KATHLEEN DICKENSON,
Warden,

Respondent.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Petitioner is a state prisoner proceeding pro se with an application for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Petitioner claims that his federal constitutional right to due process was violated by a 2006 decision of the California Board of Parole Hearings to deny him a parole date.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In 1988, petitioner was convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to fifteen years to life in prison. See Ex. 1 to Answer, Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus filed in Sacramento County Superior Court, at 2. On January 11, 2006, petitioner appeared before the Board for a subsequent parole consideration hearing. See Ex. A to Ex. 1 to Answer, at 1. Petitioner appeared at and participated in the hearing. See id. Following deliberations held at the

1 conclusion of the hearing, the Board announced their decision to deny petitioner parole and the 2 reasons for that decision. See id. at 100-104.

3 ANALYSIS

4 I. Standards for a Writ of Habeas Corpus

5 Federal habeas corpus relief is not available for any claim decided on the merits in 6 state court proceedings unless the state court's adjudication of the claim:

7 (1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an 8 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or

9 (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable
10 determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

11 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

12 Under section 2254(d)(1), a state court decision is “contrary to” clearly 13 established United States Supreme Court precedents if it applies a rule that contradicts the 14 governing law set forth in Supreme Court cases, or if it confronts a set of facts that are materially 15 indistinguishable from a decision of the Supreme Court and nevertheless arrives at different 16 result. Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 7 (2002) (citing Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 405-406 17 (2000)).

18 Under the “unreasonable application” clause of section 2254(d)(1), a federal 19 habeas court may grant the writ if the state court identifies the correct governing legal principle 20 from the Supreme Court’s decisions, but unreasonably applies that principle to the facts of the 21 prisoner’s case. Williams, 529 U.S. at 413. A federal habeas court “may not issue the writ
22 simply because that court concludes in its independent judgment that the relevant state-court
23 decision applied clearly established federal law erroneously or incorrectly. Rather, that 24 application must also be unreasonable.” Id. at 412; see also Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 75 25 (2003) (it is “not enough that a federal habeas court, in its independent review of the legal

26 ////

1 question, is left with a ‘firm conviction’ that the state court was ‘erroneous.’”) (internal citations 2 omitted).

3 The court looks to the last reasoned state court decision as the basis for the state
4 court judgment. Avila v. Galaza, 297 F.3d 911, 918 (9th Cir. 2002). Where the state court 5 reaches a decision on the merits but provides no reasoning to support its conclusion, a federal 6 habeas court independently reviews the record to determine whether habeas corpus relief is 7 available under section 2254(d). Delgado v. Lewis, 223 F.3d 976, 982 (9th Cir. 2000).

8 II. Petitioner’s Claim

9 As noted above, petitioner claims that the denial of parole violated his federal 10 constitutional right to due process of law. The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth 11 Amendment prohibits state action that deprives a person of life, liberty, or property without due 12 process of law. A litigant alleging a due process violation must first demonstrate that he was 13 deprived of a liberty or property interest protected by the Due Process Clause and then show that 14 the procedures attendant upon the deprivation were not constitutionally sufficient. Kentucky 15 Dep’t of Corrections v. Thompson, 490 U.S. 454, 459-60 (1989).

16 A protected liberty interest may arise from either the Due Process Clause of the 17 United States Constitution “by reason of guarantees implicit in the word ‘liberty,’” or from “an 18 expectation or interest created by state laws or policies.” Wilkinson v. Austin, 545 U.S. 209, 19 221 (2005) (citations omitted). See also Board of Pardons v. Allen, 482 U.S. 369, 373 (1987).

20 The United States Constitution does not, of its own force, create a protected liberty interest in a 21 parole date, even one that has been set. Jago v. Van Curen, 454 U.S. 14, 17-21 (1981); 22 Greenholtz v. Inmates of Neb. Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 7 (1979) (There is “no constitutional or 23 inherent right of a convicted person to be conditionally released before the expiration of a valid
24 sentence.”). However, “a state’s statutory scheme, if it uses mandatory language, ‘creates a 25 presumption that parole release will be granted’ when or unless certain designated findings are

26 ////

1 made, and thereby gives rise to a constitutional liberty interest.” Greenholtz, 442 U.S. at 12. See 2 also Allen, 482 U.S. at 376-78.

3 California’s parole statutes give rise to a liberty interest in parole protected by the 4 federal due process clause. Swarthout v. Cooke, 131 S.Ct. 859, 861 (2011). In California, a 5 prisoner is entitled to release on parole unless there is “some evidence” of his or her current 6 dangerousness. In re Lawrence, 44 Cal.4th 1181, 1205-06, 1210 (2008); In re Rosenkrantz, 29
7 Cal.4th 616, 651-53 (2002). However, in Swarthout the United States Supreme Court held that 8 “[n]o opinion of [theirs] supports converting California’s ‘some evidence’ rule into a substantive 9 federal requirement.” Swarthout, 131 S.Ct. at 862. Rather, the protection afforded by the 10 federal due process clause to California parole decisions consists solely of the “minimal” 11 procedural requirements set forth in Greenholtz, specifically “an opportunity to be heard and . . .
12 a statement of the reasons why parole was denied.” Id.

13 Here, the record reflects that petitioner was present at the 2006 parole hearing,
14 that he participated in the hearing, and that he was provided with the reasons for the Board’s
15 decision to deny parole. According to the United States Supreme Court, the federal due process 16 clause requires no more. Accordingly, petitioner’s application for a writ of habeas corpus should 17 be denied.

18 Pursuant to Rule 11 of the Rules Governing Section 2254 Cases in the United 19 States District Courts, “[t]he district court must issue or a deny a certificate of appealability when 20 it enters a final order adverse to the applicant.” Rule 11, 28 U.S.C. foll. § 2254. A certificate of 21 appealability may issue under 28 U.S.C. § 2253 “only if the applicant has made a substantial 22 showing of the denial of a constitutional right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). The court must either 23 issue a certificate of appealability indicating which issues satisfy the required showing or must 24 state the reasons why such a certificate should not issue. Fed. R. App. P. 22(b). For the reasons 25 set forth in these findings and recommendations, petitioner has not made a substantial showing of 26 the denial of a constitutional right. Accordingly, no certificate of appealability should issue.

1 For the foregoing reasons, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that:

- 2 1. Petitioner’s application for a writ of habeas corpus be denied; and 3 2. The district court decline to issue a certificate of appealability.

4 These findings and recommendations are submitted to the United States District
5 Judge assigned to the case, pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). Within fourteen 6 days after being served with these findings and recommendations, any party may file written 7 objections with the court and serve a copy on all parties. Such a document should be captioned 8 “Objections to Magistrate Judge’s Findings and Recommendations.” Any response to the 9 objections shall be filed and served within fourteen days after service of the objections. The 10 parties are advised that failure to file objections within the specified time may waive the right to 11 appeal the District Court’s order. Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 1153 (9th Cir. 1991).
