

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JEREMY GILMORE and DANA
GILMORE,

Plaintiffs,

v.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY,
DENNIS MAGURES, JOHN
PARKER, CAROLYN M. WILL, ANDREW
RIBBING and LEO MARIN and DOES
1-10, inclusive

Defendants.

_____ /

Case No.09-02180-JAM-DAD

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND
DENYING IN PART DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS AND MOTION TO STRIKE

This matter comes before the Court on Defendant Union Pacific's ("Defendant's") Motion to Dismiss the second through eighth causes of action in Plaintiffs Jeremy Gilmore and Dana Gilmore's ("Plaintiffs'") First Amended Complaint ("FAC"). Defendant moves to dismiss the causes of action pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Plaintiffs oppose the

1 motion. Defendant also brings a Motion to Strike, pursuant to
2 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(f).<sup>1</sup>

3
4 I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

5 As alleged in the FAC, Plaintiffs, who are husband and 6 wife, were both employed by Union Pacific Railroad Company at an 7 engine repair facility in Roseville, California. Plaintiff
8 Jeremy Gilmore ("Jeremy") was a machinist and Plaintiff Dana 9 Gilmore ("Dana") was an electrician. On August 14, 2008, Jeremy 10 was hit and injured by an air compartment door while conducting 11 tests of a locomotive engine. He was hospitalized following the 12 accident, and completed a personal injury report at the request
13 of Defendant. Shortly thereafter, he was cited for violations of 14 various work rules, including allegations that he falsified the 15 extent of his injuries in the injury report. Jeremy was subject
16 to a disciplinary hearing held by Defendant, in which managers
17 Carolyn Will and Dennis Magures acted as hearing officer and 18 fact finder. Carolyn Will thereafter sent Jeremy a letter
19 informing him that he was found guilty of the charges against 20 him and terminated on November 6, 2008.

21
22
23
24 In conjunction with Defendant's investigation of Jeremy,
25 Dana was questioned by Defendant and accused of dishonesty and 26 insubordination based on her refusal to testify against Jeremy

27
28

---

<sup>1</sup>These motions were determined to be suitable for decision without oral argument. E.D. Cal. L.R. 78-230(h).

1 at his disciplinary hearing. She was then subjected to a
2 disciplinary hearing at which Andrew Ribbing served as hearing
3 officer and fact finder. He later informed Dana that she was 4 terminated on December 22, 2008.
5

6 Plaintiffs originally filed suit in Placer Superior Court,
7 alleging violations of the Federal Employers Liability Act
8 ("FELA"), 45 U.S.C. §51 et seq., wrongful discharge, intentional
9 infliction of emotional distress, and invasion of privacy.
10 Plaintiffs seek back pay, general, special and punitive damages, 11 and attorney's fees and costs. Defendant removed the case to 12 District Court based on federal question jurisdiction, and in 13 the alternative, diversity jurisdiction. Defendant also noted in 14 the Notice of Removal that it was not joining the individually
15 named defendants (Dennis Magures, John Parker, Carolyn Will, Leo 16 Marin and Andrew Ribbing) in the removal because allegedly they 17 had not been served and all causes of action against them were 18 barred as a matter of law. Defendant then brought the present
19 Motion to Dismiss and Motion to Strike, in which Defendant also 20 argues for dismissal on behalf of the individually named
21 defendants.
22
23
24

25 II. OPINION

26 A. Legal Standard

27 A party may move to dismiss an action for failure to state a
28 claim upon which relief may be granted pursuant to Federal Rule

1 of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). In considering a motion to dismiss,
2 the court must accept the allegations in the complaint as true
3 and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff.
4 Sheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236 (1975), overruled on other
5 grounds by Davis v. Sherer, 468 U.S. 183 (1984); Cruz v. Beto,
6 405 U.S. 319, 322 (1972). Assertions that are mere "legal 7 conclusions," however, are not entitled to the assumption of 8 truth. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1950 (2009), citing
9 Bell Atl. Corp v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). To survive
10 a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff needs to plead "enough facts to 11 state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Twombly, 12 550 U.S. at 570. Dismissal is appropriate where the plaintiff
13 fails to state a claim supportable by a cognizable legal theory.
14 Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't, 901 F. 2d 696, 699 (9th 15 Cir. 1990).

16
17
18
19 Upon granting a motion to dismiss, a court has discretion to 20 allow leave to amend the complaint pursuant to Federal Rule of 21 Civil Procedure 15(a). "Absent prejudice, or a strong showing of 22 any [other relevant] factor[], there exists a presumption under 23 Rule 15(a) in favor of granting leave to amend." Eminence
24 Capital, L.L.C. v. Aspeon, Inc., 316 F. 3d 1048, 1052 (9th Cir.
25 2003). "Dismissal with prejudice and without leave to amend is 26 not appropriate unless it is clear . . . that the complaint
27 could not be saved by amendment." Id. Accordingly, a court
28

1 should grant leave to amend the Complaint unless the futility of 2 amendment warrants dismissing a claim with prejudice.

3 "Rule 12(f) provides in pertinent part that the Court may 4 order stricken from any pleading any insufficient defense or any 5 redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter. . .
6 Motions to strike are disfavored and infrequently granted. A
7 motion to strike should not be granted unless it is clear that 8 the matter to be stricken could have no possible bearing on the 9 subject matter of the litigation. . . A motion to strike may be 10 used to strike any part of the prayer for relief when the 11 recovery sought is unavailable as a matter of law." Bassett v.
12 Ruggles et al., 2009 WL 2982895 at *24(E.D. Cal. Sept. 14, 13 2009)(internal citations omitted).

14
15
16
17
18 B. Wrongful Discharge, Second Cause of Action

19 Jeremy alleges that he was wrongfully terminated in 20 violation of public policy. He alleges that he was terminated
21 because Defendant knew he intended to pursue his rights for 22 compensation under FEHA, and wished to discourage him from doing
23 so. He alleges that his termination was in violation of the law
24 and policy articulated in California Labor Code Section 132(a)
25 and the Federal Rail Safety Act, 49 U.S.C. Section 20109(a)(4).
26 Defendant argues that this cause of action is preempted by the 27 FRSA, the Railway Labor Act ("RLA") 45 U.S.C. 151 et seq., and 28

1 FELA. For the reasons set forth below, Defendant's motion to
2 dismiss this cause of action is DENIED.

3
4 1. FRSA Preemption

5 Defendant argues that the FRSA preempts the claim of 6 wrongful discharge because the FRSA contains an election of 7 remedies clause. However, as Jeremy notes, he is not suing
8 under the FRSA. He is merely referencing the FRSA as one of the 9 public policies violated by his discharge. Because he is not 10 suing under the FRSA, Defendant's argument that the FRSA
11 constitutes an election of remedies does not apply. Likewise,
12 Defendant's argument that the FRSA does not create a private 13 right of action does not apply. Gonero v. Union Pacific Railroad 14 Company, 2009 WL 3378987 at *6(E.D. Cal. Oct. 19, 2009). The 15 California Supreme Court has expressly rejected the argument
16 that common law wrongful termination claims may not be 17 "tethered" to federal statutes that lack a private cause of 18 action. Id. at *7, citing Green v. Ralee Engineering Co., 19
19 Cal. 4th 66, 87-88 (1998).

20
21
22 Similarly, Defendant argues that the cause of action under 23 California Labor Code Section 132(a) must be dismissed,
24 apparently misunderstanding that Jeremy is not attempting to sue 25 under the Labor Code. Like his reference to the FRSA, the 26 reference to the California Labor Code was to demonstrate the 27 existence of a public policy advancing workplace safety. Section
28

1 132(a) declares it a policy of the state that there should be no
2 discrimination against workers who are injured in the scope of 3 their employment.
4

5 2. RLA Preemption

6 Defendant argues that the RLA preempts a wrongful
7 termination claim because adjudication of the claim would 8 require interpreting the collective bargaining agreement 9 ("CBA"). The RLA is the exclusive dispute resolution process for 10 claims that require adjudication of the CBA, because the 11 National Railroad Adjustment Board and the private tribunals
12 authorized by the RLA provide a "mandatory, exclusive, and 13 comprehensive system for resolving [railroad] grievance
14 disputes." Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, v. Louisville
15 N.R., 373 U.S. 33, 38 (1963). Only those disputes that can be 16 classified as "major" or "minor" under the Act are preempted by 17 the RLA. Hawaiian Airlines, Inc. v. Norris, 512 U.S. 246, 252
18 (1994). Defendant does not contend that Jeremy raises a "major"
19 dispute, rather it contends that Jeremy's wrongful discharge
20 claim is a "minor" dispute. A "minor" dispute involves 21 interpreting or applying an existing CBA. Id. at 253. However, 22 "substantive protections provided by state law, independent of 23 whatever labor agreement might govern, are not pre-empted under 24 the RLA." Id. at 257 (citing Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Norwood, 25 283 U.S. 249, 258 (1931)).
26
27
28

1 In deciding whether Jeremy has raised a valid state law
2 claim for wrongful termination that should survive a motion to 3 dismiss, the first step is to determine if he has asserted a
4 public policy capable of supporting such a claim. California
5 recognizes an exception to the at-will employment doctrine,
6 allowing employees fired in violation of fundamental state or 7 federal public policy to sue for tort damages. Gonero, 2009 WL
8 3378987 at *7 (citing Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 27 Cal.
9 3d 167, 172 (1980)). A public policy may support a Tameny claim 10 if it is "(1) delineated in either constitutional or statutory 11 provisions; (2) 'public' in the sense that it inures to the 12 benefit of the public rather than serving merely the interests 13 of the individual; (3) well established at the time of 14 discharge; and (4) 'substantial' and 'fundamental.'" Stevenson v.
15 Superior Court, 16 Cal. 4th 880, 901-02 (1997).
16
17
18

19 "While the California Labor Code and the FRSA serve to 20 regulate the terms of the employment relationship, they also 21 reflect a public policy in favor of promoting workplace safety."
22 Gonero, 2009 WL 3378987 at *8. California has recognized
23 workplace safety as a fundamental public policy under California
24 Labor Code §6400. Id. at *9 (citing City of Palo Alto v. Service
25 Employees International Union, 77 Cal. App. 4th 327, 336
26 (2000)). Likewise, in the employee protections section of the 27 FRSA, §20109(a)(4), it is unlawful for an employer to terminate
28

1 an employee who notifies the railroad carrier of a work-related
2 injury or illness, as was the case when Jeremy notified
3 Defendant of his injury. In the Gonero case, a case also against 4 Union Pacific similar to the case at bar, plaintiff alleged 5 violations of the employee protections provided by the FRSA in 6 Section 20109. The court held that Union Pacific was expressly 7 bound by the workplace safety provisions of FRSA §20109. The 8 court found that the plaintiff had asserted a valid common law
9 claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy
10 which the RLA may not preempt. Gonero, 2009 WL 3378987 at *7.
11 The public policy supporting employee workplace safety advanced 12 by the FRSA is a well-established "public" policy, and is 13 "substantial" and "fundamental," thus meeting all the 14 requirements to support a Tameny claim. Id. at *8-9.

15
16
17
18 The second step in the RLA preemption analysis is to 19 determine whether Jeremy has raised a "minor" dispute which 20 requires interpretation of the CBA. Defendant asserts that 21 Jeremy's common law wrongful discharge claim is not independent
22 of the CBA, because the FAC alleges that the disciplinary 23 procedures and reasons for his termination were false, baseless
24 and pre-textual. As it did in the Gonero case, Defendant cites
25 Bielicke v. Terminal R.R. Ass'n, 30 F. 3d 877 (7th Cir. 1994),
26 in support of this proposition. In Gonero, the Court found that 27 "Bielicke is inapposite" because the source of the right claimed 28

1 by plaintiffs in Bielicke was the CBA itself. The plaintiffs'
2 claims in Bielicke constituted a 'minor' dispute subject to RLA
3 preemption because the sole inquiry was whether the company
4 abused its investigatory powers granted by the CBA. On the other
5 hand, Plaintiff's claims in Gonero alleged that he was fired in 6 violation of California and federal public policies supporting
7 workplace and railroad safety. Accordingly, the Gonero court
8 held that neither of these claims involve rights or duties that 9 arise solely from the CBA and denied defendant's motion to 10 dismiss on these grounds. Gonero, 2009 WL 3378987 at *9. The 11 same result is required in this case.

14        Though Jeremy's claim describes the disciplinary procedure, 15 it is not solely based on whether the disciplinary procedure was 16 properly carried out, but rather whether he was fired for an 17 unlawful purpose. "The Hawaiian Airlines Court made clear that 18 'whether the employer's actions make out the element of 19 discharge under [state] law' was a purely factual question not 20 preempted by the RLA." Id. (citing Hawaiian Airlines, Inc. v.
21 Norris, 512 U.S.246, 266 (1994)). Accordingly, Jeremy's claim, 22 which raises a factual issue of whether his termination was 23 retaliatory and in violation of public policy, is not preempted
24 by the RLA.

1 3. FELA Preemption

2 As an alternative basis for dismissal of the wrongful
3 discharge claim, Defendant argues that the claim is preempted by 4 FELA. FELA provides a remedy for workers injured by their 5 employer's or co-workers' negligence, and makes it illegal for 6 an employer to retaliate against an employee for reporting
7 information about a workplace injury. 45 U.S.C. §51. A primary 8 purpose of FELA was to eliminate the traditional defenses to 9 tort liability that had prevented railroad workers from 10 recovering for their work-related injuries. Gonero, 2009 WL
11 3378987 at *10.
12
13

14 Defendant cites Wildman v. Burlington Northern Railroad
15 Co., 825 F. 2d 1392, 1395 (9th Cir.) for the proposition that 16 FELA is the sole exclusive remedy for injured railroad
17 employees. The court in Wildman notes that FELA is comprehensive 18 and exclusive with respect to a railroad's liability for 19 injuries suffered by its employees. FELA does not, however,
20 authorize injured railroad employees to recover damages for the 21 aggravation of their injuries resulting from their subsequent 22 and allegedly wrongful discharge. Gonero, 2009 WL 3378987 at *10
23 (citing Lewy v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co., 799 F. 2d 24 1281 (9th Cir.)). Nor does it encompass employees who are 25 discharged or disciplined because they themselves initiate FELA
26 actions; the FELA protection extends only to those disciplined
27
28

1 for reporting injury information to others. Lewy, 799 F. 2d at 2 1293.

3 Here, the FAC alleges that Jeremy was fired because 4 Defendant knew he intended to bring a FELA claim regarding the 5 injuries he suffered. Jeremy is not attempting to sue for 6 wrongful discharge under FELA; he only alleges a state law tort 7 claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy. His 8 wrongful discharge claim is not based on Defendant's liability
9 for his injury, it is based on Defendant's decision to 10 unlawfully terminate him. Accordingly, FELA does not preempt the 11 claim.
12

13
14 C. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, Third Cause of 15 Action

16 Jeremy alleges intentional infliction of emotional distress
17 against Defendant and against the individually named defendants
18 Carolyn Will and Dennis Magures, through whom Defendant acted.
19 Jeremy alleges that he suffered from humiliation, mental anguish
20 and emotional distress as a result of Defendant's, Will and 21 Magures' conduct regarding his alleged wrongful discipline and 22 termination. He alleges their actions were done with malice,
23 fraud, oppression and reckless disregard of his rights.
24

25 Defendant first argues that Jeremy's claim of intentional
26 infliction emotional distress is preempted by FELA, but then 27 concedes in its Reply that FELA does not preempt such a claim.
28

1 Indeed, FEHA does not bar a claim of emotional distress. Gonero, 2 2009 WL 3378987 at *11. However, Defendant then raises the 3 argument that the claim for intentional infliction of emotional
4 distress is preempted by the RLA, and that RLA preemption
5 constitutes an issue of subject matter jurisdiction. Andrews v.
6 Louisville & N.R. Co., 406 U.S. 320,322 (1972).
7

8 A prima facie case of intentional infliction of emotional 9 distress requires proving that Defendant's conduct was 10 outrageous. Saridakis v. United Airlines, 166 F. 3d 1272, 1278
11 (1999). "Conduct is deemed outrageous if it is so extreme as to 12 exceed all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized
13 community." Id. (internal citations omitted). Courts have 14 consistently found that the RLA preempts claims for intentional 15 infliction of emotional distress, because "determining whether 16 an employer's conduct is outrageous requires an interpretation
17 of the CBA, therefore the claim is not independent." Id. (citing 18 Stone v. Writers Guild of America West, Inc., 101 F. 3d 1312,
19 1314 (9th Cir. 1996); Grote v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 905
20 F. 2d 1307, 1310 (9th Cir. 1990); Miller v. AT&T Network 21 Systems, 850 F. 2d 543, 550 (9th Cir. 1988)). Because it is 22 preempted by the RLA, the Court does not have subject matter
23 jurisdiction to decide the claim. Accordingly, Defendant's
24 motion to dismiss the third cause of action for intentional
25 infliction of emotional distress is GRANTED WITH PREJUDICE.
26
27
28

1
2 D. Wrongful Discharge for Assertion of the Constitutional Right
3 to Privacy, Fourth Cause of Action
4

5 Dana alleges that she was fired for two reasons: refusing 6 to reveal to Defendant information that Defendant believed she 7 possessed due to her marital relationship with Jeremy, and 8 refusing Defendant's orders to testify against Jeremy at his 9 disciplinary hearing. Dana alleges that her termination violated
10 public policy protecting the marital relationship, including 11 marital privacy and loyalty. Defendant argues that her claim is 12 preempted by the RLA because determining whether her supervisors
13 had the right to compel her to testify or answer questions about 14 her husband is an issue that can only be resolved by 15 interpreting the CBA.
16
17

18 However, as with Jeremy's claim for wrongful termination,
19 the Court must examine whether the claim alleges an established
20 public policy from which Dana can allege substantive protections
21 provided by state law independent of whatever labor agreement
22 might govern, or whether the claim raises only a minor dispute
23 requiring interpretation and application of the CBA.
24

25 Article 1, Section 1 of the California Constitution states
26 that privacy is an inalienable right. This constitutional
27 privacy provision provides protection against both governmental 28

1 and non-governmental intrusion. Semore v. Pool, 217 Cal. App. 3d
2 1087, 1094 (1990).

3 "While an employee sacrifices some privacy rights when he 4 enters the workplace, . . .the right to privacy has been 5 recognized as a fundamental interest of our society." Id. at 6 1096. The assertion of a constitutional right to privacy is the 7 assertion of a fundamental principle of public policy which is 8 sufficient to state a cause of action for wrongful termination.
9 Id. at 1097.

10
11
12 Here, Dana has asserted a valid cause of wrongful discharge
13 in violation of public policy. There is an established public
14 policy that affirms a right to privacy, and she has alleged a 15 reasonable expectation of privacy that was violated by 16 Defendant's conduct. Her claim is not one that invokes the 17 "minor" dispute of what authority a hearing officer may have had 18 pursuant to the CBA, but rather the substantive issue of whether 19 an employer may lawfully terminate an employee who refuses to 20 give up her marital privacy rights to divulge private 21 information about her husband.
22

23
24 The right to privacy is not absolute, and must be balanced
25 by an employer's need to regulate the conduct of its employees 26 at work. Id. at 1098. However, this case must proceed to develop 27 the facts needed to apply this balancing test. The factual issue
28 of whether Defendant had some compelling need to justify this

1 intrusion into her privacy is not appropriate for resolution at 2 the motion to dismiss stage.

3         Lastly, Defendant also argues that as with Jeremy's
4 wrongful termination claim, this claim is preempted by FEHA.
5 However, FEHA does not apply here because Dana alleges no
6 physical injury, nor is she alleging retaliation for reporting
7 an injury, nor even trying to bring a claim under FEHA.
8 Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss the fourth cause of 9 action is DENIED.
10
11

12
13 E. Wrongful Discharge Due to Marital Discrimination, Fifth Cause
14 of Action

15         Dana also alleges that she was wrongfully terminated in 16 violation of public policy against marital discrimination. The 17 public policy identified by Dana in the FAC is the statute
18 against marital discrimination in employment contained in the 19 California Government Code Section 12940(a).
20

21         Defendant argues that marital discrimination cases fall 22 into two categories: status cases (where a person is 23 discriminated against for being married, single, etc) and 24 conduit cases (where the discrimination is based on the identity 25 of who the person is married to). Chen v. County of Orange, 96
26 Cal. App. 4th 926, 939-943 (2002). Conduit cases are further 27 divided between those in which the animus is unlawful (such as 28

1 race discrimination) and those in which the animus is not
2 unlawful (such as political animus). Id. "Conduit cases not
3 based on some wrongful animus. . . have been universally met
4 with rejection as valid marital status discrimination claims.
5 Perhaps the best explanation for that is this: In such cases,
6 the marriage qua marriage is irrelevant to the adverse action
7 taken by the employer. What the employer really cares about is 8 the substantive relationship between the plaintiff and someone
9 else, be he or she spouse, romantic partner, or even 'just a
10 friend.'" Id.

13 In her Opposition Dana argues that her case is a conduit
14 case, where the illegal animus is, "Union Pacific's wrongful 15 termination of Dana in violation of public policy and because of 16 the unconstitutional violation of Dana's right to marital 17 privacy, to be loyal to her husband and maintain the 18 confidentiality of marital communications and to further the 19 effects of Union Pacific's illegal termination of her husband."
20 Opposition, P 22. Defendant argues that this does not constitute 21 illegal animus, as it is more analogous to the "political"
22 animus rejected by the court in Chen. In Chen, the Court did not 23 find that the plaintiff had suffered marital discrimination, 24 finding instead that she was fired because her husband was "on 25 the outs" with the defendant. The court found this to be a
26
27
28

1 political animus conduit case and not and unlawful animus
2 conduit case. Chen, 96 Cal. App. 4th at 944.

3 Dana attempts to distinguish her situation from that of 4 the plaintiff in Chen, alleging that Jeremy was not "on the 5 outs" with Defendant. However, she fails to allege an unlawful 6 animus other than the convoluted "animus" quoted above from the 7 Opposition. Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss the cause
8 of action for marital status discrimination is GRANTED, however
9 Plaintiffs are given leave to amend the claim.
10
11

12
13 F. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, Sixth Cause of 14 Action

15 Dana alleges intentional infliction of emotional distress
16 against Defendant and against the individually named defendants
17 Dennis Magures, John Parker, Leo Marin and Andrew Ribbing, 18 through whom Defendant acted. Her claim stems from their alleged 19 insistence that she provide specific information about Jeremy 20 (information that she alleges would have been false) and that 21 she testify against Jeremy at his disciplinary hearing. Again,
22 as with Jeremy's claim for intentional infliction of emotional
23 distress, whether this conduct constituted "outrageous" conduct
24 on the part of the Defendant and the individually named 25 supervisors requires the interpretation and application of the 26 CBA. Accordingly, this claim is preempted by the RLA and 27
28

1 defendant's motion to dismiss the claim is GRANTED WITH
2 PREJUDICE.

3
4
5 G. Invasion of Privacy, Seventh Cause of Action

6 Plaintiffs allege invasion of privacy against Defendant and 7 individually named defendants John Parker, Dennis Magures, Leo
8 Marin and Andrew Ribbing based on Defendants' insistence that 9 Dana answer questions regarding her husband's injuries and 10 testify against him at his disciplinary hearing. Article 1, 11 Section 1 of the California Constitution states that, "All
12 people are by nature free and independent and have inalienable
13 rights. Among these are enjoying and defending life and liberty, 14 acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and 15 obtaining safety, happiness and privacy." To bring a claim for 16 invasion of privacy, a plaintiff must "establish each of the 17 following: (1) a legally protected privacy interest; (2) a
18 reasonable expectation of privacy in the circumstances; and (3)
19 conduct by defendant constituting a serious invasion of 20 privacy." Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn., 7 Cal.
21 4th 1, 39-40.
22
23
24

25 The legally protected privacy interest asserted by 26 Plaintiffs is the right to autonomy privacy, recognized by the 27 court in Hill. ("Legally recognized privacy interests are 28 generally of two classes: (1) interests in precluding the

1 dissemination or misuse of sensitive and confidential
2 information ("informational privacy"); and (2) interest in 3 making intimate personal decisions or conducting personal
4 activities without observation, intrusion or interference
5 ("autonomy privacy")). Plaintiffs allege that they had a
6 reasonable expectation of privacy in whatever knowledge Dana had 7 regarding her husband's physical injuries, and that they had a
8 reasonable expectation that they would not be compelled by 9 Defendants to disclose such private information about each other
10 known only because of their marital relationship. The Supreme 11 Court has recognized the intimacy of the marital relationship,
12 and the bilateral loyalty which it promotes, (see e.g. Griswold 13 v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 486 (1965)). Thus, Plaintiffs 14 allege that Defendants' conduct in attempting to force them to 15 violate this recognized loyalty and intimacy constituted a 16 serious invasion of privacy.

20 "Whether a legally recognized privacy interest is present
21 in a given case is a question of law to be decided by the court.
22 . . . Whether plaintiff had a reasonable expectation of privacy
23 in the circumstances and whether defendant's conduct constituted 24 a serious invasion of privacy are mixed questions of law and 25 fact." Id. at 39-40 (internal citations omitted). The 26 allegations made by Plaintiffs are sufficient at this stage to 27 raise the possibility of an invasion of privacy claim.
28

1 Plaintiffs have alleged marital privacy, a legally recognized
2 privacy interest. Further factual development is needed to 3 determine the mixed question of law and fact regarding 4 circumstances and conduct, thus Defendant's motion to dismiss
5 the invasion of privacy claim is DENIED.
6

7
8 H. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, Eighth Cause of 9 Action
10

11 Lastly, Plaintiffs allege intentional infliction of 12 emotional distress against Defendant and John Parker, Dennis 13 Magures, Leo Marin and Andrew Ribbing for their roles in all of 14 the above causes of action. However, like the other causes of 15 action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, this 16 claim fails because it requires interpretation of the CBA and is 17 therefore preempted by the RLA. Accordingly, Defendant's motion
18 to dismiss this claim is GRANTED WITH PREJUDICE.
19

20
21 I. Fraudulent Joinder
22

23 Plaintiffs have brought claims of intentional infliction of 24 emotional distress and invasion of privacy against the 25 individually named defendants for their roles in Plaintiffs'
26 firing. Defendant argues that the individually named defendants
27 in the suit, Dennis Magures, John Parker, Carolyn M. Will, 28 Andrew Ribbing and Leo Marin, all supervisors of Plaintiffs,

1 should be dismissed from the suit as fraudulently joined because 2 of limits on supervisory liability for intentional infliction of 3 emotional distress and invasion of privacy. None of the 4 individually named defendants have been served with the FAC and 5 therefore are not yet before this Court. Accordingly,
6 defendant's motion is premature and the court declines to reach
7 the issue of supervisory liability. The Court has dismissed all 8 the intentional infliction of emotional distress claims as 9 preempted by the RLA and therefore the only possible cause of 10 action remaining against Magures, Parker, Leo and Marin is the 11 seventh for invasion of privacy. Defendant Carolyn Will is 12 dismissed from this lawsuit.

13
14
15 Plaintiffs are ordered to file and serve their Second
16 Amended Complaint on all named defendants within twenty (20)
17 days from the date of this Order or dismiss the remaining
18 individually named defendants.
19

20
21 J. Motion to Strike

22 Defendant moves to strike from the FAC Plaintiff's request
23 for attorney's fees, on the grounds that fees are not 24 recoverable in actions for wrongful discharge in violation of 25 public policy. Plaintiffs do not address the Motion to Strike in 26 the Opposition. Nevertheless, as explained below, this motion is 27 DENIED at this time.
28

1            "In actions involving state law claims, federal courts
2 apply the law of the forum state to determine whether a party is 3 entitled to attorney's fees, unless it conflicts with a valid
4 federal statute or procedural rule." Gonero, 2009 WL 3378987 at 5 *11 (citing MRO Communications Inc. v. AT&T Co., 197 F. 3d 1276, 6 1282 (9th Cir. 1999)).

7
8            Defendant argues that the only claim which provides for 9 statutory attorney's fees is the claim for marital status
10 discrimination, which Defendant argues does not survive the 11 motion to dismiss stage. However, attorney's fees are allowable 12 as costs under Section 1032 of the California Code of Civil 13 Procedure when they are authorized by either contract, statute,
14 or law. Gonero, 2009 WL 3378987 at *11. Furthermore, California
15 Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5 provides for fees to be 16 awarded when the prevailing party was enforcing a right
17 affecting the public interest. Id. at *12. Because a trial court 18 has considerable discretion in deciding whether fees are 19 appropriate, the claim for fees cannot be eliminated as a matter
20 of law. Id. Given the similarity of issues in the Gonero case, 21 it is also possible that fees could be awarded in this case, and 22 they cannot be ruled out as a matter of law at this early stage.
23 Accordingly, Defendant's motion to strike the request for fees
24 from the Prayer for Relief is DENIED.
25
26
27
28

1 III. ORDER

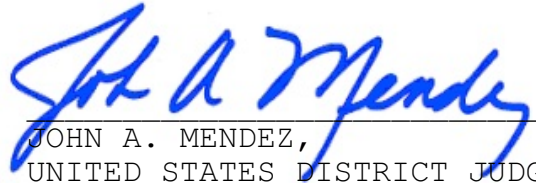

2 For the reasons set forth above, Defendant's Motion to
3 Dismiss is GRANTED IN PART, and DENIED IN PART. Defendant's
4 Motion to Strike is DENIED and Defendant's request that the 5 Court find that the individually named defendants are 6 fraudulently joined is DENIED.
7

8 More specifically the Court hereby orders that:

- 9
- 10 1. The third, sixth, and eighth causes of action are 11 DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE;
  - 12 2. The fifth cause of action is DISMISSED WITHOUT 13 PREJUDICE;
  - 14 3. Individually named defendant Carolyn Will is 15 dismissed from this action;
  - 16 4. Plaintiffs file and serve their Second Amended
17 Complaint on all Defendants within twenty (20) days
18 of the date of this Order or file a dismissal of 19 the four remaining individually named defendants.
20

21 IT IS SO ORDERED.

22 Dated: December 1, 2009

23
24 JOHN A. MENDEZ,
UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE