RECOMMENDATION TO THE DISTRICT COURT WITH FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Chapter 7 trustee Michael Burkart ("plaintiff") has filed a motion for entry of default judgment against defendant Babu Lal ("defendant"). The motion was noticed under LBR 9014-1(f)(1) and is unopposed. The court submits to the district court the following findings of fact and conclusions of law, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(c)(1).

BANKRUPTCY COURT AUTHORITY

Following the Ninth Circuit's decision in Exec. Benefits Ins. Agency v. Arkison (In re Bellingham Ins. Agency, Inc.), 702 F.3d 553 (9th Cir. 2012), cert. granted, 2013 WL 3155257 (June 24, 2013), bankruptcy courts do not have constitutional authority to enter final judgments on fraudulent transfer claims against non-creditors. 702 F.3d at 565. The

1 Bellingham court, however, also held that a defendant's right to a 2 hearing in an Article III court is waivable. Id. at 566. "[A] 3 litigant's actions may suffice to establish consent" to adjudication by a 4 non-Article III court. Id. at 569. Here, defendant is neither a 5 creditor in the underlying bankruptcy case, nor was defendant 6 sufficiently active in the case to give rise to a finding of a waiver of 7 defendant's right to an Article III adjudication. Accordingly, the court 8 does not have authority to enter a final judgment on the fraudulent 9 transfer claim asserted against defendant. Thus, the court submits the 10 following as its findings of fact and conclusions of law, together with 11 its recommendation, to the district court.¹

12 ANALYSIS

13 A summons and complaint were served on defendant, who failed to 14 answer within the time provided under FED. R. BANKR. P. 7012(a). On May 15 17, 2013, the clerk of the court entered an order of default against 16 defendant. There are no other defendants in this matter. Accordingly, 17 the well-pleaded allegations in plaintiff's complaint, except for 18 allegations regarding the amount of damages, are deemed admitted. FED. R.
19 CIV. P. 8(b)(6).

20 Obtaining a default judgment is a two-step process. See Eitel v.
21 McCool, 782 F.2d 1470, 1471 (9th Cir. 1986). First, the clerk of the 22

24 ¹ In sum, § 157(b)(1) provides bankruptcy courts the power to hear 25 fraudulent [transfer] cases and to submit reports and recommendations to the 26 district courts. Such cases remain in the core, and the § 157(b)(1) power to 'hear and determine' them authorizes the bankruptcy courts to issue proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law. Only the power to enter final judgment is abrogated.

27 Exec. Benefits Ins. Agency v. Arkison (In re Bellingham Ins. Agency, Inc.), 28 702 F.3d 553, 565-66 (9th Cir. 2012), cert. granted, 2013 WL 3155257 (June 24, 2013).

1 court enters the default of the party who has failed to plead or 2 otherwise defend; the clerk or the court, depending on the nature of the 3 plaintiff's claim, then enters a default judgment. FED. R. CIV. P. 55(a) 4 and (b), incorporated herein by FED. R. BANKR. P. 7055. In this case, the 5 clerk, at the request of plaintiff, entered the default of defendant on 6 May 17, 2013. Plaintiff's motion is for entry of default judgment
7 against defendant, pursuant to FED. R. CIV. P. 55(b). Factors the court 8 must consider include the following: (1) the possibility of prejudice to 9 the plaintiff; (2) the merits of plaintiff's substantive claim; (3) the 10 sufficiency of the complaint; (4) the sum of money at stake in the 11 action; (5) the possibility of a dispute concerning material facts; (6) 12 whether the default was due to excusable neglect; and (7) the strong 13 policy underlying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure favoring decisions 14 on the merits. Eitel, 782 F.2d at 1471-72. Resolution of disputes on 15 their merits is generally favored over default judgments. See id. at 16 1472.

17 Similar, albeit differently articulated, considerations are involved 18 in the context of a court's exercise of discretion to set aside a default 19 judgment:

20 These considerations, are usually listed as (1) whether the 21 default was willful or culpable; (2) whether granting relief
22 from the default would prejudice the opposing party; and (3) 23 whether the defaulting party has a meritorious defense. Such 24 considerations are, therefore, also appropriate considerations 25 when deciding whether to render a default judgment. This is 26 logical. When faced with the decision concerning whether to 27 render a default judgment in the first place, a court 28 logically should consider whether factors are present that would later oblige the court to set that default judgment aside.

26 10 MOORE'S FEDERAL PRACTICE § 55.31[2] (Matthew Bender 3d. ed. 2012).

27 Pursuant to the Fourth Claim for Relief of the First Amended 28 Complaint, plaintiff alleges a fraudulent transfer claim under 11 U.S.C.

1 § 548(a)(1)(A). In particular, plaintiff alleges that debtor, Vincent 2 Singh ("Singh"), made two payments to defendant totaling $30,000.00. The 3 payments consisted of cash, checks, or other forms of transfer directly 4 from Singh or indirectly from one or more accounts in Singh's name,
5 Malanie Singh, Perfect Financial Group, Inc., AAMCO Stockton, Inc., AAMCO
6 Orangevale, Inc., OM L. Singh, John A. Singh, Usha D. Singh, and/or third 7 parties to or for the benefit of defendant. The payments were made as 8 part of a Ponzi scheme perpetrated by Singh. Defendant had invested 9 funds with Singh and received payments in connection with the amounts 10 invested. Although Singh represented that he was making "hard money" 11 loans that would produce funds to be paid back to investors (including 12 defendant), the actual source of the payments from Singh was funds 13 invested by other investors. Pursuant to the Fifth Claim for Relief, 14 plaintiff alleges that, under 11 U.S.C. § 550, he is entitled to recover 15 from defendant any property transferred from Singh by means of an 16 avoidable transfer.

17 A. Propriety of Entering Default Judgment (Eitel Factors)

18 1. Possibility of Prejudice to Plaintiff

19 Plaintiff will be prejudiced if default judgment is not granted.
20 Plaintiff, as trustee of a bankruptcy estate being administered in part 21 for the benefit of Ponzi scheme victims, is required to marshal a series 22 of transfers to numerous investors so that each investor can receive his 23 or her aliquot share of investment funds misappropriated by the 24 perpetrator of a Ponzi scheme. Although it seems counterintuitive to 25 claw back funds redistributed to the victims by Singh, it is necessary in 26 ensuring the equality of treatment of similarly situated creditors.
27 Defendant's failure to respond in this action presents a delay that 28 reverberates through the bankruptcy case: plaintiff is prevented from

1 marshaling and accounting for investment funds that are to be distributed 2 on a pro rata basis. Accordingly, plaintiff will be prejudiced.

3 2. The Merits of Plaintiff's Claims

4 The following facts are taken as true given defendant's lack of 5 response. As stated earlier, plaintiff's complaint alleges, inter alia, 6 a claim under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A) that the transfers to defendant
7 were made by Singh with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud 8 defendant and other similarly situated creditors. The court agrees with 9 plaintiff that Singh's conduct amounted to a Ponzi scheme, which is 10 sufficient to establish actual intent to defraud creditors within the 11 meaning of 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A). The "existence of a Ponzi scheme is 12 sufficient to establish actual intent under § 548(a)(1)." AFI Holding, 13 Inc. v. Mackenzie (In re AFI Holdings, Inc.), 525 F.3d 700, 704 (9th Cir.
14 2008) (internal quotation marks omitted).

15 Plaintiff's complaint adequately alleges that Singh engaged in a 16 Ponzi scheme. In furtherance of this scheme, Singh accepted investment 17 funds from defendant and other similarly situated investors. From time 18 to time, Singh, whether directly or indirectly, distributed payments to 19 the investors as an illusory return on investment. These illusory 20 returns constitute transfers of an interest in property of the debtor
21 within the meaning of 11 U.S.C. § 101(54)(D). The well-pleaded facts 22 show that these transfers were made with an actual intent to hinder, 23 delay, or defraud defendant on or within 2 years before the date of the 24 filing of the petition. Therefore, plaintiff's fourth claim for relief 25 is meritorious.

26 Although an exception to liability exists in 11 U.S.C. § 548(c) for 27 a defendant who takes in good faith and gives new value, "the defendants' 28 good faith is an affirmative defense under Section 548(c) which must be

1 pleaded in the first instance as a defense by the defendants. It is not 2 incumbent on the plaintiff to plead lack of good faith on the defendants' 3 part because lack of good faith is not an element of a plaintiff's claim 4 under Section 548(a)(1)." Bayou Superfund, LLC v. WAM Long/Short Fund
5 II, L.P. (In re Bayou Grp., LLC), 362 B.R. 624, 639 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.
6 2007). As defendant has not filed a response in this action, defendant 7 has not met the burden of proof required to successfully assert a "good 8 faith" defense to plaintiff's fraudulent transfer claim.

9 Lastly, plaintiff's complaint adequately alleges that plaintiff is 10 entitled to recover the transfers made to defendant. "[T]o the extent 11 that a transfer is avoided under section . . . 548, . . . the trustee may 12 recover, for the benefit of the estate, the property transferred . . .
13 from- (1) the initial transferee of such transfer or the entity for whose 14 benefit such transfer was made." 11 U.S.C. § 550(a)(1). Therefore, 15 plaintiff's fifth claim for relief is meritorious.

16 3. Sufficiency of Plaintiff's Complaint

17 The court finds that plaintiff's complaint is well-pleaded and sets 18 forth plausible facts—not just parroted statutory or boilerplate 19 language—that show that plaintiff is entitled to the relief sought in the 20 fourth and fifth claims for relief. The complaint sufficiently alleges 21 with particularity facts that show Singh engaged in an extensive Ponzi 22 scheme of which defendant was a victim. Pursuant to the scheme, 23 defendant invested funds and also received certain transfers from Singh.
24 The court is satisfied that plaintiff has pleaded the circumstances of 25 the Ponzi scheme constituting actual fraud with particularity. See FED.
26 R. BANKR. P. 7009, which incorporates FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b) (requiring a 27 party who alleges fraud to plead such fraud with particularity).

28 / / /

1 Moreover, plaintiff has pleaded facts that satisfy the elements of a 2 fraudulent transfer claim sounding in actual fraud.

3 4. The Amount at Stake

4 Defendant is liable to plaintiff for a sum of money received via at 5 least two transfers from Singh. The total amount of avoidable transfers 6 alleged is $30,000.00, subject to change if and when plaintiff discovers 7 other transfers made to defendant. The amount at stake is not a grossly 8 large number, nor is it a nominal amount. Plaintiff has presented 9 evidence showing that Singh made at least two payments to defendant in 10 the amount alleged. This factor weighs in favor of a default judgment.

11 5. Possibility of Dispute as to Material Facts

12 Upon entry of default, all well-pleaded facts in the complaint are 13 taken as true, except allegations relating to damages. Defendant has not 14 advanced any arguments showing material facts in dispute. Given the 15 sufficiency of the complaint and defendant's default, there is no genuine 16 dispute of material fact that would preclude a default judgment.

17 6. Excusable Neglect

18 Defendant was properly served with the summons and complaint 19 pursuant to FED. R. BANKR. P. 7004. It is therefore unlikely that 20 defendant's failure to respond to the complaint was due to excusable 21 neglect.

22 7. Policy in Favor of Deciding on the Merits

23 "Cases should be decided upon their merits whenever reasonably 24 possible." Eitel, 782 F.2d at 1472. As compelling a factor as this may 25 be, a decision on the merits is not reasonable in light of defendant's 26 complete inaction. Defendant's lack of a response renders a decision on 27 the merits practically impossible. Thus, the ordinary preference to 28 / / /

1 decide cases on the merits must yield to the granting of a default
2 judgment.

3 B. Damages

4 The entry of a default judgment establishes the liability of the 5 defaulting party but the moving party still must establish the amount of 6 damages. Geddes v. United Fin. Grp., 559 F.2d 557, 560 (9th Cir. 1977).
7 "A court does not abuse its discretion by failing to hold a hearing [on 8 damages] when the amount of damages is liquidated or can be made certain 9 by computation based on the pleadings or information in the existing 10 record." 10 MOORE'S FEDERAL PRACTICE § 55.32[2][b]. In recommending an 11 award of damages here, the court relies on the copies of checks submitted 12 as evidence by plaintiff. The total amount of transfers, according to 13 this evidence, is $30,000.00.

14 For the reasons stated, the court recommends entry of a default 15 judgment in favor of plaintiff, with damages in the amount requested in 16 the complaint.
