NO. CIV. 2:10-348 WBS CKD

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER RE:
MOTION TO RECONSIDER, VACATE,
AMEND OR MODIFY THE ORDER OF DISMISSAL ENTERED BY THE COURT
ON 4 OCTOBER 2011

-----oo0oo-----

On August 16, 2011, the Buena Vista Rancheria of Me-Wuk Indians (the "Tribe") requested permission to appear specially to present a motion to dismiss based on failure to join a necessary and indispensable party under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19.

1 (Docket No. 32.) On October 4, 2011, the court issued an order 2 dismissing the action. (Docket No. 62.) Plaintiffs now move to 3 reconsider, vacate, amend, or modify this court's order of 4 October 4, 2011.

5 Reconsideration is an "extraordinary remedy" which 6 should be used "sparingly in the interests of finality and the 7 conservation of judicial resources." Kona Enter., Inc. v. Estate 8 of Bishop, 229 F.3d 877, 890 (9th Cir. 2000); see also Sch. Dist.
9 No. 1J, Multnomah Cnty. v. ACandS, Inc., 5 F.3d 1255, 1263 (9th 10 Cir. 1993) (stating that reconsideration should only be granted 11 in "highly unusual circumstances"). A motion for reconsideration 12 "should not merely present arguments previously raised, or which 13 could have been raised in the initial . . . motion." United 14 States v. Westlands Water Dist., 134 F. Supp. 2d 1111, 1130 (E.D.
15 Cal. 2001) (citing Backlund v. Barnhart, 778 F.2d 1386, 1388 (9th 16 Cir. 1985)).

17 Rule 60(b) "provides for reconsideration only upon a 18 showing of (1) mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect; (2) newly 19 discovered evidence; (3) fraud; (4) a void judgment; (5) a 20 satisfied or discharged judgment; or (6) 'extraordinary 21 circumstances' which would justify relief." Sch. Dist. No. 1J, 5 22 F.3d at 1263 (quoting Fuller v. M.G. Jewelry, 950 F.2d 1437, 1442 23 (9th Cir. 1991)). Under Rule 60(b), reconsideration is generally 24 only appropriate where the district court (1) is presented with 25 newly discovered evidence, (2) committed clear error or the 26 initial decision was manifestly unjust, or (3) if there is an 27 intervening change in controlling law. See Westlands Water 28 Dist., 134 F. Supp. 2d at 1131. Under Rule 59(e),

1 "[r]econsideration is appropriate if the district court (1) is 2 presented with newly discovered evidence, (2) committed clear 3 error or the initial decision was manifestly unjust, or (3) if 4 there is an intervening change in controlling law." Sch. Dist.
5 No. 1J, 5 F.3d at 1263.

6 A district court may reconsider an order under either 7 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 59(e) (motion to alter or amend 8 judgment) or Rule 60(b) (relief from judgment or order).
9 Backlund, 778 F.2d at 1388. Plaintiffs frame their motion as 10 being brought under both Rule 59 and Rule 60.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiffs do not 11 present the court with newly discovered evidence, nor do they 12 present any new caselaw that would constitute an intervening 13 change in controlling law. For the purposes of this motion, all 14 but one of plaintiffs' claims rests on allegations that the court 15 made a "clear error" or a "mistake" in its prior order. The 16

17 <sup>1</sup> The Ninth Circuit has held that when the moving party 18 does not specify under which rule they bring a motion for 19 reconsideration, it should be treated as a motion under Rule 20 59(e), rather than Rule 60, if it is filed within ten days of the 21 entry of judgment. See Am. Ironworks & Erectors, Inc. v. N. Am.
22 Const. Corp., 248 F.3d 892, 899 (9th Cir. 2001). In 2009, Rule 23 59(e) was amended to change the time for filing a Rule 59(e) 24 motion from ten to twenty-eight days. Plaintiffs' motion for 25 reconsideration was filed within twenty-eight days of the entry 26 of judgment. Thus, if plaintiffs had not specified what rule 27 they were relying on, the court would have applied Rule 59(e).

28 The Tribe argues that plaintiffs' motion should be decided under Rule 60(b) because plaintiffs did not specifically mention subpart (e) of Rule 59, (Opp'n to Mot. for Recons. at 3:1-9, n.3), citing Harrington v. City of Chicago, 433 F.3d 542 (7th Cir. 2006), to support its position. The Seventh Circuit in Harrington, however, addressed what rule to apply where the party did not specify either Rule 59 or Rule 60. See Harrington, 433 F.3d at 546. As plaintiffs did specify Rule 59 (although not subpart (e) specifically), and the Ninth Circuit has held that courts should presume that a motion for reconsideration was brought under Rule 59(e) when applicable, Am. Ironworks, 248 F.3d at 899, the court will consider plaintiffs' motion as being raised under Rule 59(e) where appropriate.

1 analysis of these claims would be practically identical under 2 Rules 59(e) and 60(b) because "clear error" and "mistake" require 3 similar showings that the court's prior Order was clearly in 4 error. For only one of plaintiffs' arguments, addressed in 5 subpart B below, does plaintiff appear to specifically rely on 6 the "fraud" factor in Rule 60(b). The court will therefore 7 address plaintiffs' claims under Rule 59(e), see Am. Ironworks, 8 248 F.3d at 899, with the exception of the one instance where 9 evaluation under Rule 60(b) would be more appropriate.

10           The majority of plaintiffs' arguments in support of 11 their motion simply restate their original positions opposing the 12 motion to dismiss and do not raise any new issues or identify 13 errors that would justify reconsideration of the court's Order.
14 The first twenty pages of plaintiffs' motion rehash their version 15 of the historical events leading up to the present suit, (Mot.
16 for Recons. at 5:1-20:18), and another thirteen pages reiterate 17 arguments already repeatedly discussed and decided by the court, 18 (id. at 25:4-37:9). Plaintiffs also spend several pages 19 discussing the principals of Rule 19 and when a party should be 20 determined to be both necessary and indispensable. (Id. at 21 20:20-24:2.) Plaintiffs do appear to have raised three new 22 issues.<sup>2</sup> The court will address each in turn.

---

24           <sup>2</sup> In their conclusion, plaintiffs appear to be hinting at 25 a fourth argument - that plaintiffs have a valid challenge under 26 the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA") on the issue of the 27 government's acknowledgment of the Tribe. (Mot. for Recons. at 28 47:11-17.) This specific challenge is not raised in plaintiffs' complaint, nor did plaintiffs request leave to amend their complaint to add such a challenge. Plaintiffs additionally cite two D.C. Circuit opinions allowing challenges to Department of Interior opinions dealing with Indian tribes under the APA. (See

1           A.    Public Rights Exception

2           Plaintiffs raise the public rights exception as a 3 reason why the Tribe was not an indispensable party in this 4 litigation. (Id. at 24:7-25:2.) Plaintiffs are making this 5 argument for the first time on their motion for reconsideration.<sup>3</sup> 6 A judgment is not intended to be a rough draft for losing parties 7 to take pot shots at. Arguments raised for the first time in a 8 motion for reconsideration are deemed waived. See 389 Orange 9 Street Partners v. Arnold, 179 F.3d 656, 665 (9th Cir. 1999) 10 (finding that a district court did not abuse its discretion when 11 it declined to address an issue raised for the first time in a 12 motion for reconsideration). Nonetheless, the court will address 13 plaintiffs' public rights exception argument.

14           The public interest exception "provides that when 15 litigation seeks vindication of a public right, third persons who 16 could be adversely affected by a decision favorable to the 17 plaintiff are not indispensable parties." Kickapoo Tribe of 18 Indians of Kickapoo Reservation in Kan. v. Babbitt, 43 F.3d 1491,

19 _____
20 Mot. for Recons. at 47:18-48:10 (citing Patchak v. Salazar, 632
21 F.3d 702 (D.C. Cir. 2011); Amador Cnty. v. Salazar, 640 F.3d 373
22 (D.C. Cir. 2011)).) In neither of those cases did the court 23 address whether the respective tribe was a necessary and 24 indispensable party. Other courts have held that dismissal under 25 Rule 19 is necessary, even though the challenge was brought under 26 the APA. See, e.g., St. Pierre v. Norton, 498 F. Supp. 2d 214, 27 220-21 (D.D.C. 2007).

28           <sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs did cite Makah Indian Tribe v. Verity, 910 F.2d 555 (9th Cir. 1990), in their opposition to the motion to dismiss. (Opp'n to Mot. to Dismiss at 23:18-22.) However, plaintiffs only raised the case to "mak[e] it clear mere economic interest in the outcome of a case does not make the tribe a necessary party." (Id. at 23:19-22 (citing Makah Indian Tribe, 910 F.2d 555).) At no point did plaintiffs argue that the court should balance the public interest in the regulation with the tribe's interests in the litigation.

1 1500 (D.C. Cir. 1995). “[T]he exception generally applies where 2 ‘what is at stake are essentially issues of public concern and 3 the nature of the case would require joinder of a large number of 4 persons.’” Id. (quoting Sierra Club v. Watt, 608 F. Supp. 305, 5 324 (E.D. Cal. 1985)). “[T]he litigation must transcend the 6 private interests of the litigants and seek to vindicate a public 7 right.” Kescoli v. Babbitt, 101 F.3d 1304, 1311 (9th Cir. 1996); 8 see also Am. Greyhound Racing, Inc. v. Hull, 305 F.3d 1015, 1026
9 (9th Cir. 2002).

10 Plaintiffs do not argue that a large number of parties 11 would need to be joined in this case in order to vindicate the 12 public right, nor do they show that the public interest 13 transcends that of the parties’ interests. The litigation in 14 this case does not incidentally affect the Tribe and its gaming, 15 rather it is aimed directly at the gaming activities of the 16 Tribe. The public rights exception is therefore inapplicable in 17 this action.

18 B. Misrepresentations of Fact

19 Plaintiffs outline six statements that they allege were 20 misrepresentations made by the Tribe in support of its motion to 21 dismiss. (Mot. for Recons. at 37:11-42:21.) Plaintiffs appear 22 to be combining the requirements under Rule 59(a)(1)(B) and 23 59(a)(2) that provide that new trials may be granted based on 24 mistake of fact, with the relief available under Rule 60(b) when 25 the opposing party engages in misrepresentation or misconduct.
26 As plaintiffs are unable to request a new trial under Rule 59(a) 27 and plaintiffs’ arguments appear to be solely based on allegedly 28 fraudulent statements made by the Tribe, the court will presume

1 that plaintiffs are requesting reconsideration based on 2 misrepresentations under Rule 60(b).

3 In order to prevail on a Rule 60(b) motion based on 4 misrepresentations by the Tribe, plaintiffs must show that "the 5 verdict was obtained through fraud, misrepresentation, or other 6 misconduct and the conduct complained of prevented the losing 7 party from fully and fairly presenting the defense." De Saracho 8 v. Custom Food Mach., Inc., 206 F.3d 874, 880 (9th Cir. 2000).
9 The fraudulent conduct must "not be discoverable by due diligence 10 before or during the proceedings." Pac. & Arctic Ry. & 11 Navigation Co. v. United Transp. Union, 952 F.2d 1144, 1148 (9th 12 Cir. 1991).

13 The six alleged misrepresentations made by the Tribe 14 concern issues that go to the very heart of the litigation in 15 this matter. The Tribe's representations regarding the legal 16 status of the Tribe, the tribal lands, or the general legal 17 issues in the case are not fraudulent statements under Rule 18 60(b). The statements are argumentative positions taken by the 19 Tribe and have been disputed by plaintiffs since the complaint 20 was filed. Plaintiffs were not prevented from presenting their 21 defense, nor were they unable to discover that the Tribe's 22 statements could be disputed prior to their motion for 23 reconsideration.

24 C. Alternative Procedural Mechanisms

25 Plaintiffs briefly present six alternative procedural 26 mechanisms that they claim the court could have used to avoid the 27 outright dismissal of the case due to failure to join a necessary 28 and indispensable party. (Mot. for Recons. at 42:23-45:10.)

1 These alternative mechanisms were not previously presented to the 2 court, despite the fact that they are directly relevant to the 3 Tribe's motion to dismiss based on Rule 19. Plaintiffs' failure
4 to raise these alternative mechanisms in response to the Tribe's 5 motion to dismiss renders the arguments waived. See 389 Orange 6 Street, 179 F.3d at 665. Nonetheless, the court will address 7 plaintiffs' argument.

8 Plaintiffs' first, fifth, and sixth proposals require 9 either the forced joinder of the Tribe or assume that at some 10 later date the Tribe would voluntarily choose to join the 11 litigation. (Mot. for Recons. at 43:8-15; 44:3-45:2.)
12 Plaintiffs appear to base these joinder proposals on the fact 13 that the United States is able to bring suit against Indian 14 tribes and therefore could theoretically interplead the Tribe to 15 avoid the Tribe's claims of sovereign immunity.

16 As the United States has not elected to join the Tribe 17 in this action, plaintiffs' proposal would require the court to 18 order the United States to initiate joinder proceedings against 19 the Tribe. Plaintiffs fail to provide any support for their 20 suggestion that the court can force the United States to 21 interplead a party, and the court is unable to find direct 22 authority on this question. The court notes, however, that if 23 plaintiffs' proposal is a viable alternative in Rule 19 24 proceedings, then cases would never need to be dismissed for 25 failure to join an Indian tribe if the United States is also a 26 defendant in the case. The Ninth Circuit, however, has found on 27 multiple occasions that an Indian tribe is a necessary and 28 indispensable party that cannot be joined in an action in which

1 the United States is also a defendant. See, e.g., Rosales v.
2 United States, 73 Fed. Appx. 913, 914 (9th Cir. 2003) (finding 3 that the tribe could not be joined without its consent); Clinton 4 v. Babbitt, 180 F.3d 1081, 1090 (9th Cir. 1999) (same).

5 Similarly, to the extent that plaintiffs rely on the Tribe 6 deciding to voluntarily join the litigation at some point in the 7 future, what plaintiffs are really asking the court to do is to 8 assume that the Tribe will cede its sovereign immunity, a 9 decision that the Tribe is under no obligation to make. A viable
10 alternative in a Rule 19 motion cannot stand on such uncertain 11 ground.

12 Plaintiffs' first, second, fifth, and sixth proposals
13 would have the court decide plaintiffs' summary judgment motion 14 concerning the gaming eligibility of the Tribe's lands, (Docket 15 No. 40), before addressing plaintiffs' tribal organization 16 claims. (Mot. for Recons. at 43:8-20; 44:8-45:2.) Plaintiffs 17 appear to believe that splitting the litigation into two parts 18 would lessen the prejudice to the Tribe, allowing the court to 19 determine the eligibility of the Tribe's land for gaming in the 20 Tribe's absence. The court's determination that the Tribe was a 21 necessary and indispensable party covered all of plaintiffs' 22 claims, including plaintiffs' claim that the Tribe's land is 23 ineligible for tribal gaming. (See Oct. 4, 2011, Order at 7:21-24 23 ("This impairs the Tribe's substantial gaming-related 25 interests, including its right under federal law to engage in 26 class III gaming.")) Splitting the claims or ruling on 27 plaintiffs' summary judgment motion in the Tribe's absence would 28 prejudice the Tribe's protected legal interests and is not an

1 adequate alternative to dismissal under Rule 19.

2           Plaintiffs' third proposal appears to suggest that the 3 court send the case back to the Department of Interior and 4 National Indian Gaming Commission so that Crabtree and Geary may 5 attempt to lawfully organize the tribe so that they will be 6 included as tribe members. (Mot. for Recons. at 43:21-44:2.)
7 Plaintiffs' one-sentence description of this proposal lacks 8 citation to any caselaw or statute authorizing the court to 9 pursue this course of action. The proposal also fails to inform 10 the court exactly what this alternative procedure would entail, 11 why plaintiffs would be unable to pursue this alternative after 12 their claims have been dismissed, or how it would protect the 13 Tribe's interests.

14           Finally, plaintiffs' fourth proposal is that the court 15 should have denied the Tribe's motion to appear specially to 16 force the Tribe to intervene in the case if they wanted the court 17 to rule on the Rule 19 motion. (Id. at 44:3-7.) This proposal 18 in no way serves to protect the Tribe's legal interests, rather 19 it is a merely a way in which the court could have potentially 20 avoided deciding the Rule 19 motion.

21           Plaintiffs' proposed alternative procedural mechanisms 22 demonstrate a lack of understanding of the concept of a required 23 party under Rule 19. None of plaintiffs' proposed alternatives 24 would lessen the prejudice that the Tribe would suffer while 25 providing plaintiffs adequate relief. None of plaintiffs' six 26 proposals were previously presented to the court during the 27 motion to dismiss and are now laid out in less than two pages.
28 Plaintiffs have not adequately explained how each proposal would

1 function and have failed to respond to the Tribe's objections to 2 the proposals. Plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate that the 3 court committed clear error in granting the Tribe's motion to 4 dismiss. Accordingly, the court will deny plaintiffs' motion for 5 reconsideration.

6 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that plaintiffs' motion for 7 reconsideration be, and the same hereby is, DENIED.
